"If the means of expression are sometimes diffuse or repetitive, Fletcher's technical accomplishment emerges throughout in his control of a bountiful variety of meters and in the richness of his perception of the world around him, subdued to his emotional intentions." Axtion Clark

+ N Y Times p4 My 11 '41 500w

Reviewed by Kerker Quinn

Poetry 58:334 S '41 650w

"The second half of the book is the richest; it is regional verse which deserves a greater audience than it is likely to get. It is a pity Mr. Fletcher was not persuaded to cut his volume in two." Louis Untermeyer

+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 J1 19 '41 180w

"A collection of regional verse of rare strength and vitality. The 'regional poet' is too often the victim rather than the master of his material, but here we find the poet emotionally part of his environment, part of his heritage, but distinct from it intellectually."

+ Springfld Republican p7e Ap 20 '41 240w

"'The Story of Arkansas' as presented by John Gould Fletcher in 'South Star' is an example of historical narrative which sounds like history but does not feel like it. Such a pedestrian piece is doubly painful in this book because the following sections give ample proof of Fletcher's discernment. He is at his ease in straightforward description of Southern landscape and its colorful detail, as in 'The Journey' and 'Dogwood.' He is unconvincing when he overdramatizes his view of nature." J. L. Sweeney

+ Yale R n s 30:818 summer '41 80w

FLEXNER, HORTENSE (MRS WYNIE KING). Chipper; drawings by Wynie King. 48p $1 Stokes

41-17881

Chipper was a small but fearless chipmunk who belonged to a feckless family, none of whom stored food enough for winter. Chipper found a kind human 'giant' who fed him daily, and eventually introduced his whole family to his private source of supplies.

"The pictures are by a cartoonist, funny without offense to facts." M. L. Becker

+ Books p26 N 2 '41 40w

"Though a real chipmunk sat for his picture in this realistic story, it is written with charm and a pleasant turn of fancy. . . An entertaining story for pet lovers." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:368 S '41 90w

FLEXNER, JENNIE MAAS, and HOPKINS, BYRON CHANDLER. Readers' advisers at work; a survey of development in the New York public library. 77p 75c Am. assn. for adult educ.

028.8 Libraries and readers. Education of adults (W) 41-51922

"We find here the picture of an excellently run Readers' Advisory Service centered in New York. . . The threefold purpose of the study is: to view the changes in attitudes of the advisers since the service was started twelve years ago; to trace and to evaluate the techniques employed; and, through this record of experience, to assist other readers' advisers. The book hardly touches upon the human qualities involved in the advisory service, important as the authors know these are. It describes procedures followed in interviewing readers and in preparing reading lists, the establishment of advisory service in the branch libraries under the supervision of the central office, and a survey of 1,250 readers who supplied data regarding their use of reading lists. More than half the book is given over to a statistical analysis of these readers." Library Q

Booklist 38:45 O 15 '41

"I found this a most interesting little volume, chiefly from the fact that for every situation described an analogous one was present in my own experience. Other readers' advisers will respond in the same way. . . . Shutting the book and thinking over what has been read regarding the service, its unified and self-contained plan of procedure, its orderly development, its flexibility and power of adjustment as occasion arises, its tangible and apparently measurable results, one admits that, within the limits that have been imposed, this is a valuable book. It is well organized and practical, clearly and concisely written, and should be in the hands of present and future readers' advisers. It offers a flexible framework upon which librarians can build a warm and human service." Grace Kelley

+ Library Q 12:114 Ja '42 1800w

FLEXNER, SIMON, and FLEXNER, JAMES THOMAS. William Henry Welch and the heroic age of American medicine, 539p il $3.75 Viking

B or 92 Welch, William Henry (W) 41-20339

"The authors' names guarantee the authority of this much-needed biography of 'Popsy' Welch, whose long life was successfully spent in helping American medicine come of age. Excellent if somewhat serious exposition of his labors as an importer of German research methods, as a scientist, as a worker in public hygiene, and particularly as a teacher." (New Yorker) Index.

"Here is an unforgettable picture of a charming Connecticut Yankee, full of common sense." C. C. Lund

+ Atlantic F '42 550w

Booklist 38:79 N 1 '41

"To the job of writing the story of this outstanding figure the Flexners, father and son, have brought intimate knowledge and great ability. It may be admitted, at the outset, that they trot in fast company since they must stand comparison with the biography of Osler, by Cushing, the greatest medical stylist since the Autocrat of the Breakfast Table. But the result of their labors is one of which they may well be proud. With access to a mountain of material they have made full use of Welch's letters and writings which better than anything else, reveal the caliber of their man. This is a book worthy of its great subject." Hugh Cabot, M.D.

+ Books p6 N 30 '41 900w

"Here is the best history we have read of the birth of medical science in these United States. . . . The Flexners, father and son, have made a worthy contribution to the biography of their time. 'Popsy' himself could not have had the patience to do it as well, with its sixty-five pages of appendices and the fifteen page index. We have found but one point, the references to the discovery of the Welch bacillus, where the two authors perhaps did not scrutinize each other's manuscripts. Indeed, we seem dimly to sense Dr. Welch's smile from the golden bar of heaven, a little wryness to it as he handles the gilt and Tyrian purple of the dust cover, but he was the most forgiving of men and, as he became engrossed in the text, lived over the glorious hardships of his youth and the almost unbearable glories of his latter days, he might be murmuring, like the Padre Eterno of 'The Path to Rome,' Continuez, mes enfants, continuez." E. L. Keyes

+ Commonweal 35:25 O 24 '41 600w

"Here is a record of astounding achievement, yet the moving spirit is not obscured by his works, and we see the man himself with his very human qualities. A book to live as long as health is important to humanity." G. E. Brown

+ Library J 66:902 O 15 '41 120w

Reviewed by Harold Ward

New Repub 105:901 D 29 '41 700w

"The personal and human side of Welch's character—his activities as gourmet, gourmand, baseball fan, and practical joker—should not be omitted from the record, and will be found in minute detail in the Flexners' attractive offering. The entire story is one which will be studied with pleasure by physicians, scientists, historians and by the intelligent general reader." Saul Jarcho, M.D.

+ N Y Times p8 N 2 '41 1300w

"Invaluable to all students of medicine and to most students of American history."

+ New Yorker 17:103 O 11 '41 80w

"The story the Flexners have given us is more than the life history of a great scientist and teacher. Its background, painted as carefully as is the portrait itself, is modern medical history in the making, and so ramified were the interests of their subject that there is scarcely a phase of experimental medicine of his time not represented. All of which adds much to the book's significance. But to the hundreds of his students the biography will be cherished for its series of moving-pictures of the man who has been 'Popsy' to them for more than a generation." M. S. Ulrich, M.D.

+ Sat R of Lit 24:9 O 25 '41 600w

Springf'd Republican p6 O 18 '41 1000w

"Happily for Dr. Welch and ourselves, Dr. Flexner and his son brought to the writing of this book the ideal qualifications of biographers—scientific understanding of the half century throughout which Dr. Welch was a pioneer in medicine and a close and affectionate knowledge of the man himself. . . . As a picture both of a period and of a man, this scholarly and eminently readable biography is to be prized." Mary Ross

+ Survey G 30:702 D '41 400w

Wis Lib Bul 37:200 D '41

"The appearance of the biography less than eight years after it was undertaken is an achievement matched perhaps only by the power shown by the authors in compressing Dr. Welch within a single volume. This condensation seems all the more remarkable because it includes, in addition to the life and activities of Dr. Welch, details of some two hundred and seventy-five years of his family history and a corresponding segment of the medical and national history of our country. Assembling, verifying, and arranging the mass of records used by the authors might well have been a task for a corps of assistants; the material, well-extracted as it is, will be a store of treasures for future students." Stanhope Bayne-Jones

+ Yale R n s 31:387 winter '42 2150w

FLINT, LOIS HENRIETTA, and others. Learning to live; a guidebook for beginning college students; ed. by Harry E. Tyler. 473p pl $2.25 Farrar

371.8 Students. Conduct of life 40-14069
Guide for beginning college students, each part of it written by a teacher or a counselor. Contents: Living in college, by W. J. Homan; Living with yourself, by H. T. Tyler; Living with your family, living with your present family, by L. H. Flint; Living with others, by L. H. Flint; Learning to make a living, by Nicholas Ricciardi and V. C. Mickelson; Living in the community, by Nicholas Ricciardi and H. E. Tyler; Living in the world, by H. E. Tyler. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:63 O 15 '40

Reviewed by C. H. Brewer

Churchman 155:17 Ap 1 '41 120w

School & Society 52:32 Jl 13 '40 10w

FLINT, MARGARET (MRS LESTER WARNER JACOBS). Down the road a piece. 273p $2.50 Dodd

41-5297

Quiet story of the Maine countryside, in which Elinor Lord is the central character. Elinor is sister of Kate Lord Dennis, of the author's former book, Back o' the Mountain (Book Review Digest, 1940). Elinor is not such a decided person as Kate. She is content to stay home on the old Lord place and take care of her beloved grandparents, but there are times when she wonders if she will ever fall in love. The contest for Elinor's hand lies between Clem Dennis, a dependable Maine character, and the handsome Stuart, who comes to teach school in Parkston.

FLINT, MARGARET—Continued

Booklist 37:465 Je 1 '41

"'Down the Road a Piece' is on the whole a rewarding story of a group of individuals whose lives are deep rooted in their own soil." John Patton

+ Books p12 Ap 6 '41 400w

"'Down the Road a Piece' makes no pretence to literary sophistication in either style or theme. But to those who can appreciate the verities of country life, and country people, their humor, good sense and good feeling—this book makes a very readable successor of 'The Old Ashburn Place,' Margaret Flint's prize novel of a few years ago." Mary Whitton

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 5 '41 220w

"It is a pity that 'Down the Road a Piece' goes such a little way. The story has substance, but it is a story which has frequently been told with more poignancy. The minor characters, while heightening the local color, are stereotype. Perhaps we are becoming spoiled about New England. It has for so long proven such a happy literary fishing stream that we expect more than just an average catch. Miss Flint can write and will doubtless have other things to tell us." M. L. Rossbach

N Y Times p26 Ap 6 '41 550w

"A mild and pleasant novel. . . The country background is genuine, the people are characteristically tough-minded, sharp, and independent. They get married, raise children, try to make a living, and die, all with an unpretentious dignity that is rather appealing."

+ New Yorker 17:70 Mr 29 '41 30w

FLINT, MARGARET (MRS LESTER WARNER JACOBS). October fires. 269p $2.50 Dodd 41-19642

A small Maine mill town is the setting of this story, which extends in time from the late nineteenth century to the depression years. It is the story of Roy Varney who married his employer's daughter and found that a marriage founded on respect may endure, even tho love is lacking.

"Miss Flint tells her story with restraint and understanding. Now and then, perhaps, pure story-telling glibness runs away with her and 'October Fires' comes perilously close to shallow superficiality. But her sincerity and her sure understanding of Roy Varney, of his remarkable wife, of Roy's father-in-law and of their plain fellows in every New England community, bring her back to solid ground. Miss Flint knows well what goes on behind the front doors along the village street." R. H. Bonner

+ Books p12 O 26 '41 440w

"Characters are well handled and convincing, as is the New England background." Thelma Brackett

+ Library J 66:841 O 1 '41 80w

"The author means to show that a mixture of good and evil makes every man a complex character whose behavior is not to be judged lightly. That such a theme can be dramatized in novel form, dozens of titles come to mind as proof. She also means to show that there is drama and romance in the most pedestrian life; and no one will deny that that theme, too, can succeed as a novel. But this story of Miss Flint's, told in a monotone with no power of illumination and no distinction of style, does not go far to illustrate her point." Margaret Donaldson

N Y Times p29 O 19 '41 360w

"The book abounds with glimpses of the beauties of lake, fields and forests. It gives much of the flavor of a Maine village, with its gossip, its heavy joking, its neighborliness. But the novel is a slight one, and hardly worthwhile." M. D.

+ — Spring'd Republican p7e O 26 '41 300w

FLOHERTY, JOHN JOSEPH. Aviation, from shop to sky; il. with phot. and line drawings. 215p $2 Lippincott

629.13 Aeronautics

(W) 41-10278

"The book is about the skilled workers—engineers, scientists of all kinds, factory workers and pilots—who design, manufacture and fly the airplane." (Publisher's note) Illustrated with excellent photographs. For boys of fourteen and older. No index.

Booklist 38:47 O 15 '41

"Floherty photograph books, with their admirably correlated text, fill a special place in vocational literature. Before a boy is old enough to sign up as Coast Guard, or fireman, or to get into the postal service, these surveys of the field enlighten him, perhaps urge him in a special direction. In any case, they are useful in a school library over a fairly wide age range—this one, in particular." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 Ag 3 '41 240w

"There are the usual photographs one associates with a Floherty book, but 'the text's the thing.' He writes with more than his characteristic enthusiasm of the factories, which offer surprisingly many opportunities for individual craftsmen, of the training and self-discipline necessary for air men and women, and of the brilliant, challenging future open in so many phases of aviation." Miriam Snow

+ Library J 66:847 O 1 '41 130w

New Yorker 17:147 D 6 '41 20w

FLOY, MICHAEL. The diary, Bowery village, 1833-1837; ed. by Richard Albert Edward Brooks; with an introductory note, annotations, and postscript by Margaret Floy Washburn [pub. for Vassar college]. 270p $5 Yale univ. press

B or 92 New York (city)—Bowery 41-20685

Diary of a young New Yorker, a graduate of Columbia university, whose home was in Bowery Village, near what is now Eleventh street. The family nursery, where Michael worked among the dahlias and peach trees, was in Harlem on land between Fourth and Fifth avenues from 125th to 127th street. He "divided his interests and his abundant energies among his nurseries in Harlem, his Sunday school, the benevolent society, the study of mathematics and theology, and girls, and wrote about it all with engaging candor and naivete. The diary reveals, as its editor observes, 'a vivid picture of American life at a period and in a social medium, of which there is little contemporary record.'" (Books)

"This unpretentious diary is full of good things. . . It is a pity that he did not live to keep his diary thirty years instead of three." H. S. Commager

+ Books p27 O 19 '41 650w

"Exceedingly interesting and illuminating reading. . . [The author's] utterly unaffected self-portrait, in short, is completely delightful. And his diary is a rare discovery."

+ N Y Times p39 N 23 '41 700w

FLYNN, HARRY EUGENE, and PERKINS, FLOYD E. Conservation of the nation's resources. 385p il $1.60 Macmillan

339.4 Conservation of resources. U.S.—Economic conditions. U.S.—Social conditions. Natural resources 41-16978

"An understandable presentation and interpretation of facts concerning the conservation of resources of the United States. The importance of the book lies in the emphasis on the conservation of human resources and the need for a sound program for total conservation, that is, the use of natural resources for social good. Lists of conservation films and books for additional reading are included. Junior and senior high school." Booklist

Booklist 38:116 D 1 '41

School & Society 54:256 S 27 '41 20w

"Teachers of the social studies will find this book useful either as a basic text for a comprehensive conservation unit or as a handy reference for topical readings in connection with related units." R. W. Crary

+ Social Educ 5:626 D '41 450w

Social Studies 32:379 D '41 10w

FLYNN, JOHN THOMAS. Men of wealth. 531p il $3.75 Simon & Schuster

923.3 Capitalists and financiers (W) 41-8535

Biographical essays on eleven men and one woman, all of them money-makers of one type or another. The essays are arranged to cover a period of four hundred years, from the renaissance to the present. Contents: Fugger the rich; organizer of capitalism; John Law; money magician; The Rothschilds; imperialist bankers; Robert Owen; the reformer; Cornelius Vanderbilt; the rail king; Hetty Green; the miser; Mitsui; the dynast; Cecil Rhodes; empire builder; Basil Zaharoff; the warmaker; Mark Hanna; the politico; John D. Rockefeller; the builder; J. Pierpont Morgan; the promoter. Index.

Booklist 37:513 J1 1 '41

"The portraits of Hetty Green, Rhodes, Hanna, and Morgan, in particular, are unforgettable, though I do not feel that he understands Vanderbilt particularly well. . . . The interpretations will be roundly criticized, particularly the conclusion that finance capitalism, involving a series of struggles for power among competing groups and with the government endeavoring to circumvent them all, trends inevitably toward a corporative system, possible only under a dictatorship." K. W. Porter

+ Books p5 Je 1 '41 1150w

"It is a most interesting book, indeed engrossing; racy, vigorous, salty. It is the product of great research and industry. . . . It would be well if Mr. Flynn would avoid inserting sneers at religion with monotonous regularity every few pages, in a book that has nothing to do with religion. To say the least, it is irrelevant." C. W. Thompson

+ Cath World 153:755 S '41 650w

"Crisply and with ingenuity, Mr. Flynn has made the lives of individuals tell the running story of the means by which wealth is produced and siphoned off into the strongboxes of men of wealth." W. D.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 J1 5 '41 500w

"It is a really good book and it required a deal of courage to release it at this particular time. It deserves a wide and popular reading." W. M. Callahan

+ Commonweal 34:137 My 30 '41 650w

"This enlightening if uneven book is further evidence that the author's real métier is financial muckraking and not international politics." R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:195 O '41 30w

"It goes without saying that this popular author and economist has produced in this book a colorful and exciting story of wealth as revealed in the lives of twelve persons who either devised or employed the new means down the ages that society offered for acquiring it. Here is the story of money in terms of personality, with no punches pulled, and many an obscure detail in the art of outwitting others made clear for the first time for at least one reader."

+ Living Age 360:498 J1 '41 140w

Management R 30:273 J1 '41 210w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison

Nation 152:700 Je 14 '41 900w

"While the essays are stimulating and offer many interesting facts and ideas, they are, on the whole, unsatisfactory. That is partly due to the method—the brief essays are neither a picture of the men nor of the age, but an unsubstantial mixture of both. Nor do they yield an understanding of what made capitalism click and what makes it click no longer. But here it is not the method but Mr. Flynn's historical and economic insight that is at fault. The analysis is limited to the surface of things; Flynn concentrates (in a measure because of the fortunes chosen) on the monetary relations of capitalism, not on its productive relations. He is, moreover, animated by faith in competitive capitalism and with scorn for its antagonists—which explains both the fine job of muckraking monopoly capitalism that he has been doing for years and his misunderstanding and abuse of any program that does not believe in the panacea of a restoration of the old freedom of enterprise." Lewis Corey

+ New Repub 105:228 Ag 18 '41 600w

"Twelve well-proportioned and caustically written studies." Karl Schriftgiesser

+ N Y Times p4 Je 8 '41 1300w

"An intelligent, readable job."

+ New Yorker 17:71 My 31 '41 40w

"Mr. Flynn's stout volume is a remarkable piece of work. These portraits have vitality and meaning, notwithstanding that the rich man lost his halo some years ago and in his fallen condition has been little more than a target for debunkers and reformers. A fine structural unity is imparted to the book by beginning it with Jacob Fugger of Augsburg, born in 1459 . . . and ending it with J. Pierpont Morgan, who to all present appearances marked the end of an era." Palmer Harman

+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 My 31 '41 750w

"His book is consistently interesting and fast-moving despite its 513 pages, which seems a conservative space for the money giants of the last four centuries. While at times Mr. Flynn is more bitter than is admirable in a chronicler, his approach to the history of modern finance through personalities is certainly a work of merit and probably one of value. Some readers will be inspired, others will be exasperated, but all should find much of interest."

+ Spring'd Republican p12 My 29 '41 650w

FLYNN, ROSE. Peggy plants a tree; with il. by Gertrude Howe. 77p $1.50 Scribner

Trees—Juvenile literature (W) 41-5507

Peggy, a little city girl, is delighted with her new home in the country, partly because it is just like living in a park. She is so tree conscious that she asks for a tree for her birthday, and is instrumental in transforming a vacant lot into a park. Glossary of leaves.

Booklist 37:466 Je 1 '41

"Put this book to work in the home or school library in time for Arbor Day, and it will go on being entertaining and useful throughout the year. . . . The pictures of children are lively and lifelike and the head and tail-pieces are sprays of characteristic leaves and fruits, in soft pencil drawings." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Ap 6 '41 220w

"This is not only a good story for boys and girls, but also contains much information about trees and their care. The glossary of leaves make it useful as a handbook for identification. Brownie Scout leaders will like to know about it." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 66:308 Ap 1 '41 90w

"Ideal for Arbor Day celebrations in the middle grades, the story contains information which is appropriate throughout the year. It is imparted painlessly in a narrative which flows along easily and pleasantly because the author knows children as well as trees, and so, judging from the attractive pictures, does the illustrator." E. L. Buell

FLYNN, ROSE—Continued

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 16 '41 200w
Spring'd Republican p7e Ap 13 '41
130w

Wis Lib Bul 37:96 My '41

FODOR, LASZLO, ed. Brazil; introductory text by Francisco Silva, jr. (Our beautiful Americas) 77p il map $1.75 Hastings house

918.1 Brazil—Pictorial works (W) 41-6159

Photographic study of Brazil, with a short descriptive introductory chapter.

"This is a suggestive and informative little book of text and pictures, which may well serve as an initial guide."

+ Books p29 Mr 2 '41 120w

"Mr. Silva has done an excellent job of supplementing the pictures with historical, scenic and economic highlights in compressed space."

+ Boston Transcript p1 F 15 '41 50w

FOERSTER, NORMAN, and others. Literary scholarship; its aims and methods. 269p $3 Univ. of N.C. press

804 Philology

"The aims and methods of [the book] are defined and defended by members of the School of Letters at the University of Iowa. In this field, they declare that our scholars have gotten away from the main stem of their discipline into a kind of pseudo-scientism where an often sterile research replaces devotion to the humanities. . . . They correct and preserve the texts so anthologists may present exactly what the authors wrote. The linguists cherish the language as a heritage with a great tradition, and find entertainment in the sudden vogue for semantics. They have been concerned with the meanings of words for some centuries! Without the literary historians we would not know the very roots of today's writings, or be able to fix the creator into the matrix of his times. They are the critics of criticism, setting up canons of judgment that protect us from the passing whim or bias of the mere personal adventurer among masterpieces. The book rightly closes with an essay on the inspiration for imaginative writing the scholar may provide." (Survey G) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by L. J. A. Mercier

Commonweal 35:298 Ja 9 '42 750w

School & Society 54:368 O 25 '41 30w

"The challenge [of the authors] is refreshing, and their reports on the duties of literary scholarship remind us of the great services rendered." Leon Whipple

+ Survey G 30:701 D '41 280w

FOLDES, JOLAN. Rudi finds a way; il. by Elsa Jamne. 151p $1.50 Lippincott

41-16895

Rudi, a Hungarian lad, and his stern bank manager uncle, were on their vacation when the uncle's purse was stolen, and the two were left stranded in Italy. Uncle was completely at a loss, but Rudi managed. By helping fishermen, singing in the streets, and one means or another, the pair saw quite a bit of Italy and Egypt. An airplane crash finally brought their journey to a close, and after uncle recovered they went back to Hungary, both radiantly happy over their unconventional trip.

"How often young folks have dreamed of travel such as this, and old folks envied them the power to dream!" M. L. Becker

+ Books p16 N 2 '41 290w

"Foreign in flavor, this book is the first juvenile by the author of a prize-winning adult novel, The Street of the Fishing Cat. Very short sentences give the impression of an over-effort to simplify, while the English is, in places, a rather odd mixture of literary and popular phraseology. The book as a whole has the somewhat stilted feeling of a translation."

Jean Stewart

Library J 66:845 O 1 '41 150w

FOLLETT, BEN B. Careers in aviation. 254p $2 Waverly house

629.13 Aeronautics as a profession (W) 41-246

Guide for those seeking work in the field of aviation. Contains descriptions of various posts from stewardess to pilot, with the requirements for each, and the probable returns in money and future, and a summary of the flying program sponsored by the government.

"Written like a sales manager's pep talk, but the author has a really fine and diversified background in aviation."

+ New Repub 104:94 Ja 20 '41 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:3 Ja '41

FOLLETT, MRS HELEN (THOMAS). House afire! with il. by Armstrong Sperry. 102p $1.50 Scribner

(W) 41-52014

Story of New Amsterdam in the days of Peter Stuyvesant. Roofs were of wood and thatch, and chimneys would get full of soot, and whenever a house caught fire it was serious. The governor changed all that by instituting the leather fire buckets, always kept filled with water. The story contains other pictures, too, of life in the Dutch colony. For boys and girls of eight to twelve.

Booklist 38:135 D 15 '41

"It gives a new slant on old New York, this lively story, of interest to children who wonder what we had before the fire engines." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 N 23 '41 220w

"Recommended for school and public libraries." J. L. Sauer

+ Library J 66:951 N 1 '41 150w

"Many useful and informing books have been written for children about New York in the days when it was called New Amsterdam, but this lively tale is particularly successful in making that little town of long ago vivid, convincing and full of interest to boys and girls of today. . . . Armstrong Sperry's delightful drawings, with their liveliness, gay humor and authentic detail, ably supplement the story in bringing to life these episodes in New York's early history." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p28 N 2 '41 320w

"Lively and well done." Zoë Durrell

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 N 8 '41 30w

Spring'd Republican p7e D 21 '41
110w

FOLLETT, MRS MURIEL. A drop in the bucket. 64p il $2 Daye

664.1 Maple sugar 41-8899

An account of the whole process of making maple sugar, from the tapping of the trees to the pouring of sugar into the moulds, described in simple prose, and illustrated with photographs by Clifford Scofield.

Pratt p19 D '41

Spring'd Republican p12 My 7 '41
360w

Wis Lib Bul 37:89 My '41

FOLSOM, JOSEPH KIRK. Youth, family and education; with sections by Winifred E. Bain and Ellen Miller; prepared for the Am. youth commission. 299p $1.75 Am. council on educ.

370 Education. Family. Social problems 41-51660

"Report on the development and contemporary status of a social movement—the relation and integration of education and family living. This book studies the trend toward organizing education around perplexing problems that confront youth and adults in the rapidly changing modern world; sex, marriage, child care and family relationships. Discusses the need for effective learning as a means of attaining a better family life." (School & Society) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:382 Ap 15 '41

J Home Econ 33:337 My '41 500w

School & Society 53:352 Mr 15 '41 70w

"A tremendous mass of information is brought together. Some question arises in my mind with respect to the complete validity of the material in the light of that portion with which I am most familiar, the work done at the University of North Carolina. . . Since the developments in this whole area of education are taking place so rapidly, one wonders if this volume presents an up-to-date account. With this reservation, Dr. Folsom has given us a very useful and timely book." D. S. Klais

— Social Forces 20:125 O '41 280w

"An excellent study. Controversies are carefully treated."

— Social Studies 32:239 My '41 20w

"Included in the volume is an excellent bibliography and a valuable classified list of agencies of all kinds concerned with improving family life as well as with research and education. The book should be of help not only to leaders in education for better homes and better home-making, but to educators generally, community leaders, and indeed to all who are concerned with what is happening to the rising generation." S. M. Gruenberg

— Survey 77:228 Jl '41 380w

FONER, PHILIP SHELDON. Business and slavery; the New York merchants and the irrepressible conflict. 356p $4 Univ. of N.C. press

974.71 New York (city)—History. Slavery in the U.S. U.S.—History—Civil war 41-6679

"This is the story of a group of people in the antebellum North who earnestly believed that it was possible to save their country from the horrors of civil war, who struggled for many years to stave off the threatened dissolution of the Union, and who, in the end, zealously supported the armed forces of the United States in the hope that war would achieve what peace had failed to accomplish—the preservation of the Union. As the foremost business men in the nation, they were linked by economic and social ties to the planters of the South. Since they were dependent upon the Cotton Kingdom for much of their prosperity, they were always the first to oppose any policy which they believed would disturb these vital relations and would ultimately undermine the foundations upon which their prosperity rested. To prevent this tragedy, they were again and again compelled to abandon their counting rooms for the arena of politics. It is the purpose of this book to relate the story of their activities in this arena, at the same time pointing out the relations that existed between business and politics." (Pref) The author is a member of the department of history, at the college of the City of New York. Bibliography. Index.

"This reviewer was impressed by the author's restraint in passing judgment on the oft-abused businessman, and by the general scholarly tone of the book." D. L. Kemmerer

+ Ann Am Acad 217:222 S '41 450w

"This book is a welcome addition to the increasing number of special studies of the origin and causes of the 'irrepressible conflict' that shows how much Northern business men were interested in preventing an open rupture." T. R. Hay

— N Y Times p12 Jl 20 '41 500w

FOOTNER, HULBERT. Who killed the husband? 298p $2 Harper 41-9963

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p9 Je 15 '41 110w

"Pleasant reading, plentifully garnished with sentiment." I. A.

— N Y Times p17 Je 29 '41 200w

"Rather routine plot enlivened by Mappin's naive personality, topical chatter, and insouciant antics of chief suspect. Average."

Sat R of Lit 24:18 Je 7 '41 40w

FORBES, ROSITA (TORR) (MRS. A. T. MCGRATH). India of the princes. 319p il $3 Dutton [10s 6d Gifford]

915.4 India—Description and travel. India—History. India—Kings and rulers

(W) 41-4401

There are some 675 independent states in India, ruled over by native princes. The author of this book visited among these states, and describes their history, present rulers, the splendor of their palaces, lands, and jewels, and their tiger and boar hunts.

Reviewed by H. M. Shaw

Books p16 Ag 24 '41 550w

Reviewed by Frederick Reinstein

Boston Transcript p3 Mr 29 '41 650w

"Important, timely, and impressive book about India written by a distinguished world-traveler-author who makes information both delightful and authentic. . . From the many-faceted angles of India's civilization the author presents an amazing amount of carefully digested information. Recommended." S. E. Sherman

— Library J 66:263 Mr 15 '41 100w

"Mrs Forbes' book is not to be read for time-liness or importance. It seems to have been written a few years ago, and a reference to Kemal Ataturk in the present tense may stand beside a mention of 'Matthew Arnold's 'Light of Asia'' as a token of the need of editing. It also needs a map. Like all of Rosita Forbes's work, this is a highly personal book. It is certainly highly entertaining as well."

N Y Times p12 Jl 20 '41 600w

"Sometimes bewilderingly factual."

New Yorker 17:87 Mr 22 '41 50w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 13 '41 1600w

Wis Lib Bul 37:137 Jl '41

FORBES-ROBERTSON, DIANA (MRS. VINCENT SHEEAN). Battle of Waterloo road [with photographs by] Robert Capa. 124p $2 Random house

940.54422 World war, 1939—London. Photographic books 42-557

Chronicles the lives of a few score of Londoners living in the Waterloo district, south of the Thames. It shows their reactions to the bombings and fires, and explains the routine which makes up their present existence in this severely punished area. The Gibbs family is chosen for much of the study, because they are leaders in the district. A part of the work is devoted to Father Hutchinson, the vicar, who has been a tower of strength to his parishioners, as he cheers them on in their activities, or carries on his religious services in his ruined church.

FORBES-ROBERTSON, DIANA—Continued

"Miss Forbes-Robertson has done a first-rate job in making these folks so familiar, for there is not a trace of condescension in her book and she sets their great, solid figures down before us in all their simple, human splendor. In so doing, she makes it more evident than many a more ambitious piece of writing has done just what kind of folks these modest Londoners are. . . There is the stuff for a dozen novels here except that, being life, it is richer and less likely than any fiction. And being life, it has been most admirably put before us not alone in Miss Forbes-Robertson's simple and affecting words but in the overwhelmingly 'true' photographs of Robert Capa. This, then, is not sob-stuff. It is a book full of people whom one is very glad to know." Iris Barry

+ Books p6 D 14 '41 800w

New Repub 106:94 Ja 19 '42 50w

New Yorker 17:60 D 27 '41 50w

"Carefully written, without flamboyant glorifications, but permitting an earnest recital of daily routine to bespeak the courage of the people. There is no touch of condescension in Miss Forbes-Robertson's writing, but a humanly temperate understanding of the simplicity innate in the people about whom she writes. Here are sketched the ingredients of a typical London novel, for in the background of all these people sharing in the war is the continuing pattern of their individual lives." L. S. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 D 17 '41 750w

FORBES-ROBERTSON, DIANA, (MRS VINCENT SHEEAN), and STRAUS, ROGER WILLIAMS, Jr., eds. War letters from Britain; with a foreword by Vincent Sheean. 240p $2 Putnam

940.548142 World war, 1939—Personal narratives. World war, 1939—Great Britain (W) 41-2856

Collection of letters from all types of people—writers, airmen, soldiers, men in government service, clergymen, housewives—arranged in chronological order and forming a cross-section of British life in wartime. Divided into four sections: War and waiting; Britain's allies fall; The battle of Britain begins; Blitzkrieg.

Booklist 37:322 Mr 15 '41

"These unrehearsed messages make a history of the war that might almost have been written by one person, so plain are all the words, so strong the same spirit. . . For all its fidelity to fact, this is a book without horrors and without hate." M. L. Becker

+ Books p4 F 2 '41 400w

Reviewed by J. C. Skinner

Boston Transcript p1 F 15 '41 80w

"The letters, from men and women of all ranks and stations . . . tell, as no news reports ever can tell, the intimate details of living under a hail from the skies, the mental reactions of the writers, the courage, the good humor, the fortitude, even the compassion for their foes of the civilians in the front lines of the beleaguered fortress that is England." M. W. B.

+ Christian Science Monitor p22 F 21 '41 400w

Reviewed by André Maurois

Current Hist & Forum 52:3 Mr '41 650w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:198 O '41 20w

Reviewed by Norman Angell

Nation 152:214 F 22 '41 100w

New Repub 104:381 Mr 17 '41 120w

"It is the great value of 'War Letters From Britain' that these spontaneous reflections of experience, coming not from one person or group but from many, show us not only a remarkable picture but one that is comprehensive and coherent: a many-sided, unified whole. . . Many of the most illuminating were written by private individuals whose names are not published. . . Assuredly, this book must be read: not for lacerated sensibilities, but for interest and illumination and insight." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p3 F 2 '41 1350w

"The plain, curiously homogeneous record of a nation's quiet and hard-working heroism under fire."

+ New Yorker 16:67 F 8 '41 90w

Pratt p24 spring '41

Reviewed by Phyllis Bentley

Sat R of Lit 23:6 F 8 '41 700w

Reviewed by Rosamond Gilder

Theatre Arts 25:248 Mr '41 600w

Reviewed by Herbert Davis

Yale R n s 30:826 summer '41 140w

FORD, HARVEY SEABURY. What the citizen should know about the army; il. by André Jandot. 230p maps $2 Norton

355.0973 U.S.—Army (W) 41-51628

"Not an official publication, but an informative account for civilians of the army's organization, the development and function of the general staff, and the eligibility, training, and duties of officers and enlisted men. Chapters are included on the air corps, armored force, and artillery, as well as medical service, chemical warfare, and ordnance. The text of the Conscription bill is given; the conduct of war is discussed." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 37:352 Ap 1 '41

Bookmark 2:4 My '41

Reviewed by P. J. Searles

Books p2 Je 1 '41 750w

Nation 152:481 Ap 19 '41 10w

"On the conduct of war, the author has given us what amounts almost to a factual essay, and this chapter is perhaps especially rich in illustrative instances."

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 9 '41 280w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Sat R of Lit 24:14 My 17 '41 270w

Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 21 '41

480w

FORD, IRA W., comp. Traditional music of America. 480p $5 Dutton

780.9 Folk music. Folk songs, American. Ballads. Games (W) 41-553

"Ira W. Ford has spent a lifetime compiling a songbook of the words and music sung and danced to a fiddle by post-Colonial and pioneering Americans. There are traditional fiddle tunes and dances, with a glossary of the dance calls, and the stories behind the music. The old-time play party tendered the young people in place of the sometimes prescribed dancing, the children's play songs of the village green, the old-time ballads and songs of entertainment, and our traditional patriotic songs are all set forth." (Library J) Includes music. Index.

Booklist 37:266 F 15 '41

"In spite of the naive quality of the book, perhaps even because of it, 'Traditional Music in America' will be prized by many Americans who like such things and are not worried about the homeliness of our artistic and musical background." Douglas Moore

+ Books p13 S 7 '41 650w

"This volume will be useful to small libraries as a supplement to Carl Sandburg's American Song Bag." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 65:981 N 15 '40 80w

"Here is American dance music, up to but not into ragtime, and a very fine picture it makes. The fiddle tunes themselves can now be had in cheap editions, comprising enormous numbers, but Mr. Ford's collection is distinguished by his loving job of collection on the spot, of classification and documentation." Abbe Niles

+ New Repub 105:164 Ag 4 '41 140w

"The author suggests that his book gives a picture of America's 'social and work activities.' The tunes emerged from 'gatherings such as the singing school, debating society, spelling bee, berry picking, school exhibition and sports and pastimes, including the shooting match, fox hunt, coon hunt, fishing party.' It is to be regretted that Mr. Ford did not devote more space to an account of these American pursuits. It would have added depth to this book and made it more attractive to those who want pure reading matter plus the tunes and verses. But that would have been another book, and Mr. Ford is entitled to his premises. His product is pure Americana." Howard Taubman

+ N Y Times p40 O 26 '41 550w

Wis Lib Bul 37:31 F '41

FORD, LESLIE, pseud. See Brown, Z.

FORD, ROBERT SPIVEY, and SHEPARD, E. FENTON. Michigan retail sales and use taxes. 154p pa 75c Univ. of Mich.

336.28 Taxation—Michigan. Sales tax

"This is an extensive revision and expansion of Professor Ford's 1936 study of the Michigan sales tax, published three years after the adoption of the tax. . . The book is broader than its title suggests, as detailed comparisons are made with practices in several other sales-tax states, and the court decisions affecting these taxes are examined at length. Special emphasis has been placed upon legal and administrative problems of retail sales and use taxes in Michigan, although consideration is also devoted to various proposals for changes in the taxes." Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by R. G. Blakey

Am Pol Sci R 35:586 Je '41 380w

"In addition to being a carefully prepared piece of research, it is well written and contains an excellent bibliography." D. C. Cline

+ Ann Am Acad 216:203 JI '41 500w

"Unquestionably, the legal and constitutional issues of retail-sales taxation have been most adequately developed by the authors. There is citation and discussion of nearly all the leading cases. . . The reviewer is of the opinion that the book would have been much better balanced had the treatment of fiscal and economic problems been expanded. It is highly probable that citizens would have found greater interest in a more detailed analysis of costs of administration, measurement of evasion, degree of regression, and similar problems than they will display in perusing the lengthy discussion of decisions—many of which possess merely historical interest—concerning the constitutional status of state sales taxes. The study might also have performed greater public service by at least mentioning some of the alternative revenue devices open to the state of Michigan and the arguments advanced for and against their use." N. H. Jacoby

+ — J Pol Econ 49:938 D '41 450w

FOREMAN, LEONARD LONDON. Don Desperado. 285p $2 Dutton

41-6793

Western story.

Booklist 37:465 Je 1 '41

"Admirers of the late beloved Dane Coolidge better take a look at this. It has that same all-wool-and-a-yard-wide quality." Will Cuppy

+ Books p20 Ap 20 '41 130w

"L. L. Foreman has written several serials and novelettes, but this is his first novel, and as such it is a distinct achievement, accomplished with great skill and gusto—altogether the best tale in its genre that has come our way in several years." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p23 Ag 24 '41 200w

FORESTER, CECIL SCOTT. The captain from Connecticut. 344p $2.50 Little

(W) 41-51802

The career of an American sea captain during the War of 1812 provides the background for this historical novel. Captain Peabody runs the blockade from New York in a blinding snow storm, joins forces with two Baltimore ships, and hies to the Caribbean, where he causes a lot of damage among British vessels until he is trapped in Martinique.

Booklist 37:491 Je 15 '41

Bookmark 2:16 N '41

"It is a graceful frigate of a tale, not a three-decker of the line like the Hornblower trilogy. But when the most popular British novelist of the sea at the moment, and deservedly so, writes a tale in celebration of an American captain and his Yankee ship of our second unhappy war with Britain, it is news. Forester being Forester, one does not have to be told that it is handled with subtlety as well as consummate skill. It is, to be sure, open to certain criticisms." F. T. Marsh

+ — Books pl Je 15 '41 1300w

Cath World 154:124 O '41 170w

Christian Century 58:935 JI 23 '41 80w

"Mr. Forester's realism is the product of a keen imagination leavened with a sound theoretical knowledge of naval tactics and old-fashioned sail seamanship. We dare any retired admiral, schooled in the frigate Constellation, to find a halyard or a belaying pin out of place anywhere in these pages. . . His narrative never stops to make a speech or externalize a scene with vivid adjectives. His writing keeps hard on the heels of the characters—it creates. Events never drift; they keep driving. . . But whenever the rustle of silk supplants the thunder of sail and attention centers on the Governor-General's sister or the Governor's daughter, 'as lovely as the set of the Delaware's foretopsail,' the author's characterization reflects something of the self-consciousness the sea officers show in the company of the ladies. His rapture seems more convincing when he dwells on the foretopsail and not on the lady." H. T.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p20 Je 17 '41 550w

"Highly interesting story; as good as Captain Horatio Hornblower." J. A. Sohn

+ Library J 66:463 My 15 '41 80w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 8 '41 200w

"Another spanking good mizzenmast and broadside yarn by the author of 'Captain Horatio Hornblower.'"

+ Nation 152:705 Je 14 '41 30w

Reviewed by Otis Ferguson

New Repub 104:364 Je 23 '41 300w

"As Captain Peabody is a less interesting personality than the intricate invert Captain Hornblower, the book can be safely recommended only to the sailing reader." A. P. West

New Statesman & Nation 22:186 Ag 23 '41 110w

"The English novelist C. S. Forester, whose fame as a narrator of naval-adventure tales of the Napoleonic epoch reached its high point in the 'Captain Horatio Hornblower' trilogy, here pays tribute to American seafighters of the War of 1812. To suggest that Josiah Peabody . . . is a counterpart of the gallant Hornblower would perhaps be resented by both gentlemen on patriotic grounds, but to mention certain resemblances—an equal professional ability, like courage and susceptibility to feminine charm—is merely to point out familiar characteristics of the highest type of officer in both services. Indeed, one reflects that Peabody with his Puritan conscience manifesting itself in a Spartan self-discipline, his chivalrous attitude, sportsmanship and indomitable spirit, represents the ideal seafighter as Cooper and Marryat knew and described him pacing the quarterdeck of an American or British frigate." Drake de Kay

FORESTER, C. S.—Continued

+ N Y Times p7 Je 15 '41 750w

"The spanking narrative is crowded with the maritime detail of which Forester is a master, and even if, like myself, you can just about distinguish between a marlinspike and plum duff, a great deal of the atmosphere gets over. Particularly interesting is the odd contrast conjured up in your mind between naval warfare today, so total, so mechanical, so non-human, and naval warfare in 1814, fought in accordance with a complex system of etiquette, almost Arthurian in its courtliness. Despite the carnage, the sea battles as Forester describes them have a quality of the dance, so formal are they. . . . On the whole, more of a commercial job than anything Forester has done up to now, but the fine old salt air still blows through the paragraphs in spite of all the carpentry." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 17:77 Je 14 '41 450w

"The story bears marks of haste and improvisation . . . and the whole manipulation of the plot after the American frigate is cornered in Martinique harbor . . . resembles the dramatic improvisations which conclude 'The Pilot,' 'Midshipman Easy,' or (to go on land) 'Rob Roy.' The characters are sufficient for romantic narrative, but they are without depth and have only elementary psychology; and the reader of my generation is inclined, in the last third of the story, to wonder whether he isn't reading a novel contemporary with 'Monsieur Beaucaire.'" H. M. Jones

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:7 Je 14 '41 700w

"As an adventure story 'The Captain From Connecticut' has everything—the thunder of naval battles, tropic skies and green West Indies Islands, gallant officers and beautiful women and even a satisfactory villain or two. The only fault the reviewer has to find with this book is that it isn't nearly long enough. There is always the hope, of course, that Mr Forester will find more adventures for Capt Peabody, but in the meantime don't miss this one." G. K. M.

+ Springfield Republican p7e Je 15 '41 440w

"C. S. Forester knows his ships and how they are handled, and he uses that knowledge as the blood and bone of his action. He never just blows up a loud atmosphere of adventure; every stratagem, every seafaring event is an intricate equation of courage, technique and sea-chance. He could make the sea exciting to a sailor, and its ways understandable to the harbor master of an Iowa graveyard."

+ Time 37:88 Je 16 '41 330w

Times [London] Lit Sup p369 Ag 2 '41 750w

"A thoroughly exciting account of brave and brilliant deeds by the commander of a U.S. frigate in the war of 1812. There are some descriptions of sea-fighting that rush one breathlessly from one page to the next, oblivious of the laconic reminders of bells tolling the small numbers after midnight." Robert Littell

+ Yale R n s 31:xii autumn '41 320w

FORMAN, HENRY JAMES. Have you a religion? the supreme hygiene of life. 246p $2 Farrar

290 Religion

41-13654

The author, a journalist and author of a number of books of fiction and non-fiction, here writes of the necessity of a religion—not necessarily any particular religion—in the life of modern man. He reviews the history of the parts various religions in the past have played in the development of civilizations and shows how religion has been the "supreme hygiene" of living.

"This is a most attractive volume, all aglow with sincerity and ardor. As a study of religion it is not profound. Some of the authorities referred to make strange bed-fellows!"

+ — Books p34 N 2 '41 200w

N Y Times p10 S 28 '41 800w

FORTES, MEYER, and EVANS-PRITCHARD, EDWARD EVAN, eds. African political systems; pub. for the Int. inst. of African languages and cultures. 301p maps $4 (15s) Oxford

572.96 Africa—Native races. Tribes and tribal system. Society, Primitive [41-6881]

"Eight trained anthropologists, who have mastered the sociology of selected tribes, have each extracted their political organizations and present them here in essays of some thirty or forty pages. . . . The selected tribes are all in parts of British Africa except the Nuer of the Southern Sudan, who, whatever their constitutional status, are administered by British officers. They tend to fall into two contrasted groups, the large organized chiefdoms such as the Zulu and the Nguni—Tshekedi Khama's people—and the opposite type, the 'stateless' societies, such as the Bantu Kavirondo and the Nuer." Times [London] Lit Sup

"As is true of any collaborative volume, the contributions are of unequal scope and weight, and in a number of the chapters one encounters the ineptitude in handling such an historical problem as that of cultural change that characterizes so much of the writing of the functionalist group. It is somewhat unfortunate that a few simple additions were not made to the book that would indicate the attention paid to African political organizations by earlier students. It should not have been difficult to include recognition of the existence of such works, and its would have been gracious for some of the authors, at least, to have written without such utter disregard of the research of their older colleagues. . . . It is also to be regretted that this series of sketches is restricted to tribes living in British colonies." M. J. Herskovits

+ — Am Anthropol 43:465 Jl '41 1600w

"These essays contain interesting data concerning the relations between the types of political systems and the size, density, and modes of livelihood of the populations. Not the least valuable contribution of the authors is their comment on the differences in response to European rule among the various types of native political systems." Eric Beecroft

+ Am Pol Sci R 34:1240 D '40 320w

"This stimulating work on 'African Political Systems' demands a companion volume showing the practical relationship of field studies and the results set forth in a constantly increasing body of periodical literature relating to administration. The addition of a selected bibliography dealing with problems of administration, classified by regions as well as by subjects, would, I believe, have proved a most valuable addition to this competent and useful work." W. D. Hamblin

+ Am Soc R 5:796 O '40 900w

Foreign Affairs 19:263 O '40

"This book has a place also in the political science library. Against the speculations which philosophers from Aristotle to Rousseau have made about primitive society it sets facts, though, as the editors' introduction brings out, these are no easy material for generalization."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p599 N 30 '40 440w

FORTESCUE, WINIFRED (BEECH) lady.
There's rosemary . . . there's rue. . . 428p
$3 Houghton [12s 6d Blackwood]
B or 92 (W) [40-14798]

The wife of Sir John Fortescue, librarian of Windsor castle, and official historian of the British army, tells the story of her life. Her early life in an English rural rectory, her days on the stage, her association with Beerbohm Tree, Mrs Patrick Campbell, and many others connected with the stage, and her happy years of marriage with Sir John are recounted in a book filled with charming and humorous anecdotes. Index.

Booklist 37:407 My 1 '41

Bookmark 2:11 My '41

"For those who like roseate pictures of this aspect of English life, Lady Fortescue's reminiscences will be full of charm. Others will find it a little saccharine. The rosemary outbalances the rue." Page Cooper

Books p13 Mr 23 '41 400w

Boston Transcript p3 Mr 22 '41 70w

"Of the several elements of quality in this autobiography one of the most valuable is its humor, a quenchless sort of gaiety, never forced, but the natural effervescence of a witty nature that never fails to consider the feelings of others." E. C. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 17 '41 370w

"The fragrance of another day seems to hang about Lady Fortescue's autobiography, so that the reader is perhaps more impressed by an old-fashioned personal charm in the book than by the surprisingly varied career of its author. As a matter of fact, the aroma here is of spice as well as sweetness. . . A modern story, this, in an older mood, and more subtly suggestive, perhaps, than it first appears."

+ N Y Times p18 Mr 30 '41 600w

"Lady Fortescue has a rare gift for intimate writing; she never says too much, and she establishes a friendship with her readers which justifies her invitation to them to share her happiness and her sorrow." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 23:7 Mr 22 '41 750w

"Though the author has written two other extremely successful books, Lady Fortescue has none of the tricks of the professional writer. In their place she possesses a naturally free narrative style, a sure gift of selection, a nice sense of humour, and a personal charm which permeates her story everywhere. . . Some may consider the style a little over-sweetened here and there, but it is at least a change from the usual acid-drops of feminine reminiscence. It is typical of Lady Fortescue's modesty and devotion that the sole illustration in the volume is a frontispiece snapshot of her husband. This gay and friendly book is firmly recommended to all who would look into happiness." Rupert Hart-Davis

+ Spec 164:116 Ja 26 '40 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p722 D 9 '39 340w

Wis Lib Bul 37:76 Ap '41

FORTESCUE, WINIFRED (BEECH) lady.
Trampled lilies. 236p $2.50 Houghton
940.548142 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, English. World war, 1939—France 41-12957

When the war broke out Lady Fortescue was at her beloved home in Provence. In the first section of the book she describes her efforts to lighten the hard lot of the French soldiers as they went thru her section of France, wave after wave of them. No provision had been made for their comfort, and her efforts to establish canteens were met with great success. After the armistice she fled to England, and there eventually established herself in a tiny cottage in a Sussex village. Thruout the account Lady Fortescue's deep love for France keeps cropping up, and her belief in the inherent goodness of the French people.

"It is seldom that a personality emerges as clear, as whole and as striking as does that of this author from her pages. As she does nothing that she is ashamed of, she tells everything, even things that might come embarrassingly from a different pen. It is never ridiculous that Lady Fortescue idolizes her little black cocker spaniel, Dominie, though she makes the tale of their misadventures often extremely funny as well as nerve-racking. . . 'Trampled Lilies' is delightful to read and exquisitely written. In its highly individual and intimate way it speaks for humanity as a whole, typifies a particular sort of independence and decency which are deserving of all effort and sacrifice to protect." Iris Barry

+ Books p2 Ag 3 '41 650w

"It is a book replete with warm sympathy for those engulfed in our troubled times; a book, though possibly a trifle on the sentimental side, bound to make us all more eager and ready to play our parts in the saving of the things that matter." M. W.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 S 13 '41 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:377 Ja '42 20w

"Well written; the tragic subject is enlivened by delightfully humorous anecdotes. Highly recommended for adults." H. P. Bolman

+ Library J 66:613 JI '41 130w

"An engaging chronicle this, in which the personality of the author makes itself pleasantly felt." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 10 '41 800w

"Gushy and sentimental, but shrewdly observed and pleasantly written."

+ New Yorker 17:67 Ag 23 '41 40w

"Lady Fortescue writes quietly, economically, graphically and, yes, warmly. She is human and takes it for granted that you are, too. She has the gift of the mot juste. Her words are effective whether she is describing her French garden, the friendly English countryside, the London hospital ward in which wounded French soldiers listening to France on their radios hear Petain tell the world of their betrayal, or Dominie, her black cocker, who pads his way engagingly in and out of the narrative. Naturally, the underlying tone of the book is somber, but there are many flashes of humor, and much that is luminous and lovely." E. C.

+ Springfield Republican p7e Ag 3 '41 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p650 D 27 '41 240w

Wis Lib Bul 37:175 N '41

FOSDICK, HARRY EMERSON. Living under tension; sermons on Christianity today. 253p $1.50 Harper

252 Sermons

(W) 41-21164

Twenty-five sermons by the minister of the Riverside church in New York city. They all are concerned with the vital problems of the day, and show forth the ideals of this Christian pacifist, who has "refused to bless another war."

Booklist 38:89 N 15 '41

"From the standpoint of the printed page, Dr. Fosdick is our most prolific preacher. This is his fifth volume of sermons in ten years, and each volume is a collection of no less than twenty-five discourses. Is he still maintaining the standard of excellence which has ranked him among the great preachers of our day? The answer of this book is indubitable. Prepared under the stress of the most dreadful age in modern history, it represents preaching of high order." J. H. Holmes

+ Books p28 N 23 '41 200w

"Fosdick's sermons deserve reviewing but do not need it. The reader will be better employed in reading them than in reading what anybody writes about them. . . It will be hard for a preacher to read them without wanting to preach them. Well, he might do worse."

+ Christian Century 58:1275 O 15 '41 60w

FOSDICK, H. E.—Continued

"These sermons reveal all of the characteristics which we have learned to associate with Dr. Fosdick, plus a heightened urgency and an even deeper insight. No minister in our generation has wrestled more courageously and more effectively with the fundamental problems of life." G. E. Daniels

+ Churchman 155:17 N 1 '41 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 D '41

"The twenty-five sermons are up to Dr. Fosdick's recognized standard of excellence and will richly repay an unhurried reading."

J. H. Franklin

+ Crozer Q 19:83 Ja '42 280w

Times [London] Lit Sup p628 D 13 '41 360w

FOSTER, BENNETT. Dust of the trail. 275p $2 Doubleday

41-3118

Western story.

Booklist 37:325 Mr 15 '41

"Bennett Foster knows the country and the life of which he writes, and with each new book he writes better—with a surer grip on his material, with more power, in cleaner, crisper, terser style. This is the best novel he has yet published." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p34 Mr 23 '41 200w

FOSTER, ELIZABETH. Singing beach. 309p $2.50 Harper

41-4624

The Chadbournes, a mysterious, aristocratic-looking English couple, rent a cottage on a Maine island, where the people are all related or great friends. Gradually their past catches up with the Chadbournes, but not before one of the islanders, Linda, who was young and impressionable, had been badly hurt.

"The drawback to Miss Foster's device is that she does not distinguish sufficiently between the attitudes of her adolescent and her adult characters. Linda is a moving person, because she is handled with a thorough understanding of the violence of her feelings and her moods. But the older people who see importance in the same trivialities, are merely petty. There is no character with the tolerance and the balance necessary to see the actual dimensions of these small events. And without such a character it is impossible for this book to be the realistic and wise book that it should have been." Anne Brooks

Books p9 Mr 16 '41 380w

Reviewed by Ruth Blodgett

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 5 '41 380w

"The book depends largely for its not inconsiderable success on its lightness, its wit, its suavity and its atmospheric charm. The wild, dark, colorful island is, in a sense, more real than any of the characters in the story, and the idle, gracious life which the Heseltines lead there has a romantic kind of piquancy all its own. Elizabeth Foster gets more feeling for Maine into this pleasant, rambling novel than she does for the people whose emotions she dissects. 'Singing Beach' is a nice book and a glamorous one. . . It is, however, also very tenuous." E. H. Walton

+ — N Y Times p22 Mr 16 '41 700w

New Yorker 17:86 Mr 15 '41 50w

"For vividness and ease with which Miss Foster creates a landscape, a climate, and a group of human beings, there is no other word than 'talent.' Her book, with its color, its humor, and its evocation of reality, is in many ways a very charming one. To a remarkable degree, and in spite of the heightened, romantic quality of its mood, it is true to life. . . Three quarters of the book unfold most satisfactorily, when, all at once, something happens to it. It becomes overcharged, even, at moments, a bit cheap; and one reflects, unhappily, that the story, after all, would make an undistinguished moving picture." N. I.

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:19 Mr 22 '41 210w

FOSTER, MRS GENEVIEVE (STUMP). George Washington's world; il. by [the author]. 348p $2.75 Scribner

909.7 History, Modern. Washington, George —Juvenile literature (W) 41-15813

"This book tells the story of George Washington's life, of the people who were living when he did, both in America, and all over the world, of what they did when they were children, how later on the pattern of their lives fitted together, and what part each one played in that greatest of all adventure stories, the History of the World." (Pref) Indexes.

Booklist 38:83 N 1 '41

"Something that badly needed doing has been done, in this portly and fascinating book, extremely well. . . It is safe to say that children will not be the only ones to read this book. It is easier to start reading it than to stop." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 S 14 '41 320w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p14 N 6 '41 170w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '41

"Such a readable presentation of world affairs during the years 1732-1799 should serve to show school children that the events of history never take place in compartments but are, of necessity, related to one another. . . Numerous illustrations and an excellent index add to the value of an unusual book." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:364 S '41 130w

"The book shows evidence of much research and thought. The illustrations are clever and descriptive, the style of writing and vocabulary clear—although at times sentences are long and involved. . . Excellent type page and wide margins, but unfortunately the book is over-size (10½ by 8) and heavy to hold. Recommended for both public and school libraries as a very fine piece of work." M. R. Lucas

+ Library J 66:798 S 15 '41 150w

"A handsome and exciting history book for a reader of any age." Jessie Stanton & E. W. Steele

+ New Repub 105:838 D 15 '41 40w

"Many pictures, which leave something to be desired in the way of beauty, but which are suggestive and interesting, serve their purpose of helping to visualize the pattern of the world. This is an ambitious project, brilliantly executed." E. L. E.

+ N Y Times p7 N 2 '41 340w

New Yorker 17:146 D 6 '41 40w

"An orientation of America's hero in world history that should have been done long before this. Essential." Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 24:10 N 8 '41 30w

Social Studies 32:380 D '41 10w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 21 '41 110w

FOSTER, MICHAEL BERESFORD, ed. See Masters of political thought, v 1

FOX, MRS FANNIE (FERBER). I know a little milliner. 248p $2.50 Hale

41-22958

Career story of a determined small town girl who hated sham and was sure that affairs of the heart would never hamper her. From a small hat shop in a Wisconsin backwater town to the elegant establishment of Lala Doré was a triumphant upward progress for Dora, but her personal affairs were not so easily managed.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p9 D 21 '41 120w

"The book itself is a good deal like its heroine, solid like the adolescent Dora and smart like the famous milliner Lala Doré." C. D.

+ N Y Times p34 N 23 '41 460w
Springf'd Republican p7e D 7 '41 100w

FOX, FRANCES MARGARET. The little cat that could not sleep; pictures by Susanne Suba. [31p] $1.50 Dutton

41-11114

Picture-story book about a little cat who was too restless to sleep, and wandered around visiting all the sleeping farm and zoo animals, until finally he too fell asleep.

Reviewed by Warren Chappell
Horn Bk M 17:453 N '41 20w

"The tale's simplicity, its delightful descriptions of animals asleep, both in words and pictures, make it a perfect story to be read at bedtime. Susanne Suba who illustrated Lottie's Valentine, has helped greatly in making this a book of real distinction." Florence O'Gara

+ Library J 66:735 S 1 '41 60w

"In 'The Little Cat That Could Not Sleep' an adult admires the clever drawing of the hippopotamus or the pig family, the child looks up wonderingly and says, 'What is it?' The story is amiable, if somewhat lacking in substance, and the page design is often striking and effective." A. T. Eaton

+ — N Y Times p10 Ag 24 '41 150w

"Little children who rebel against the bedtime hour, and it is a model child indeed who does not, are going to follow with amusement and sympathy as the hero of 'The Little Cat That Could Not Sleep' goes about its adventures."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 20 '41 60w

FOX, FRANCES MARGARET. Quakers courageous; il. by Marian Cannon. 211p $2 Lothrop

289.6 Friends, Society of 41-18793

"This book is not a formal history, but, chronologically arranged, these sketches of Quakers, some gentle, some daring, others very practical, and all of them very firm in the faith, comprise an outline history of the spirit which has remained steady and true through three centuries." N Y Times

"The material is interesting and the facts seem authentic; to the non-Quaker many of the stories will be unfamiliar. There is need today for information about the Quakers, but the author has not presented her material in a way to appeal to the average reader. The style tends to 'talk down' and is sentimental, though relieved by flashes of humor." E. A. Groves

+ Library J 66:1097 D 15 '41 130w

"This book gives a simple and enlightening picture of their beliefs and work, and should prove thought-provoking. Good format. Recommended for boys and girls eleven to fourteen." Marguerite Nahigian

+ Library J 66:1097 D 15 '41 90w

N Y Times p10 O 26 '41 250w

"Original and genuine." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 24:8 N 8 '41 30w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 16 '41 130w

FOX, FRANCES MARGARET. True monkey stories; pictures by Tibor Gergely. [55p] $1.75 Lothrop

Monkeys—Legends and stories 41-13405

"Children who like funny stories will enjoy this book which has eight true stories, some retold from old ships' diaries, and four fables from Aesop. Monkeys are mischievous animals and imitative as well, and can cause excitement, as is proved by the stories in this book. One of the stories tells of a monkey who borrowed a baby and climbed up the nearest mast with the baby in his arms; another is about a monkey who milked a goat and drank the milk intended for the captain's breakfast." Library J

"The illustrations are made with a reserved humor, and suggest the work of a versatile artist." Warren Chappell

+ Horn Bk M 17:453 N '41 20w

"The illustrations are by Tibor Gergely and are excellent, full of fun and action." J. E. Stromdahl

+ Library J 66:908 O 15 '41 150w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 31 '41 90w

FOX, GENEVIEVE MAY (MRS RAYMOND G. FULLER). Green treasure; il. by Forrest W. Orr. 259p $2 Little

41-20167

"Story of a New England farm girl whose frustrated ambition for an education led to the development of a lively business in Christmas garlands, won the respect of her community in a 'return to the farm' movement, and recalled her college boy neighbor to an appreciation of rural life—and of her." Library J

"Miss Fox's ability to paint the New England country adds charm to a story that has good characterization and ample excitement." E. V. Wyatt

+ Cath World 154:382 D '41 90w

"It has no value as a vocational novel, some of the characters are unconvincing, and the style is neither distinctive nor inspired. Nevertheless, I approve its purchase for rural libraries and others where more titles of clean, easily read fiction are needed for girls in the teens. The character development is from a rather self-pitying girl of fifteen to a confident young woman. It is accurate in the many details of style, custom, amusement, and vernacular of the early 1900's. Its thesis is the larger meaning of education, as distinguished from mere schooling." Maude Adams

+ — Library J 66:953 N 1 '41 150w

"Pretty syrupy." G. G. Bates

Sat R of Lit 24:11 N 8 '41 20w

FRACKELTON, WILL. Sagebrush dentist, as told to H. G. Seely. 246p $2.50 McClurg

B or 92 Dentists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 41-12584

"Will Frackelton, dentist, landed in the sagebrush of Wyoming with nothing but his tools and his precious hands which he risked to knock out the town banker and win a place among he-men. Aching teeth brought people into his ken at the whistle-stop or ranch house, even for one icy year 'with a real wife' in the brutal melee of the Klondyke gold rush. The adventuresome itinerant wound up as a resident practitioner at Cheyenne, with an avocation for civic service and the preservation of the Wyoming past." Survey G

Booklist 38:51 O 15 '41

"This is good Western Americana told by a man who doesn't take himself too seriously." + Books p14 Ag 3 '41 120w

"This is a joyous book, with overtones on the sturdy people who made a state of mountains and sage-brush scented plains. They carried life on." Leon Whipple

+ Survey G 30:439 Ag '41 350w

FRAENKEL, ERNST. The dual state; a contribution to the theory of dictatorship; tr. from the German by E. A. Shils, in collaboration with Edith Lowenstein and Klaus Knorr. 248p $3 Oxford

321.6 Germany—Nazi movement. Law—Germany 41-2627

As a practising attorney in Berlin from 1933 to 1938 Mr Fraenkel was in close contact with the legal system of National Socialist Germany, while opposed to the Nazi regime. His main thesis is that Germany has two political systems—the "normative state" and the "prerogative state." The first is an administrative body endowed with elaborate powers for safeguarding the legal order. The "prerogative state," on the other hand, exercises unlimited arbitrary power and violence unchecked by any legal guarantees. The book is an analysis of these two co-existent states. Index.

Reviewed by G. H. Sabine
Am Pol Sci R 35:547 Je '41 850w

Reviewed by W. L. Kolb
Am Soc R 6:588 Ag '41 180w

Reviewed by R. M. W. Kempner
Ann Am Acad 216:183 Jl '41 350w

"Mr. Fraenkel's analysis is thorough and scholarly and based on extensive research."
+ Atlantic F '41 200w

"Interesting, and factual treatment of nazi law." + Commonweal 33:626 Ap 11 '41 170w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:201 O '41 60w

"As a detailed record of what has happened to the Rechtsstaat under totalitarian auspices, the book is without rival. The encroachments of the prerogative state are outlined on the basis of rich case materials, and the vast body of German legal writings has been competently sifted to guide the American student." F. M. Marx

+ Harvard Law R 54:1264 My '41 1250w

"Mr. Fraenkel has written an indispensable book without rival in its field." H. J. Laski
+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 30 '41 300w

"Mr. Fraenkel was a labor lawyer in Germany before Hitler came to power. He remained as a practising attorney until 1938, when he emigrated to this country. His book is the work of a thoughtful and critical observer who analyzes his experiences and the historical changes which have occurred in Germany with special attention to the administration of justice. It contains new, stimulating ideas which do not derive from abstract schemes, but from the contrast between theory and practice which usually remains hidden to the casual observer." Guenter Reimann

+ New Repub 105:29 Jl 7 '41 480w

Reviewed by Otto Kirchheimer
Pol Sci Q 56:434 S '41 1100w

"This remarkable book will not be easy reading for the layman. But it is important reading for the lawyer, the political thinker, the student of Nazi Germany as a phenomenon." Max Lerner

+ Sat R of Lit 23:10 F 8 '41 1050w

FRANK, PHILIPP. Between physics and philosophy. 238p $2.75 Harvard univ. press

530.1 Physics—Philosophy A 41-2189

"A series of essays for the theoretical scientist on the relations which exist or which should exist between philosophy and physics." (N Y New Tech Bks) Contents: Introduction: Historical background; The law of causality and experience (1908); The importance of Ernst Mach's philosophy of science for our times (1917); Physical theories of the twentieth century and school philosophy (1929); Is there a trend today toward idealism in physics? (1934); The positivistic and the metaphysical conception of physics (1935); Logical empiricism and the philosophy of the Soviet union (1935); Philosophical misinterpretations of the quantum theory (1936); What "length" means to the physicist (1937); Determinism and indeterminism in modern physics (1938); Ernst Mach and the unity of science (1938).

"The essays are written with Professor Frank's characteristic charm and genial humor... The essays in this volume have been written over a span of thirty years, and it is not surprising therefore that there have been some shifts in Professor Frank's views." E. N.
+ J Philos 38:417 Jl 17 '41 650w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:45 Jl '41

"The reader who desires a succinct account in readable style of the positivistic view will find Professor Frank's book eminently worth reading." R. B. Lindsay

+ R of Scientific Instruments 12:505 O '41 950w

FRANK, WALDO DAVID. Summer never ends. 312p $2.50 Duell

41-14049

The love story of a successful New York lawyer, who on the eve of a divorce from his wife, discovers a girl of the working classes, many years his junior, who brings all his life into focus. But the girl is committed to a pitiful young unemployed lawyer, and the three of them go thru a series of upheavals, before the solution of the problem.

"A neatly conceived, smartly written idyll-in-reserve. 'Summer Never Ends' leaves a slight sediment of distaste in the mouth, not because its materials are on the sordid side (though that is true enough) but rather because the narrative pretends to an importance and a seriousness which it does not achieve... [It] is a strangely disturbing, unsatisfactory yet intensely interesting novel." F. H. Bullock

+ — Books p8 Ag 24 '41 750w

Reviewed by H. S. Taylor
Library J 66:669 Ag '41 80w

Reviewed by Paul Rosenfeld
Nation 153:378 O 18 '41 360w

"There is violence, there are people and situations, but there is no proper story because the problem is so vague and its exposition so willfully muddy. There is talk of Love in the Whole, but there is not even enough feeling for people to bring them alive in our sympathies... The book keeps going, through a certain sense of strangeness, a certain earnest intention, some thought on the structure of society and knowledge of its institutions. Unraveled, it would be a simple case of first amateur plot effort. But it is not unraveled." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub 105:411 S 29 '41 480w

"All through the book Frank has a difficult time disentangling love from lust... The values, whether of word-meanings or of characterization, are too personal to evoke a calculable response. This leaves a sense of abnormality in the reader, and undermines his pleasure in a story that otherwise might be taken with light enjoyment." Harold Strauss

N Y Times p4 Ag 24 '41 1000w

"The characters are sharply drawn; what happens to them is, for some reason, not quite as interesting as it ought to be."

+ New Yorker 17:67 Ag 23 '41 40w

"If anyone else had written this story of a muddled, middle-aged man's Search for Love, it could have been reviewed with the frivolity or mild ribaldry its adolescent solemnity merits. Since a writer of Mr. Frank's stature has perpetrated it, one is compelled to look squarely at it and ask why." Bess Jones

+ Sat R of Lit 24:19 S 13 '41 600w

FRANKEN, ROSE D. (LEWIN) (MRS WILLIAM BROWN MELONEY). The book of Claudia. 305,307p $2.50 Farrar

(W) 41-51923

Containing the two novels: Claudia, and Claudia and David (Book Review digest, 1939 and 1940).

Booklist 38:56 O 15 '41

"The popularity of Claudia is deserved, though one cannot predict how long it will last; she is charming, honest and courageous, and she has all the things which most readers would like to have for themselves. As time goes on, a substitute for her will doubtless be found. Meanwhile, here she is with her husband David, her children and her dogs."

+ Books p21 S 14 '41 90w

"Many novels are written about a woman's life, about love, and marriage and motherhood, and 'Claudia' is one more—but with what a difference! 'Claudia' has everything that the other novels have of truth and reality, and an infinite wealth of humor and warm life besides. Rose Franken's gift for comedy, and her delicious understanding, turn ordinary details and banal situations into things to be relished and enjoyed." Currie Cabot

+ Sat R of Lit 24:9 N 1 '41 300w

FRANKEN, ROSE D. (LEWIN) (MRS WILLIAM BROWN MELONEY). Claudia; a comedy drama in three acts. 244p $2 Farrar 812 (W) 41-6402

Modern play about an American girl, who even after she had been married could not give up her dependence on her mother. An understanding husband, plus a fund of humor, mixed with tragedy, compelled Claudia to face reality. Based on the novel of the same name.

Booklist 37:435 My 15 '41

"A play by an American dramatist for which we can throw up our hats—'Claudia' is a delightful comedy, poignant, witty, original in the characterization of its chief protagonist." Grenville Vernon

+ Commonweal 33:475 F 28 '41 650w (Dramatic criticism)

FRANKEN, ROSE D. (LEWIN) (MRS WILLIAM BROWN MELONEY), and MELONEY, WILLIAM BROWN (FRANKEN MELONEY, pseud). American bred. 283p $2 Farrar 41-2209

Story of a man and a girl and a dog—the last a Great Dane, Rowena, who wins all the prizes at her second dog show.

Booklist 37:440 My 15 '41

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p29 My 11 '41 150w

"It is an entertaining story for those who like young love against a background of dogs, with a few cows, horses and chickens thrown in for good measure." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p24 Ap 20 '41 190w

FRANKLIN, BENJAMIN. Experiments; a new edition of [his] Experiments and observations on electricity made at Philadelphia; ed. by I. Bernard Cohen. 453p il $4 Harvard univ. press

537 Electricity

"Mr. Cohen uses as the basis for the present edition the last (5th) English edition of 1774. But his discovery of a hitherto unpublished manuscript of the Letters has enabled him to correct and, in some places, to enlarge the already known text. Mr. Cohen's Introduction, running to 161 pages, supplies the modern reader with the knowledge requisite to appreciate and enjoy Franklin's work; it discusses the state of electrical science before Franklin, the latter's own discoveries, and their reception in England, France, and America." J Philos

"Mr. Cohen's first contribution to the Franklin science brings into that vast field a promising new worker from whom much may be expected. He has the ardor which all Franklinists feel, and a thorough-going patience and precision in research. Because the field is so vast it is no wonder if Mr. Cohen has made a slip or so." Carl Van Doren

+ Books p24 O 5 '41 800w

"Mr. Cohen's comments are always informative and stimulating; his account throws fresh light upon several scientific controversies of the eighteenth century, and he also helps clear up obscure points in the history of science of the period." E. N.

+ J Philos 38:717 D 18 '41 200w

FRAPRIE, FRANK ROY, and MORRIS, ROBERT H., comps. Copying technique. 128p il $1.50 Am. photographic pub.

778 Photography—Copying 40-27784

"Simple individual methods of making photographic copies of engravings, photographs, paintings, written records, prints and similar designs by the use of a contact printing process or camera. Commercial methods requiring special machines are not described." Booklist

Booklist 37:133 D 1 '40

N Y New Tech Bks 25:51 O '40

FRASER, CECIL EATON, and TEELE, STANLEY FERDINAND, eds. Industry goes to war; readings on American industrial rearmament. 123p maps $1.50 McGraw

330.973 U.S.—Industries and resources, European war, 1939—Economic aspects—U.S. U.S.—Defenses (W) 41-9762

"Contains papers on 'Mobilizing industry for war,' by Brigadier General Harry K. Rutherford; 'Guns and butter,' by J. Philip Wernette; 'Gearing a business for national defense,' by Marvin Bower; 'Food in a world at war,' by Joseph S. Davis; 'Minerals and war,' by Paul M. Tyler; 'Wheels for defense,' by Robert F. Black; 'Wartime labor productivity,' by Edwin C. Robbins; 'Defense "lending": 1918 and 1941,' by John D. Glover; 'Negotiated contracts,' by Charles I. Gragg; 'Present status of priorities,' by John H. Martin; 'Buying Latin American loyalty,' by J. Anton de Haas." Am Econ R

Am Econ R 31:652 S '41 90w

Booklist 38:46 O 15 '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:380 Ja '42 20w

Management R 30:395 O '41 110w

FRASER, CHELSEA CURTIS. Famous American flyers; with maps by the author. 352p $2.50 Crowell

926.29 Aviators (W) 41-8434

Popularly written, biographical sketches of the Wright brothers, Glenn H. Curtiss, Edward V. Rickenbacker, Albert C. Read, John Rodgers, Richard E. Byrd, Charles A. Lindbergh, Amelia Earhart Putnam, Frank M. Hawks, Wiley Post, Edwin C. Musick, Howard Hughes, and Douglas Corrigan. Index.

Christian Century 58:629 My 7 '41 10w

"In these days when the magnificent achievement of airmen at war is making the whole world air-minded, 'Famous American Flyers' is an indispensable book for school and public libraries and one that boys will enjoy owning. Mr. Fraser's style is informal; his enthusiasm, sincerity and unpretentiousness, however, make up for an occasional lapse into careless writing. The maps are clear, there are several fine photographs, and the book is well indexed. For boys and girls from 12 on, though younger children, and adults interested in aviation, will also enjoy it." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p8 Je 29 '41 400w

Social Studies 32:335 N '41 20w

FRAZIER, EDWARD FRANKLIN. Negro youth at the crossways; their personality development in the middle states; prepared for the Am. youth commission. 301p maps $2.25 Am. council on educ.

325.26 Negroes—Moral and social conditions. Youth 40-32764

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

Reviewed by L. S. Cottrell, Jr.
Am J Soc 47:111 J1 '41 700w

"On the whole, the book leaves me with a distinct feeling of dissatisfaction. The subject seems to be blurred rather than clarified. The title of the book seems to promise something that isn't quite delivered, unless it merely indicates that Negro youth are confused—but so are white youth—and so am I. I got more real 'insight'—and information—out of the well-documented statement in Appendix A, the rationale of the study, Appendix B, a description of the Washington Negro community, and Chapter I, 'The Negro Community' (56 pages in all) than I did from the other 268 pages. This, I think is due to the method used. The book evidently is intended to give us 'insight.' It certainly doesn't give us much basis for scientific generalization." Read Bain

— Am Soc R 6:130 F '41 900w

"This is a mature book. Documentary material, presented largely in the conversational form in which it was collected through the interview method, has been given a scholarly, candid, and penetrating analysis without sacrificing an iota of spontaneity or of human interest." O. M. Stone

+ Ann Am Acad 214:267 Mr '41 600w
Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '41

"The conclusions and recommendations are very important; they certainly are significant enough that every educator ought to examine them in persona, rather than just get their undigested summary from such a short review as ours. But there is one point which the reviewer feels ought to be cleared up in the future studies of this kind. It concerns the need of integrating these specific conclusions with the general trends of America's problems." J. S. Roucek

+ — Social Educ 5:238 Mr '41 200w

"Negro Youth at the Crossways, since it is a book not only about Negroes but also by a Negro, undoubtedly presents a much more intimate picture of Negro life than would have resulted from a similar study made by white investigators. Nevertheless, the book reveals a number of weaknesses—almost flaws—which detract greatly from its worth. It is rather difficult to believe, for instance, that only 268 youths selected apparently without undue attention to strictly scientific methods of sampling can be taken either as representative of the 28,718 Negro youths in Washington and Louisville, or of the 175,000 of them in the middle states. Yet that is exactly what the book says it is: a significant study of Negro youth in the middle states." G. W. Lovejoy

Social Forces 19:579 My '41 550w

"This volume should be required reading for all serious students of social problems and especially for persons whose work brings them into contact with Negro youth. It is not too much to say that the future of democratic institutions in this country will be determined in large measure by the adjustment of Negro and white youth to a society that has found but limited use for their talents during the past ten years." E. S. Lewis

+ Survey 77:71 F '41 300w

FREDA, JOHN. All these geniuses. 332p $2.50 Dial press

41-19305

The story of four young musicians who grew up together in New Haven, each dreaming that he was a genius. One of them came to the conclusion that he was better fitted to become a doctor; the other three went on their way—two of them to destruction, so only one of the four realized his dream.

"This should be good reading for your musical friends, but not the rug-cutters." Lisle Bell

+ Books p8 Ag 17 '41 160w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean
N Y Times p13 Ag 24 '41 180w

FREDERICK, JOHN TOWNER, comp. Present-day stories. 496p $1.25 Scribner

(W) 41-8083

Contents: The dark city, by Conrad Aiken; The devil and Daniel Webster, by S. V. Benét; Bloodhound, by James Boyd; Dorothy, by Erskine Caldwell; A wedding-dress, by Morley Callaghan; The net, by R. M. Coates; Adam and Eve and pinch me, by A. E. Coppard; Geese flying south, by August Derleth; Spotted horses, by William Faulkner; Babylon revisited, by F. S. Fitzgerald; The last day in the field, by Caroline Gordon; Red coat day, by R. P. Harriess; The undefeated, by Ernest Hemingway; Eveline, by James Joyce; There are smiles, by Ring Lardner; The doll's house, by Katherine Mansfield; The little wife, by William March; Lord Mountdrago, by W. S. Maugham; The man with the good face, by F. L. Mott; The prairie, by W. J. Mullenburg; Are we leaving tomorrow? by John O'Hara; The waltz, by Dorothy Parker; A crop of beans, by M. K. Rawlings; Mr Kaplan and the magi, by L. Q. Ross; The lumber-room, by Saki; Water, by Ross Santee; The leader of the people, by John Steinbeck; Uprooted, by Ruth Suckow; The robin, by Richard Sullivan; A preacher goes to Texas, by J. W. Thomason, Jr; Black-purple in the corn, by L. L. Ward; Arkansas, by Raymond Weeks; The house of the far and lost, by Thomas Wolfe; Beatus Rex, by Stark Young.

Booklist 37:546 J1 15 '41

New Repub 105:230 Ag 18 '41 60w

Wis Lib Bul 37:140 J1 '41

FREE company presents . . . ; a collection of plays about the meaning of America; with an introd. by James Boyd, chairman. 312p $2 Dodd

792 Radio plays, American drama—Collections. U.S.—Civilization (W) 41-7974

The plays contained in this volume were originally presented by the Columbia broadcasting system. Contents: The people with light coming out of them, by William Saroyan; The mole on Lincoln's cheek, by Marc Connelly; An American crusader, by R. E. Sherwood; One more free man, by James Boyd; Freedom's a hard-bought thing, by S. V. Benét; His honor, the mayor, by Orson Welles; A start in life, by Paul Green; The states talking, by Archibald MacLeish; The miracle of the Danube, by Maxwell Anderson; "Above suspicion," by Sherwood Anderson.

Booklist 37:487 Je 15 '41

"The book should be of interest to the general reader no less than to the hundreds of students all over the land now practicing hopefully to become radio artists." W. P. Eaton

+ Books p24 O 19 '41 180w

"Written originally for radio, these plays read as graphically as they hear." The Bill of Rights is their theme, and each play is a variation on that theme. . . . The plays move swiftly, strike deeply, seek honestly to find the meaning of our freedom. It is, certainly, not something that we have merely 'come by.' It is rather something to seek after, something to forge. And being forged something solid to hang onto."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 8 '41 300w

FREEDLEY, GEORGE, and REEVES, JOHN
A. A history of the theatre. 688p il $3 Crown
792.09 Theater—History (W) 40-29429

"This is an objective history of the theatre which is written with the express purpose of setting down within the confines of a single volume the main events which have occurred since the drama's inception in Egypt thirty-two hundred years before Christ. The travail of war and destruction, the ever-recurring religious and political turmoil, the moral and social stress through which the drama passed is indicated in the background of its development. Its various forms and appearances in all parts of the world are described in as much detail as space allows." (Prologue) Selected bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:238 F 1 '41

Bookmark 2:6 My '41

"The book is copiously illustrated, with a full index, and makes a constant effort to integrate the world theater, so far as that is justified, from age to age. The style is commonplace, but here is plenty of meat for the student's money." W. P. Eaton

Books p13 D 29 '40 160w

"The theater's whole story is here in rich condensation, sympathetically analyzed and soundly appraised, with good working supplements in the form of an extended bibliography and a voluminous index."

+ Christian Science Monitor p6 Ja 24 '41 360w

Churchman 155:35 F 1 '41 70w

"Quickened and illuminated by anecdotes and personalities, illustrated by hundreds of portraits, designs and playbills, the theater is here in all its recurrent vigor and its varied trappings. It would be a niggardly library that withheld from its readers this lively history of actors, playwrights, managers and designers—all of it, ladies and gentlemen, for the price of one good seat on the aisle." Esther Johnston

+ Library J 66:31 Ja 1 '41 220w

"'A History of the Theatre' provides as complete a record as can be condensed into a single large volume. . . Inevitably, a one-volume encyclopedia has the defects of its virtues. Although the authors provide many sound one-line observations on plays, their survey is only cursorily critical. As the names multiply, the chronicle also becomes less and less descriptive, and the strain of mounting compilation affects the quality of the writing. In the main, 'A History of the Theatre' cannot be read for literary pleasure or for special illumination. It is essentially a reference book, to be consulted for the abundant and clearly stated information it conveys." John Gassner

+ — N Y Times p16 Mr 2 '41 1050w

Pratt p17 spring '41

"The riches of the New York Public Library's Theatre Collection of which Mr. Freedley is Curator and of the Yale-Rockefeller photographic collection are among the more important reservoirs from which this pictorial material has been drawn. The long list of source books included in the volume give some indication of the vast body of written material which goes to the making of theatre history and forms the background of this invaluable reference volume." Rosamond Gilder

+ Theatre Arts 25:169 F '41 550w

FREEMAN, C. DENIS, and COOPER, DOUGLAS. The road to Bordeaux; il. by Edward Ardizzone. 408p map $2.75 Harper [8s 6d Cresset]

940.54753 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, English. World war, 1939—Hospitals, charities, etc. (W) 41-51743

Two Englishmen, who volunteered as ambulance drivers with the French army just after the break at Sedan, describe their adventures in the chaotic days which followed. Their road to Bordeaux was from somewhere in the east of France, thru the Yonne, the Nivernais, and Bourbonnais, thru the shambles which was France, when refugees, the wounded, the dying, and the inhabitants of the French countryside clogged the roads, driven on by the advancing German army.

Booklist 37:436 My 15 '41

Bookmark 2:10 N '41

"Freeman and Cooper have managed to give a simple, straightforward and very truthful account of what happened behind the French lines of battle in June, 1940. It renders admirably the atmosphere of utter distress, bewilderment and chaos which reigned in France throughout last June. 'The Road to Bordeaux' is not a story of France's fall. It is a story of the suffering of small French people, of average French soldiers." Sonia Tomara

+ Books p12 My 4 '41 480w

"The authors are both writers of some experience and skill, and both evidently knew and loved France. They draw a vivid and accurate picture of the fall of France." W. H. Chamberlain

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 17 '41 550w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:197 O '41 30w

"The most poignant human document that has come out of France since the downfall. . . The first-hand description of this vast human drama, told with sympathy, pity, and gentle pathos, is one of the most valuable contributions to our understanding of why France collapsed. The book is admirably written, and its pages have all the fragrance of the French countryside." Alexander Werth

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 14 '41 650w

"Told through incidents, personal yet modest, never at the expense of the events of which the authors were only a small part, it is a brisk, clean record confined to what the authors witnessed and free of the sweeping opinions and guesses that have marked previous literary products of the Battle of France." H. A. Stevens

+ N Y Times p9 Ap 27 '41 1150w

"Simply written, intensely dramatic day-by-day account of the twenty days and nights of 'undiluted hell,' from June 3 to 23, 1940. . . 'The Road to Bordeaux' doesn't deal with the political or military aspects of the French debacle, it deals with the reality of unreality, as decent people fight and suffer and die for culture and civilization. And you'll never forget this eloquent picture of the tragedy a carefully nurtured, sub-conscious spirit of defeatism can engender among such people." Linton Wells

+ Sat R of Lit 23:16 Ap 26 '41 390w

"It isn't as interesting as it should have been—considering that Mr. Freeman was a radio producer and Mr. Cooper an art historian. They don't know what to leave out, with the result that their account is curiously monotonous and univivid—a confused picture rather than a picture of confusion. Such a book, of course, cannot be without interest, and this, in its very lack of organisation, is patently honest."

+ — Spec 166:21 Ja 3 '41 240w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 9 '41 480w
(Reprinted from London Observer)

"The whole grim story has been told before, but never in such vivid detail as now. This, indeed, is a work of the highest order, both in the presentation of a confusion of material and its crisp, compelling phrases, until the authors fall to the temptation of passing sweeping judgments on what they have seen and heard."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p639 D 21 '40 900w

Wis Lib Bul 37:91 My '41

FREEMAN, HAROLD WEBBER. His own place [Eng title: Chaffinch's]. 282p $2.50 Morrow [8s Chatto]

(W) 41-10772

Character sketch of a staunch English yeoman, Joss Elvin, born in Suffolk in the 1870's.

FREEMAN, H. W.—Continued

He grew up in bitter poverty, for his father died in jail, but Joss managed his life better than his father had. After four years as a bouncer in a London pub, Joss invested his savings in a small Suffolk farm, married his early love, had two sons who were killed in the first World war, and met disasters with a thoroughgoing pride in himself and his ability. The story closes in 1938.

"A new novel by the author of Joseph and His Brethren hardly needs recommendation. His Own Place, however, can be specially recommended in times like these because of its theme. . . They are short and simple annals—mercifully short and finely simple—recorded with humor and truth." R. M. Gay

+ Atlantic O '41 180w

Booklist 38:52 O 15 '41

"After finishing H. W. Freeman's new novel, 'His Own Place,' after sitting back to relish its rustic excellence, one is caught making a subconscious valuation which is rooted in present-day events. With good cause Freeman might have called this simple chronicle of a simple life 'This Is England,' for Joss Elvin, strong of body, independent in spirit, modest in ambitions, is the bone and blood and marrow of England." Rose Feld

+ Books p3 S 14 '41 800w

"One reads with unflinching belief this life-story of a farm labourer, which has the authenticity of direct biography. . . The final effect is of a peasant tale told by a peasant artist." Harold Brighouse

+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 30 '41 300w

"Careful observation and reporting of Suffolk country, dialect, pubs, characters, the difficulties of small farming. But it doesn't make a novel."

New Repub 105:382 S 22 '41 40w

"In Joss Elvin Mr. Freeman has brought to life a character by no means rare in the English countryside but rare enough in fiction. Joss is a person who wants but little here below, but that little he must have. . . Joss's entire life is recounted in this chronicle, welcome brief as such chronicles go. Mr. Freeman has a way of sticking to essentials, and if, again and again, he skips years in which nothing untoward happens, the reader has nothing to complain of: this excellent device saves him the tedium of reading a dull book. So we go from highlight to highlight, and it is not at all hard to guess the rest. It is a method highly to be commended to all novelists of the from-the-cradle-to-the-grave school." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p6 S 14 '41 800w

"His Own Place' is no great shakes as a work of art, but it is as genuinely true to certain steadfast qualities of the English character as is 'Robinson Crusoe'—which, by the way, it somewhat resembles. . . There's nothing to the story as far as plot goes, but the country characters have a healthy smack of reality, and England's indestructible rural culture, its songs and sayings and rough wit, is given loving illumination. It seems an odd time for such a book to appear, but, on second thought, perhaps it's not odd at all. The English yeoman has seen many wars come and go and he has always continued to produce Joss Elvins." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:72 S 13 '41 300w

"This is a most satisfying book, not only because it is so soothingly unproblematic and offers a welcome relief from the grim and gloomy reading matter provided by the war, but because it is a richly flavored and well-rounded novel written by an author whose rare talent has already been manifested in his previous books. His prose, as always, is of a beautiful simplicity, without the mannerism that often goes with it, and his theme again is the vigor and triumphant force of life itself." Klaus Lambrecht

+ Sat R of Lit 24:17 S 13 '41 450w

"Mr. Freeman adheres to the method of flat fidelity, and he knows with surety the characters, habits, speech and occupations of his chosen scene. That he has pity for these people, that he knows them to be mainly good in spite of the human predisposition to evil is implied in his sober manner—yet dullness overrides all. Because the author, bestowing dignity on his characters by keeping them in real though inarticulate conflict with the simple laws of human behavior, yet does not risk in any one of them individuality of conscience or of feeling. . . Still, this tale of lifelong work and patience and loss and humble gains is well written, so far as it goes." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 166:592 My 30 '41 130w

"This is a quiet story about a man who had the courage or the stupidity (depending on your point of view) not to try to be anything but himself. Joss is merely another human being facing life's pleasures and triumphs, as well as its tragedies and mortgages, without too much puzzling as to what it's all about. Though Mr. Freeman's pastoral is in a minor key, the pitch is true throughout."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e S 14 '41 420w

"It is all very assured and practised in manner. Lifelike enough in situation and humour, though at a more superficial level of significance, as has been indicated, than Mr. Freeman's earlier books. The later half of the story, indeed, is slight of substance and is taken at a rush. . . Only the most expert of agricultural experts, or perhaps a dictator of land policy, could say whether Mr. Freeman's apparent ideal is retrograde or not; the novel-reader will find its human associations here full of insight and good sense."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p249 My 24 '41 600w

"His Own Place is one of the best English novels of recent years. A story of very simple people, almost peasants, told without condescension, without the accent of piety that so often afflicts those who write about the Land. Mr. Freeman's hero is no lump; he is altogether believable and likable. . . Here is an England that is very old and very real, and in recent English fiction too much neglected." Robert Littell

+ Yale R n s 31:xiv autumn '41 240w

FREEMAN, RICHARD AUSTIN. Dr Thorn-dyke's crime file; ed. by P. M. Stone. $2.50
Dodd

41-1474

Omnibus volume containing three full-length novels featuring the scientific sleuth, Dr Thorn-dyke, and three short essays about the doctor and crime writing. Contents: Meet Dr Thorn-dyke; The Eye of Osiris; The art of the detective story; The Mystery of Angelina Frood; 5A King's Bench walk, by P. M. Stone; Mr Pottermack's Oversight.

Booklist 37:273 F 15 '41

"For style, content and all-around blue ribbon merit, not to mention the bargain aspect, we don't know where you could match this whopping big volume among recent mystery publications." Will Cuppy

+ Books p15 Ja 19 '41 240w

"Good stuff for Thorn-dyke enthusiasts." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 18 '41 30w

"It would be difficult to find anywhere more nearly perfect stories of scientific deduction than the Dr. Thorn-dyke tales of R. Austin Freeman, nor would it be easy to find any that contain less extraneous matter. There is nothing to distract the reader from the matter in hand, the solution of a crime problem." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p12 F 2 '41 240w

"Classic."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ja 18 '41 40w

Time 37:76 F 3 '41 20w

FREEMAN, WILLIAM. Hear! hear! an informal guide to public speaking. 180p il $1.50 Simon & Schuster [5s Dent]

808.5 Public speaking (W) 41-15030

Practical advice for the amateur public speaker. Partial contents: Composing your speech; Words and their effective use; How to handle yourself on the platform; The after-dinner speech; How to talk on the radio; For ladies only.

Booklist 38:32 O 1 '41

"At least eight feet of shelf space can be saved by throwing out professional manuals on the art of public speaking and installing this informal, solid and sprightly guide. It has everything a beginner needs and much from which an expert might profit."

+ Books p12 S 28 '41 190w

"The book's style is suave and pleasantly witty, and its material is sound and pertinent. It is sure to fill an excellent practical place. And its drawings by Gluyas Williams offer their quota of unmitigated enjoyment."

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 31 '41 310w

"Gluyas Williams's amusing illustrations accurately reveal the agonies of amateur speakers, who fail to heed such simple rules. Audiences have seen and heard these labored unfortunates many times, but it remained for Mr. Williams to immortalize them. The brief text is not intended to develop a distinguished orator; however, it can help the diligent amateur avoid a complete failure as a public speaker." P. A. H.

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Ag 17 '41 350w

FREMANTLE, MRS ANNE (JACKSON). Come to dust. 296p $2.50 Putnam

41-9495

Chantal de Sierroz, at the age of twelve, inherited a family estate in Savoy and went to live there with her beautiful young English mother. This sophisticated study of diverse characters and their reactions upon one another takes place during the first few months of their stay, during which time Chantal comes to the threshold of adult understanding, because of a bitter disillusionment. One outstanding character is the village curé, young, shy, and engrossed in trying to raise lilies, but withal a person of almost divine penetration and understanding.

"In many respects Anne Fremantle, who is erudite and scholarly, has been extremely successful in capturing the spirit of a French town in her novel, 'Come to Dust.' The feel of the countryside, the individuality and stubbornness of the French peasant, the place the curé has in the affairs of the community—all these are real and carry conviction. Where the novel breaks down is in over-emphasis of the note of sophistication in the portrayal of her main characters." Rose Feld

+ Books p6 Je 22 '41 500w

"The country priest is not only the best thing in Mrs. Fremantle's book but its best reason for being. Thoughtfully conceived and candidly written, 'Come to Dust' as a novel is neither well built nor truly vitalized. The characters must be known through what the author says about them, not through what they say, or even do. The conversation is stilted and sometimes irrelevantly pretentious, and its rather heavy earnestness is underscored rather than relieved by neologisms and colloquial phrases." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p6 Je 22 '41 850w

"Into this idyll the author introduces the betrayal of a child, marital infidelity, and murder. They don't fit very well into the background, which is first class."

+ New Yorker 17:62 Je 28 '41 60w

"The almost anonymous French peasants, stubborn, frugal, independent are more real than the central characters who always seem contrived, and to strain unnecessarily to prove their own freedom from inhibitions. The writing is deft, artful, and admirable; the story is vaguely irritating and offensive." Rebecca Lowrie

+ Sat R of Lit 24:12 Ag 9 '41 320w

FRENCH, MRS LOIS ANGELINA (MEREDITH). Psychiatric social work [introd. by George S. Stevenson]. 344p $2.25 Commonwealth fund

361.1 Social work. Psychology, Pathological 41-1261

"A description of psychiatric social work—the field that it covers; what psychiatric social workers do; how their work is related to that of psychiatrists, to social agencies, to the community." (School & Society) The author is director, Study of trends, American Association of Psychiatric Social Workers; psychiatric social worker and instructor in mental hygiene, New Jersey State Teachers College at Newark. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Clara Bassett

Am J Pub Health 31:642 Je '41 250w

"As the field of psychiatric social work has developed there has grown a need for a comprehensive presentation to students (and professional people) of the historical development of the field, the nature of services rendered, sources of training, possibilities for placement, and other equally important information. This book fulfills the need. It is a good source book containing data critically selected and well presented." Joseph Pessin

+ Am Soc R 6:918 D '41 420w

School & Society 52:600 D 7 '40 30w

"Mrs. French's careful summary requires that the reader bear in mind the undefined and changing nature of her subject. The value of the publication as a basis for understanding case work as a whole should be great, and we are indebted to the American Association of Psychiatric Social Workers for this material." Muriel McLaughlin

+ Social Forces 19:582 My '41 650w

"Much information concerning the field and function of one specialty within the profession of social work is made available in this book. . . Miss French's chapter, 'Some Trends in Social Treatment,' will interest case workers who want some definition of their place in the treatment of emotional difficulties even though they do not find here a decisive answer. The concluding chapter on professional education should be helpful to schools of social work and to students entering the profession who may be considering the psychiatric field." Charlotte Towle

+ Survey 77:131 Ap '41 400w

FRENCH, SIDNEY JAMES. Torch and crucible; the life and death of Antoine Lavoisier. 285p $3.50 Princeton univ. press

B or 92 Lavoisier, Antoine Laurent 41-24387

"The life, character, and times of Antoine Lavoisier, the great originator of the oxygen theory, friend of the du Ponts, 'father of modern chemistry,' and one of the widest-ranging intellects of his time." New Yorker

"Dr. French treats the great Frenchman with admiration, but not without censure. It is an authoritative evaluation as well as a dramatic story." Gerald Wendt

+ Books p10 D 28 '41 380w

"'Torch and Crucible' is not a well-integrated biography but three loosely connected essays written from as many points of view: a lucid and graphic account of the experiments which built up the great theory of conservation of mass; a stilted and uninspired record of Lavoisier's academic and civic honors and social life; and a brief history of the Revolution, in which Lavoisier is all but lost in the rush of events." Grace Adams

FRENCH, S. J.—Continued

+ — Nation 153:586 D 6 '41 240w

New Repub 105:629 N 10 '41 140w

"This biography paints a rich picture of a man and a scientist, in the midst of world-making events."

+ N Y Times p3 Ja 18 '42 500w

"A sound biography that emphasizes Lavoisier's rôle as a man of affairs and his part in the history of his era."

+ New Yorker 17:99 O 18 '41 40w

"Although the author explains the scientific contributions of the great chemist this is done in nontechnical language and the emphasis of the book is upon a synthesis of Lavoisier's mind, personality and career. What makes it more interesting is the background of great men and events in history."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 7 '41 550w

FREUND, PHILIP. The dark shore. 296p $2.50 Washburn

41-19189

Psychological study of a young American Jew who had drifted into Spanish Morocco just before the beginning of the Spanish revolution. Julian Levant was suffering the consequences of an unfortunate experience in his youth, and his bitterness was an attempt at self-defense. In the few months from Christmas day, 1935, to late 1936, Julian found a new life and the courage to meet it.

"Philip Freund has essayed one of the most difficult tasks for a creator of fiction. He has written a philosophical novel, and though his story is filled with plenty of external sound and fury, he has tried to show the play of symbolic forces behind outward events. To this reader, at least, it seems that he has not been uniformly successful in the task he set himself. That is not to say that there are not many fine things in this book. The characters of many nationalities have the impress of living reality upon them. They have not been manufactured in Hollywood. But, Mr. Freund has tried to solve too many problems in too short a space. . . . In 'The Dark Shore' he has failed where only a full-fledged master could have succeeded." Milton Hindus

Books p10 O 12 '41 550w

"There are happenings and soul probings that lead to self-respect, a normal feeling about women and anti-fascism, but the book seems very much like a case of author's self-purge with the reader taking the rap."

New Repub 105:517 O 20 '41 90w

"The story is slow in getting started, setting the squalid African scene with descriptions of the sizzling, smelly streets of the coast towns. When it is well under way and Julian's tragic past has been explained, it becomes an engrossing story." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p6 O 12 '41 600w

"The tragic setting is well done; the alternate fascination and repulsion of Morocco are convincingly described."

+ New Yorker 17:101 O 11 '41 120w

"'The Dark Shore' is a pretentious book, involved in racial differences—Jew, Moor, and German; but the reader's interest and sympathies are diverted to impatience by the style in which it is written and the too great wealth of local color which leaves one blinded to the actual story and its implications."

— Sat R of Lit 24:20 O 25 '41 150w

"The author has certainly achieved something in writing a philosophical novel whose material is violence. Perhaps it is not surprising that he is not completely convincing in his ambitious problem-solving. Only a great writer could hope to carry off so demanding a task. But Freund reveals certain powers in 'The Dark Shore' and later books may mark further growth."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e O 26 '41 180w

FRIES, CHARLES CARPENTER. American English grammar; the grammatical structure of present-day American English with especial reference to social differences or class dialects. (Nat. council of teachers of English. English monograph) 313p $2.50 Appleton-Century

425 English language—Grammar. Americanisms 41-347

"The National Council of Teachers of English, supported by the Modern Language Association and the Linguistic Society of America, have financed an investigation into the grammatical structure of present-day American English. The report of this inquiry is made by Professor Fries of the University of Michigan. . . . The material examined was derived from three thousand letters written by people of all our social and economic levels." (New Repub) Index.

Booklist 37:319 Mr 15 '41

"The author of this admirable monograph not only recognizes that there are many kinds of 'correct' American English, but actually allows you to say, as anyone who talks naturally does say, things like 'It is me' and 'Who did you call?'"

+ Nation 152:56 Ja 4 '41 100w

"Perhaps destined to be an epoch-making book." Ted Robinson

+ New Repub 104:186 F 10 '41 500w

FRISKEY, MARGARET. Grandfather Frog, the busy loafer; pictures by Lucia Patton. [40p] $1 McKay

41-8959

Picture-story book for ages four to eight, describing the doings of Grandfather Frog and his friends on the day when the beaver dam caused a flood along the river where they all lived.

"Large funny pictures in bright green and black show river animals rowing boats, sailing, smoking and otherwise proving that the book is for children small enough to like animals that do such things." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 Je 15 '41 200w

Reviewed by D. M. MacDonald

Library J 66:522 Je 1 '41 130w

Wis Lib Bul 37:158 O '41

FRISKEY, MARGARET. Wings over the woodshed; pictured by Lucia Patton. 32p $1 Whitman, A.

41-12315

A read-it-yourself book for first and second grade pupils, the words being selected from the kindergarten-preschool list of the first 500 words a child learns. In it three children, aided by their mother and Uncle Joe, learn how to handle simple tools and build a soap-box airplane which flies—with considerable adult help.

"This succeeds where many picture books fail in offering easy reading that even first and second grade people will be able to manage by themselves. Story and pictures are entertaining and childlike." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 66:677 Ag '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 17 '41 80w

FROME, DAVID, pseud. See Brown, Z.

FROMM, ERICH. Escape from freedom. 305p $2.50 Farrar

323.44 Liberty. Democracy. Totalitarianism. Social psychology (W) 41-14128

"A searching inquiry into the meaning of freedom for modern man, part of a broad study to be completed later, of the character structure of man in our culture. The author stresses the role of psychological factors in the social process, interpreting the historical development of freedom in terms of man's awareness of himself as a significant separate being. The current political threat to freedom seems to the author less fraught with danger than the suppression of spontaneity and the individual's sense of isolation and powerlessness which are caused by our modern culture." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
Atlantic O '41 220w

"This is an important and challenging book. It bridges the gap between economics and psychology and shows how no theory which invokes only man's way of earning his living or man's human nature alone is sufficient. It presents, with vivid concise statement, the dilemma of too much freedom from, too little freedom to, which is crushing man today and threatening to force him back into the authoritarianism of Nazism." Margaret Mead

+ Books p18 S 21 '41 700w

Reviewed by A. G. Higgins
Library J 66:614 J1 '41 90w

Reviewed by Eleanor Kittredge
N Y Times p12 Ja 4 '42 1150w

"'Escape from Freedom' is the best diagnosis of the psychological aberrations of Nazism I have seen—clear, simple, sensible, and persuasive. But it would be a pity if it were to be reviewed only as a pamphlet on contemporary affairs. It is also a distinguished contribution to our understanding of history, and a promise of further enlightenment. . . His brief analysis of the psychological basis of the Protestant Reformation contains some of the most brilliant and illuminating pages that have ever been written on the subject. Everyone who reads them will look forward impatiently to the larger study he promises." Garrett Mattingly

+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 Ag 30 '41 750w

FRY, ROSALIE K. Bandy Boy's treasure island; il. by [the author]. unsp 75c Dutton 41-10786

The adventure of a little beetle whose injured wing kept him from being the explorer he so longed to be. When someone left a tiny boat with oars near his home Bandy Boy realized his life's ambition. For children four to seven.

"A really charming story. . . Unfortunately, the binding is not strong enough to withstand the loving use the book is sure to get." Gertrude Andrus

+ Library J 66:677 Ag '41 50w

"The experiences of Bandy Boy (one wishes the author had chosen a better name for her insect hero) suggest in simple fashion, for the youngest children, the joyous outdoor adventuring of Mole and Rat in 'The Wind in the Willows,' as well as the minute country of Andersen's Thumbelina. The drawings have a child-like fancy, a consistency which children will appreciate, and a gentle humor." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 O 12 '41 280w

Wis Lib Bul 37:158 O '41

FRYE, ALBERT MYRTON, and LEVI, ALBERT WILLIAM. Rational belief; an introduction to logic. 482p il $2.75 Harcourt

160 Logic

41-2966

"[The] three parts [of this text] discuss in turn various techniques for clarifying meanings, the analysis of propositions and the criteria of validity in immediate and syllogistic inference, and the rôle of observation, hypotheses, and the estimation of evidence in scientific inquiry. The authors have organized their material to make constantly evident the bearings of various logical operations upon the achievement of rational belief; and their uncommonly unhackneyed illustrations and examples show vividly the importance of topics frequently handled in a humdrum fashion." J Philos

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '41

"As a whole the book is readable and well organized. It also contains plenty of good illustrative and problem material, which is placed where it belongs, at the end of the chapters. The chief objection that the reviewer has to the book as a text is that the authors incline to be a bit wordy in discussing the several topics taken up. All things considered, however, the book represents a pretty good job and will probably receive serious consideration in many quarters." George Gentry

+ — Ethics 51:494 J1 '41 400w

"Not all readers will agree with their discussion of a number of themes—for example, with their account of the nature of definitions, with their analysis of conditional propositions as asserting logical implications, or with their views on the principle of the uniformity of nature as the foundation for all generalizations. But such disagreements do not seriously qualify the authors' success in writing a text that is on the whole sound and that should stimulate the interest of beginning students in logic without cheapening the subject." E. N.

+ — J Philos 38:188 Mr 27 '41 200w

FUHRMANN, OTTO WALTER. Gutenberg and the Strasbourg documents of 1439; an interpretation; sketches by Fritz Kredel. 260p $7.50 Press of the Woolly Whale

655.111 Gutenberg, Johann. Printing—History 40-36003

"The first original evidence of Gutenberg's activity in what is assumed to be printing was brought forward in 1760 by a Strassburg historian, Johannes Daniel Schoepflin, who had found three books in the city archives which gave some of the details of a law suit in which Gutenberg figured. . . Schoepflin copied the records, and published them together with a Latin version of the Alsatian dialect in which they had been given. Unfortunately these documents have now disappeared. Schoepflin had, however, preserved the wording in his book of 1760, reprinted by Nichols in 1938 in a very small edition. . . Mr. Fuhrmann has reprinted the text of the documents in the original Alsatian, as given by Schoepflin, together with Laborde's French rendition, and translations into modern English and modern German, in four parallel columns. . . He has also added voluminous notes tending to clear up points rendered obscure by the archaic and hazy terminology of the original dialect. . . An extensive bibliography and an index complete the volumes." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by L. C. Wroth

Books p26 F 9 '41 160w

"It is the most complete collection of the evidence on this subject that has been collected between the covers of a single book. It has delightful illustrations by Fritz Kredel and, as a piece of typography, has a luxurious spaciousness, an elegance of design and materials that make it one of the outstanding items printed for the anniversary." E. L. Tinker

+ N Y Times p23 D 15 '40 160w

"It is good to see so scholarly a work given a becoming dress, more especially as the book is likely to be for many years the definitive treatment in English of the principal evidence we have of Gutenberg's activity at an important period of his life." C. P. Rollins

+ Sat R of Lit 23:11 Ja 4 '41 800w

FULLER, EDMUND. Pageant of the theatre. 270p il $2.50 Crowell

792.09 Theater—History. Drama—History and criticism (W) 41-8704

Brief history of drama from the time of the Greeks to that of Eugene O'Neill. Criticism and evaluation are touched upon very briefly. The treatment of the last generation of playwrighting in England is very short, except for the material on Shaw, and not much space is given to the present generation in America. Index.

FULLER, EDMUND—Continued

Booklist 38:5 S '41

"As a brief and readable survey of the course of European and American drama it will be useful. Those who want much information about any particular period or playwright will of course have to seek it elsewhere."

+ Christian Century 58:935 J1 23 '41 90w

"A succinct but highly readable history for young people... This informing book will be very useful for reference purposes in schools and libraries." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:371 S '41 80w

Social Studies 32:335 N '41 10w

"Within the limits of his intentions, Mr. Fuller's book is a good job. He makes this exceedingly complicated world history of an art 'light reading'."

+ Theatre Arts 25:553 J1 '41 320w

FULLER, MARGARET. See Ossoli, S. M. F. d'

FULLER, TIMOTHY. Reunion with murder. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 258p $2 Little

(W) 41-11496

Detective story.

Booklist 38:13 S '41

"Mr. Fuller makes no effort to wow the mass mind by means of the familiar formulas, but just carries on as the spirit moves him and it adds up to fine entertainment. Try this one for a really comforting time-killer with several unusual features, notably the tricky murder method." Will Cuppy

+ Books p8 J1 13 '41 280w

"That bright young Mr. Fuller who loves his joke has produced more of a story and less of a stunt in his latest opus than in the roman à clef which preceded it. In other words, the ebullient Jupiter Jones solves a more interesting mystery in 'Reunion With Murder' than in 'Three Thirds of a Ghost.' And the reunion class-book proves to be an excellent way to introduce the characters in what is a genuinely puzzling situation." Kay Irvin

N Y Times p17 J1 20 '41 260w

"Very funny stuff in this one, but the quixotic motive for murder may prove distasteful to readers who think that bumping off a guy is a real mean thing to do."

+ New Yorker 17:56 J1 26 '41 50w

"Reunion background and festivities attractive. Puzzle is original and enticing—though wind-up may arch a few eyebrows. Good fun."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:17 J1 19 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e J1 20 '41 80w

FULLER, TIMOTHY. Three thirds of a ghost. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 233p $2 Little

(W) 40-35814

Detective story.

Bookmark 2:15 Mr '41

"Grade A. It's all fun for the literate crime addict." Will Cuppy

+ Books p10 Ja 5 '41 220w

Reviewed by E. A. Hooton

Boston Transcript p1 Ja 4 '41 650w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggan

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 11 '41 60w

"'Three Thirds of a Ghost' is good fun, and it poses a puzzling crime problem which is solved by Jupiter Jones in his own eccentric fashion." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p16 Ja 5 '41 200w

"Most excitement they've had in Boston since the Tea Party and the best thing around here this week, anyway."

+ New Yorker 16:64 Ja 11 '41 40w

"Fictional appearance of thinly-veiled New England lit'ry lights adds special tang to capably constructed if not highly original opus. Satisfactory."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ja 11 '41 50w

FULTON, REED. The Grand Coulee mystery; a story of the engineers. 284p $1.75 Doubleday

41-15461

Mystery story for older boys, with the Grand Coulee dam of the Columbia river as background.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p8 N 30 '41 60w

"Not a necessary item. For older boys, twelve to sixteen." D. M. MacDonald

Library J 66:845 O 1 '41 150w

"Better than average material in the light fiction class, this is highly satisfying for boys who want rapid action and plenty of excitement." I. S.

+ N Y Times p35 N 2 '41 220w

FURNAS, JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN, and others. How America lives. 372p il $3 Holt

309.173 U.S.—Economic conditions. U.S.—Social life and customs. Cost and standard of living (W) 41-51597

Surveys of sixteen representative American families with incomes ranging from $26 (a Negro sharecropper) to more than $100,000 per year. Each family has a chapter, giving salient features in their living conditions, a few photographs, and a tabulated budget. A summing up of facts is given in the final chapters. Expanded from Ladies Home Journal articles. Index.

Reviewed by Frances Woodward

Atlantic My '41 130w

Booklist 37:318 Mr 15 '41

"What started out as a slick idea in woman's magazines has developed into a touching and fascinating report from the home front in a democracy." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p14 Mr 30 '41 900w

Reviewed by Kenneth MacDougall

Boston Transcript p1 Mr 29 '41 220w

"Some of the writing is too intimate, some is too pretentious, a bit is superficial, most is excellent. The pictures are exceptionally good. The book attains its aim of showing 'the validity of our simple, but profound American way of life.'" R. H. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 25 '41 550w

"The book, which grew out of an advertising device, tries conscientiously to present the social contrasts in the light of democracy and has no ideological purpose. The sole purpose is to work out budgetary schemes for different financial strata and to offer them to the public for what they are worth. Which is a great deal. It is well written and contains a goodly number of excellent pictures."

+ Commonweal 33:628 Ap 11 '41 170w

"Much of the slumming is heart-breaking, but the net effect makes for inspiring as well as fascinating reading... This book deserves thoughtful reading by cynics and skeptics. They may emerge shaken into a belief in the good horse sense and in the destiny of their fellow Americans and in the future of our democracy." Eleanor Van Alen

+ Current Hist & Forum 52:56 Ap '41 750w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:380 Ja '42 20w

J Home Econ 33:412 Je '41 100w

Reviewed by Francis Brown

N Y Times p23 Mr 30 '41 1000w

"Skillfully written, with revealing documentary photographs."

+ New Yorker 17:87 Mr 15 '41 80w

"This book is a heavily sugar-coated dose of American sociology, and the sugar-coating will make the children cry for it. For it is a most interesting book, and despite the fact that it is also a most important one, it is easy reading. Anyone can read it who has passed the seventh grade in the American school system."

W. A. White

+ Sat R of Lit 23:14 Mr 15 '41 850w

"As this is a book which stresses the purely physical side of American home life, leaving family quarrels and the like for others to discuss, the result is a very interesting picture of the comparatively rosy surface of the American home. As a journalistic enterprise it was new and excellent; as a permanent record it has some claim to value."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 23 '41 850w

Wis Lib Bul 37:53 Mr '41

FYVEL, T. R., pseud. See Feiwei, R. J.

G

GABLE, J. HARRIS. Complete introduction to photography; drawings and sketches by Allan Kennedy; phot. by the author, Claude Pilger and others. 270p $3 Harper

770 Photography—Handbooks, manuals, etc. (W) 40-34199

Guide for nonprofessional beginning photographers, covering equipment, technique, and subjects. Includes a laboratory manual with formulas and index.

Booklist 37:133 D 1 '40

Wis Lib Bul 37:31 F '41

GABRIEL, RALPH HENRY. The course of American democratic thought; an intellectual history since 1815. 452p $4 Ronald

917.3 U.S.—Civilization. U.S.—Intellectual life. Philosophy, American. Democracy 40-5064

For descriptive, note see Annual for 1940.

"Good as is this purview, there is much that is left out, whether because the book would not contain all of it or because the author's horizon was circumscribed I do not know. As it is, it is an interpretation which no social scientist can afford to ignore. Less able works have been awarded Pulitzer prizes." L. L. Bernard

+ — Am Soc R 6:302 Ap '41 260w

Foreign Affairs 19:467 Ja '41 30w

Reviewed by W. W. Sweet

J Religion 22:123 Ja '42 210w

"No student of American intellectual history can fail to pay high tribute to Professor Gabriel's sensitive, and often penetrating, awareness of how the pattern of democratic thought has been affected by a revamping of theories of free will and determinism, of absolutism and relativism, and, above all, by the rise of the new challenges of insecurity and of antagonistic foreign ideologies. Professor Gabriel has succeeded well in treating the ideas he has chosen with respect to their development in time. . . . One of the most praiseworthy features of these brilliant essays is the author's awareness of the relation between democracy as a faith or pattern of thought and feeling on the one hand, and, on the other, realistic democracy, as Professor Gabriel calls it, or the give-and-take, everyday compromises between conflicting groups and the rationalizations of practices inconsistent with democratic theory." Merle Curti

+ Pol Sci Q 55:594 D '40 950w

"Very little systematic study of the history of American social philosophy may be found outside of literary and political treatises. Gabriel's book is a contribution to the understanding of our own intellectual past as well as an excellent indicator of some unexplored areas of social research. . . . It is to be expected that such a wide scope as the author has undertaken does not permit of adequate documentation and citation. The book is an introductory study, but one which has been made valuable through wise generalization and a happy choice of men and topics." Paul Meadows

+ Social Forces 19:569 My '41 500w

"Professor Gabriel has written one of the most important volumes to appear in the field of American history in some years. It is virtually a history of American intellectual life and social thought since 1815, laying special emphasis upon the manner in which such intellectual trends affected the interpretations of democracy and social reform." H. E. Barnes

+ Survey G 31:41 Ja '42 600w

GABRIEL, RALPH HENRY. Elias Boudinot, Cherokee and his America. (Civilization of the Am. Indian) 190p il $2 Univ. of Okla. press

970.2 Boudinot, Elias. Cherokee Indians 41-8009

This is the life story of an American Indian leader of the early nineteenth century. Educated by the whites, he took the name of a New Jersey philanthropist, and fell in love with and married a white girl of Puritan ancestry. He returned to his own people, however, and was one of the leaders of those who left Georgia and attempted to develop an Indian civilization in western lands. He was assassinated in 1833. Index.

Reviewed by L. H. Fisher

Ann Am Acad 218:246 N '41 230w

"It is a fascinating and sad story, told without the obtrusive machinery of 'scholarship' which disfigures so much modern historical writing for the layman, and with a full realization of its ironies. Prof. Gabriel is not quite a master of a narrative style, to be sure. At each step of his story he comes to a full stop and introduces the expository material for the next step while the narrative hangs in air. And the drama of his climax is curiously skimmed and colorless, so that his book ends almost like a doctoral thesis. But his writing has charm, none the less, and irony, and is admirably clear and concise." W. P. Eaton

+ — Books p15 S 14 '41 700w

"Professor Gabriel has reconstructed this heartbreaking narrative upon unpublished letters and documents now brought to light for the first time. He builds his story with restraint and precision and yet misses none of its drama. . . . A skilled and experienced historian, Ralph H. Gabriel confines himself to concrete evidence, and leaves generalization and ultimate judgments to his readers." R. A. Parker

+ Christian Century 58:1511 D 3 '41 800w

"Boudinot's story has often been told but usually from the point of view of the historian in search of facts. Professor Gabriel, who bases his work largely on newly discovered letters and papers of the Gold family, is interested chiefly in portraying the sterling character and fine intellect of Boudinot, and the mentality of the Puritan world which molded him. The book is valuable mainly as an interpretation." K. C. K.

+ Christian Science Monitor p22 Je 7 '41 600w

"One would expect this story of an aborigine, plucked from the wilds of the southern Appalachians and dropped into the Connecticut of Lyman Beecher, to provide an interesting study in what the sociologists call 'culture contact.' Unfortunately, and the fault is in no wise Mr. Gabriel's, the book fails to fulfil this expectation. The cultural backgrounds, both Cherokee and Yankee, are expertly sketched in, and some of the minor characters emerge vividly as individuals, but the central figure, in whom the two cultures met, never quite materializes." F. B. Tolles

GABRIEL, R. H.—Continued

+ — New Eng Q 14:568 S '41 850w

"The story is told with a fine warmth of sympathy, directness of statement and richness of associated detail, and the quotations from the Vail letters, which deal more particularly with the problem of the Gold-Boudinot marriage, throw unique documentary light upon the circumstances, characters and ideas which are so important in this complex drama. The Civilization of the American Indian series has added another illuminating book to its already long and excellent list."

+ N Y Times p2 J1 6 '41 480w

Reviewed by E. G. Eastman

Spring'd Republican p7e My 11 '41 850w

GABRIELSON, IRA NOEL. Wildlife conservation. 250p il maps $3.50 Macmillan

799.0973 Game protection. Birds, Protection of (W) 41-51524

Written by the chief of the United States Biological survey this book is "an effort to put into simple language the basic facts in this field and to emphasize that the various programs for the conservation of soil, water, forests, and wildlife are so closely interwoven that each vitally affects one or more of the others. All are phases of a single problem—that concerned with the restoration and future wise use of our renewable natural resources." Index.

Booklist 37:266 F 15 '41

Bookmark 2:6 My '41

"This book will electrify nobody. It is much too sensible, deliberate, just, and carefully considered, either to make the author any enemies, or to give his enemies, if any, anything to bite on. It is too far from journalistic writing to be a red flag of danger to the lethargic public; it is no crusade like that of Dr. Hornaday, thirty and forty years ago. The time of crying for action is over. The time to act is here. No one has taken more action than Dr. Gabrielson. This is his story, and it is unemotionally told." D. C. Peattie

+ Books p15 F 23 '41 1100w

Reviewed by Clifton Macon

Churchman 155:34 Mr 15 '41 110w

"Dr. Gabrielson has written a book packed with information for the average reader with no technical knowledge of soils, little waters, grasslands, forests or animal life. . . The pictures alone are enough to set a nature-lover's thoughts skipping toward the mirage of spring." Edward Skillin, jr.

+ Commonweal 33:427 F 14 '41 550w

"Mr. Gabrielson's book will be prized by the Scout organizations, sportsmen and other wild life enthusiasts in planning conservation programs." D. F. Lucas

+ Library J 66:79 Ja 15 '41 210w

"Barring a certain skimpiness in its treatment of fisheries problems, this book is excellent within the limits inherent in such a semi-technical work; and any nature-lover, hunter, Audubon Societeer or social planner should find it of interest and value. The seventy-seven photographs are ordinary and add little to the text, but the twenty-four charts and diagrams are most helpful." J. R. De La Torre Bueno, Jr.

+ — New Repub 104:768 Je 2 '41 600w

"An admirably informative book."

+ N Y Times p20 F 23 '41 440w

"Dr. Gabrielson writes with the authority of his official position, but the reader is likely to be even more impressed by the authority of his manifest integrity. Far from being a propagandist, he represents, as few among us do, that ideal of the impartial, incorruptible, and reasonable seeker after truth which H. G. Wells and Julian Huxley have upheld as the hope of the future. . . If every American could be made familiar with the contents of this book, we could all feel easier about the long future of our race." L. J. Halle, Jr.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:15 Ap 26 '41 650w

"Dr. Gabrielson is no theorist. He presents his information clearly and forcefully, states his problem concisely, and gives a definite plan for improvement not only of the general case but of particular instances." A. H. Compton and others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:1 Ja '41 1300w

"A sound, unemotional and well-organized discussion of America's wild-life resources and their conservation, together with a consideration of the basic and interdependent subjects of water, soil and forest." Clifford Moore

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Mr 16 '41 1500w

Wis Lib Bul 37:51 Mr '41

GAG, WANDA. Nothing At All. [32p] il $1.50 Coward-McCann

(W) 41-19723

Nothing At All was an invisible orphan puppy, with two visible and loving brother puppies. With the help of a jackdaw, some magic, and a great deal of strenuous effort, little Nothing At All achieved visibility and all three were adopted by two kindly children. And the other puppies remarked how nice it was to see Something-after-all.

Booklist 38:83 N 1 '41

"There is just enough of the abstract about the situation—one can scarcely call it a drama—to put it among books for children a little beyond their years. But as many children belong to just this age group the little piece will have a large audience, even without the universal, almost hypnotic, appeal of Miss Gag's famous cat story." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 S 21 '41 280w

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:372 D '41 60w

"Heartily recommended." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 35:111 N 21 '41 30w

"In a series of lithographic drawings in colors, Wanda Gag has invested the unseen with a reality that goes straight to the heart of child or grown-up. Here are humor, beauty, strength of draughtsmanship and a fresh child-like conception of life most reassuring in a world even more upset for animals than for human beings." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk M 17:381 S '41 150w

"An admirable picture book by a graphic artist who has had great experience drawing on stones and plates." Warren Chappell

+ Horn Bk M 17:455 N '41 20w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 17:460 N '41 50w

"The engaging pictures and gaily nonsensical quality of the story combine to make a light-hearted, imaginative tale for the story hour and for reading aloud to children of five to seven. Librarians will wish that a binding more durable than paper-covered boards had been used. Recommended." L. G. Kerr

+ Library J 66:845 O 1 '41 150w

"The lithographic drawings in soft tones of red, green and rust, have a gentle humor and an irresistible charm. Everything that Wanda Gag does is fresh and new. As appealing as 'Millions of Cats,' and perhaps even more lovable, 'Nothing At All' has an individuality of its own. It will take a permanent place among the books cherished by children and their elders." A. T. El.

+ N Y Times p38 N 2 '41 320w

"Miss Gág's lithographs, her first in color, are as enchanting as her black-and-white ones were, and the book has the same imaginative humor which has made nearly everything she writes beloved by children."

+ New Yorker 17:140 D 6 '41 90w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

Sat R of Lit 24:14 N 8 '41 10w

GAGGIN, MRS EVA (ROE). Down Ryton water; drawings by Elmer Hader. 369p $2 Viking

(W) 41-18903

A story of the Pilgrims of Scrooby, England, who left their homes and went to Leydon, and then to Massachusetts, when the Stewart king tried to hurry them into conformity. It takes the hero, Matt Over, from his fifth year to his twenty-fifth; from his mother's lovely garden down by "Ryton Water," to the bleak New England coast. For older boys and girls.

Booklist 38:83 N 1 '41

"In more than one sense, this book is a departure. A story for young folks, even if junior rather than juvenile, rarely runs to near four hundred pages. But nothing less would have given it room to develop. . . In remoter farmhouses where pictures hang unchanged, many a child has grown up under two large steel engravings, the Departure and the Landing of the Pilgrims. There was something strangely moving about the first of these. The same emotion is in this book. . . This is a story to be taken with thanks." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 O 26 '41 360w

"A rarely fine story of family life, as warm and glowing as if it were today instead of three centuries ago. . . The characters are wonderfully lifelike, the action true and stirring. . . This [is a] brave and beautiful book."

A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:463 N '41 130w

Reviewed by E. J. Gray

Horn Bk M 17:476 N '41 110w

"The author is saturated in Pilgrim lore and creates a definite atmosphere with quaint names and phrases, but I believe the story will prove slow reading for young people. It is told in the first person, burdened with small details, and much of the action is implied in dialogue. No illustrations, except the fine endpapers by Elmer Hader. Recommended for purchase where there is a need for this subject matter; for readers twelve to sixteen."

Emily Hutson

+ Library J 66:954 N 1 '41 150w

"The book is flawed by certain weaknesses: a style which though vivid tends to be nervous and staccato, and a monotonous repetition of catch phrases, and a viewpoint which, in spite of a boy narrator, is somehow largely feminine. Nevertheless, this is a novel of scope and richness." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 18 '42 400w

"A meaty book, full of real people and never 'written down.'"

+ New Yorker 17:144 D 6 '41 80w

GAGLIARDO, DOMENICO. The Kansas industrial court. 264p $1.50; pa $1 Univ. of Kan. 331.154 Kansas. Court of industrial relations Arbitration, Industrial 41-52813

"The story of the experiment in compulsory arbitration in Kansas told by Domenico Gagliardo . . . adds to the considerable literature on Kansas' industrial disputes which appeared during the period of the Court. This study, appearing now, may be prompted by current interest in industrial disputes, for it can hardly be said that the general features of the picture of the experiment, previously presented, have been altered. The contribution is one of detail and background, particularly of the part played by individuals and political forces.

Its chief features are political and economic." Am Pol Sci R

Reviewed by H. C. Cook

Am Pol Sci R 35:1198 D '41 210w

"The book generally would have been greatly improved had the author documented it with primary sources and cited the cases used. Only in Chapter VIII does he do this. The author has made valuable contributions in that he has pointed out how political influences and pressure tended to destroy public confidence and finally contributed to the complete collapse of the court. Also, he has assembled much interesting material that is not generally known and would be hard to obtain by a student outside of Kansas." T. R. Fisher

+ Ann Am Acad 218:236 N '41 900w

GALBRAITH, WINIFRED. In China now. 285p $2.50 Morrow

915.1 China—Social life and customs. Chinese-Japanese war, 1931—Anecdotes

(W) 41-1113

Stories and sketches of the common people of China in wartime by an English missionary and Y.W.C.A. worker who has lived in China for fifteen years. She writes of people she knows and the scenes and events are true, the names and places are altered. Some of the sketches have their setting in Changsha where she experienced the burning of the city.

"With fifteen years of experience as a teacher and social worker, the author knows her China and is able to impart to her sketches those touches of realism which the casual foreign visitor could scarcely hope to achieve. At the same time Miss Galbraith possesses authentic talent as a storyteller. As is usual in a collection of this kind, some of the stories are better than others." W. H. C.

+ Atlantic Mr '41 250w

Booklist 37:323 Mr 15 '41

"This unassuming little book stirs your sympathies and excites your admiration and respect for a nation which may be conquered but cannot be defeated. But beyond that it leaves you with a heightened interest in and liking for the Chinese as human beings."

Mary Ross

+ Books p4 Mr 2 '41 850w

Christian Science Monitor p18 N 10 '41 120w

"A variety of episodes in the life of the Chinese working class—each one full of pathos or humor. . . It is interesting reading, for with the seeming hopelessness of their lives is the realization of what education and help from the outside world could bring to people who have such faith and belief in the future of their country." B. R. Copthorn

+ Churchman 155:19 Mr 15 '41 100w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:384 Jl '41 10w

"Only a person of wide experience, keen powers of observation, and unusual ability as a story-teller could have achieved the scope of this book, its vividness and understanding, while limiting herself to stories from actual life. The results of Miss Galbraith's rather unusual technique are all that could be desired. No one who has experienced the burning of Changsha through the eyes of Lima or Li Han will ever forget or condone this horrible blunder. It is, in a word, the sort of book that makes you feel you have lived through some of the most stirring events of present-day history. And yet the tragedy is so interspersed with humor and ordinary human frailty that—as in life itself—it becomes quite bearable." M. S. Stewart

+ Nation 152:163 F 8 '41 390w

"Winifred Galbraith's sketches of people 'living and loving, laughing and dying in China now' are uneven in quality, but at their best they are superbly done." T. A. Bisson

+ New Repub 104:411 Mr 24 '41 260w

GALBRAITH, WINIFRED—Continued

"Miss Galbraith's object has been to set down the truth as she sees it, and she does this in deep affection and with the finely imaginative purpose of putting herself genuinely in the place of the men and women of whom she writes. . . Her sketches are fresh and unpretentious as they are moving and sincere, and her book is full of interest and suggestiveness."

+ N Y Times p12 F 9 '41 700w

"Neatly turned and vivid with sympathy for the friendliness and courage of the Chinese."

+ New Yorker 16:55 F 1 '41 30w

Time 37:90 Mr 10 '41 140w

Wis Lib Bul 37:74 Ap '41

GALDAMES, LUIS. A history of Chile; tr. and ed. by Isaac Joslin Cox. (Inter-American historical ser) 565p il maps $5 Univ. of N.C. press

983 Chile—History

41-8242

A comprehensive history of Chile from the conquest to the twentieth century, written by a notable Chilean scholar and educator. "The first edition of the book appeared in 1906. The present translation was first made from the sixth edition, which appeared in 1925, but was revised and compared with the seventh edition which came out three years later, and finally with the eighth edition which was published in 1938. . . The Spanish edition of the work contains no biographical or other notes. . . Hence it has been deemed desirable to sketch briefly in an appendix, alphabetically arranged, the careers of the persons mentioned in the text, so that those interested may readily find them. A few brief biographical sketches are given in footnotes." (Introd) Bibliographical notes. Index.

Reviewed by M. W. Williams

Am Hist R 47:398 Ja '42 420w

"Such a work as this will be invaluable to those who want to have not merely a genuine but vague good will toward the Latin-American countries but a solid body of information about them."

+ Christian Century 58:565 Ap 23 '41 120w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:387 Ja '42 10w

"The author has been dean of the faculty of social sciences of the University of Chile for some years and this background is reflected in his book, which, while adequately covering the political and military background of Chile, devotes more than usual attention to the development of the nation's struggle toward social and economic stability. It is, however, distinctly an historian's history, written without flare or fanfare for the more serious student, and translated by a man who is himself an historian." Emile Brugulere

+ Survey G 30:483 S '41 90w

GALE, MARTIN, pseud. Joan and Michael; a story of today. 201p $2 Viking

(W) 41-5301

When Joan's father and Michael's mother were married Joan was sixteen and Michael seventeen. It was hard on the two young people at first, and all thru a long summer vacation they quarreled and deliberately tried to outsmart each other. Then came a day when the two were lost in the woods, and their common misery brought them into a peaceful friendship.

Booklist 37:444 My 15 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p12 My 11 '41 330w

"The puzzled but hands-off attitude of the parents is an excellent example for all grown-ups. All the characters are real, lovable Americans presented without morbid self-examination and introspection. A good story of wholesome American life of the present time for older boys and girls." J. F. Carter

+ Library J 66:359 Ap 15 '41 160w

"Since the author herself was eighteen when she wrote the book, she knows all about the group of young people she describes—a fairly sophisticated one—and boarding-school girls will eat up her story. Some parents too may find the life-and-death agonies over blind dates, tennis tournaments, and treasure hunts an interesting clinical study of the lesser burdens of adolescence."

+ New Yorker 17:90 My 24 '41 90w

Wis Lib Bul 37:162 O '41

GALL, MRS ALICE (CREW). In peace and war; a story of human service. 278p $2 Crowell

361.5 Red cross. Dunant, Jean Henri

41-24468

In simple phrases the author tells the story of the Red cross, its origins in Henri Dunant's work at Solferino, its growth and development in Europe and America, its work in the first World war and during the years after the war, to the outbreak of the second World war. The book is dedicated to "the youth of America."

Reviewed by Mary Ross

Books p16 Ja 11 '42 500w

"A brief and readable history of the Red Cross, touching only the high spots, but conveying the spirit of the organization and telling of some of its more important achievements."

+ Christian Century 58:1475 N 26 '41 30w

GALL, MRS ALICE (CREW), and CREW, FLEMING H. Bushy Tail; il. by Else Bostelmann. 164p $2 Oxford

(W)

The adventures of a small chipmunk, who learns partly from his mother's teachings and partly from bitter experience, things that every chipmunk should know in order to maintain his status quo.

Booklist 38:178 Ja 15 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p8 N 30 '41 200w

"Boys and girls who have read 'Flat Tail' and 'Wagtail' by these authors know what a treat is in store for them. Else Bostelmann's drawings, in reddish brown tint, delightfully illustrate this book." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 N 3 '41 120w

"For little children who enjoy animal stories with real surroundings, these convincing happenings and accurately drawn pictures are as warmly recommended as the other books by these two authors." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:31 Ja '42 110w

Reviewed by Jessie Stanton & E. W. Steele

New Repub 105:837 D 15 '41 20w

"No small part of the charm of the books by Mrs. Gall and Mr. Crew is the way they contrive to put into their pages the feeling of out-of-doors and the changing seasons, thus encouraging in children an awareness of the natural world. Else Bostelmann's delightful drawings are both accurate and imaginative." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 N 30 '41 360w

GALLICO, PAUL WILLIAM. The snow goose. 58p $1 Knopf

(W) 41-4260

Short story of a great white Canadian goose which flew over Dunkirk while the British were making their escape, and played a part in the rescue work.

"Mr. Gallico writes skillfully in a cadence identical with that of ancient legend. An audience of 1041 would be as moved by the narrative as the 1941 one will be. 'The Snow Goose' is story-telling in the traditional and best of all forms that begins, 'Once upon a time.' It stirs the imagination with wonders and leaves realism to life." Margaret Clark
+ Boston Transcript p8 Ap 12 '41 240w

"The style is good, the setting tense with possibilities, but the stirring tale they suggest doesn't begin to come off; and the reader, eager for more, feels deprived."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 My 3 '41 140w

"This is perhaps the most sentimental story that ever has achieved the dignity of the Borzoi imprint. It is a timely legend that makes use of every timeless appeal that could be crowded into it. Some good descriptive writing gives this story distinction, but the general effect is that of a svelte creation in the fashion of the Spring." Robert Van Gelder
+ N Y Times p26 Ap 13 '41 260w

New Yorker 17:87 Ap 12 '41 20w

Pratt p12 D '41

GALLOWAY, GEORGE BARNES, ed. Planning for America, by George B. Galloway and associates. 713p maps $4 Holt

330.973 U.S.—Economic policy. U.S.—Social conditions. Natural resources 41-12176

"This book is a cooperative inquiry into the progress of economic and social planning in the United States: its principles, practices, and problems; its achievements, present status, and potentialities." (Pref) Partial contents: American planning, by G. B. Galloway; Psychological obstacles to planning, by G. B. Galloway; Land planning, by G. F. White; Technology and planning, by W. F. Ogburn; Savings and capital formation, by O. L. Altman; Planning industrial policies, by T. J. Kreps; Public works planning, by John Bauer; Population policy and social planning in a democracy, by Frank Lorimer; Housing: public and private, by Jacob Crane; Education and planning, by P. R. Hanna; Regional planning, by E. S. Draper; War planning, by H. J. Tobin; Government and industrial mobilization, by C. F. Ware; Conclusion, by G. B. Galloway. Selected bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by R. W. Harbeson
Am Econ R 31:871 D '41 950w

Reviewed by L. S. Greene
Ann Am Acad 218:214 N '41 550w
Booklist 38:1 S '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:380 Ja '42 20w

"It was a grand idea to make this survey of American planning techniques, achievements, and problems in various fields of endeavor. . . Two major impressions are gained from a reading of this book. One is of the varied nature of American planning, the great progress it has made. . . The other is that we have in this country the natural resources, the technical-economic capacity, and the planning techniques to solve the economic problem. . . Many of the contributions, however, suffer from the disease of bureaucratic expertitis—specialized bureaucratic routine, the narrow caution that rejects imagination, an inability to project experience to meet new problems." Lewis Corey

+ — Nation 153:313 O 4 '41 850w

"The book is American to the core in background, idiom, sense of need and record of accomplishment to date. It derives as completely from the American scene and its dilemmas as did 'Uncle Tom's Cabin.' It has, also, at once the unity of its theme seen as national and of its editor's clear vision of the kind of book he was endeavoring to supply. Unlike so many symposium books, this one comes off as homogeneous, sustained, and single purposed." Ordway Tead
+ Survey G 31:40 Ja '42 600w

Wis Lib Bul 37:151 O '41

GAMOW, GEORGE. Biography of the earth. 242p il maps $3 Viking

551 Earth. Cosmology (W) 41-16865

The author of The Birth and Death of the Sun (Book Review Digest, 1940) here sets forth in similar vein the story of our earth's birth, its growth and change during the millions of years since that birth, and its possible future course. Partial contents: The age of the earth; The family of planets; Journey to the centre of the earth; The rise and fall of mountains; The evolution of continents; Climates of the past; Life on the earth; A glimpse into the future. Index.

Reviewed by Wilson Follett
Atlantic D '41 200w

Booklist 38:47 O 15 '41

"Mr. Gamow explains that mountains are not hollow. I never met any one who thought they were. His pictorial maps of the growth of North America will disgust the scientist and confuse the layman. The explanation of the climates of the past is just too pat, too confidently worked out, to give a correct story. This book undertakes to tell the story of the birth of the earth and moon, to discuss the planets, to take one to the center of the earth, to tell the story of mountains and continents, the climates of the past, and life on the earth and give a glimpse into our future. These are too many subjects for one book, or perhaps for one writer. The result is often oversimplification." Roderick Peattie
— Books p23 O 5 '41 200w

"This vivid story of the earth is not oversimplified, yet many phenomena of the universe are explained sometimes humorously, by apt simile and clever drawing. Many generally accepted theories of astronomical physics are clarified for the layman. While heavy reading for young people it will appeal to scientifically minded adults." E. D. Hart

+ Library J 66:730 S 1 '41 110w

"An eminently readable and lucid account of our planet by the gifted young physicist whose 'Birth and Death of the Sun' has placed him among the finest science writers of our time. . . Altogether, a book to assimilate and enjoy."

+ New Repub 105:381 S 22 '41 150w

"It would be remarkable indeed if every scientist would agree with all of Professor Gamow's conclusions. But they will agree that he has given us such a racy, interesting, simply written and authoritative account of what is known and what is surmised about the earth that any one with a high school education can understand it and profit by it. We wish that more professors had his remarkable gift of exposition. His book ought to reach the vast public that wants its science in readable, trustworthy and entertaining form." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ N Y Times p26 N 23 '41 850w

"First-rate popularization, with helpful drawings and photographs."

+ New Yorker 17:111 S 20 '41 30w

"A layman is quite helpless before the scientific specialist. But so is another scientist with a different specialty. I happen to be a biologist qualified to appraise this book only in a general way. I must confess that here and there I found some of the sacred details of my own subject treated a bit roughly. . . But after all, why quibble? The author's physics, astronomy, geology, and all the rest of it would have to be much worse than his biology to get this book on our black-list. Meanwhile, it is perhaps the most readable and brisk-moving account of the earth to appear in recent years. It is a prime short course for any one who wishes to keep up with current notions in several fields of natural science." P. B. Sears

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:18 D 27 '41 410w

"Professor Gamow is capable of presenting the mysteries of the universe in popular language without dangerous oversimplification. . . Mention must be made of the numerous pen and ink illustrations and the unusual photographs that so graphically explain the text of a most informative book."

GAMOW, GEORGE—Continued

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:2 S '41 420w

GANN, ERNEST KELLOGG. All American aircraft. 122p il maps $2 Crowell
629.13 Airplanes (W) 41-51744

Photographs, brief text, and specifications, describing fifty American planes. The author is an American Airlines pilot. Index.

Booklist 37:433 My 15 '41

"All American Aircraft" is primarily designed to please air-minded boys. The photographs are splendid, the text slight." W. E. B.

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 26 '41 40w
Christian Century 58:532 Ap 16 '41 10w

"Full details and thoroughly illustrated. Will fascinate older boys." H. L. Binsse
+ Commonweal 35:113 N 21 '41 30w

"Photographs are excellent. This is the sort of fact book both juvenile and adult departments are finding indispensable just now." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 66:403 My 1 '41 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:37 J1 '41

"This is a timely book and one that countless young Americans and many of their elders will find absorbing. The author, whose recent 'Sky Roads' is one of the best all-round books for young people on flying, is himself an airline pilot and holds the highest United States flying license." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p11 My 4 '41 360w

Social Studies 32:288 O '41 10w

Wis Lib Bul 37:89 My '41

GANS, ROMA. A study of critical reading comprehension in the intermediate grades. 135p $1.85 Teachers college

372.4 Reading 40-14940

"The purpose of [this] study is two-fold: 1. To investigate the ability of fourth, fifth, and sixth grade children to read critically from a variety of content in order to find information relevant to a problem in a situation as real as the investigator could suggest in a written test; and, 2. To discover the degree to which this reference-reading ability is related to comprehension as measured by a selected group of reading tests." (Page 1) Bibliography.

School & Society 52:80 Ag 3 '40 10w

"This investigation makes an important contribution to the literature on measurement. It suggests a new approach to the evaluation of a complex ability. The findings of the study are not to be interpreted as discrediting the utility of standardized reading comprehension tests. It serves to refine the field of their application." H. M. Carpenter

+ Social Educ 5:238 Mr '41 700w

Reviewed by F. M. Lawson

Social Studies 32:188 Ap '41 310w

GARBETT, CYRIL FORSTER, bp. We would see Jesus; with an introd. by the Bishop of London. (Bishop of London's Lent bk, 1941) 86p $1 (2s 6d) Longmans

232.9 Jesus Christ

"This is a simple but attractive presentation of the meaning of the life of Jesus for the Christian. There is a vivid picture of the life of Jesus at Nazareth, and in chapters entitled 'Prophet and Teacher', 'The Good Shepherd', 'The Lord Jesus', 'The Man of Sorrows', 'The Saviour', 'The Risen Christ', an interpretation of the Christian faith." Churchman

"The latest of the Bishop of London's Lenten books is by the Bishop of Winchester, and is a simple, straightforward exposition of the devotional approach to the life and teaching of Jesus. It is full of a manly, simple, thoroughly English piety."

+ Christian Century 58:832 Je 25 '41 180w

+ Churchman 155:34 Je 15 '41 60w

"The Bishop of Winchester has provided a freshly written and attractive study of the picture of Christ as it is given in the New Testament."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p119 Mr 8 '41 220w

GARCEAU, OLIVER. The political life of the American medical association. 186p $2.50
Harvard univ. press

610.6 American medical association
A41-3158

"The organization of the American Medical Association is subjected here to expert review by a professor of government in Harvard University. . . . Professor Garceau does not depend upon testimony from those who like or dislike the policies of the AMA concerning health insurance, national health programs, or the treatment of medical minorities. He analyzes the tenure of key members of the house of delegates, trustees, and executive officers, and probes the manner in which the reference committees and other working machinery actually function. His conclusion is that 'an active minority' of insiders control the organization fairly effectively." Survey

"In view of the judicious treatment of the evidence throughout the volume, the author's strictures on the policy of the A. M. A. are very damaging, although the reader may question his conclusion that the remedy for the evils of indifference and oligarchy is the organization of parties within the membership." E. E. Schattschneider

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1024 O '41 250w

"This booklet is well written and fairly well documented. Although numerous aspects of internal political intrigue have been omitted from consideration, enough evidence is presented to make understandable the Association's current policies in the light of economic and social changes and a dissatisfied, restless attitude on the part of the public at large. This publication will be particularly helpful to those interested in the field of medical politics and economics." P. A. Dodd

+ Ann Am Acad 218:243 N '41 240w

Reviewed by M. M. Davis

Survey 77:341 N '41 350w

GARCIA LORCA, FEDERICO. From Lorca's theatre; five plays in the authorized translation by Richard L. O'Connell and James Graham Luján; with a foreword by Stark Young. 251p $2.50 Scribner

862 41-19822

Translations of five plays by the young Spanish writer, who was put to death in his native Granada, shortly after the outbreak of the Spanish civil war. Contents: The shoemaker's prodigious wife; The love of Don Perlimpin; If five years passed; Yerma; Doña Rosita, the spinster.

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books p27 N 16 '41 200w

Commonweal 35:229 D 19 '41 110w

"Despite the validity of his writing, I doubt very much if these five plays by Federico Garcia Lorca (1899-1936) will hold much interest for the general reader. His style combines robustness, decadence, fantasy, and tenderness about equally. The plays are meant to be acted but read poorly to the uninitiated, particularly in translation. Nevertheless there is so little modern Spanish drama of value available in translation that those institutions which make a practice of purchasing all worthwhile modern plays will want one copy at least." George Freedley

Library J 66:730 S 1 '41 130w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
Nation 153:430 N 1 '41 800w

"Since the World War there has been no more beautiful mind in the theatre than Lorca's. We may say too that it was a mind at the same time passionate, complex and lovable, and, as the theatre must be, contagious and friendly. His was a genius, too, that was marked by a seemingly inexhaustible invention; hot with the variety and multiplication of images and cold with their precision and finality. . . These five plays demonstrate easily the fact that no modern dramatist has shown more instinct for using the theatre, working fully and freely in all its divers mediums." Stark Young

+ New Repub 105:477 O 13 '41 1200w

Springf'd Republican p6 N 21 '41 340w

"All of Lorca's plays are a valid and valuable addition to modern drama." Frederick Morton

+ Theatre Arts 25:920 D '41 850w

GARD, ALEX. Ballet laughs; with an introd. by Walter Terry. [95p of illus] $1.50 Grey-stone

792.8 Ballet. Dancers. Caricatures and cartoons 41-22278

Caricatures of some well-known ballet dancers on and off the stage, with a few of other personalities—teachers and producers—connected with the art.

"It may be sport for Alex Gard, New York cartoonist, to caricature the artists of the ballet as he has seen them on the stage, behind the scenes, and at their favorite meeting places after work, but not for us. A beautiful ballerina is a beautiful ballerina offstage as well as on, and this is a fact, not theory. There is a glamour that does not peel off with grease paint, and even if it did it would be kinder to allow the public to preserve its illusions. . . Walter Terry, dance critic of the New York Herald Tribune, has written an introduction in the vein of the cartoons." Margaret Lloyd

Christian Science Monitor p10 N 15 '41 320w

"You don't have to be an ardent follower of the ballet to enjoy Alex Gard's handsome volume. In fact, those who belong to what Dance Critic Walter Terry calls the 'raised-eyebrow school' will laugh loudest and longest." Milton Berliner

+ Springf'd Republican p6e N 9 '41 140w

"'Ballet Laughs,' outside the introduction and captions, no written word. It needs none. Its language is a strong penline that puts over Gard's ideas as no word could." Sarah Schiff

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 9 '41 120w

GARDENING with the experts, by noted authorities; il. by Hiram Hurd. 239p $2.50 Macmillan

635.9 Gardening 41-18161

Eleven essays on various phases of gardening, written by experts in their various fields. Includes very brief biographical sketches of contributors. Contents: The heritage of gardens, by Richardson Wright; Annuals, and perennials, by H. E. Downer; Wildflower gardens, by R. S. Lemmon; The herb garden, by R. E. Clarkson; The rose for all America, by J. H. McFarland; Plants in your parlor, by Montague Free; Understanding color, by Dorothy Biddle and Dorothea Blom; Garden sanitation, by Cynthia Westcott; Planting and care of lawns, by H. B. Sprague; The order of bloom of trees and shrubs, by Donald Wyman; Amateur flower shows and flower arrangements, by S. V. Coombs.

"Supplemented by Hiram Hurd's pleasant drawings on sectional title pages and as tail-pieces, [the essays] comprise a volume which, for all its wide variety of topics, holds together well and is distinctly worth while." R. S. Lemmon

+ Books p32 D 7 '41 120w

"Amateur gardeners, whether they go in for only a few potted plants in the parlor or have more ambitious designs, will find in this volume a wealth of practical information about the things they most need to know. No words are wasted in fancy writing. These experts are really telling you what to grow and how."

+ Christian Century 58:1213 O 1 '41 60w

"While there are many practical and helpful suggestions to be found throughout 'Gardening With the Experts,' it is, on the whole, rather disappointing. For one thing, the work is too brief to cover adequately the wide field it undertakes to cover, and the authors can do no more than sketchily outline their subjects. Illustrations and a good bibliography would more than double the value of the book and a more attractive format might have been achieved." C. B. M.

Springf'd Republican p10 D 25 '41 700w

GARDINER, DOROTHY. West of the river. 347p il map $3.50 Crowell

917.78 Missouri river. West—History 41-6158

"This is a book about the magnificence of the West from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean. Beginning with the first white men venturing into that expanse of plains and prairies that astounded and terrified and dwarfed them, we witness the struggle to conquer two thousand miles of unexplored country. We see the fur traders throng about a new French town called St. Louis. We go with the bullwhackers and freighters as they roll along the Santa Fé Trail. We fight our way over a vast and dry expanse with horses, oxen, mules, pushcarts, wagons, and even camels, to arrive at a stone barrier rising abruptly toward the sky—the Rocky Mountains. . . Miss Gardiner, the granddaughter of a pioneer who crossed the plains in the gold rush of 1859, herself grew up in Colorado." (Living Age) Index.

"This book is an interesting study of the region west of the Missouri River. It is well written and generally accurate. . . Eighteen excellent contemporary pictures of early Western historical scenes enhance the value of the book. There is no bibliography, and the book is not well documented. . . West of the River is a contribution to Western history, and the West is made to live again." J. V. Frederick

+ — Am Hist R 47:366 Ja '42 700w

Booklist 37:462 Je 1 '41

"'West of the River' is one of the most entertaining and informative books I have read for years. . . Here, at last, may possibly be the definitive Book of the West. If only it had been issued five or six years ago, some of the recent horse movies (or horse operas) with a pseudo-historical slant might have come closer to the facts!" C. B. Firestone

+ Books p7 Mr 30 '41 1000w

Christian Century 58:531 Ap 16 '41 70w

"She lets the facts speak for themselves, and they spin a grand tale. She has captured the large pageantry of the history of the West." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 My 3 '41 500w

Reviewed by D. S. Rankin

Commonweal 34:42 My 2 '41 300w

"This history is illustrated with many fine reproductions of sketches and photographs. Miss Gardiner handles a diversity of characters and situations with such skill that the reader becomes engrossed in the richness of the material. Her book is an indispensable addition to the record of the growth and development of a section of our country. Not only is it a valuable work for the student of history, but it is a timely book for every serious-minded citizen of the United States today." Richard Oliver

+ Living Age 360:194 Ap '41 450w

GARDINER, DOROTHY—Continued

"In this book Miss Gardiner has given us both the dry facts and the memories of its splendid history. Her account is based on wide reading and study and should find many readers among those interested in the panorama of the westward movement and its effect on our national development." T. R. Hay

+ N Y Times p10 My 4 '41 1200w

"'West of the River' is episodic and anecdotal and the effect it gives is that of a carelessly compiled and badly balanced album of small snapshots. It contains almost no original research materials, no convincing inductions or conclusions from the quoted materials or abstracted passages which make up a substantial part of the book. There is no particular reason for the volume except some good illustrations and a very handsome binding. . . In short, this is an excellent example of how not to write history—merely selecting juicy squibs from standard texts and tossing them together with no attention to proportion and little more to ordering." Phil Stong

— Sat R of Lit 24:13 Je 14 '41 440w

Social Studies 32:238 My '41 20w

GARDINER, FREDERIC M. Cruising North America. 340p il maps $3.50 Dodd

797.1 Yachts and yachting. Waterways—North America

(W) 41-14788

This book, in part made up of magazine articles first published in the magazine, Yachting, describes the cruising facilities on the coast lines and inland waters of North America. "The cruising grounds are subdivided territorially, starting with the Bay of Fundy and running along the coast to the Mexican boundary; then flying north to the Hudson River, Lake Champlain, and the St. Lawrence, west to the Great Lakes, and down through the waterways of the Mississippi Watershed; and finally hopping out to the Pacific Coast, with a chapter tacked on to cover landlocked lakes and the comparatively new sport of 'trailer cruising.'" (p 6-7) Index.

Booklist 38:76 N 1 '41

"The book testifies that Mr. Gardiner's interest is not solely, or even perhaps chiefly, in ocean beacons, river lights, tidal rips, cross currents and soundings. Also it comprehends bathing girls, old salts, Canadian flies, New Orleans restaurants, dialects, [and] the etymology of place names. . . So a handbook which the jacket calls 'practical' becomes something more and better, and that happens only now and then." C. B. Firestone

+ Books p4 Jl 27 '41 900w

"The material in Commander Gardiner's book is up-to-date and makes fascinating reading. The book should also be a stimulus to yachting and therefore to small boat building, since it shows that you can be a yachtsman in almost any section of the United States—except the Rocky Mountains." Oliver Harrison

+ Sat R of Lit 24:13 Jl 26 '41 400w

GARDINER, GLENN LION. Better foremanship. 2d ed 336p $2.50 McGraw 658.31243 Foremen. Factory management

41-14523

"In a practical question-and-answer treatment, this book outlines effective management methods for foremen. The subject matter has been chosen to give the foreman help both with fundamental functions and practices of foremanship, and with the many new questions and problems that have resulted from recent changes in working conditions, labor relations, and industrial methods. This edition has been revised particularly to cover the new responsibilities facing foremen under defense production." (Management R) The revision is mainly "in relation to changing labor conditions and the expanding industrial program." (Booklist)

For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1936. Index.

Booklist 38:56 O 15 '41

Management R 30:354 S '41 100w

GARDINER, JEWEL, and BAISDEN, LEO BERNARD. Administering library service in the elementary school. 161p il $2.25 A.L.A.

027.8222 School libraries. Library science (W) 41-52045

"A practical aid to superintendents, principals, teachers, and library school instructors as well as to librarians. It is a concise presentation of an up-to-date program for the organization and administration of an elementary school library in which there is a fusion of experience from the fields of librarianship, teaching, and school administration." Booklist

Booklist 38:151 Ja 1 '42

School & Society 54:600 D 20 '41 30w

GARDNER, CHARLES. First blood for the R.A.F.; the valorous story of the Advanced air striking force in France [Eng title: A.A.S.F.]. 272p il $2.50 McKay [8s 6d Hutchinson]

940.544 Great Britain. Royal air force. World war, 1939—Aerial operations. World war, 1939—Campaigns and battles—France

41-10575

Story of the R.A.F. in France, by a radio reporter, which is based partly upon his diary. Illustrated with photographs.

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:378 Ja '42 20w

"Badly written impressions of air warfare." Ralph Bates

— Nation 152:674 Je 7 '41 40w

Reviewed by Otis Ferguson

New Repub 105:196 Ag 11 '41 70w

Reviewed by Barrington Gates

New Statesman & Nation 21:195 F 22 '41 290w

"Though it possesses no literary graces, Mr. Gardner's is a book which can be read with pleasure now, and one which, because it is the work of an honest and accurate observer who knows at first-hand what he is talking about, will provide pickings for the historian of the future." Derek Verschoyle

+ — Spec 166:232 F 28 '41 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p614 D 7 '40 650w

GARDNER, ERLE STANLEY. The case of the empty tin. 282p $2 Morrow

(W) 41-19306

Detective story.

Booklist 38:114 D 1 '41

"Mr. Gardner has some new tricks up the sleeve of this genuine, triple-ply Perry Mason story. . . You know well enough that the new yarn is full of this author's slick plotting and everything else for which he is famous in every quarter of the globe. We did view with alarm a slight tendency to use long words, but maybe it's only a passing phase. Yessir, it's fully up to Erle Stanley Gardner's standard and even more so in spots." Will Cuppy

+ Books p26 O 26 '41 170w

"The Perry Mason stories always promise swift action, snappy dialogue and plenty of exciting episodes, and that promise is always fulfilled. Those who like that type of detective fiction cannot afford to miss this new chapter in the adventures of Perry Mason, Della Street and Paul Drake." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p18 O 26 '41 150w

"Better than usual."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 O 25 '41 40w

Time 38:96 N 3 '41 40w

GARDNER, ERLE STANLEY. The case of the haunted husband. 281p $2 Morrow
Detective story. 41-4372

Booklist 37:361 Ap 1 '41

"This is standard goods, offering a smooth treatment of the who-is-who plot and all the qualities Perry Mason fans crave when their hero is on the job. Detective Paul Drake and Della Street are standing by, with Lieut. Tragg as a likable foil for Perry." Will Cuppy
Books p25 Mr 2 '41 200w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggan
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 15 '41 20w

"This is a typical Perry Mason story. Naturally, there are a couple of murders along the way, and there are plenty of opportunities for everybody, including Perry Mason, to guess wrong about the outcome." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p25 Mr 16 '41 160w
"Full marks."
+ Sat R of Lit 23:22 Mr 1 '41 40w

GARDNER, ERLE STANLEY. The case of the turning tide. 282p $2 Morrow (W) 41-11978
Detective story.

Booklist 38:13 S '41

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p10 Ag 3 '41 250w

"A swift-paced, amusing and complicated piece of entertainment in the shrewd Gardner style." Kay Irvin
+ N Y Times p12 Jl 27 '41 270w

"Four-barrelled plot, customary crisp Gardner talk, gorgeously amusing grandsire, other racy characters and much slick sleuthing. Capital."
+ Sat R of Lit 24:14 Ag 9 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 17 '41 120w

GARLAN, EDWIN NORMAN. Legal realism and justice. 161p $2 Columbia univ. press 340.1 Justice. Law—Philosophy 41-6662

"In this volume Garlan has . . . clarified the philosophical continuity of American legal realism. . . . Without trying to pass judgment on the immediate objects of some of its followers, without entering into the technical problems of law and its administration, Garlan has revealed the excesses of some of the realists, detected the genuine objectives of the movement, and shown the meaning of these objectives in the broader context of a theory of justice. In so doing, he has fulfilled the function of the philosopher as the intellectual mediator between the immediate and the enduring in experience." (Foreword) Selective bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by M. R. Konvitz
Ethics 52:121 O '41 550w

"Within its limits Mr. Garlan's volume is a useful one. He has appended to it the most comprehensive bibliography of realist material yet published. The material that he has assembled he has analyzed with vigor, if not always with clarity. The book would have had more balance if its scope had been extended to include other philosophies besides the realistic; the problem of justice is a general one, and even on Mr. Garlan's own showing, the realists have devoted little effort, at least on the positive side, toward its elucidation." Huntington Cairns
+ — Harvard Law R 54:1251 My '41 1200w

"Although America has been fortunate in the number of its philosophically-minded judges and legal scholars, it has not yet produced an equal number of philosophers who are at home in the intricacies of jurisprudence. That is why Dr. Garlan's able survey and criticism of contemporary legal realism from the point of view of a philosopher is so welcome a sign at the present moment, when the whole idea of law as something other than sheer power to enforce decrees hangs in the balance, and millions of men ponder the question what a 'just peace' could possibly mean." H. A. L.

+ J Philos 38:306 My 22 '41 700w

GARLAND, ISABEL. Abandon hope. 264p $2
Arcadia 41-6653

Mystery story.

"Billed as 'a seriously conceived mystery story,' this first book by a daughter of the late Hamlin Garland makes no use of comic relief, idle persiflage or other light-minded trimming. . . . Miss Garland's pages add up to a soft-boiled puzzle with emphasis on family problems and more excitement toward the end." Will Cuppy
Books p13 F 2 '41 120w

"Except for a bit of vagueness about the relationship of two of the characters it is well done." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p23 F 9 '41 240w

GARLAND, ISABEL. See also Lord, G., pseud.

GARLAND, JASPER VANDERBILT. War and the Americas [with separate booklet of True—false examination questions]. (Contemporary social problems: discussion ser) 564p $2 Wilson, H. W.

940.537 World war, 1939—American republics. Latin America—Foreign relations—U.S. U.S.—Foreign relations—Latin America (W) 41-4253

"The author, who is director of debate at Colgate University, has prepared this volume for college debaters, but its usefulness will not be limited to them. It contains a well organized body of material (564 pages) from many sources and many writers covering both sides and all aspects of America's relation to the war, including the problems of pan-American solidarity, world organization for peace, and military defense." (Christian Century) A twenty-four page pamphlet, with some 400 true-false questions for use with college classes and debating groups, is included.

Booklist 37:389 Ap 15 '41

Christian Century 58:259 F 19 '41 70w

"An invaluable compilation for those who wish a solid background from which to comprehend our present changing world. As an excellent book for the class-room or for debate material, it lists sources and appends a twenty-four page supplement of 'true or false' questions." W. F. Thompson
+ Churchman 155:18 Ap 1 '41 230w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 19:885 Jl '41 10w

"This book is largely a compilation of well-done condensations of important articles and reports published in American newspapers and magazines. It is a most comprehensive and up-to-date complement to all recent books on Latin America and its relations with the United States and a mine of information for students, lecturers and writers. . . . One useful reference feature of the book is the verbatim quotation of several important conference resolutions and official statements of various governments. It is only regrettable that such an important source book should have been published without an index (though the table of contents is fairly comprehensive)."
+ Living Age 360:99 Mr '41 450w
Wis Lib Bul 37:71 Ap '41

GARNER, MRS ELVIRA. 'Way down in Tennessee. [96p] il $2 Messner (W) 41-8632

"The author-artist of 'Ezekiel' writes, in the third person, the simple happenings of her own childhood on a Tennessee plantation and scatters her text with the tiny pen-and-ink and color drawings of pickaninnies and animals which are so fascinating to young children. The book is at least half pictures." New Yorker

GARNER, ELVIRA—Continued

"Children's memories of happiness can be trusted: they live a long time and carry over into the lives of other children. That will happen, I believe, with these amusing sketches of summer 'way down in Tennessee.'" M. L. Becker

+ Books p14 My 11 '41 240w

"The illustrations have little to do with drawing, but capture a narrative quality which makes up for any shortcomings. They almost give the sense of a movie, and many of them might have come from the accomplished hand of Mark Twain." Warren Chappell

+ Horn Bk M 17:453 N '41 30w

"The book is a series of amusingly lovable little incidents built from Mrs. Garner's reminiscences of a year in her own childhood. It is well made, a handy size, and charmingly illustrated by the author. Recommended for children eight to ten." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 66:620 Jl '41 140w

"Slight in structure as the story is, its incidents are composed of the mirthful kind which charm 6 and 7 year olds, the kind which in after years are the chief memories of the laughing, lazy, play-filled days of Summer." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Je 22 '41 360w

New Yorker 17:87 My 24 '41 30w

GARNETT, DAVID. War in the air, September 1939-May 1941. 292p il $3.50 Doubleday [7s 6d Chatto]

940.544 World war, 1939—Aerial operations. Great Britain. Royal air force

(W) 41-17767

Study of the British air war, from the outbreak of hostilities to May, 1941. It includes facts and figures on the various campaigns, in Poland, Norway, Holland, France, over Dunkirk, and in Britain itself, with the writer's own penetrating comments on the war in general. Mr Garnett, one of England's best-known authors, was from September 1939 to March 1940, a flight lieutenant R.A.F.V.R., and a staff officer in the Intelligence at the Air Ministry in London. Illustrated with photographs.

Booklist 38:49 O 15 '41

"This book tells in compellingly simple language the story of fighting in the air. It is a story so new in history that there is nothing final or complete about it. This is an honest, unemotional, magnificently written progress report on one of the great changes in the art of war. At the same time it is one of the most revealing documents on the old paradox of British character to come out of England since the war began." Joseph Barnes

+ Books p5 S 21 '41 1050w

Reviewed by Harold Hobson

Christian Science Monitor p11 O 25 '41 220w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:378 Ja '42 60w

Manchester Guardian p3 S 16 '41 120w

"This is a book not for amateur strategists, but for everyone who can read good English and wants to know more than he will find in the newspapers. Mr. Garnett spent the first six months of the war as an Intelligence Officer in the Air Ministry. He has had practical experience of flying. He has no theories or prophecies, and he takes his facts as he finds them." G. W. Stonier

+ New Statesman & Nation 22:258 S 13 '41 1400w

"A dispassionate and readable presentation of available information." L. E. Neville

+ N Y Times p1 S 28 '41 1350w

"The result is the fullest and one of the frankest accounts of the war in the air yet issued, fairly told, without rhetoric for the glorious achievements of the R.A.F. and without epithets for the Germans. The account is accompanied by some excellent running commentary on the developing strategy and tactics of air warfare." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 D 20 '41 750w

"It is an excellent book which, if only it could be read by the same people, would serve as an invaluable corrective to the nonsense written in ever-increasing amounts in newspapers and other books about every activity, past, present and future, of the R.A.F. The most valuable part of the book is probably that which discusses our air strength—necessarily the main basis of our political strategy—in the two years before the war, and the relative strengths and rates of expansion of the R.A.F. and the German Air Force in 1939 and 1940."

+ Spec 167:412 O 24 '41 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p427 S 6 '41 750w

GARNETT, JAMES CLERK MAXWELL. A lasting peace; with some chapters on the basis of German co-operation by H. F. Koeppler. 288p maps $2.25 Norton [7s 6d Allen, G.]

940.5314 World war, 1939—Peace. World war, 1939—Causes. Germany—Politics and government [41-7039]

The first part of the book is a study of the growth and development of the League of nations, and the author's proposals for a lasting peace after the end of the present war. The last seven chapters are written by a refugee from Nazi Germany, and deal with the question of how Germany is to be treated after the fall of Hitler. Index.

"The story of the League's growth and failure has been often told; this version of it is balanced and competent, if somewhat pedestrian. . . By far the most interesting part of the book is the last seven chapters, which are written by Dr. H. F. Koeppler, a refugee from Nazism. . . This last part of the book I very heartily recommend." G. M. A. Grube

+ Canadian Forum 20:187 S '40 300w

"This book was written before the 1940 Blitzkrieg in the west and reflects some of the unrealistic thinking of the 'phony war' period. In general the author's approach to the subject is quite pedestrian and shows little awareness of the tremendous issues at stake." R. G. Woolbert

— Foreign Affairs 20:194 O '41 50w

"This is a valuable contribution to the literature of peace. Dr. Maxwell Garnett writes with special knowledge on the history of the League, and his discussion of the causes of its successes and its failures is illuminating."

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ag 27 '40 350w

"Dr. Garnett does not conceal the fact he is on the side of the angels. He is concerned, however, to lay bare the causes of the failure of the first experiment at international co-operation and world order through the League, and his survey and criticism cannot be dismissed as one-sided or superficial. . . The book is a notable contribution to the educational work which must proceed, both during the War and after it, before we can achieve a lasting peace."

+ Nature 146:210 Ag 17 '40 290w

Reviewed by R. H. S. Crossman

New Statesman & Nation 19:728 Je 8 '40 330w

"Those who believe that the war—and still more the peace—will entail a fundamental upheaval of all our political ideas, and who are still searching for some hitherto undiscovered key to our problems, will be a little disappointed in Dr. Garnett's book, which is on stereotyped lines. . . It seems to me unpromising to look for salvation today among the ideals of 1919. But for those who think otherwise Dr. Garnett will be a useful guide." E. H. Carr

— + Spec 164:782 Je 7 '40 550w

"Those who are content with a 'Back to the League' platform or something like it, are faced with the task of explaining why the League, after 'ten successful years,' was overtaken by 'the turn of the tide.' Mr. Garnett does not come through this ordeal very well. His chapters on the history of the League are, surprisingly, the most superficial in the book, and virtually ignoring, as he does, both social and economic issues, he gives us no coherent view of the nature of the crisis which has led us back into war."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p274 Je 8 '40 550w

GARRISON, MYRTLE. Stars and stripes; il. by W. J. Goodacre. 176p $3 Caxton printers 929.9 Flags, U.S.—History 41-8664

Description and history of the various national and local flags which have flown over American soil, from the flag of the Vikings to the present Star Spangled banner.

"Text-bookish, no trace of profundity or social climate." P. S.

Canadian Forum 21:93 Je '41 180w

Springf'd Republican p6 J1 8 '41 550w

GARRISON, WINFRED ERNEST, ed. Faith of the free, by Van Meter Ames [and others]. 276p $2.50 Willett

204 Religion 40-35158

A volume of essays by various hands dedicated to Edward Scribner Ames in commemoration of his forty years' service with the University Church of Disciples of Christ, Chicago. Partial contents: A functional concept of religion, by W. C. Bower; Religion and social action, by M. H. Bro; Conscience and politics, by T. V. Smith; Religious education, by R. G. Ross; A perspective of missions, by G. W. Sarvis; Christianity and the eastern religions, by C. W. Hamilton; The ecumenical ideal, by H. L. Willett; The liberal heritage, by W. E. Garrison; A bibliography of Edward Scribner Ames, by E. A. Henry.

"The contributors to this book are experts in their own fields, so that their statements are uniformly on a high level of excellence. Moreover, they have refined their ideas until the essence has appeared in remarkably satisfying and amazingly brief form. This is altogether a rewarding book in which individual wisdom and personal affection are delightfully united." N. L. Tibbetts

+ Christian Century 58:188 F 5 '41 1100w

"The twenty-three contributors are former or present members of the church and all are important men in their various fields, largely that of philosophy. Each man writes of some subject of his own choice but through them all runs the central thought of their leader, 'a religious value is always also some other kind of value.'" H. J. S.

+ Churchman 154:38 D 15 '40 70w

GARTH, DAVID. Tiger milk. 295p $2 Kinsey (W) 41-5368

Mystery-adventure story of the present day, laid in refugee-haunted Spain, on the Clipper flying the Atlantic, and in an America already fighting against unseen enemies.

"The Nazi menace in 'Tiger Milk' trails the heroine back to her Connecticut home, digs into her husband's past in Maryland, crops up in New Orleans and a Mexican port before the mystery of the ivory tiger is unraveled. Nice unraveling, Mr. Garth." Lisle Bell

+ Books p18 Ap 20 '41 160w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p22 Ap 13 '41 210w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 15 '41 150w

GASSNER, JOHN. Producing the play; with the New scene technician's handbook, by Philip Barber. 744p il $3.25 Dryden 792 Amateur theatricals. Theater (W) 41-25714

"John Gassner begins his analysis of play production far back of the first rehearsal, with the nature of drama itself, the types and styles of drama, the play script before it is absorbed into the other elements of theatre. . . In the discussion that follows—of the theatre and its elements, the place of the actor, the theatre organization, the director, designer, theatre speech and so forth—Mr. Gassner states his own case and then turns to some professional specialist, sometimes to several in the same field or closely related fields, for a detailed account of practice and method. . . A considerable section in Producing the Play is devoted to the college and community theatre, made up chiefly of statements by a dozen men of tried experience in difficult non-professional situations. . . The value and standard of Philip Barber's New Scene Technician's Handbook is already certified by many years of use in its earlier mimeographed form." (Theatre Arts) Index.

"The book is invaluable not only for the directors of little theaters, of college theaters, and for students of the drama, but also for Broadway directors and producers. It is encyclopedic in its scope, and yet clearly and incisively written so that it will be attractive even to the layman." Grenville Vernon

+ Commonweal 35:203 D 12 '41 300w

"Highly recommended." George Freidley

+ Library J 66:792 S 15 '41 140w

Reviewed by E. J. R. Isaacs

+ Theatre Arts 25:924 D '41 650w

GATHINGS, JAMES ANDERSON. International law and American treatment of alien enemy property; introd. by Edwin Borchard. 143p $3; pa $2.50 Am. council on public affairs 341.3 Aliens—U.S. 41-2003

"In [this] timely treatise . . . Dr. James A. Gathings surveys the subject from the days of the ancient Hebrews to the year 1940. He covers the development of the practice prior to the World War (with special attention to that of the United States), the treatment of alien enemy property in Europe during the World War, the policy and practice of the United States during the World War and subsequent years, a comparison of the World War practice of various states, and proposal for a future policy." Am Pol Sci R

Reviewed by D. V. Sandifer

Am Pol Sci R 35:388 Ap '41 320w

"This is an important study which should be of interest not only to students of international law but also to those who, in view of present world conditions, would like to find a brief account of our experience with the alien property custodian in the last war." W. J. Ronan

+ Ann Am Acad 215:212 My '41 600w

Foreign Affairs 19:680 Ap '41 20w

Harvard Law R 54:916 Mr '41 300w

"In the background of what is now being done under the guise of war legislation, and in view of the tendency in domestic practice to nationalize essential industries without adequate compensation, Mr. Gathings' book makes grim reading for those who hope to see safety for private enterprise and for foreign investment in the future. Perhaps his chart of past actions will help avoid the pitfalls of past experience. At least it will clarify the record for future historians." Phoebe Morrison

+ Yale Law J 51:528 Ja '42 1050w

GATTI, ATTILIO. Kamanda, an African boy; il. with phot. taken by the Commander and Mrs Attilio Gatti. 149p $2 McBride
916.7 Kongo, Belgian (W) 41-17548

Kamanda was a real eleven-year-old boy from the Belgian Congo, who joined the tenth Gatti expedition when it came to his village. This is the story of Kamanda's wide-eyed curiosity at the strange ways of the white man, and his bravery on the occasion when Mrs Gatti was bitten by a snake, and Kamanda saved her life.

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 35:112 N 21 '41 10w

"Should appeal to boys from eleven to fourteen. The writer is an authority on African customs. The book is attractively illustrated with photographs taken on the expedition."

A. D. Martin

+ Library J 66:735 S 1 '41 80w

"His story is told with humor and affectionate knowledge of native life as well as of a small boy's peccadillos and at the same time gives first-hand information in an off-hand manner about Africa and life on a safari, substantiated by photographs."

E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p10 O 26 '41 300w

"Informative."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:21 N 15 '41 60w

GATTI, ATTILIO. The wrath of Moto; with il. by Paul Bransom. 160p $2.50 Scribner

(W) 41-17946

The hero of this tale of African pygmies is Arara, who has just reached manhood. With other young tribesmen he fights in a battle with gorillas, in which the tribe's sacred spear is lost. In his search for the spear Arara is cut off from help by the eruption of the volcano Moto. His life is saved by twin gorillas. For author's earlier book on pygmy life see Saranga, the Pygmy (Book Review Digest, 1939).

Booklist 38:83 N 1 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p14 N 2 '41 160w

"Another dramatic book on the African pygmies comes from the hand of the distinguished explorer to whom the jungle is familiar ground. Even more thrilling than Saranga's story is this narrative about the Mambutis. . . . Paul Bransom's pictures make the scene vivid." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:369 S '41 110w

"The author of Saranga the Pygmy has written a second story of this little-known jungle people, with the same keen sensitivity for the beauty of words that characterizes his first book. . . . Dramatically told, in epic prose style, this book is a distinctive literary addition to children's room collections. The illustrations by Paul Bransom, though macabre at times, convey the spirit of the story. Recommended for superior readers, sixth grade and up." M. M. Clark

+ Library J 66:908 O 15 '41 160w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

N Y Times p10 N 30 '41 280w

"A worthy addition."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:21 N 15 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 7 '41 150w

GATTI-CASAZZA, GIULIO. Memories of the opera. 326p il $3.50 Scribner

B or 92 Opera. Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 41-20230

The author, former manager of the Metropolitan opera company, describes the highlights of his career during the twenty-six years when he was America's number one leader of opera. His recollections are arranged in chronological order. Index.

Booklist 38:112 D 1 '41

"These biographical notes will be read by those who remember the world of art which is gone, and by those younger music lovers who have heard of a Europe full of beauty and hope, the Europe to which Gatti-Casazza belonged, and to which he retired after the season of 1934-'35. . . . The comments on the brilliant personalities he knew are shrewd and penetrating but uniformly kind. Indeed, the temper of the book from cover to cover is wise and tolerant, to a degree rarely found in the autobiographies of artists. . . . He insists in his memoirs that the depression, and nothing but the depression, caused the shrinkage in the million-dollar reserve. . . . It's natural that his strong temperament, beset with worries, should speak out firmly, and natural also that in the sheer weariness of those difficult months his memory should be at fault." John Erskine

Books p6 O 5 '41 1350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '41

"A book without literary distinction. . . . It is not our duty here to meditate on the lamentable fact that this democratic Republic sported a Hofoper more exclusive, autocratic, uneconomical, and—brilliant, than many a real court theater in Europe, so we shall not take issue with the many implications crowding to the fore in this book. Instead we shall merely call attention to the numerous stories, episodes, and anecdotes which will interest the opera-goers and the historians of that fabulous era of the 'Diamond Horseshoe.' Mr. Taubman, we suspect, has lent more than a helping hand in putting together this 'autobiography,' and due credit should be given to his labors." F. H. Lang

Sat R of Lit 24:35 D 6 '41 250w

Wis Lib Bul 37:199 D '41

GAUL, HARRIETTE LESTER (AVERY) (MRS HARVEY BARTLETT GAUL), and EISEMAN, RUBY. John Alfred Brashear, scientist and humanitarian, 1840-1920. (Pennsylvania lives) 220p $2.25 Univ. of Pa. press

B or 92 Brashear, John Alfred 41-698

Biography of the Pittsburgh millwright who became famous as a maker of astronomical lenses. Known to steel kings, teachers and school children as "Uncle John," Brashear's fame was due not only to his scientific achievements but as well to his friendliness with all classes of men and his high humanitarian idealism. Bibliographical note. Index.

Reviewed by R. J. Ferguson

Am Hist R 47:203 O '41 280w

Booklist 37:291 Mr 1 '41

"The authors have done a fine job, and the story of 'Uncle John' Brashear is a sensitive and thoroughly absorbing account of a man to whom the people of Pennsylvania and the entire nation must stand deeply indebted for his unique contributions both as a scientist and humanitarian." Clifford Moore

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 5 '41 1600w

Reviewed by Haniel Long

+ Survey G 30:308 My '41 420w

GAULLE, CHARLES ANDRE JOSEPH MARIE DE. The army of the future; foreword by Walter Millis. 179p $2 Lippincott [3s 6d Hutchinson]

355.0944 France—Defenses. France—Army

(W) 41-51695

"This is the now famous little book by a French officer on the principles of which the French did not act—while the Germans did. It was originally published in 1934. Hitler, at that time, had barely consolidated his power over Germany, and the great Nazi onslaught upon the post-war world had not yet begun. . . . and the author of this book was still a comparatively little known army captain, a teacher at the military college of St. Cyr. But the 'army of the future,' as Captain de Gaulle described it, was within six years to be an army in terrible fact—an army created by Nazi Germany instead of by the French, and launched upon France to her destruction." Foreword

Booklist 37:401 My 1 '41

"Lucid and vigorously written little book. Gen. de Gaulle's book will well repay the reading. It is a milestone on the slow and tortuous path of military progress." G. F. Eliot

+ Books p5 My 4 '41 1050w

Reviewed by Julius Kaplan

Boston Transcript p1 Ap 26 '41 400w

"In view of the geographical vulnerability of France as pointed out in the opening chapters of the book, it seems almost incredible that such obvious defects as an incomplete Maginot line should not have stirred action to provide an adequate mobile armored force. In the light of subsequent events this book will stand as an indictment of the French High Command, for failure to grasp its significance. Had they done so, though speculation is perhaps idle, it seems reasonable to assume that France would today be unbeaten." C. W. E. M.

Christian Science Monitor p20 My 1 '41 550w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:872 J1 '41 30w

"A most brilliantly written military analysis. A 'must' book." Géza Schütz

+ Library J 66:304 Ap 1 '41 80w

Reviewed by Alexander Werth

Manchester Guardian p7 D 3 '40 550w

Reviewed by H. S. Ford

Nation 152:477 Ap 19 '41 550w

Reviewed by A. M. Nikolaieff

N Y Times p18 Ap 20 '41 1050w

New Yorker 17:91 Ap 19 '41 60w

"His small book, now for the first time translated into English, reveals Charles de Gaulle not only as a writer of vigor, of brilliance, but also as one of the ablest military leaders now pitted against the 'brain trust' of the German High Command." H. B. Kranz

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 My 31 '41 500w

"It is rather the background of the book than its positive suggestions that will interest the general reader. It is, moreover, for the outline of the armored division, and not the mere division of mechanised warfare, that General de Gaulle deserves praise. The use of armored vehicles ('tanks'), even with aeroplanes, was a development of an English brain, and the first armored divisions were laid down in this country. If the vivid imaginative sweep of this book should, as it will, find wide appreciation here, it must nevertheless be recognised that a colder and more brutally rigorous commendation might have done better service."

+ Spec 165:584 N 29 '40 650w

"The book retains its value to an extraordinary degree, though it was written in circumstances wholly different from the present and has in no sense been brought up to date. That is indeed the test of General De Gaulle's brilliant intellect. There have been many prophecies about 'the next war'; some of them have proved true in part, only to be utterly belied by events in other respects. In spirit and in detail this work has proved an only too accurate prophecy. But it is the enemies of France who have taken advantage of a work written for France and have brought France to defeat largely by methods advocated in it. . . This is a brilliant little book by a first-class thinker."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p563 N 9 '40 600w

"Charles de Gaulle is a soldier and a stylist. The civilian may feel somewhat skeptical of his statement that 'there has been no illustrious captain who did not possess taste and a feeling for the heritage of the human mind,' yet he, on his part, has certainly proved the truth of the assumption. He combines Latin clarity with Latin grace, and apart from the military matters there are some pages in his book on national temperaments—the peculiar weaknesses and proficiencies of Frenchmen and Germans—which are on a level with the great French historians." Kurt Lachmann

+ Yale R n s 31:198 autumn '41 900w

GAUS, JOHN MERRIMAN, and WOLCOTT, LEON O. Public administration and the United States Department of agriculture; with a chapter by Verne B. Lewis. 534p il $4.50 Public administration

630.61 U.S. Agriculture, Department of. Agricultural administration—U.S. 41-51670

"Based on a study made for the Committee on Public Administration of the Social Science Research Council, this volume describes the evolution, activities, and functioning of the Department of Agriculture as those of a federal agency which represents 'the association of science and government' and whose responsibilities involve collaboration with state and local governments." J Home Econ

"Those individuals who have been closely identified with the Department of Agriculture and its development in recent years may complain that the book does not give them much new knowledge. This observation is likely to be forthcoming from some agricultural economists. Nevertheless, most of these persons do not know the historical sequences through which the Department's policies evolved and how the need for reorganization and integration arose repeatedly. Those who are somewhat farther removed from the affairs of agriculture will find the book basic to any appraisal of the Department of Agriculture they may wish to make. It is always easy to ask for more and this is also the case here. The reviewer can not help wishing that Professors Gaus and Wolcott had given, out of their rich experiences as students of government and out of their first-hand knowledge of the affairs of the Department, more space to a critical appraisal of how it does its many jobs—evaluations which would suggest the nature of the reorientation, both in organization and in programs which appear to be needed. One feels that the book stops a few steps short of having completed this task." T. W. Schultz

+ — Am Econ R 31:387 Je '41 650w

"The authors have a sympathetic understanding of the position of leadership which the department has been forced to take in the rapidly changing economic and technological situation, but one has the feeling that a more critical attitude toward the implications of the present tendencies would be helpful to those who are concerned with the intricate problems of adjustment involving national, state, and local administrations, as well as farmers' organizations." Dwight Sanderson

+ — Am J Soc 47:251 S '41 330w

Reviewed by L. M. Short

Am Pol Sci R 35:556 Je '41 900w

"No student of public administration can afford not to read this book. It will profit him as to both content and method. Likewise, it is required reading for anyone interested in agriculture or in the Federal Government. It is a first-rate piece of work, of which the authors and the Committee on Public Administration of the Social Science Research Council may well be proud." Harvey Pinney

+ Ann Am Acad 215:229 My '41 750w

Booklist 37:288 Mr 1 '41

J Home Econ 33:265 Ap '41 80w

GAUVREAU, EMILE HENRY. My last million readers. 488p $3 Dutton

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 41-17181

"The author has had a journalistic career full of dramatic experiences and unusual contrasts. Having served the highly respectable Hartford Courant in a prominent position, he suddenly turned to a very different type of newspaper, and became instrumental in launching Macfadden's Evening Graphic. Later he edited the Daily Mirror. He has many exciting stories to tell about the papers he worked for and the men he came in contact with." Library J

GAUVREAU, E. H.—Continued

Booklist 38:79 N 1 '41

"Here, whatever else may be said of it, is a whale of a document—absorbing, funny, and at times revolting." Stanley Walker
 + — Books p7 S 28 '41 1550w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse
 Commonweal 35:201 D 12 '41 180w

"A well-written, entertaining book, useful in larger public libraries and in academic institutions offering courses in journalism. Not needed in smaller public or college libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 66:730 S 1 '41 90w

"Gauvreau is a man of perception and humor, and he has a knack for telling a good story. His memory is crammed with incidents and famous names. He is a critic who throughout his years of tabloidism looked disapprovingly over his own and his bosses' shoulders. Such ingredients can make an exciting and absorbing book, and this is it. I know of few more readable journalistic autobiographies devoted to the domestic scene." Albert Horlings
 + New Repub 105:675 N 17 '41 1000w

"The general ideas expressed in this book are vague—rather like a cloud floating above the real story. And the conduct of the teller, as here recorded, often completely contradicts those ideas. Yet this is, in many ways, a valuable book, and it is almost always an amusing one, a crowded pageant with many scenes that will be quoted so long as histories of the Twenties in New York are written. The drums, the ragtime noise, the jungle music of those years echo clearly here." Robert Van Gelder

+ — N Y Times p10 S 28 '41 2000w

Reviewed by H. P. Stokes
 Sat R of Lit 24:9 O 11 '41 800w
 Spring'd Republican p7e S 28 '41 480w
 Wis Lib Bul 37:177 N '41

GAYN, MARK J. The fight for the Pacific. 378p maps $3.50 Morrow

950 Eastern question (Far East). Pacific ocean. World politics. Japan—Foreign relations (W) 41-51803

Writing early in 1941 the author reviews the history of the last ten years in the Far East, both in its political and military aspects and its relationship to the development of the foreign policy of the United States. The author has lived most of his life in the Far East and has been connected with various news agencies and newspapers in China. Index.

"Well organized and free from unnecessary repetition, the story moves at a lively pace; yet the generalizations seldom go beyond the evidence, and the few errors that have been noted relate to comparatively unimportant details." G. N. Steiger

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1209 D '41 300w
 Booklist 37:488 Je 15 '41

"There is less reflection on meanings here than there is technical skill in assembling detail. In that task the author is generally quite competent, though he occasionally falls into the error of the reportage historian who relies upon newspaper clippings for source materials. . . . But Mr. Gayn contributes to the literature on his subject a readable chronological account of the daily events which are gradually broadening the catastrophe, and shows that an orderly retelling of those events can possess the dramatic quality of a narrative." Edgar Snow

+ — Books p3 Je 8 '41 950w

Discussion by the author and Edgar Snow
 Books p12 Ag 17 '41 480w

"While the book is valuable primarily for its exhaustive and generally well-informed study of the strategic situation in the Orient there are characterizations of the personalities who are prominent in that part of the world (the Filipino leader, Manuel Quezon, for instance, is hit off as 'a compound of Hollywood star and Tammany boss') and the diplomatic angle is not overlooked."

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 7 '41 500w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
 Foreign Affairs 20:205 O '41 20w

Reviewed by A. B. Lindsay
 Library J 66:399 My 1 '41 120w
 Living Age 360:492 Jl '41 700w
 Manchester Guardian p3 S 9 '41 300w

"The book is a veritable encyclopedia. . . . As a handbook it is probably unexcelled, but it has the weaknesses of a handbook. Because it covers such a vast area its treatment of particular aspects of the situation is necessarily rather superficial. Although reasonably accurate on the whole, it is marred by numerous minor errors. Yet it deserves to be widely read because it brings together more general information than any other recent book on the Far East." M. S. Stewart

+ — Nation 152:702 Je 14 '41 130w

"Mr. Gayn has a brisk, galloping style which is effective for quick reading but sometimes manages to gallop over points of questionable fact. He wants to generalize in order to get on with his argument and sometimes the generalizations are too pat." Nathaniel Peffer

New Repub 105:124 Jl 28 '41 270w

"Mr. Gayn's military facts are not as generally unimpeachable as are Captain Puleston's and his analysis of the strategic position in the Pacific seems to me to be too pessimistic, just as Captain Puleston's seems a shade too optimistic. But the value of Mr. Gayn's book—and it is a very considerable value, indeed—lies more in the light it casts upon the personalities engaged in the great drama of the Pacific and in the evaluation of the great forces—political, economic, psychological and military—that are locked in struggle there. It is a painstaking job which displays on every page the author's thorough knowledge of the East and it is a book which will add very considerably to Mr. Gayn's stature as reporter and analyst of Pacific affairs." H. W. Baldwin

+ — N Y Times p3 Je 8 '41 480w

"Mark Gayn's book is good reading. The scope is ambitious, but it is written with gusto, moves rapidly, and has a sound structural unity and an orderly progression of ideas. . . . In spite of his analytical method, the book cannot really be called objective. Mr. Gayn has lived in the Asiatic countries and his writing reflects his own personal judgments and his own personal reaction to the problems as he has seen them. . . . It would be going much too far to assert that Mr. Gayn distorts his facts to prove a point, but there can be no gainsaying that he arranges them." R. A. Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 24:12 My 31 '41 500w
 Times [London] Lit Sup p415 Ag 30 '41 700w

Wis Lib Bul 37:137 Jl '41

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
 Yale R n s 31:423 winter '42 400w

GEIST, ROLAND C. Bicycling as a hobby. 163p il maps $2 Harper

796.6 Cycling (W) 40-30805

Chapters on the recently revived sport of bicycling. Partial contents: How to select a bicycle; The adjustment, care, and repair of your bicycle; What to wear for cycling; How to ride a bicycle; How to organize a cycling club; Where to ride in the United States; Preparing for racing; The rules of safe riding;

First aid for cyclists; The evolution of the bicycle; Partial list of bicycle clubs in the United States. Index.

Booklist 37:86 N 1 '40

Pratt p22 spring '41

Wis Lib Bul 37:31 F '41

GELLHORN, MARTHA ELLIS (MRS ERNEST HEMINGWAY). The heart of another. 267p $2.50 Scribner

(W) 41-21540

Nine short stories and sketches about people in Spain, France, and Finland in the early years of the present World war.

Booklist 38:96 N 15 '41

"This collection of tales and sketches shows a marked difference in Martha Gellhorn's writing, a maturity and direction which owe not a little to the Hemingway influence. There is nothing derogatory in this statement; it would be strange indeed if two writing people emotionally and intellectually drawn to each other did not consciously and subconsciously influence each other's work. It is because of this, undoubtedly, that one is caught at times in sudden recognition of a situation, a point of view, a method of expression. These are pure Hemingway, which is to say they are romantic under a surface of hardness, they are bitter with disenchantment, they are frank with physical and functional details." Rose Feld

+ Books p2 N 2 '41 1100w

"Written in journalistic style, which is not always convincing, although there are a few well-done passages. There is usually an American woman journalist or writer featured in each episode, which makes the reader wonder if some of the incidents are the author's own experiences. This is not a 'must book' for libraries and will not be generally popular." Margaret Winning

Library J 66:841 O 1 '41 80w

"It is good stuff as it stands. If it had been pulled into some shape, tightened all over and made to run on one track, it would have been very fine." Otis Ferguson

+ — New Repub 105:626 N 10 '41 420w

"Miss Gellhorn, who is a keen observer and a good reporter, rarely fails in putting over whatever she wants to say. Her writing is honest, convincing, and in 'Luigi's House' and 'Portrait of a Lady' it is even inspired. However, except for these two stories, one can't get rid of that uncomfortable and somewhat embarrassing feeling to be shown across the war on a sight-seeing bus." Marianne Hauser

+ — N Y Times p20 N 2 '41 700w

"Miss Gellhorn is a fine writer who knows how to pick out the significant act or gesture, and these stories are ironical, intelligent, and affecting, if a little dry and depressed in tone. Perhaps Miss Gellhorn has spent too much time in war-torn countries; perhaps, also, she has read too carefully the works of Mr. Hemingway—an amiable trait in a wife but dangerous for a writer of fiction."

+ New Yorker 17:89 N 1 '41 100w

"Miss Gellhorn's nine stories have varied locale: Corsica, Cuba, the civil war in Spain, Germany, the Riviera, Paris, and Finland. They take place in the midst of dramatic happenings and the materials were gathered from personal experience and travel; but they are all minor affairs that never reach the heart of any situation, they are surface designs thinly traced, lines without mass or movement, as in the flat unemotional school of modernistic painting and thinking." Nym Wales

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:11 N 15 '41 800w

"It is almost inevitable that readers who know that Martha Gellhorn is the wife of Ernest Hemingway should look for 'influences' of his work on hers. In 'The Heart of Another' there are indeed many resemblances in style and technic to 'For Whom the Bell Tolls.' But those who recall gratefully the strength and clarity of Miss Gellhorn's 'A Stricken Field' have no desire or need to justify her art by or through her marriage to one of the great contemporary stylists. . . Miss Gellhorn needs no other recommendation beyond her own talents. She may be accused of being over-journalistic in style. If that is in any sense true, it may well be that the chaotic world with which she deals demands of writers just the unelaborated and disciplined technic which is peculiarly hers."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 26 '41 240w

"She has heart, and substance, and all one can wish for her is to be left free to write, and to lose her pronounced, but not incurable Hemingway accent. A good bit of whose own accent, by the way, stems from Sherwood Anderson." Robert Littell

+ Yale R n s 31:x winter '42 140w

GELLHORN, WALTER. Administrative law, cases and comments. 1007p $6 Foundation press

350 Administrative law 40-10382

On the assumption that it is not possible in a course in administrative law to consider in detail either the procedure or the decisions of all the administrative agencies, Mr. Gellhorn has confined his selection of cases and comments to the legal issues presented by (1) the separation of powers, (2) administrative procedure, (3) the methods provided for the relief of aggrieved persons against administrative action, and (4) the potential scope of judicial review." Am Pol Sci R

"Although one may quarrel with Mr. Gellhorn concerning the organization and arrangement of his materials, as one may quarrel with any compiler, for that matter, the excellence of a case-book must stand or fall on the general quality of its materials and the discrimination manifested by the editor in selecting and compiling them. In this respect, Mr. Gellhorn has exercised very good judgment; and he has provided a thoroughly adequate text for courses in administrative law. The principal merit of the book, indeed, is the inclusion of some of the best literature on administrative law from the law reviews and other sources." R. J. Harris

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:169 F '41 250w

Reviewed by L. L. Jaffe

Harvard Law R 54:367 D '40 2500w

Reviewed by J. H. Spingarn

Survey G 30:409 J1 '41 130w

"The criticisms herein made are without benefit of teaching experience with the book. Perhaps they will disappear when that time comes. In any event, they must not serve to obscure my conviction that this is a brilliant book and one that deserves high praise." B. P. McAllister

+ — Yale Law J 50:184 N '40 1300w

GELLHORN, WALTER. Federal administrative proceedings. 150p $2 Johns Hopkins press

353 Administrative law. U.S.—Executive departments. U.S.—Politics and government 41-16109

"This small volume consists of four lectures delivered at Johns Hopkins University in May 1941. Taken together, they afford a . . . discussion of the lively issues concerning administrative rule making and adjudication in the Federal Government. The author draws liberally from the special studies conducted for the Attorney-General's Committee on Administrative Procedure (the Acheson Committee), of which he was the director." Ann Am Acad

"In view of the confusing nature of the report of the Attorney-General's Committee, this little volume is a refreshing means of giving us some of the findings and analysis of the able staff which worked for that committee. The chief objection to it is its brevity." G. C. S. Benson

Am Pol Sci R 35:1197 D '41 280w

GELLHORN, WALTER—Continued

Reviewed by J. P. Harris
+ Ann Am Acad 218:219 N '41 900w
Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:380 Ja '42 10w
Reviewed by J. P. Horlacher
Social Studies 32:332 N '41 70w

GERARD, FRANCIS. The prince of paradise.
319p map $2 Dutton [7s 6d; 3s 6d Hutchinson]

40-35537

Detective story.

"This is picturesque no end, a really impressive bout of romance, extravagant, astounding, rather plush, but an excellent buy for local color fans." Will Cuppy
+ Books p15 Ja 19 '41 120w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Ja 11 '41 30w

"The story of Sir John Meredith's pursuit of the anachronistic figure has thrills galore, but it is so thickly over-laid with local color and legend that the narrative is somewhat obscured. Another fault is that there are too many characters, for Sir John is not alone in his quest. Several other gallant Englishmen, who at home would be wearing old school ties, are cooperating with him and wandering about the Arabian desert in various disguises.
The reading of this book requires more patience than most mystery fans have at their command." Isaac Anderson

— + N Y Times p20 Ja 12 '41 240w

"Good thriller."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:18 F 1 '41 40w

GERE, FRANCES KENT. Boy of Babylon; pictures by [the author]. 118p $2 Longmans

41-17549

Pictures the life in ancient Babylon and in Egypt thru the adventures of the boy Rimmani, son of a Babylonian merchant who was commissioned to buy a rare blue stone, lapis lazuli, for the King of Egypt. For boys and girls nine to twelve.

Booklist 38:116 D 1 '41

"Thorough research has assured the authenticity of the lovely drawings accompanying the story of Rimmani's adventures as he carried the beautiful blue stone to the King of Egypt."
A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:465 N '41 60w

"The story should hold interest for the reader nine to eleven, and would be helpful supplementary reading in a study of the period.
Attractively illustrated in black and white by the author." A. D. Martin

+ Library J 66:846 O 1 '41 110w

"The life of ancient Babylon is sympathetically described by an artist and student who has both knowledge of the period and imaginative feeling. . . The drawings, detailed and accurate, have strength as well as a delicate beauty. The book is the more welcome since there are few stories using ancient Babylon as a background." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p12 S 28 '41 320w

"Good storytelling." Raymond Holden

+ Sat R of Lit 24:9 N 8 '41 20w

Social Studies 32:380 D '41 10w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 26 '41 60w

GERLING, C. J., pseud. The complete weight reducer. 246p $3 Harvest

616.39 Corpulence. Diet 41-14946

"This expert believes that two essentials go together in any reducing program; cutting down calories and burning more energy through exercise. He exposes much quackery, including reducing medicines, fad diets, beauty salons, exercise machines and health farms, and declares that they are at best an unwarranted extravagance, and at worst a menace to health. Better results, on the average, he holds, can be obtained privately through intelligent diet and simple exercise. The subject matter is conveniently arranged in alphabetical order, according to topic, with cross-references." Springf'd Republican

School & Society 54:96 Ag 9 '41 10w

"Common sense is the keynote of C. J.
Gerling's new handbook for those struggling against overweight. The book has been written to benefit a group which the author believes is being greatly exploited."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 Ag 14 '41
130w

GERMAN, WILLIAM MCKEE. Doctors anonymous; the story of laboratory medicine; with an introd. by Paul de Kruif. 300p $2.75 Duell 616 Pathology. Diagnosis (W) 41-15277

Popularly written account of the work of the medical pathologist. The author is a chemist, doctor, and clinical pathologist, and his book is based on twenty years' experience.
Partial contents: Fifty vital years: laboratory medicine comes of age; Blood will tell: chemistry finds the answers; Physiology run riot:
the pathologist sees cancer; Microbes in armor:
the pathologist sees tuberculosis and pneumonia; The sun god's curse: the pathologist sees syphilis; Born to live: the pathologist sees pregnancy. Index.

Booklist 38:4 S '41

"The book is well written and largely free from the fifty-dollar words which serve only to confuse the lay reader. It should be widely read and might well be required reading for all premedical and medically minded students." Hugh Cabot, M.D.

+ Books p12 S 14 '41 700w

"The book, done somewhat in the style of De Kruif's Microbe Hunters, will appeal to young people and adults interested in medical laboratory work and those wishing vocational information. The language is no more technical than required to describe this highly specialized work." E. D. Hart

+ Library J 66:668 Ag '41 90w

"A book which combines sound medical knowledge with a real gift for exciting narrative. The historical chapters, though brief, are excellent, and there is much vigorous criticism of the inadequate attention paid to pathology."

+ New Repub 105:518 O 20 '41 100w
N Y Times p5 O 19 '41 600w

"A story told by a writer of great ability.
It is not only Dr. German's enthusiasm for his subject; he employs clarity, vividness, and low-keyed power that would make a professional writer proud." Thus writes Paul de Kruif in the introduction. . . There are many individual cases given here, that make exciting reading. Some had happy endings; others were tragic mistakes. All give point to the phenomenal place these unknown specialists hold in the fight to preserve human life."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:3 S '41 480w

Reviewed by I. S. Wile, M.D.

Survey G 30:712 D '41 240w

GESELL, ARNOLD LUCIUS. Wolf child and human child. 107p il $2 Harper

136.764 Kamala, the wolf girl, 1912?-1929.
Children, Wild. Wolves 41-5232

Study based on a diary about the capture and education of two children found in a wolf den in Bengal, India. An Indian minister found the children and took them to the orphanage with which he was connected. The children received good care, but the younger one did not live long. The older, whom they named Kamala, lived nine years, in which time she learned to put off her wolf ways and act like a human being.

"The biography is interesting because of its mythlike qualities, and because the author has used the story as a vehicle for setting forth in simple terms the facts of growth of the healthy infant and young child which heretofore he has published in technical treatise." M. J. E. Senn

+ Am J Pub Health 31:646 Je '41 110w

"A completely fascinating investigation. . . Every one who wants to know 'why we behave like human beings' will find this interpretation of an extraordinary life completely absorbing. Nothing like this has ever been at once so carefully documented and so revealing, but long ago the ancients had heard of Romulus." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p25 My 11 '41 900w

"Eventually Dr. Gesell's researches may lead him to the oldest of all wolf stories, Aesop's tale of the man who said he saw a wolf when he didn't and later discovered that reputation is a high price to pay for notoriety." Bergen Evans

— New Repub 104:734 My 26 '41 900w

"Dr. Gesell tells her story, as a thrilling true narrative along lines previously familiar in fiction and mythology; and then he discusses the conclusions to be drawn from it. Photographs of Kamala at various stages of her progress add their own interest to a remarkable book."

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 30 '41 550w

Reviewed by Goodwin Watson

Sat R of Lit 24:15 Jl 19 '41 650w

Scientific Bk Club R 12:3 Ap '41 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p659 D 27 '41 240w

GESSLER, CLIFFORD, FRANKLIN. Pattern of Mexico; il. by E. H. Suydam. 442p $5 Appleton-Century

917.2 Mexico—Description and travel

41-18979

"Mr. Gessler has visited almost every part of Mexico, and has given in this book an account of what he saw and heard. About two-thirds of the book is an unpretentious record of travel experiences, with few references to the political and economic problems of modern Mexico. [The author] is interested in individuals rather than in movements and causes, in scenery rather than in social organization, and in legends and anecdotes rather than in history." (Books) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:93 N 15 '41

"Mr. Gessler describes people and places vividly, and readers will acquire from his book a clearer impression of the quality of life in Mexico than from many more ambitious accounts." H. B. Parkes

+ Books p24 O 26 '41 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '41

"In the spate of books on Mexico this may safely be omitted by the smaller library, especially if it has such recent titles as Sombreros Are Becoming, by Nancy Johnstone, the latest edition of Your Mexican Holiday, by Anita Brenner, Reportage on Mexico, by Virginia Prewett, and for a conservative Roman Catholic point of view, Evelyn Waugh's Mexico: An Object Lesson. Larger libraries will include Gessler owing to the popularity of the author's earlier book, Road My Body Goes." G. E. Brown

Library J 66:668 Ag '41 120w

"Mr. Gessler is most successful when he writes from personal observation. He is less effective when he seeks to generalize, as in his final chapters, about political or economic conditions." R. L. Martin

+ — N Y Times p8 Ja 11 '42 550w

"Publishers have rained down on the heads of an evidently unsatiated public such a storm of books about Mexico that the reader confronted by a new one is likely to dismiss it as just another drop in the torrent, or the final, satisfactory, and complete splash. Mr. Gessler's is neither. It is, however, a most agreeable account of one man's visit to Mexico, and his sensitive feeling for the people and the place." J. D. Hart

+ Sat R of Lit 24:19 N 1 '41 400w

Wis Lib Bul 37:176 N '41

GESSNER, ROBERT. Here is my home. 433p $2.75 Alliance bk.

41-27718

The chief character is Bernard Straus, a Jewish immigrant, who had expected to find the streets of New York paved with gold, but had sense enough to go to the middle west when he discovered his mistake. He joined his mother in managing a dry goods store in Chippewa City, in the section where lumber was king, and as the years went by, grew into a great and honored citizen. His wife, Mary, daughter of the most hostile power in Chippewa City, was a Christian, but a broadminded and thoroly fine woman, who defied her father to live her own life with her much loved husband and their children. The climax of the book comes when Bernard is seized by the Klan. The time is the end of the last century.

"Robert Gessner has written a strong and deeply stirring novel. If there is melodrama in one or two scenes, there is also passion and true sentiment in the greater part of the story. Though this is no propaganda tract, it is evident what Gessner is pleading for—tolerance and mutual understanding between groups, which alone can be the real basis of a nation's unity." Milton Hindus

+ Books p10 N 16 '41 550w

"Much in this book is weak or outright bad, and much in it is magnificent. You get the feel of the country, the atmosphere of the town and the smell of the woods. It is like a huge mural, painted firmly but not at all modernistically on a solid wall in clear outlines and colors. . . . At the end you don't feel so much as if you had read a novel about Bernard. You much rather feel that you have read the mysterious, astonishing story of an American town, a town which Gessner has made so excitingly real, you think you have lived in it for a long time." Marianne Hausel

+ — N Y Times p20 N 9 '41 650w

"Both Bernard and Mary are indefinitely drawn and lack vitality. Some minor characters are more lifelike. Old Rachel the Jewish matriarch, Pete Goodman the domineering lumber baron, the hard-working lumberjacks, all fit well into the pattern of the town's development. The spirit of the times is well depicted. The short-sighted greed of wasteful timber barons, and of parasites who fleece the lumberjacks, as well as activities of the Ku Klux Klan are described in lively detail."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e N 23 '41 180w

GEYER, HAROLD C. All men have loved thee; a song of France; il. by the author. [197p] $3.75 Smith, Richard R.

914.4 France—Civilization. France—Politics and government 41-24141

"[This] is a book of letters and etchings, poems and pen-and-ink drawings, adaptations of newspaper pages reproduced like translated facsimiles, a few cartoons. The first letter records an art student's happy discovery of an attic room with a view over all Paris, in September, 1933. The last newspaper headlines tell of the assassination of Dollfuss, in July, 1934." N Y Times

"It is hard to put the volume out of your hand, harder still to dismiss it from your mind." Felizia Seyd

+ Books p14 D 14 '41 550w

"To those who would study events of the past on their way to form the present, here is an illustrated textbook of clear memory; it is also an unconscious message from those who did not heed the warning to those who still can." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p8 N 23 '41 950w

GHIRARDELLI, YNEZ. The artist, H. Daumier: interpreter of history. 1td ed 78p 20 pl $15 Grabhorn

B or 92 Daumier, Honoré Victorin 41-1199

"Miss Ynez Ghirardelli has written of Daumier's life and work, and of the significance of the cartoons [here reproduced], ten of which preceded and ten followed the Revolution of 1848. Political cartoons require, for their full understanding, an intimate knowledge of current politics; when one considers the intricacies of French politics, all the light which can be shed in introductory text is welcome. But in fact these lithographs do not depend for their value on their topical significance. They are examples of the work of a very competent French draftsman, one of the great delineators of nineteenth-century life." Sat R of Lit

"Miss Ghirardelli is a worthy newcomer to the throng of those who have commemorated the master. I must add that beautiful form has been given to her brief book, perfect paper and typography, supplied with admirably made plates." Royal Cortissoz

+ Books p6 Mr 23 '41 700w

Reviewed by C. P. Rollins

Sat R of Lit 23:15 Mr 1 '41 330w

GIBBINGS, ROBERT. Sweet Thames run softly. 230p il $2.50 Dutton [12s 6d Dent]

914.22 Thames river 41-9313

An anecdotal account of a leisurely trip along the Thames river from Lechlade to London. Illustrated with engravings by the author.

"Drifting with [the author], the most agitated reader begins to feel a half-forgotten sensation of happiness. Perhaps it is only in days of strain that moments of perfect relaxation can be truly valued. They are here, in a beautifully printed book."

+ Books p13 Ag 31 '41 270w

"Mr. Gibbings has written and illustrated a delightful book. The fifty woodcuts, strong, fresh and full of charm, serve a text which portrays that peaceful, homely and humorous England loved and understood perhaps only by Englishmen but admired by all people who seek the rest and the beauty of quiet places."

+ Cath World 154:254 N '41 230w

"This book, which Mr. Gibbings has written only a trifle less felicitously than he has illustrated it, has genuine depths as well as sensitive observations of nature and the recordings of the habits of birds and fish and animals." M. W.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 26 '41 500w

"Written in 'these days when hell bursts upon our world like boiling lava from a volcano,' this slender book attains a philosophic stature to match its literary perfection. Evocative engravings by the author." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 66:519 Je 1 '41 110w

"Steeped in personality, yet quite without pose, it is a very uncommon, vital, and charming book." G. T.

+ Manchester Guardian p8 D 6 '40 220w

Reviewed by Katherine Woods

N Y Times p3 Jl 6 '41 460w

"Both witty and humorous, and so entrancingly digressive that it may even remind you of Laurence Sterne's classic ramblings. Distinguished wood engravings."

+ New Yorker 17:63 Je 28 '41 120w

"Mr. Gibbings has a nice humor and a broadly based philosophy, feels the unity of all living things and rejoices that the non-human world is as yet unaffected by the human folly of war. His landscapes, whether in words or woodcuts, have not only charm but strength of line, which reveals his very accurate observation. Altogether this is a highly agreeable if discursive and rather unfocused book. Edmund Spenser would be pleased, I think, to know that his 'Prothalamion' had provided its title." Phyllis Bentley

+ Sat R of Lit 24:12 Je 28 '41 430w

Scientific Bk Club R 12:3 Jl '41 330w

"The rather unbearable ramblings, mental and physical, of an artist who explored the Thames in a punt. Hearty, muscular, humorous and naughty."

— Spec 166:156 F 7 '41 60w

Spring'd Republican p8 Je 24 '41 230w

"Mr. Gibbings is definitely not a river-going man, but he has written an attractive book about the Thames. . . History frankly bores Mr. Gibbings; of sport he deals only with fishing and he is not the sort of man to tell you who won the Ladies' Plate or to recall the great races at Henley; but he knows much about birds; he is shrewd about humans when they come his way, and though a professed lover of solitude he is wonderfully companionable and not averse from romantic encounters. But it is for the splendid engravings—50 of them—that the book will be given as a Christmas present and prized by the recipient."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p618 D 7 '40 360w

Wis Lib Bul 37:154 O '41

GIBBS, MRS BLANCHE L., and ADAMS, GEORGIANA. Shirley Clayton, secretary. 278p $2 Dodd

(W) 41-10779

Shirley Clayton, suddenly faced with the prospect of earning her own living, gave up college, went to a secretarial school, and held several smaller positions, before becoming secretary to a congressman at Washington. A thread of romance runs thru the story, which is written for older girls. The authors are both trained secretaries.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 Jl 6 '41 450w

"Older girls will follow with interest the clear and interesting account of this girl's development in her chosen career." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 10 '41 130w

"For libraries that have a demand for career stories in connection with guidance work in junior and lower senior high school grades, this book has a place. Libraries whose feminine clientele merely want another story of a girl of today need not waste much time on the book. It is well done of its kind but not distinguished. Recommended for large libraries which work co-operatively with the school guidance department." M. R. Lucas

Library J 66:679 Ag '41 140w

GIBBS, GEORGE FORT. The sleeper wakes. 221p $2 Appleton-Century

41-7298

Story of the present war, just preceding the evacuation of Dunkirk. An American newspaper woman, resting at a French hotel, has a supernatural warning about the battle, and attempts to deliver the message in time to prevent disaster.

"For all we know, this may please those who are looking for part of the war in the form of fiction, pepped up with love, occultism and a bit of fun here and there." Will Cuppy

Books p14 Ap 27 '41 120w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p20 My 4 '41 220w

GIBBS, SIR PHILIP HAMILTON. The amazing summer. 305p $2.50 Doubleday [8s 6d Hutchinson]

(W) 41-14432

Guy Moreton, a young English airman, is the hero of this novel about the first months of the war. When his plane crashes in France, Guy is befriended by a French officer, and later is able to repay the kindness in his own home in England.

"The material of 'The Amazing Summer' is both familiar and sympathetic, and all of its characters go through experiences which are world news. It is curious, therefore, that the novel largely fails to catch one's interest. For one reason it is peopled with recognizable and charming types, but they have no dimensions and when they or the author indulge in comment on the fall of France or the Battle of Britain their remarks seem only a meaningless rehash of a hundred familiar editorials. The whole volume hovers uncomfortably between journalism and fiction, and as fiction it seems bloodless and superficial." Iris Barry

— + Books p8 Ag 31 '41 400w

Cath World 154:123 O '41 230w

Christian Science Monitor p10 S 20 '41 550w

"One finds much labored writing, with the conversation especially forced and stilted. Dramatic scenes are sometimes damaged by melodramatic phrases; the reader could better visualize that amazing summer through more inference. In spite of these drawbacks the author has written a good story and readable, in a style refreshing for its dignity." G. E. S. Jr.

— + Churchman 156:34 O 1 '41 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '41

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 18 '41 60w

"A beautiful book; with an intermezzo on cockney 'inheritance' that may well find a place among outstanding historical writings." J. S. Southron

— + N Y Times p6 Ag 31 '41 750w

"The story is thrilling enough to be part of what used to be called 'historical romances,' stories in which people took their lives in their hands and made sensational escapes, but as Sir Philip shows, these romances are all part of everyday life to-day and they affect not only flying officers but people living in their homes, running their businesses. There is a throbbing love of his country on every page of Sir Philip's book, but it is coupled with a passion for justice to the enemy and a burning faith in the ultimate regeneration of Europe."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p163 Ap 5 '41 110w

GIBBS, SIR PHILIP HAMILTON. Sons of the others. 311p $2.50 Doubleday [8s 6d Hutchinson]

(W) 41-304

A novel of the second European war, beginning with the declaration of war in September and ending with the collapse of France and the evacuation at Dunkirk.

Booklist 37:241 F 1 '41

"There is little here that you have not seen as vividly, or even more vividly, recounted in the press, but there is an advantage in having the sequence intelligently pieced together and put between covers, along with a story which, though quite unimportant, is not at all difficult to take." F. H. Bullock

— + Books p8 Ja 12 '41 440w

"To the heroes at Dunkirk belongs everlasting homage; to Sir Philip honor for recording Dunkirk and its significance for posterity." Olga Owens

— + Boston Transcript p1 Ja 11 '41 400w

Christian Science Monitor p11 F 8 '41 600w

"Like most of the novels of Sir Philip Gibbs, 'Sons of the Others,' is all very topical and, it must be added, all very obvious. When it touches critically upon questions of policy or strategy it suffers, inevitably, from the effect of wisdom after the event, but it does give a clear and coherent account of recent history. Its great merit is its enthusiastic vindication of contemporary youth, as exemplified by a group of interesting characters, English and French." Charles Marriott

— + Manchester Guardian p7 O 4 '40 90w

"This novel inevitably gives the impression of a novelized newsreel rather than of a work of lasting art; but the battle scenes are vividly portrayed, and the events, which were headlines a few months ago, naturally carry a gruesome interest of their own."

— + Nation 152:81 Ja 18 '41 60w

Reviewed by John Mair

New Statesman & Nation 20:362 O 12 '40 100w

"Reading this novel by an English patriot, written at a moment when some distortion might so easily be forgiven, one cannot but be impressed by its undeviating honesty. Here is no effort to play up the English at the expense of the French, but rather the frank admiration of a representative Englishman for France's heroism and an understanding that one of the major causes of all the defeats in the war must be attributed to failures of political leadership in both nations." Drake de Kay

— + N Y Times p23 Ja 12 '41 750w

"Toward the end things speed up, the book becomes moving and dramatic; but this is where Mr. Gibbs is dealing with the German breakthrough and the retreat to Dunkirk. The characters have dropped out or been killed off and he is writing straight reporting. Maybe he ought to stick to that." F. P.

— + Sat R of Lit 23:20 F 1 '41 220w

"Such enormous human convulsions have more reality in newspapers and newsreels than they can ever hope to get as a weakly painted backdrop for the stock characters of a second-rate romance."

— Time 37:78 Ja 13 '41 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p497 S 28 '40 300w

GIBSON, KATHARINE. Nathaniel's witch; with pictures by Vera Bock. 136p $2 Longmans

41-20738

Nathaniel Endicott, an eleven-year-old boy living near Salem in 1785, and his young uncle Martin, are under the domination of a greedy uncle. Nathaniel has the luck to meet a witch and by doing her a service, frees her from her bond. She returns to her true form, that of a beautiful young girl, marries Martin, and Nathaniel himself realizes his ambition to go to sea as cabin boy. For boys and girls of nine to twelve.

"Katharine Gibson's rare talent for making old stories new, Vera Bock's for creating distinctive designs, have been more than once proved in concert: this time they combine upon a story whose elements are old, but whose plot and method is completely new. . . Simple enough for fairy-tale age yet satisfying to adults, or to the delicate adaptation to literature of folk legendry." M. L. Becker

— + Books p11 N 2 '41 280w

"It's a nice idea for a story but Katharine Gibson has made it rather confused. Black Magic and Witches' Coves are grim subjects which Vera Bock has tried to brighten up with her fantastic drawings." E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:375 D '41 140w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '41

"Vera Bock, who has so beautifully illustrated Katharine Gibson's other books, has helped to make this, too, one of distinction." Florence O'Gara

— + Library J 66:951 N 1 '41 150w

"As happy a witch's tale as the most tender-hearted and fanciful could wish. It is told with the proper attention to all the traditional details of that sinister profession, and with the same incomparable combination of eeriness, tenderness and humorous fancy which we expect by right from the author of 'Cinders.'"

GIBSON, KATHARINE—Continued
E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p12 N 23 '41 160w

"Nice escape from homework." G. G. Bates
Sat R of Lit 24:11 N 8 '41 40w
Spring'd Republican p7e N 2 '41 170w

GIBSON, WILLIAM HERBERT. See Webb, W.
L. Concrete design and construction. rev ed

GIEDION, SIGFRIED. Space, time and architecture; the growth of a new tradition. 601p il $5 Harvard univ. press

720.9 Architecture—History. City planning
A41-1329

"In his interpretation of contemporary architecture, the author is both modern and original in approach. To arrive at an understanding of the new cultural tradition, he explores specific events of the past intensively instead of giving a bird's-eye-view. Though America is included in several discussions about a sixth of the book deals definitely with American development." Booklist

Booklist 37:434 My 15 '41

"The book is profusely illustrated with photographs, diagrams, and plans, and has a full index." E. C. S.

Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 21
'41 650w

"Despite its high-kiting title, this book contains a graphic, direct, well-illustrated, and absorbing narrative." Douglas Haskell

+ Nation 153:145 Ag 16 '41 600w

Pratt p4 autumn '41

Times [London] Lit Sup p533 O 25 '41
1000w

GILBERT, ANTHONY, pseud. See Malleson,
L. B.

GILBOY, MRS ELIZABETH (WATERMAN).
Applicants for work relief; a study of Massachusetts families under the FERA and WPA.
273p $3 Harvard univ. press

331.137 Unemployment 40-11091

"Mrs. Gilboy undertakes an evaluation of 'work relief' as a means of providing aid for the needy unemployed and their families. Her evaluation is based upon an analysis of the records of a sample of cases receiving work relief under the Emergency Relief Administration and its successor agency, the Works Progress Administration, in Massachusetts, supplemented by secondary data from a number of special studies in other states and localities. Mrs. Gilboy concludes that work relief—an emergency development of the great depression—should be continued as a regular function of government." Am Econ R

Reviewed by A. E. Geddes

Am Econ R 30:909 D '40 600w

"This book fails to meet expectations raised by its title and yet gives more than it promises. . . The social data supplied must have been extremely limited. This is undoubtedly the reason for the failure of the book to answer many questions which inevitably raise themselves in the mind of the reader. . . It is in her discussions based upon general material that the author furnishes more solid substance. The chapter evaluating work relief is particularly good. That is to say, it is clear and objective as a critique. The book is annotated throughout and well indexed. Appendices not only describe the methods of the author's research but add to the tables in the text." P. D. Flanner

+ — Am Soc R 6:148 F '41 240w

"Miss Gilboy's book is in many respects the most significant study of this subject to date. Its strength lies in its unquestioned impartiality and the corroboration it affords to the conclusions reached in previous studies. . . It is in her discussions based upon general material that the author furnishes solid substance. The chapter evaluating work relief is particularly good. That is to say, it is clear and objective as a critique. The book is annotated throughout and well indexed. Appendices not only describe the methods of the author's research but add to the tables in the text." P. D. Flanner

+ J Pol Econ 49:777 O '41 240w

"The volume deserves the close study of those who would intelligently prepare for a new post-war depression. As the author declares (p. 233), a 'more coordinated, more flexible, and better planned system' than E.R.A. or W.P.A. would be highly desirable." B. C. Shafer

+ Pol Sci Q 56:477 S '41 330w

GILES, GUY ELWYN. 3 died variously. 271p
$2 Reynal

Detective story.

41-24076

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p32 N 30 '41 130w

"The business of Brice Kent, private investigator, is not conducted on a high moral plane. Kent himself takes far too much time out for drinking and other questionable activities, and his language is not of the sort to which your maiden aunt was accustomed in her younger days, although by now she has probably heard more than enough of it. Nevertheless, when Kent once gets started on an investigation he is not easily stopped." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p20 N 23 '41 240w

"Dialog peppery and action incessant. Solution unusual and exceptionally clever. Sleuth and henchmen stoop to anything and stop at nothing. Prize tough 'un."

Sat R of Lit 24:24 N 22 '41 40w

GILES, HARRY H. Teacher-pupil planning.
395p $2 Harper

371.3 Self government (in education). Education—U.S. Democracy. Education—Experimental methods 41-10869

"A professor who believes in classroom democracy writes a timely book on teacher-pupil cooperation in the planning of classroom work." Cleveland Open Shelf

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '41

School & Society 53:744 Je 7 '41 20w

"Written with an understanding of the difficulties and the bewilderments which teachers face today as they attempt to train their pupils in the democratic way of life. While the author's philosophy is not unique, the manner in which he presents his theme is interesting and challenging." R. D. Meade

+ School R 49:629 O '41 750w

GILL, ERIC. Autobiography; il. by the author.
300p $3.50 Devin-Adair [12s 6d Cape, J.]

B or 92 Artists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 41-13574

"An unusual autobiography, centering about a man's mental and spiritual life. With no concern for the world of affairs, the author retreated to art and religion in the hope of making a 'cell of good living in the chaos of our world.' Beginning as an architect, he turned soon to stonecutting and the design of alphabets and type, and achieved distinction as artist and craftsman. Of intellectual appeal, with interest for Catholic readers as the story of a convert. Illustrated with the artist's own works." Booklist

Booklist 37:357 Ap 1 '41

Reviewed by G. N. Shuster
Books p4 Ag 3 '41 1100w

"He is frank—very frank—even in this Catholic Book Club edition of his book from which some passages have been deleted. Whoever writes psychography has to put aside inhibitions and bare his soul. Gill, therefore, bared his soul; not, however, as one merely seeking to entertain his readers but as one drawing up a balance sheet of his mind's inner workings and placing it before God, for God's love to purify and redeem, and to turn what might have been occasions for self-condemnation into occasions for thanksgiving." T. C. Petersen

Cath World 153:764 S '41 900w

"The work is a most valuable contribution to the sincere literature of our age; it is the quintessence of the life-work of a rare genius, a great Catholic, and a pathbreaker." Michael Williams

+ Commonweal 34:325 J1 25 '41 750w

Reviewed by Jean Charlot

Commonweal 34:498 S 12 '41 1400w

Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 17 '41 440w

"[This] autobiography is clear, lucid, shining. It has that sort of spring-daybreak quality which was so evident in Gill's physical person: the manly stance, the ruddy, handsome face, the clear blue eyes lit up with joy and eagerness. He was a man to be envied." Richard Church

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:307 Mr 22 '41 1300w

"This exceedingly interesting and unconventional autobiography is in sum the self-portrait of an individual who was artist, rebel, devout seeker after religious truth, passionate hater of all the lust for power and possessions that has belittled or brutalized the individual worth of man." K. W.

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 3 '41 1100w

Reviewed by Christopher Morley

Sat R of Lit 24:5 Ag 16 '41 320w

Reviewed by Graham Greene

Spec 166:39 Ja 10 '41 1050w

"If the test of an autobiography be that it should be interesting irrespective of the reputation of its subject the autobiography of Eric Gill passes the test triumphantly. It would interest a great many people if it were about any Tom, Dick or Harry. This is not because of the intrinsic interest of the events described in it for, as Gill himself says, 'nothing particular has happened to me—except inside my head.' Nor, as the last four words might suggest, does the interest of this autobiography depend mainly upon the quality of the reflections contained in it, though they are those of a remarkable man. It depends simply upon the fact that Gill has succeeded in what he describes as the exceedingly difficult task of putting down in words what he really thought and felt."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p6 Ja 4 '41 2000w

GILL, RICHARD COCHRAN, and HOKE, MRS HELEN L. The story of the other America; ill. by Manuel Rivera Regalado. 56p maps $2 Houghton

980 South America—History—Juvenile literature (W) 41-21926

Pictorial history of South America from the time of its discovery to the present day. For boys and girls over ten.

Booklist 38:116 D 1 '41

"An engaging story of South America, charmingly illustrated." Grace Phelps

+ Books p11 N 2 '41 320w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 D '41

Reviewed by Gertrude Andrus

Library J 66:1049 D 1 '41 140w

"Condensed but reasonably accurate [and] informative." Raymond Holden

+ Sat R of Lit 24:9 N 8 '41 20w

GILL, THOMAS T. Air and gas compression. 181p il $3 Wiley

621.5 Compressed air. Gas, Compressed 41-9528

"Recent researches in the properties of gases, especially in regard to compressibility, critical data, and specific heats, have prompted me to attempt to apply some of the results attained to the solution of the problems of air and gas compression. . . In addition to the theory of compression, this book also contains a chapter on the flow of gas in pipe lines, which is based on the Weymouth equation. A new series of tables is included which greatly reduces the labor required in computing pressure drop in pipe lines. The chapter on the orifice meter serves merely as an introduction to the subject, containing only enough information to enable the reader to use the gas-measurement handbooks published by the meter manufacturers and technical societies." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 37:541 J1 15 '41

"The book will be particularly valuable to the chemical or petroleum engineer who is engaged in work involving the handling of air or gases at elevated pressure. Even design engineers who may be well versed in the fundamentals of the subject will do well to investigate the advances in the art which are described in this volume. . . The terminology employed and the problems selected indicate that the book was written primarily for the practical petroleum engineer, but the subject is so thoroughly covered that the book's usefulness is by no means limited to this industry." R. L. Dodge

+ Chem & Chem Eng N 19:942 Ag 25 '41 390w

GILLIES, MARY DAVIS. Popular home decoration. 320p il pl $2.95 Wise

747 House decoration 40-27862

"Hard and fast rules are refreshingly few and far between, the main concern of the author being to show the amateur home decorator how to decide what effect she wishes to create and how best to achieve it with the minimum of expense. Progress pictures show a room that graduated in some several seasons from mediocrity to distinction, and the descriptions include the cost of each step in the transformation." Books

Booklist 37:213 Ja 15 '41

"The text of this book, and its many illustrations, both in color and black and white, are brimming over with suggestions for the home decorator who must pay careful attention to the problems of dollars and cents as well as those of color harmony, line and balance."

+ Books p15 Ja 19 '41 110w

Pratt p15 spring '41

GILLIGAN, EDMUND. Strangers in The Vly. 261p $2 Scribner

41-19190

A legendary tale of the Rip Van Winkle country in the Catskills. It concerns three dwarfs, exiles from Europe, who have fled to America and seek to hide themselves in the mountains. They are brought to the village called The Vly by a Yankee sailor whom they have befriended but who knows them as "little bundles of wickedness." What influence the simple folk and wild scenery of The Vly had on the little men and what the little men did in return is told in this fantasy.

"Mr. Gilligan set himself a splendid task, fit to command the best in any man. He brings to it devoutness, a passion for the life of the out of doors, especially the Catskills, and a seeing eye. That would seem to be enough. Not quite, apparently. For he fails to achieve his purpose because he lacks or falls short of some of the fundamentals to all creative writing—perspective, balance, a capacity to examine his materials carefully, weigh, select, emphasize." F. H. Bullock

GILLIGAN, EDMUND—Continued

+ — Books p12 O 5 '41 400w

"Mr. Gilligan's limp prose, his own apparent simple faith in the general outlines of his narrative, and his generous offering of alternative versions, equally implausible to an unsympathetic mind, of the more incredible incidents, should disarm any critic. This is a lovely legend, made into a beautiful little novel."

+ Christian Century 58:1339 O 29 '41 180w

"Imaginative and interesting." E. K. S.

+ Churchman 156:18 Ja 1 '42 30w

"Mr. Gilligan does some very fine writing on scenery, the seasons, the abundance of the inn, the night air and what not. But he has very little story to tell: his characters are either as simple as a glass of water or too fantastic for belief or even interest. And it takes him forever in a frenzy of words to get no place much. . . Read for patches of writing, the book has its charm. Its interest as a story about or study of anything is nonexistent."

— + New Repub 105:517 O 20 '41 190w

"Mr. Gilligan writes as if he more than half believed his own story, including the definitely impossible parts—which is the only way, of course, that legends can be created. His novel is embroidered with a wit and mysticism and a vein of innocent hyperbole which can best be described as Hibernian. 'Strangers in The Vly,' in short, is a kind of tale rarely seen in these grim and long-winded days. It belongs on the same shelf with, and somewhere between, old Rip Van Winkle himself and 'The Crock of Gold.'" Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p6 O 5 '41 750w

"Agreeably off the beaten track."

+ New Yorker 17:100 O 11 '41 70w

"This is a charming book with a Chesterton theme and Christopher Morley handling. The story content is slight; it is the virtuosity which makes the book moving." Paul Strong

Sat R of Lit 24:18 N 29 '41 230w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 5 '41 360w

GILLMER, THOMAS CHARLES, and NIETSCH, HERMAN ERICH. Simplified theory of flight. 162p il $2 Van Nostrand

629.1323 Aerodynamics. Airplanes 41-51833

An attempt to present "the various physical laws underlying the flight of heavier-than-air aircraft . . . in a new light." (Pref) Contents: The airfoil and the air's structure; Lift and drag; Characteristics of the airfoil; Plan form of the airfoil; The forces acting on the complete airplane; Control surfaces; The airplane in flight; Stability; Performance. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 37:511 Jl 1 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:35 Jl '41

GILMORE, HARLAN WELCH. The beggar.

252p $2.50 Univ. of N.C. press

362.51 Begging and beggars. Tramps

40-34170

Sociological history of beggars and begging in the United States, in which begging is viewed as a type of human parasitism. "Beginning with a résumé of the history of begging, Mr. Gilmore goes on to an examination of the 'mendicant art' today, and the astonishing variety of tricks and methods which are its media. Then there are the types of begging—stationary, ambulatory and panhandling, for example. Country beggars—hoboes and tramps—are discussed in one chapter; but most of the book is taken up with the urban situation." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

"An excellent analysis is presented of the social distance between the world of the beggar and that of settled society. . . Through the use of illustrative case materials and a lucid style the author gives a vivid picture of the techniques and types of begging, beggars of the open road, urban beggarm, child beggars, the habitat of beggars, social sources of recruits of the begging profession, the practice of alms-giving, and social control of begging." H. J. Locke

+ Am J Soc 47:244 S '41 190w

"One of the shortcomings of this book is the failure of the author to relate begging in the United States to the unemployment problem and to consider the fact that so many of the panhandlers on our streets are really persons temporarily unemployed, or workers recovering from periodical drunks. . . The book is well-written. The contents are informing. The materials are well-organized. There is an excellent bibliography. . . This is all to the good. We have today no better book than this on the subject." Nels Anderson

+ — Am Soc R 6:134 F '41 250w

"As reading, this book is sometimes amusing, often grim, sometimes pathetic and frequently suggestive. It is always informative."

+ N Y Times p19 Ag 25 '40 440w

"A book which because of its poised and lucid style should attract considerable popular as well as professional interest. . . In spite of a final chapter in which widespread unemployment and other modern problems are noted as affecting the problem, the book as a whole gives an oddly timeless effect, as though a series of interesting phenomena were being viewed through the wrong end of a telescope or some other place just a little remote from Hooverville and the bread line. Perhaps this is because a number of Dr. Gilmore's admittedly interesting anecdotes are derived from 19th and early 20th century material. . . This quiet and urbane little volume deserves a place on the shelves of all who love the literature of the rogue and find some vicarious escape in reading about him." L. C. Eiseley

+ — Social Forces 20:121 O '41 410w

Reviewed by P. E. Ryan

Survey 77:100 Mr '41 230w

GILMORE, HORACE HERMAN. How to build a model navy; il. by [the author] with official U.S. navy photographs. 225p $2.50 Dodd

623.8 Ship models. U.S.—Navy (W) 41-18364

Plans and instructions for building models of actual United States warships. Text and designs are so simplified as to be suitable for boys of eight to twelve.

Booklist 38:116 D 1 '41

Reviewed by Claire Nolte

Library J 66:908 O 15 '41 150w

New Yorker 17:147 D 6 '41 20w

GILMORE, MYRON PIPER. Argument from Roman law in political thought, 1200-1600. 148p $2 Harvard univ. press

320.9 Political science—History. Roman law A 41-573

"It has repeatedly been proved a useful technique, especially in the field of literary history, to analyze the changing character of historical periods in terms of their varied interpretation of an authoritative tradition. For such a case study the author selects the historical controversy as to whether authority rests with the sovereign prince or with the magistrates, as reflected in the changing interpretation of the authoritative Roman law during the critical period of transition from feudalism to the emerging national state. The body of the book is a detailed interpretation of various texts illustrative of the different historical stages." Am Pol Sci R

"This [is a] valuable little volume." G. H. Sabine

+ Am Hist R 47:297 Ja '42 550w

"The study sets a remarkable example of the persistence of a formal concept in the history of thought, transforming its actual character in response to changing social needs. The scholarly treatment is well blended with a consideration of broader issues of political theory and intellectual history. Gilmore thus succeeds in turning a seemingly specialized study into an exciting essay for the interested political scientist." Sigmund Neumann

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:774 Ag '41 550w
Harvard Law R 54:1431 Je '41 330w

GILMOUR, MARGARET. The great lady. 395p il $3.50 Knopf

B or 92 Cleveland, Barbara (Villiers) Palmer, duchess of 41-20775

A not entirely unsympathetic biography of Barbara Villiers who was for twenty-five years the mistress of Charles II of England, mother of five of his children, and for a long time a political power to be reckoned with. Bibliography. Index.

"Written by a twenty-seven-year-old Virginian. The book is the author's first attempt at biography and a successful one at that. Its restraint in color and anecdotic detail leaves us precisely informed and the story unencumbered with too much conversational trimming or sensationalized incident. It has, however, a richly flavored style, neither squeamish nor vague in its formulations, but highly suggestive of the robust glamour of the Carolinian age." Felizia Seyd

+ Books p6 N 30 '41 700w

"The reviewer of 'The Great Lady' has two women to talk about—Barbara Villiers and Margaret Gilmour. And Margaret Gilmour may well be the more interesting of the two. For unless I am much mistaken, this book marks the debut of an important American biographer. Miss Gilmour, once a Virginian but now living in California, has had the patience to give six years to her first book, and she is still in her twenties. I do not know when the dissolute yet humanly absorbing story of Charles II's court has been told better than she tells it, more honestly, more sanely, more completely, nor in better prose." Edward Wagenknecht

+ N Y Times p9 N 9 '41 1050w

"It should be set down to the credit of this biography that it does not attempt to sentimentalize, amoralize, or white-wash her unattractive character, but is content to present in graceful prose the career of Barbara Villiers." Garrett Mattingly

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 D 27 '41 200w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 30 '41 360w

GILPATRIC, GUY. Glencannon afloat; or, Golden rule and brass knuckles on the S.S. Inchcliffe Castle. 240p $2 Dodd

41-4715

Eight short stories about that lovable character, "Muster" Glencannon, engineer on the Inchcliffe Castle. He has a momentary defeat when he imbibes too much tequila, but even that cannot keep him from his extraordinary adventures.

Booklist 37:465 Je 1 '41

"Mr. Glencannon hasn't aged a bit so far as Guy Gilpatric's stories indicate. His capacity for adventure and good whiskey is undiminished, and he remains as canny and resourceful as ever in these eight yarns." Lisle Bell

+ Books p24 Ap 6 '41 80w

"Mr. Glencannon is still one of the liveliest characters in light fiction. The yarns about him are many and all written to the same pattern, but age and custom has not yet impaired the Scot's remarkable versatility. His schemes are still choice and funny." M. C.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 29 '41 100w

"There is a great deal of enjoyment to be had from these 'Muster' Glencannon stories. It does seem to me, however, that each story is unnecessarily long. Guy Gilpatric might be well advised were he to emulate W. W. Jacobs in manner, as he has emulated him, perhaps surpassed him, in plot." He spins his yarns out to too great length." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p14 Je 22 '41 440w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 13 '41 130w

GILSON, ETIENNE HENRY. God and philosophy. 147p $2 Yale univ. press

231 God

41-8742

"This volume contains the Powell Lectures delivered at the University of Indiana last year. The subject matter is the metaphysical problem of God, especially as it arises from the relation between our notion of God and the demonstration of His existence. The author's approach . . . consists in reviewing the essential data that constitute the correct formulation of a problem in philosophy and of determining the correct solution in the light of this data." (Churchman) Index.

Reviewed by R. O. Dates

America 65:724 O 4 '41 300w

Booklist 37:509 Jl 1 '41

"High scholarship and lucid writing are never-failing characteristics of this master of medieval thought. The book is one of the most forceful panoramic defenses of 'the true faith' I have read. But, alas, the underlying premises of definition and of revealed theology are not too easily acceptable." Vergilius Fern

+ Christian Century 58:1208 O 1 '41 950w

Reviewed by J. P. McGarvey

Churchman 155:19 Ag '41 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '41

Reviewed by John Goheen

J Philos 38:712 D 18 '41 1700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p564 N 15 '41 1100w

GILSON, MARY BARNETT. What's past is prologue; reflections on my industrial experience. 307p $3 Harper

B or 92 Labor, and laboring classes—U.S. Industrial relations (W) 40-32652

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

Reviewed by Selig Perlman

Am Econ R 31:416 Je '41 500w

Reviewed by W. M. Leiserson

Am J Soc 47:123 Jl '41 210w

"The real purpose of this book is to make a contribution to social history and, as such, its primary appeal is to sociologists. Nevertheless, it has also general interest as the autobiography of a wise and sympathetic woman."

+ Nation 152:417 Ap 5 '41 80w

"Since there is nothing quite so fascinating as the development of brave and understanding human beings, I have found Mary Gilson's story at once moving and revealing. For she has not only written the record of her life with humor and objective insight, but through it one recaptures the whole flavor of a period of struggle for betterment in industry, education and public affairs." P. H. Douglas

+ New Repub 104:412 Mr 24 '41 700w

"The author of this stimulatingly informative book has been well known and very active in the personal phases of this country's industry for a number of years. . . . And her book of 'Reflections on My Industrial Experience,' as its subtitle calls it, is marked by a balanced progressiveness which makes it inspiring as well as interesting reading."

+ N Y Times p8 Mr 2 '41 490w

"With [her] wealth of experience to draw from, almost anyone could write a useful book. But few indeed are they who could write it as

GILSON, M. B.—Continued

Miss Gilson has. It bubbles with zest and enthusiasm. Even commonplace experiences sparkle with her deftness of touch, her delightful sense of humor, and the anecdotes which give point to them. And underneath all there is a seriousness of purpose, an abiding faith in true industrial democracy, and a conviction that the world can be improved by intelligent action. This is a rare book and you will want to reread it to get its full flavor." H. D. Wolf

+ Social Forces 19:574 My '41 550w

Reviewed by E. M. Herrick
Survey G 30:258 Ap '41 500w

Wis Lib Bul 37:34 F '41

GIPSON, RICHARD MCCANDLESS. The life of Emma Thursby, 1845-1931. de luxe ed 470p ll $7.50 N.Y. hist. soc.

B or 92 Thursby, Emma Cecilia 40-29867

"This volume deals with an important American soprano, though one less known to the generality of Americans today than several other of our women singers, who flourished in the nineteenth century. Probably the reason is to be found in the fact that Emma Thursby never appeared in opera. Miss Thursby, though she received flattering inducements to go into opera, especially in the course of her European tours, remained a singer of the church choir and the concert stage." Books

"Mr. Gipson went at his work with a votary's zeal. Emma Thursby obviously became an ideal as his researches deepened. The book is definitive as the record of a great American achievement. It may have been done more dramatically in view of the provocative material and the vast international panorama of the Thursby career, and perhaps written more vividly in the crucial stages. But by and large Mr. Gipson's biography is a satisfying chronicle." Peter Bowdoin

+ Books p16 Mr 30 '41 1050w

"The book is enthusiastically but nevertheless objectively written, and it is enriched by a number of letters, among which a special quality of forthright charm flashes from those of Emma Thursby's dearest teacher and mentor, Erminia Mansfield-Rudersdorf. It is also richly illustrated with a gallery of charming portraits and some reproductions of concert bills and announcements, including those of Miss Thursby's appearances with Mark Twain and with Ole Bull."

+ N Y Times p12 Ja 26 '41 550w

GLASGOW, ELLEN ANDERSON GHOLSON. In this our life. 467p $2.50 Harcourt (W) 41-51629

This novel is an analytical study of the feeling of kinship as it is manifested in the Timberlake family, decayed aristocrats living in a southern city. The story of how two marriages are wrecked and a great wrong done to an innocent Negro boy, is told largely as it is viewed by Asa Timberlake, sixty years of age, husband of a hypochondriac wife, father of two daughters, one utterly selfish and feminine, the other courageous and gallant but confused and unhappy.

"Her style is clear and smooth as amber. Her delineation of the Southern City, her pleasure in the back country, her sympathy for the Negro and the authenticity with which she follows his thought and dialect—these are accomplishments instantly recognized in her work. And beneath the surface one is aware of two forces which inform her fiction: first, her very Southern attachment to lost causes, and then the nobility of standard with which she reveres the past and scrutinizes the present." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic My '41 450w

Booklist 37:359 Ap 1 '41

Bookmark 2:13 My '41

"Looking back over a career steadily continuing since her twenties, Miss Glasgow can say, as a mason of the Middle Ages might have said, standing off to get the effect of his tower: 'That's a good bit of work, that is. It'll stand.'" M. L. Becker

+ Books p1 Mr 30 '41 1500w

"The brilliant, epigrammatic quality of Ellen Glasgow's style is always a delight. 'In This Our Life' is the kind of book one would like to underline or read aloud so that others might share our pleasure in particularly penetrating or amusing expressions. A rich, powerful novel, it will leave the reading public with an added sense that its author fully merited her recent award of the Howells Medal 'for eminence in creative literature.'" E. G. Howe

+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 29 '41 900w

"In This Our Life is a highly sensational, even melodramatic book, concerned, when all is said, with a problem that has engaged the minds of men throughout the centuries, the problem of human misery. It makes no attempt, however, to grapple with the problem, much less to suggest a solution, which is the only warrant for introducing the subject at all." B. M. K.

Cath World 153:244 My '41 360w

"This volume is a shining example of first-rate fiction. It combines the work of the philosopher, the scientific observer and the artist. It reflects the flow of some of the main currents of modern thought, embodied understandingly in the depiction of the characters and presented with discriminating power and taste. It contributes to our knowledge and appreciation of life." L. E. Cannon

+ Christian Century 58:627 My 7 '41 420w

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 12 '41 500w

Reviewed by E. C. Thompson

Churchman 155:20 Je 15 '41 280w

"The constancy and strength of the sixty-year-old Asa provides the one positive element in a book which I repeat, will be remembered not for its characters or a vivid mise en scène, but for its rich and stimulating succession of ideas." Edward Skillin, Jr.

+ Commonweal 33:579 Mr 28 '41 600w

"Recommended for confirmed Glasgow readers, but not as an introduction." Esther Johnston

Library J 66:265 Mr 15 '41 60w

"This must be one of fiction's silliest sequences, yet the novel survives it. The subordinate Negro characters—the scene is Virginia—are real, and if emotions run riot it is a novel, in the American phrase, of social significance." Harold Brighouse

— + Manchester Guardian p3 N 14 '41 130w

"Miss Glasgow is not only an adult novelist but, like very few others of her sex in America, an unsentimental one. She understands what is Southern about her people as she understands what is human about them; but though she shows sympathy, it never corrupts her judgment. Her art, I should think from my scant knowledge of it, has been overestimated, but not her astuteness." Louis Kronenberger

+ Nation 152:382 Mr 29 '41 800w

"Miss Glasgow in her latest book is neither parochial nor old-fashioned. One feels, however, that she has chosen rather decorous incidents and commonplace people to express her vision of despair and utter chaos. Though her purgatory is real, not much happens there; and it is as if we peeped out at it from behind the curtains of a Richmond parlor." Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 104:441 Mr 31 '41 1200w

"Without being topical, Miss Glasgow's new novel, her first in nearly six years, is in a very real way a book for our time. Back of it lies the sense of a period of confused and changing values, in which we move gropingly toward some end unforeseen. It is a story that deals, as Miss Glasgow's novels habitually do, with individual human relationships, for her interest has always been in the individual's reaction to life, not in the problems and conflicts of the group. Believing, as she does, that the novelist's primary concern is with character, she could not write otherwise." J. D. Adams

+ N Y Times p1 Mr 30 '41 950w

"The book is too long and rambling and suffers a sharp drop in intensity toward the end. It is needless to add that it is beautifully written, though more gravely, more heavily, than is Miss Glasgow's wont." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:68 Mr 29 '41 650w

Pratt p11 autumn '41

"'In This Our Life' is distinguished writing. I think the middle portion not as good as the other parts, I think the novel not quite of the calibre of either 'Vein of Iron' or 'Barren Ground.' But 'In This Our Life' is not so much a work of fiction as it is a testament, a summary, a philosophy, a belief. The wisest woman in the South has written her commentary upon us, and we do not yet know how profound that commentary is." H. M. Jones

+ Sat R of Lit 23:5 Mr 29 '41 1900w

"The book will be read eagerly by those who like plenty of drama in their novels; and it will be read thoughtfully by those who see the 'philosophy of life' below the real incidents." M. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 30 '41 1300w

Time 37:72 Mr 31 '41 1700w

"Despite all her skill and sympathy in analysis, Miss Glasgow seldom enlarges imagination in us. For one thing the intensity of her preoccupation with personal feeling comes very near the sentimental. . . For another thing there is altogether too much nostalgia. And for a third thing the drifting stream-of-consciousness style, with its 'he thought' and 'she reminded herself,' is no longer a tool in the service of naturalism. It is because Miss Glasgow is so gifted and sincere a novelist that criticism of this sort at this time is her due."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p553 N 8 '41 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 37:77 Ap '41

"'In This Our Life' may be an excellent and readable book, but my attention wandered [from it] so often and so obstinately that I was at length forced to think that perhaps it knew best." Robert Littell

Yale R n s 30:x summer '41 140w

GLASSTONE, SAMUEL; LAIDLER, KEITH JAMES, and EYRING, HENRY. The theory of rate processes; the kinetics of chemical reactions, viscosity, diffusion and electrochemical phenomena. 611p $6 McGraw

541.39 Chemical reaction—Velocity 41-12695

"This book describes the development and application of a general theory of the kinetics of physical and chemical processes, usually known as the 'theory of absolute reaction rates.' The fundamental bases are explained, and homogeneous and heterogeneous gas reactions, reactions in solution, viscosity, diffusion, and electro-chemical phenomena are considered in terms of the theory." (Publisher's note) Bibliographical footnotes. Index.

"The very subject matter of the book makes it one which must be studied rather than read. The chapter on quantum mechanics, for example, uses 239 mathematical equations. The book has, however, been written in such a way that omission of the mathematical details does not seriously interfere with an appreciation of the general method and results. The text includes numerous charts, diagrams, and tables, and a large number of references to the original papers. It is a timely addition to the Series." G. F. Kinney

+ Chem & Met Eng 48:176 S '41 500w

"This [is a] most interesting treatise on a timely subject. . . The reviewer likes the idea of the treatment from a single viewpoint, and although there are those who will not agree with Eyring's viewpoint, here is a homogeneous treatment which students of reaction kinetics and other rate phenomenon cannot ignore. The publication of this book does much to focus the attention of scholars upon the problem. The discussion of the technically important viscosity, diffusion, and electrochemical phenomenon on the basis of theory parallel to that for rates of reaction makes the book especially important for the engineer as well as for the theoretical chemist." Merle Randall

+ News Edition 19:1170 O 25 '41 380w

GLICK, CARL. Shake hands with the dragon; il. by Donald McKay. (Whittlesey house publication) 327p $2.75 McGraw

325.251 Chinese in New York (city)

(W) 41-15603

"Merry, informal introduction to our charming fellow-countrymen the Chinese-Americans: their cooking, games, marriage customs, family organization, business methods, and so on. Portions of the book have appeared in various magazines." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 38:29 O 1 '41

"'Shake Hands With the Dragon' is entertaining and should be informing for those who still see the Chinese in their midst as John Chinaman, the patient celestial. The Chinese is patient, in his way. He is also humorous, friendly and clever, in his way. And once you have become acquainted with him his way does not seem so very different from your own." Richard La Piere

+ Books p10 Ag 31 '41 600w

"It all adds up to a heartwarming picture of Chinese life in America."

+ Christian Century 58:1084 S 3 '41 70w

Reviewed by A. L. Byron-Curtiss

Churchman 155:19 N 1 '41 150w

"Everyone of even a nodding acquaintance with New York's Chinatown will have reason to thank Carl Glick for his absorbing and first hand study of this little known place. . . I promise that you will enjoy this thoroughly readable book and, having enjoyed reading it, will seek an opportunity to lend it to a friend that he may share your enjoyment. You'll have absorbed that kind of generosity from the characters." W. M. Callahan

+ Commonweal 34:520 S 19 '41 850w

"Among readers overtensed by the current flood of literature on social and political cataclysms and the sad state of humanity in general 'Shake Hands with the Dragon' will find a much-deserved welcome. Mr. Glick recounts his adventures with good humor and with tender friendliness for the truly noble people unobtrusively dwelling in our Chinatowns. On the evidence he sets forth the Chinese stand with our solidest citizenry. It is pleasant and comforting to find it out in these disturbing, fifth-columning times." Lombard Jones

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 31 '41 1000w

"You'll like this. . . Pleasantly illustrated by Donald McKay."

+ New Yorker 17:79 S 6 '41 40w

GLIDDEN, JONATHAN H. (PETER DAWSON, pseud). The crimson horseshoe. 272p $2 Dodd 41-1943

Western story.

"Fast, exciting yarn by a newcomer to the trade." Will Cuppy

+ Books p16 F 16 '41 80w

"It is Peter Dawson's first novel and as such is noteworthy for its organization and handling as well as the quality of its writing, though there are some minor blemishes of style (even a Western thriller can be better without a peppering of split infinitives). Above all, it holds abundant promise of still better things to come from this new writer." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p24 F 9 '41 280w

"An exciting western yarn of the better written sort."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 20 '41

120w

GLIDDEN, JONATHAN H. (PETER DAWSON, pseud). The stagline feud. 267p $2 Dodd 41-16057

Western story.

"This is another good one, notable for its lack of false excitement and generous amounts of the real article. A recommended Western." Will Cuppy

+ Books p17 S 21 '41 120w

Reviewed by G. W. Harris

N Y Times p17 S 14 '41 190w

GLUECK, SOL SHELTON, and GLUECK, MRS ELEANOR (TOUROFF). Juvenile delinquents grown up. 330p $2.50 Commonwealth fund [14s Oxford]

364 Juvenile delinquency 40-9761

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"In spite of shortcomings which inevitably greet pioneer attempts at forecasting, the Gluecks's persistence in their endeavor to explain and to predict criminal outcome by the method of factoring is courageous and praiseworthy. In the course of time, improvements will be made in the selection of discriminating predictive categories and in the erection of expectancy tables. . . If the various items of information which go to make up the association tables, the factoring, and the predictions are reliably reported, then forecasting of probable outcome of delinquency cases as a substitute for trial-and-error treatment and for speculative psychiatric prognosis can become a reality." W. C. Reckless

+ Am J Soc 46:736 Mr '41 1100w

Reviewed by David Riesman

Columbia Law R 41:358 F '41 2100w

"The publication of the Gluecks' earlier book, 'One Thousand Juvenile Delinquents,' started an argument among social workers and public officials, the like of which was never heard. But there can no longer be any argument over the fact that this brilliant couple has contributed more to the science of criminology than any writers on the subject, either modern or ancient." Sanford Bates

+ Harvard Law R 54:168 N '40 550w

"Probably no two investigators anywhere have given as much scientific study to problems of juvenile delinquency as have the pair familiarly referred to as 'The Gluecks.' And at the stage of criminology reached in 1940 no study could be more important than that here reported." David Snedden

+ School & Society 53:188 F 8 '41 200w

"The book is excellent for college level, but is too impersonal and too detailed for the average high school student. However, as a reference work for certain high school students working on a project on some phase of crime, it is admirable source material." P. R. Busey

+ Social Educ 5:399 My '41 260w

"There are some major limitations inherent in the data itself. To point them out is easier than to devise ways of surmounting them. It is only fair to say that in this volume, as in their previous ones, the Gluecks exhibit a keen awareness of these difficulties. They deserve real appreciation for contributing the important collections of data which they have, and for extracting from them so much that is demonstrable, as well as so much that is provocative. This book will unquestionably be rated with the relatively few distinguished studies in American criminology." G. H. Desison & Max Deutscher

+ Yale Law J 50:952 Mr '41 1700w

GOETZ, DELIA. Neighbors to the south. 302p il map $2.50 Harcourt 918 Latin America (W) 41-51696

In popular style with many illustrations this book describes the geography, commerce, industries, peoples and customs of Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Costa Rica, Cuba, Guatemala, Haiti, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Peru, Uruguay. Index.

Booklist 37:411 My 1 '41

"The value and timeliness of this book are apparent at first glance." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Ap 20 '41 280w

"Although the picture of our neighbors and our relations with them is somewhat too sweet and optimistic, this book is perfect for those who are completely unfamiliar with the countries described." D. R. K.

+ Churchman 155:35 My 15 '41 130w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:207 O '41 10w

"This informative book is a worthy addition to the growing shelf of volumes on Latin America. Its value is increased because the twelve countries are discussed separately and their differences in climate and commerce, geography and peoples made plainly evident. While this is but a brief survey of these neighbor nations, it is written out of personal knowledge and illustrated with fine photographs. One's pleasure in reading it is also increased by the pleasant way it opens in the hand." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:212 My '41 80w

"It is a readable book, containing interesting information, but too short to be of much value to the student. The best features of the book are the excellent photographic illustrations which appear on almost every other page, and the chapter entitled 'In the Gallery of Patriots,' which gives biographies of heroes famous in these countries." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 66:359 Ap 15 '41 150w

Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 7 '41 420w

Wis Lib Bul 37:137 Jl '41

GOETZ, DELIA. Panchita, a little girl of Guatemala; il. by Charlotte Anna Chase. 180p $2 Harcourt

Children in Guatemala (W) 41-51862

Panchita was a little girl from a Guatemalan mountain village. She was much too busy playing to learn the art of making pottery, by which her family made their living. On a trip to the market town she saw a lovely blond haired doll, and her anxiety to possess it turned her thoughts to pottery. On the day that Panchita took her handiwork, a doll's tea-set in pottery, to barter for the doll of her dreams she was able to make a happy exchange.

Booklist 38:17 S '41

"There are full-page and smaller pictures in sun browns, black and white, in which village life keeps up with the story. We have comparatively little about Guatemala for little children, and this is a pleasant item." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Ja 25 '42 280w

"Softly colored drawings fittingly illustrate the homes and market places of this Indian people in their life among the fascinating mountains of Guatemala." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:369 S '41 110w

"A well-made book, one of several by this author about Latin America which will prove valuable in familiarizing our children with the life and customs of children living in other American countries. Recommended for children of eight to ten." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 66:677 Ag '41 210w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 5 '41 170w

GOGARTY, OLIVER ST JOHN. Mad grandeur. 438p $2.75 Lippincott 41-24625

A novel of eighteenth century Ireland, just after the French revolution. The gentry in their crumbling great houses spend their days gambling, duelling and raising race horses; the peasants, degraded almost to the level of animals, stage the first of the Irish revolts, which make up the history of modern Ireland.

"The characters are secondary to the picture of the times and the descriptions of individual scenes. It was a full-blooded, brutal age, and Gogarty does not prettify it. . . . The Toucher was a born storyteller, after the tradition of the Dublin teller of tales," says the author of one of his Irish types, and Gogarty himself is in the same tradition." Elizabeth Drew

+ Atlantic Ja '42 330w

Booklist 38:159 Ja 1 '42

"Dr. Gogarty's preoccupation with speed and violence dominate the book. He seems to find something romantic in death, a feeling common to healthy people. . . . After reading this book it is impossible not to peek again at the portrait of Dr. Gogarty in 'Ulysses' . . . [which] sounds like a precise picture of Dr. Gogarty setting out to write 'Mad Grandeur.' With a literary mirror, razor, and some lather, he has achieved a book which, if not quite a novel, is a good collection of sporting yarns and an excellent picture of Ireland as she faced the nineteenth century." Thomas Sugrue

+ Books p12 N 30 '41 700w

"As a novel, the thread of plot is slight, merely holding together the gorgeous succession of scene so richly painted. . . . The scenes among 'the quality,' though as elaborately drawn, are naturally less gripping than those placed lower in the social scale."

+ Cath World 154:506 Ja '42 200w

"In one of his poems, the late William Butler Yeats remarked that 'Romantic Ireland's dead and gone. It's with O'Leary in the grave.' Dr. Gogarty does his level best to reanimate the corpse in this curious novel of eighteenth century Ireland. One wonders if, by any chance, the author is executing a colossal spoof on the credulous Saxon public. The fictional Ireland he depicts is an exasperating compound of Charles Lever, Dion Boucicault, and Thackeray of the 'Irish Sketch Book' and 'Barry Lyndon'; a baroque paradise of lovely, daring women and iron-handed, brave men who wander about through the thinnest of narrative structures. An added reason for my own lifted eyebrow is the fact that I find a strong similarity between many of the incidents of the book and those traditional tales of derring-do which are common knowledge in Celtic households." J. G. E. Hopkins

Commonweal 35:348 Ja 23 '42 240w

"It is Gogarty's usual style, rich and spicy. With malicious affection he bares the Irish heart." M. H. Zipprich

+ Library J 66:950 N 1 '41 70w

Reviewed by Otis Ferguson

New Repub 105:899 D 29 '41 420w

"Gogarty's low life scenes are his best; and more real than any of his fine gentlemen and ladies are the insinuating Joxer Dalylike Toucher Plant and the somewhat betwixt-and-between Tiger Roche, who here and there shapes into a man only to be shouldered aside by characters less well realized. Gogarty knows, too, the Big Houses of Ireland inside and out, and he presents them with a perception of their grandeur which Miss Edgeworth, being too close to it, took for granted." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p6 D 7 '41 900w

"Although one suspects Mr. Gogarty of partiality for those colorful, brisk, fighting days, he makes them sound more grim than pleasant."

New Yorker 17:106 N 29 '41 70w

"I would not say that Dr. Gogarty's 'Mad Grandeur' is better in every way than its predecessors; but it excels in one thing: it is a story of stunning episodes, vividly seen and splendidly told. . . . Dr. Gogarty the poet is in evidence again and again throughout these pages, especially in the nostalgic descriptions of that lovely, rain-washed countryside which holds and torments the hearts of all who have ever been in true contact with Ireland." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 D 13 '41 400w

GOGGANS, SADIE. Units of work and centers of interest in the organization of the elementary school curriculum, 140p $1.60 Teachers college

372 Education—Curricula. Education—Aims and objectives 40-31818

"A discussion of some of the points of conflict between the educational theory that would have the curriculum of the elementary school focused on organized subject matter and the one that would have it primarily concerned with aspects of the child's own living. Considerable space is devoted to the relation of both theories to the aims of education in democracy today." (J Home Econ) Bibliography.

"Presenting a clear interpretation, well supported by abundant documentation, and written with insight of the problems and implications involved in the definitions of education within a framework of democracy, the book is both timely and penetrating. Both as an interpretation and as a source book of contrasting viewpoints, the book will serve as a valuable contribution to the planning and the evaluating of curriculum organization. It is, however, rather a philosophic treatise than a scientific analysis." D. E. Lawson

+ Ei School J 41:633 Ap '41 650w

J Home Econ 33:114 F '41 40w

School & Society 52:440 N 2 '40 50w

GOLDING, CLAUD. From Versailles to Danzig. 239p $2.25 Norton [7s 6d Allen, G]

943.085 Germany—History. Germany—Foreign relations. World war, 1939—Causes [A 41-484]

Brief, popularly written chapters on outstanding events in the history of Germany and Europe during the twenty years of "peace."

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:194 O '41 10w

"Whether, indeed, there is any advantage in this fluent but curiously cloudy simplification of leading issues of European relations since the end of the last War is open to question. The doubt is increased by every fresh instance in the book of the apparently limited extent of Mr. Golding's knowledge. On the subject of the German Revolution, for example, he is entirely misleading. . . . Mr. Golding has a boldly informative touch that is possibly to be envied, but at a time like the present even the popular discussion of large themes such as these surely requires above all else accuracy of statement."

Times [London] Lit Sup p418 Ag 31 '40 220w

GOLDMAN, ERIC F., ed. Historiography and urbanization; essays in American history in honor of W. Stull Holt. 220p $2.50 Johns Hopkins press

973.04 U.S.—History. History—Historiography. Holt, William Stull 41-6873

Contents: Cavaliers and burghers in the Carolina low country, by St. J. R. Childs; Lexington: frontier metropolis, by Bernard Mayo; Urban and rural voting in the election of 1860, by Ollinger Crenshaw; On the dangers of an urban interpretation of history, by William Diamond; Washington's "Great rule" in its historical evolution, by A. K. Weinberg; Hildreth, Draper, and "scientific history," by D. E. Emerson; School histories of the middle period, by Alfred Goldberg; Edward Eggleston: pioneer in social history, by Charles Hirschfeld; Middle states regionalism and American historiography: a suggestion, by E. F. Goldman.

Reviewed by Howard Woolston

Am Soc R 6:749 O '41 110w

"Throughout, the writing is good, Professor Child's comparison of rural and urban forces in colonial South Carolina being outstanding. The volume is an admirable tribute, but would GOLDMAN, E. F.—Continued. have been improved, we think, by a few pages at least of introduction, referring more particularly to Professor Holt's work and methods, and pulling the volume together a little more." R. Fleury

+ — Canadian Hist R 22:321 S '41 170w
Reviewed by Hope Tisdale
Social Forces 20:289 D '41 350w
Social Studies 32:288 O '41 20w

GOLDSCHIEDER, LUDWIG. Etruscan sculpture.. (Phaidon press art bk) 159p pl $3.50 Oxford [12s 6d Allen, G]

732 Sculpture, Etruscan
"This has about 150 pictures, bibliography, notes, index, chronological table, and an introduction which gives a survey of Etruscan civilisation and attempts to define the peculiar quality of Etruscan sculpture." Manchester Guardian

Booklist 38:133 D 15 '41

"It is difficult to find any fault with 'Etruscan Sculpture.' The sculptures are superbly lighted and photographed—most of them specially for this volume; many from several angles or in detail. The reproduction is likewise excellent, never sacrificing detail and clarity for dramatic effect. The selection is astute and comprehensive." David Burnham

+ Commonweal 35:226 D 19 '41 130w
Manchester Guardian p3 D 5 '41 120w
Times [London] Lit Sup p520 O 18 '41 600w

GOLDSMITH, MARGARET OLTHOF. Designs for outdoor living. 358p il $3.75 Stewart 710 Architecture, Domestic, Landscape gardening (W) 41-51834

The author, who is an interior designer and writer on country-home subjects, traveled up and down the United States from Maine to California, seeking ideas for improving country living. This book, containing plans, photographs and descriptive notes, sets forth her findings in chapters devoted to outdoor rooms, terraces and porches; play areas both for children and adults; swimming pools; outdoor grills, etc. Index.

Booklist 37:542 J1 15 '41
Bookmark 2:8 N '41

"The effect of this 'source book for home owners, architects, and landscape designers' will be felt for years. For its plans, directions, principles, details, and above all its 236 fine photographs, will inspire builders and remodelers to co-operate with doctors in getting people to spend more time outdoors."

+ Books p12 Ag 31 '41 150w
Pratt p4 D '41
Wis Lib Bul 37:136 J1 '41

GOLDSTEIN, ISRAEL. Toward a solution. 345p $2.50 Putnam

296 Jews—Political and social conditions. Jews in the U.S. Zionism 41-5071
"Rabbi Goldstein's book, full of reflections upon our time, is addressed to the Christian as much as to the Jew. It is a plea for reasonableness in human relations, for universal democracy, for toleration from all sides. The themes include a wide range of subjects, which serve to illuminate the general problem, but with specific reference to the difficulties which today encompass his own people." N Y Times

Am Soc R 6:770 O '41 50w

"Rabbi Goldstein's style is singularly lucid and his argument persuasive." John Cournos
+ N Y Times p22 D 14 '41 500w

GOLDSTEIN, KURT. Human nature in the light of psychopathology. 258p $2.50 Harvard univ. press

150 Behaviorism (psychology). Psychology. Pathological 40-36192

"Dr. Goldstein's theories were developed largely during the first World War, in facilitating the adjustment of individuals whose personalities had been disturbed by brain lesions. His experiences are crystallized here in the William James Lectures of 1938 and 1939. Dr. Goldstein systematically interprets man as a unity, functioning as a unity. With scholarly organization he develops his social philosophy and reveals man's interaction to the world and society in terms of his personal attitudes toward the abstract as well as the concrete." Survey

Reviewed by T. M. Newcomb
Am Soc R 6:612 Ag '41 280w
J Philos 38:166 Mr 13 '41 1100w

"'Human Nature—in the Light of Psychopathology' is of special interest to physicians and psychologists, but other readers acquainted with the fundamentals of the subject will find it of genuine interest. Dr Goldstein's literary style is commendable; he gives instruction in a complex science without a superfluity of obscurely technical words and phrases."

+ Spring'fd Republican p10 F 6 '41 600w
Reviewed by L. S. Wile, M.D.
Survey 77:101 Mr '41 230w

GOODMAN, DANIEL CARSON. Fan dance at cockcrow. 336p $2.50 Funk, W. 41-4550

"The heroine of this astonishing tale is a beautiful young woman by name of Iris Lamar who feels that her life, for obscure reasons, is a tragedy. Throughout the book Iris is pursued by Dudley Pettingill, a dogged millionaire, who is unromantic, pitiful, importunate and fortyish. Even so, Iris might have married him—in fact she very nearly does—had her heart, not been given to an erratic writer, Peter." N Y Times

"Many a New Yorker probably could match, tale for tale, the eccentricities of the characters and improbabilities of the events of this novel. Stranger things can, and often do, happen in Bagdad on the subway and elsewhere. But the unbelievably neat interplay of wish and luck give this book the character of a bed-time story for metropolis-struck maidens. 'Fan Dance at Cockcrow' is good fun. But one can't help hoping that the home-town girls won't think that New York is likely to be like that." Mary Ross
Books p14 Mr 9 '41 400w

"In justice to 'Fan Dance at Cockcrow,' it has, very occasionally, its amusing moments. Here and there one encounters a crisp phrase or a really effective wisecrack. Here and there it is not altogether shoddy." E. H. Walton
— + N Y Times p27 Mr 9 '41 430w

"If a prize were offered for the most strenuous, tormented, agitated, pulsating novel of the year, this would be a certain contender. Here is enough plot for half a dozen novels, enough climaxes and crises for a whole season of sultry repertory. . . The machine-gun tempo and deluge of events leave the reader breathless. If style is the man, we learn little about Dr. Goodman, for he shifts from the turgidity of Elinor Glyn to the sparkling satire of 'Babbitt.'" R. A. C.
Sat R of Lit 23:19 Mr 22 '41 220w

GOODRICH, ARTHUR FREDERICK. The sound of wings. 393p $2.50 Appleton-Century

41-12689

The story of Tom Clary, inventor and airplane manufacturer, covers the years from the middle 1920s to the second World war. Tom's wife, Carol, bored in the small Connecticut town and ambitious for a career in music, leaves her husband and three small children. During the years that follow Tom raises his children, wins success in his business relations, trusts everyone, and finds personal happiness for himself in the end.

"The merit of the book is its sincerity. Not a work of art, but exceedingly straightforward." R. E. Danielson

Atlantic S '41 40w

"Arthur Goodrich puts before us a character who would not accept disillusionment and so was not disillusioned, who did not admit disaster and so was able to say—when it was past—that it was never that. You may not agree with the point of view and think that the ultimate serenity of Tom Clary's life is a somewhat special dispensation of Providence, but the novelist is so persuasive and the hero is such a winning person that you will not be disposed to argue." George Conrad

+ Books p6 J1 20 '41 500w

Christian Century 58:985 Ag 6 '41 40w

"The novel is full, alive and pleasantly readable. . . . Tom's character—honest, fine and direct—is sympathetically drawn. He's a likeable chap, though perhaps dangerously near the line of the too-good. But his lofty idealism is happily relieved by an active sense of humor. At a time when concentrated self-interest has run amuck in the world, it is refreshing to read a book in which honesty not only holds its own but comes out on top—in domestic life, in business and in romance." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p7 J1 20 '41 490w

"Tom Clary [is] the hero. Hero seems an archaic word; there aren't many to be found in modern novels. The title fits Tom Clary as though he were made for it, which he was. He carries the whole weight of the novel. . . . There are touches of characterization here and there that remind us of the Lincoln legend, except—except that Lincoln was a man, had shades as well as lights. Tom is without these, too whole and perfect, too fabulous. All right, then, the book is a fable of one who solved these problems that baffle men, with the authority of an angel. Would that we were angels." R. L. Nathan

Sat R of Lit 24:14 J1 26 '41 250w

Wis Lib Bul 37:178 N '41

GOODRICH, MARCUS. Delilah; with decorations by Earle Winslow. 496p $2.75 Farrar (W) 40-35320

"The story of a United States destroyer, plying southern Pacific waters during the six months preceding the entry of this country into the first World War. . . . It is a sternly masculine book. It has but one heroine, formed of steel, and her name is Delilah." New Yorker

"A remarkable book of its kind—even the most confirmed landsman could not lay it aside." R. E. D.

+ Atlantic Mr '41 170w

Booklist 37:241 F 1 '41

Bookmark 2:13 My '41

"In almost every aspect 'Delilah' is out of the ordinary. It is not a story of sailing ships or the old days, it is not a romance of the sea or a tale of hairbreadth adventures; it has no particular message, it conforms to no recognizable conventional pattern; it is a man's book entirely, without a heroine or a single female character, except a few vague girls in the background who are merely stage properties; it is bare of plot, extremely simple in structure and deals with incidents that in other and less able hands might seem quite uneventful and miss the mark altogether. All of which makes 'Delilah' a remarkable piece of writing; for the fact is beyond dispute that, in spite of the hurdles outlined above, the novel holds the reader's interest from beginning to end." Lincoln Colcord

+ Books p1 F 2 '41 1300w

"It is a gory, brutal, bloody book, distinguished by its curious success in conveying the almost incommunicable, inarticulate comradeship of the Navy. It is constantly over-written and frequently under-thought; but it is always felt—and it convinces the reader that it is accurately felt." Lewis Gannett

+ — Boston Transcript p11 Ja 29 '41 500w

"There is in this book [a] fine appreciation of character, but save in the quiet inconclusive case of Warrington it does not progress. The author has adapted Conrad's device of a detailed analysis of each emotion, each motive, with which his people are confronted; often the analysis is keen and credible, but too seldom, for the purposes of the action, is it revealing. Mr. Goodrich suggests that he has planted in these pages the seeds of another novel, they are apparent enough and have fallen as far as the reader of 'Delilah' alone is concerned, on stony ground." E. B. Schrightgiser

+ — Boston Transcript p1 F 1 '41 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '41

"Mr. Goodrich knows exactly what he is talking about when he confines himself to the Navy. He frequently writes well and, all in all, it is not too much to say that this is the best book ever written about a modern warship and her harassed men. It is true that a certain callowness creeps into the book in that the reactions of some of the characters are those prescribed by a school of fiction at whose lowest level the Rover Boys are included. . . . But it remains a unique book, most of it highly readable, and worth wading through its five hundred pages." Harry Sylvester

+ — Commonweal 33:498 Mr 7 '41 700w

Nation 152:136 F 1 '41 90w

"The appeal of this book is apparently strong to armchair navigators, but I hardly think it will go down as sea literature. . . . For the average reader I think the main trouble will be that first nothing happens for a long time, and then something blows up inconclusively, under false and forced pressure. There are parts in it I read with pleasure, being an eternal pushover for ship's routine; but in general it goes very hard, slowly through many confusions and nowhere in particular, and very hard." Otis Ferguson

New Repub 104:282 F 24 '41 1800w

"Extraordinarily lovely novel of a fighting ship and the Man of her whose instrument of war, after long training and trial, her body is about to become. Above the mood soars the theme, intangible in all its many variations as that of Moby Dick, but most simply expressed in the code of naval tradition, Victory or Death. . . . The novel [is] as absorbing and exciting a story in its lovely language as you'll find in any literature, except that, being part of the rest, it lacks the beginning and completion of a separate tale." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p1 F 2 '41 2700w

"A remarkable work of art. Its defects are the defects of excessive vigor and of an overleaping imagination, which are perhaps preferable to the anemic virtues of caution. If 1941 gives us a better first novel by an American, it will be a year of wonders. . . . It is overwritten in spots and charged at times with a theatricalism that misses its mark. But these are the defects of richness, and they are not fatal. This is, all things considered, a mature work of imagination on a subject ordinarily left to writers of adventure yarns. It cannot fail to make its author's reputation." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 16:53 F 1 '41 900w

Pratt p10 spring '41

"There are portions of this book where the underlying action is completely obscured by the language, so that the reader is lulled into a sort of musical trance. But the writing is magnificent for all that. The destroyer is finally so etched on one's mental retina that every part of her constricted and cellular anatomy is as familiar as one's own house. 'Delilah' is remarkable in another way. It is the first time, so far as I know, where the personnel of a fighting ship of the United States has been treated with something of the fastidious fussiness that Proust used in his interminable novel." William McFee

GOODRICH, MARCUS—Continued

+ Sat R of Lit 23:5 F 1 '41 700w

"By any standards, Delilah is a top-notch yarn. But what frames the story, gives it symbolic sense, restrains the turbulent narrative from getting too diffuse, clarifies each character, even makes amends for the faulty structure of the plot, is the bony morality of the sea."

+ Time 37:104 F 24 '41 350w

"A novel to which one's intermittent admiration makes one long to have been able to apply the blue pencil. For Mr. Goodrich, with a deep understanding of the sea and a sure sense of the characters on his destroyer, embroils many great and simple things, fights and deaths and deeds of splendid violence, in more words, more psychological weighings and adumbrations, more pauses in action for refinements of analysis, than anyone who has ever written about the sea. And writers about the sea, being perhaps alone with their words so much, seem fonder of them than land-lubbers." Robert Littell

+ Yale R n s 30:xiv summer '41 170w

GOODSPEED, EDGAR JOHNSON. How came the Bible? 148p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury 220.4 Bible. Whole—History. Bible. Whole —Versions (W) 40-29593

A series of lesson-lectures prepared by the author for adult Bible classes. "These studies do not attempt to tell how the several books of the Bible came to be written; but only how, once written, they came to be gathered into the great religious libraries we know as the Old and New Testaments, and the Apocrypha, and how these have come down the centuries to our day." (Intro) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:317 Mr 15 '41

"Within its scope, nothing could be better."

+ Christian Century 58:26 Ja 1 '41 40w

"Dr. Goodspeed has a gift all too rare among scholars and particularly among biblical scholars. He sees things with journalistic eyes. He is therefore fascinated by a 'good story' and also by the telling of it. That is why, since the story of the transmission of the Bible is a fascinating story in itself, he is able to set it down on paper without any loss of the inherent fascination. There is none of the heavy hand so characteristic of most scholars." James Van Zant

+ Churchman 155:17 Mr '41 100w

GOODSPEED, THOMAS HARPER. Plant hunters in the Andes. 429p il maps $5 Farrar 581.98 Botany—South America. Andes mountains. South America—Description and travel 41-22766

"About thirty years ago a young Brown graduate, newly appointed an instructor in botany at the University of California, made the acquaintance of 'Nicotiana.' The study of the various species of this plant became his lifelong vocation and has taken him to many parts of the world. The present volume is a record of two expeditions to South America, headed by Dr. Goodspeed, and comprised of his wife and ten other members. The briefer of these took place in 1935-1936, the longer in 1938-1939. The book is a story of the collection of plant specimens, chiefly of forms of 'Nicotiana,' and plants of ornamental importance, but that phase is interwoven with descriptions of people, scenes, and events." (Scientific Bk Club R) Maps and photographs. Index.

Booklist 38:173 Ja 15 '42

"The book is full of botanical discussions and Latin botanical names. They will bother nobody. Regardless of whether or not one knows the special words and techniques involved, one always finds pleasure in watching a thorough craftsman at his work, be he ditch-digger, sailing-master, symphony conductor, or botanist." E. P. Hanson

+ Books p3 D 7 '41 800w

"First-rate scientific travel adventure, full of new material and very nicely handled."

+ New Yorker 17:111 N 22 '41 60w

"Dr. T. Harper Goodspeed, director of the University of California Botanical Garden at Berkeley, has initiated the first large-scale introduction of temperate South American plants into the United States. The many interesting experiences encountered by the various members of his two expeditions in collecting these plants have been vividly—and often humorously—written into a well-illustrated book. . . At a time when there is great interest in South America, this book aids materially in giving a clear picture of some of its impoverished people. Even if one is not interested in plant collecting, nor in the plants described, one finds this an intensely interesting and amusing description of current life on the western slopes of the Andes." Donald Wyman

+ N Y Times p6 D 28 '41 1150w

"A most excellent and engrossing commentary upon that part of South America chosen for the botanical work. . . Botanical books, written for popular consumption are rare. This can be recommended for its science, its friendliness, and its vistas of western South American life."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:3 N '41 420w

GOODY TWO SHOES. The history of little Goody Two Shoes; an account of the means by which she acquired her learning and wisdom, and in consequence thereof, her estate. 1td ed 40p il $1.75 Redcoat press, Redcoat rd, Westport, Conn.

41-27884

"[A] modified version of the third edition of [a] famous little book. The text is substantially that used in the Lumsden edition and the illustrations, except the frontispiece, are from that edition, too." Horn Bk M

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 17:372 S '41 80w

"The Introduction is a pleasure to the bibliophile and the story will delight children—as it has been delighting them for almost two centuries." E. L. Tinker

+ N Y Times p28 S 28 '41 240w

GOODYKOONTZ, BESS, and COON, BEULAH 1. See Joint committee on curriculum aspects of education for home and family living of the Home economics department of the National education association and the Society for curriculum study. Family living and our schools

GORDAN, JOHN DOZIER. Joseph Conrad; the making of a novelist. 430p $4 Harvard univ. press

823 Conrad, Joseph

40-35673

"Confining himself to the novels and stories up to and including 'Lord Jim,' Mr Gordan deals briefly and clearly with Conrad's sources, his 'mood of creation,' and his successive revisions of his texts. These studies are followed by the individual histories of the early stories and an exceptionally comprehensive account of the reception of Conrad's early work by the critics and reading public." Boston Transcript

"Mr. Gordan's agreeable style is far superior to that of most authors of academic literary studies. But then so are his subject and his accomplishment. The thick sprinkling of note-numbers over the page one accepts without too much complaint, for the notes themselves (gathered together at the back of the book)

are often of great interest and always eloquent as to Mr. Gordan's unusual industry, honesty and acumen." Francis Steegmuller

+ Books p15 D 15 '40 500w

"Mr. Gordan offers no striking new theories to 'explain' Conrad. What gives his study great and enduring value is the thoroughness and meticulous care with which he has explored every aspect of the subject. What makes his work all the more remarkable is that by carefully isolating all his references, citations, and minor evidence in the back of his book he has been able to keep his text clear and readable. The result is an exceptionally interesting and valuable study of one of our great modern geniuses." Charles Kerby-Miller

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ja 18 '41 160w

"A carefully prepared, scholarly volume... Between the pages of Mr. Gordan's book and the finished works of Conrad there is still a gap. No one can trace quite all the steps that go to make a work of literature. But Mr. Gordan by his analysis does stir the curiosity of the reader to open once more the pages of the remembered Conrad novels." E. F. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 8 '41 500w

"The documentation is skilful, thorough, unobtrusive. Lovers of Conrad and students of the novel will find the book superbly readable... Mr. Gordan's presentation is more instructive, much more exciting, than any formal treatise on style." James McGovern

+ Commonweal 33:604 Ap 4 '41 350w

"It seems a pity that anyone who has devoted as much labor to Conrad as Mr. Gordan has should allow only the dimmest possible presentiment of the esthetic and psychological significance of his material to declare itself, and should make his book indispensable to Conrad students at the cost of making it indigestible except as a kind of statistician's report. Fortunately it is copiously indexed and so makes its facts available to those who will know how to use them." M. D. Zabel

New Repub 103:873 D 23 '40 900w

GORDON, CAROLINE (MRS ALLEN TATE).
Green centuries. 469p $2.75 Scribner

41-22068

A historical novel dealing with the westward movement from Virginia across the mountains into Kentucky during the years preceding the Revolution. The chief characters are two brothers; the younger, Archy, is captured during an Indian raid and is adopted into the tribe; the older, Rion, tho he marries, finds he cannot settle down and he becomes a frontier hunter and Indian fighter.

Booklist 38:113 D 1 '41

"'Green Centuries' has its high spots and its defects... Where the book is weakest, to this reviewer, is in its final section. Too many catastrophes fall upon the main characters too suddenly... But it is Miss Gordon's only failure of construction and, in 'Green Centuries' she has produced a distinguished, vivid and continuously readable novel which lights up an essential part of the American past." S. V. Benét

+ — Books p4 N 2 '41 750w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 D '41

"The plain truth about Caroline Gordon's 'Green Centuries' is that it's mighty slow going but pays off in sincerity and page-for-page clean writing... Whole sections of the book are first-rate, especially several of the chapters on life in a Cherokee village and a short chapter capturing perfectly the fear and loneliness felt by a young child alone in the wilderness. I can't agree with those who find Miss Gordon's characters poorly developed, but she seems to have been blind to faults that any first novelist wouldn't have been guilty of in his first draft." Max Gissen

+ — New Repub 106:27 Ja 5 '42 180w

"Miss Gordon fails to interest one crucially in any of her characters. She portrays them perfunctorily, and without real warmth... Taken on its own terms, however, 'Green Centuries' is a superbly rich and authentic picture of life on the frontier, and of the kind of men who made it what it was... Whatever its deficiencies as a story, with compelling human values, one feels that 'Green Centuries' is a work of great distinction, and that it comes as close to reality as a historical novel can come." E. H. Walton

+ — N Y Times p4 N 2 '41 1000w

"The story, despite much grim violence, is not exciting nor are the characters complex. What counts is the realness of the scene, the feeling for mountains and forest, the sense Miss Gordon conveys of what Flaubert, whom she quotes, meant when he spoke of 'the melancholy of barbarian tribes, with their migratory instincts and their innate loathing of life which compelled them to abandon their country as if they were abandoning themselves.'" Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:86 N 1 '41 300w

"Miss Gordon's prose is flowingly pictorial, particularly in descriptive passages which she manages with assurance and fine feeling for her setting. Perfectly familiar with the terrain, she peoples the book with men and women who clearly belong to it and its harsh impositions. Her characters have body—of mind, purpose and imagination as well as three dimensions. Although action is slow gathering and never inspires that can't leave-it-alone state, Miss Gordon takes firm and honest hold of her reader."

+ Springfield Republican p7e D 21 '41 220w
Wis Lib Bul 37:201 D '41

GORDON, CYRUS HERZL. Living past. 232p il maps $2.50 Day

913.3 East (Near East)—Antiquities. Excavations (archeology) (W) 41-16775

The purpose of this popular book by a writer hitherto known for his scientific monographs only, is to reveal "how the explorer discovers mounds in Western Asia and how the excavator digs them; what the finds are and what they reveal." (Introd) Bibliographical suggestions. Index.

Booklist 38:93 N 15 '41

"A thoughtful and agreeable little book, containing also some important original material." E. P. Richardson

+ Commonweal 35:275 Ja 2 '42 160

GORDON, MANYA (MRS SIMEON STRUNSKY). Workers before and after Lenin. 524p $4 Dutton

331.0947 Labor and laboring classes—Russia. Russia—Social conditions. Communism—Russia 41-1817

A detailed study of conditions among the laboring classes in Russia from the 1890s to the present, with statistics wherever they can be obtained. The author, born in Russia and educated in the United States, points out the fact that many Russian statistics are unreliable, and cites discrepancies. Partial contents: Labor unions in a workers' state; Wages; Housing; Dress; In the factory; Social security; Revolution and industrialization; Education; The peasants. Index.

Reviewed by Arthur Feiler

Am Econ R 31:867 D '41 1100w

"Many Gordon's book is not pleasant reading; for whatever illusions one may have had about the betterment of the bitter lot of Russia's millions by the overthrow of Tsarism and the introduction of the new economy may have been hopelessly dissipated before, one has gone very far in reading the volume." B. W. Maxwell

Am Pol Sci R 35:570 Jl '41 600w

GORDON, MANYA—Continued

Reviewed by J. N. Hazard

Ann Am Acad 215:207 My '41 500w

"The style is a little heavy and the author is rather too optimistic about the existence of a conscious revolutionary movement against Stalin at the present time. But these are minor defects in a work that is likely to stand as the best piece of solid research in its important and interesting field for a long time to come." W. H. C.

+ — Atlantic Ap '41 220w

Bookmark 37:352 Ap 1 '41

Bookmark 2:4 My '41

"Miss Gordon has written an indispensable book on the tragic Russian experiment." Louis Hacker

+ Books p15 Ap 13 '41 800w

"In a day when good books on Russia are becoming increasingly rare it is a pleasure to welcome this sound piece of diligent research and objective interpretation. Making full use of Soviet statistics, the author shows how in the field of wages, living standards, social services and education the actual standards at present are not only far below official Soviet claims but inferior to those that prevailed under the Tsars." R. G. Woolbert

+ Foreign Affairs 19:880 Jl '41 50w

"Many Gordon (Mrs. Simeon Strunsky) has written a remarkably informative and deeply moving book which adds new luster to the enviable record of one of America's distinguished literary families. Her very readable volume covers a much wider field than is suggested by its title, for in addition to an exhaustive discussion of the position of Russian labor it deals with practically every aspect of the social and economic life in the former empire of the czars." M. T. Florinsky

+ J Pol Econ 49:781 O '41 600w

"The volume is a triumph of painstaking research, and almost all of it is based on statistics supplied by official Soviet publications. The author has used the Communists' own figures—invariably 'class-angled'—to disprove their claims, and she is scrupulously careful to quote chapter and verse and the date of every publication from which she has drawn her material." Stephen Naft

+ Living Age 360:193 Ap '41 850w

"This book is modestly named, for it is more than a history of the Russian working class before and after the Bolshevik revolution: it is the first comprehensive social and economic history of the Soviet Union from an author possessed of the knowledge, the energy, the ability, and the desire to do the necessary preliminary work. Many Gordon's book is that rare product—a volume of painstaking and honest research vividly presented and of equal value to expert and layman." Freda Uteley

+ Nation 152:384 Mr 29 '41 1250w

Reviewed by J. D. Clarkson

New Repub 104:895 Je 30 '41 650w

"Many Gordon has performed a genuine service to the cause of historical truth by puncturing almost beyond the possibility of revival the legend that, whatever may be its defects, the Soviet regime represents a vast forward step, especially for the masses, by comparison with the autocracy... Good books about Russia have become very scarce in recent years and for an obvious reason: absence of facilities for writing them. So rigorous is the censorship that reporting from Russia is now little more than a matter of transmitting official statements and communiqués. There is all the more reason to greet such a work of solid and, in some fields, almost unique research as Many Gordon has written." W. H. Chamberlin

+ N Y Times p1 F 9 '41 1700w

Pratt p21 autumn '41

"Many Gordon knows whereof she writes and speaks. Hers has been no 'six weeks' investigation,' no uncritical acceptance of statistics designed to prove a case. This volume is a life work of one born in Russia but educated in America, who has attempted faithfully and objectively to appraise this great workers' experiment by the effect which it had on the lives and standards of those for whom this Republic was devised. Her research and writing have produced an amazing book. . . Apologists for Soviet Russia may challenge what Miss Gordon has written, but they will not alter her conclusions with less research and less painstaking care than she has employed in assembling her data. Her volume will help every student of labor problems in America to a somewhat more objective estimate of present labor conditions under the Soviet rule." Spencer Miller

+ Sat R of Lit 23:9 F 22 '41 1400w

"The reader may differ from Miss Gordon in her conclusions as to the disastrous effect of Stalinism on Russian economic and cultural life, and concerning the chances for a successful revolution against Stalinism in the commensurate future. But the objective reader cannot study this book without being grateful to the author for her painstaking, scholarly efforts to get at the truth regarding social conditions in that country, and without a sense of gratitude for the vivid light which this volume sheds on the daily lives of millions of citizens of the Soviet Republic." H. W. Laidler

+ — Survey G 30:303 My '41 550w

GORDON, MARGARET S. Barriers to world trade; a study of recent commercial policy. (Bur. of int. research of Harvard univ. and Radcliffe college. Publication) 530p $4 Macmillan

380.12 Commercial policy 41-6217

"This is a study of the complicated network of international trade restrictions which grew up during the nineteen-thirties. In this period many governments ceased to rely merely on tariffs as instruments of commercial policy and turned to exchange control, import quotas and monopolies, export marketing schemes, and similar devices. . . The book traces this movement and analyzes the various restrictive devices in turn, discussing their origins, their economic implications, and the manner in which they have been administered in the countries which have made widest use of them. . . The study covers the period up to the outbreak of war in September, 1939, an event which marked the adoption of rigid trade controls by countries which had previously tended, on the whole, to avoid such measures." (Publisher's note) Selected bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Max Gideonse

Am Econ R 31:635 S '41 450w

Reviewed by J. D. Larkin

Am Pol Sci R 35:575 Je '41 700w

"The book is worth reading in spite of the possibility that the termination of the current world war may find international trade facing such new conditions that most of the methods hitherto used to develop and protect it will have to be jettisoned. Nevertheless, we proceed in international trade, as in other things, from the known to the unknown, and this book is a handy compilation of previous governmental efforts made from the standpoint of national interest." A. V. Dye

+ Ann Am Acad 216:193 Jl '41 450w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:872 Jl '41 30w

Reviewed by P. W. Bidwell

J Pol Econ 49:769 O '41 800w

Reviewed by A. B. Lindsay

Library J 66:177 F 15 '41 100w

"An admirable critical summary which should receive wide attention."

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 15 '41 120w

"The author set herself an arduous and ambitious task. To work through the maze of devices applied in the field of international trade since 1931, to master a mass of detail information, and to piece it together into a general picture against the background of the whole globe was an undertaking which required great persistence, perspicacity, and skill. The result is a scholarly and careful study, equipped with a formidable apparatus of footnotes and cross-references, and—despite the detached presentation—extremely readable." Alexander Gerschenkron

+ Pacific Affairs 14:380 S '41 550w

Reviewed by M. A. Heilperin
Pol Sci Q 56:427 S '41 340w

GORE, JOHN. King George V; a personal memoir. 464p il $5 Scribner [18s Murray, J] B or 92 George V, king of Great Britain [41-11378]

"This book excludes political issues and concentrates on the personality of the King; it is based on King George's diaries and on the recollection of his friends and family." Times [London] Lit Sup

"It is difficult to become interested in the details of early twentieth century parties while bombs and submarines threaten the very existence of the tight little island. This does not mean that the volume has failed to accomplish well the task which was assigned to the author. It means only that a personal memoir on George V will probably be better appreciated when the totalitarian dictatorships have been destroyed, when the amenities of life have been restored, when men and women can once again, with whole heart, think of parties, pleasure hunting and the comforts of hospitality." A. L. Sachar

Books p9 Ja 4 '42 230w

Reviewed by Lord Ponsonby
Manchester Guardian p6 Ap 1 '41 440w

"It is an official Life and official Lives are never lively. It is also a 'personal' life; it eschews politics. . . There is much danger (not avoided here) in such a process. The book may become largely a record, not of persons or events, but of engagements. And small beer, even in a royal flagon, is still small beer. Some animated fragments of the king's personality do, to be sure, survive Mr. Gore's discretion and justify his industry. . . These facts would make an agreeable brief memoir; they might even—if set forth by a man of rather more extensive gifts than those displayed by Mr. Gore—make an instructive memoir. Stretched out as they are upon the rack of 443 pages, they groan, and the reader groans too." George Dangerfield

+ New Repub 106:26 Ja 5 '42 600w

"Many readers will be prepared to find the book as lifeless and uncritical as other authorized biographies of royal personages, especially as it is a personal memoir which deliberately avoids political and constitutional issues. In fact the tone of the book turns out to be remarkably healthy; though respectful and sympathetic, the author does not fall into the adulation and sentimentality commonly excited by Royalty." Raymond Mortimer

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:338 Mr 29 '41 1850w

"This biography is a pleasant surprise. It has had to be royal and inclusive of the ceremonial. Yet it manages somehow to be human. We watch a prince and a king. Yet we discover a man, and it is the man who takes precedence over the monarch. The King reigned, the man tried at any rate to remain himself." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 4 '42 2000w

Reviewed by Crane Brinton
Sat R of Lit 25:9 Ja 17 '42 360w

"There is inevitably a certain monotony in the record of royal doings, and some parts of this book might have been curtailed without loss. But Mr. Gore has done his work well, and so far as politics are concerned, kept honourably within the terms of his contract." J. A. Spender

+ Spec 166:312 Mr 21 '41 1100w

"Mr. Gore has produced an admirable book, simple but interesting, well written, entertaining and revealing, for which the King's family has every reason to be grateful and for which a wide and appreciative public is assured."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p138 Mr 22 '41 3100w

GORELIK, MORDECAI. New theatres for old. 553p il $4.50 French 792 Theater 41-1312
For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

Booklist 37:321 Mr 15 '41

"The style of production has almost never meant the unity of total artistic content which Mr. Gorelik seems to imply. Nor have the traditional, ceremonial aspects of staging, which he would like to see restored, ever meant that the drama was not seeking illusion. It was a question of method. However, once you get your definitions settled with him, his book becomes a stimulating and provocative one, and on the whole leaves you with the uncomfortable feeling that the designers are more imaginative and intelligent artists just now than the playwrights. Every dramatist should be made to read this work." W. P. Eaton

+ Books p12 F 9 '41 320w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 D '41

"Gorelik writes, of course, from the vantage point of the Group, which is as good a vantage point as any—maybe better—from whence he looks shrewdly about him, behind him and ahead. His perspectives are sharp but true; his findings are alive with enthusiasm and always opinionated enough to be valid. When a better book about the theatre is written, an actor will write it." Orson Welles

+ Sat R of Lit 23:12 F 8 '41 650w

"It is a big, generous and highly provocative book, and the publishers have helped it by making it easily readable, lavishly illustrated and thoroughly annotated. . . Mr. Gorelik has opened wide the gates to argument, which is always a healthy process." E. J. R. Isaacs

+ Theatre Arts 25:247 Mr '41 1100w

GOSHORN, MRS GLADYS M. Do you know your garden? decorated by Julian Brazelton. 310p $2.50 Oxford

635 Gardening 41-3433

After a brief introductory paragraph or two, each chapter in this book contains a list of about twenty questions followed by rather full answers in paragraph form. There are thirty-five chapters ranging in subject matter from garden history, garden design, and plant mythology to trees, garden enemies, lawn building, herbs, etc. Bibliography. Index.

"On the whole, the book is consistently reminiscent of most garden club meetings—busy, but rather heterogeneous, if you get what we mean. Which doesn't in the least imply that large numbers of people won't enjoy it thoroughly." R. S. Lemmon

+ Books p9 Je 22 '41 120w

"Mrs. Goshorn's gay little volume is certain to please a wide field of garden people." W. H. C.
+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 19 '41 200w

"The scope and variety of the book are wide and . . . Mrs. Goshorn's knowledge of her subject is sound and her topics are largely applicable to gardening in the United States east of the Rockies. . . The many amusing decorations by Julian Brazelton are an added attraction."

+ Spring'd Republican p8 Mr 19 '41 400w
Times [London] Lit Sup p535 O 25 '41 180w

GOSS, MRS MADELEINE (BINKLEY). Unfinished symphony; the story of Franz Schubert; il. by Karl M. Schultheiss. 308p $2.50 Holt

Schubert, Franz Peter—Juvenile literature (W) 41-17391

Biography of Franz Schubert, written in fictional form. "A chart which relates the happenings in Schubert's life with the other musical, and non-musical, events of the time, a list of Schubert's compositions, a reading list of books related to the story of Franz Schubert's life, and an index suitable for use by young readers."

GOSS, MADELEINE—Continued

Booklist 38:135 D 15 '41

"It is, as it should be for its audience, an elementary work: popular in style, abounding in anecdote and reinforced with pictures in the right old Viennese vein; it may awaken interest even in the musically inexperienced, while a child to whom, like Franz Peter Seraph, music is all, will find it a comfort to the heart." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ja 11 '42 300w

"A vivid portrait of the stout little man whose pencil could barely keep up with the melodies that flowed through his brain." E. V. Wyatt

+ Cath World 154:383 D '41 60w

"Another satisfying musical biography by one who has written excellent lives of Bach and Beethoven." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 D 11 '41 70w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn BK M 18:42 Ja '42 110w

GOSSARD, ARTHUR PAUL. Superior and backward children in public schools. 172p $2 Univ. of Chicago press

371.92 Children, Gifted. Children, Abnormal and backward 41-1961

"An unbroken history of the efforts to meet the problem of individual pupil differences, based on the annual school reports of ten representative cities, over a period of seventy years, and proposed solutions." (School & Society) Bibliography. No index.

School & Society 52:704 D 28 '40 30w

"The study has been done with a great deal of care. . . [It] should be especially valuable to elementary- and secondary-school administrators and to those in higher education who are teaching courses in the administration of special education. From this report it is possible to get a clear picture of the conditions existing educationally for the groups being considered, the educational experimentation undertaken in the light of these conditions, the successes and the failures of these administrative experiments and the present administrative use of various plans in the light of historical success or failure." W. M. Cruickshank

+ School R 49:312 Ap '41 750w

GOUDGE, ELIZABETH. The golden skylark, and other stories. 337p $2.50 Coward-McCann (W) 41-51835

Collection of twelve short stories, some new, others reprinted from magazines. Four of them are about the du Frocq children, who appeared in Island Magic (Book Review Digest, 1936). The title story is an imaginative reconstruction of the possible origin of Shelley's Ode to the Skylark. Contains an introductory essay on the Entertainment of Storytelling.

Booklist 37:515 J1 1 '41

"Whether these tales of past and present delight a reader must depend, to some extent, I suppose, on a taste for Miss Goudge's distinctive quality of high-spirited imagination, not esoteric but akin to that of a sensitive, thoughtful, and humorous child. It would be a churlish reader, it seems to me, who could resist their charm. As for the historic authenticity of the actual persons who move across these pages, to me it matters not a whit." Mary Ross

+ Books p6 Je 15 '41 550w

Christian Science Monitor p10 J1 5 '41 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 J1 '41

"Twelve delightful stories. . . Highly recommended for both adults and adolescents." H. P. Bolman

+ Library J 66:520 Je 1 '41 80w

Reviewed by Harold Brighthouse

Manchester Guardian p3 J1 25 '41 80w

"A literary future of vastly wider and maturer fictional scope seems positively indicated for Elizabeth Goudge. The foundations are there. Meanwhile here is a book that will delight and satisfy all those of her former admirers who are not, today, like this reviewer, looking to her for larger things." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p16 Je 15 '41 700w

"In drawing families of young children no one—not Charlotte M. Yonge, nor Louisa Alcott, nor Stella Austin, nor E. Nesbit—surpasses Elizabeth Goudge. . . Somewhere deep down, Elizabeth Goudge's imagination has a very tight hold on reality; and it is that, most easily seen in these families of children, that saves her over and over again from going sugary."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p345 J1 19 '41 360w

GOUDGE, ELIZABETH. Well of the star. 42p 75c Coward-McCann

41-24257

Story of a little shepherd boy, living on the hills above Bethlehem, who on the first Christmas attempts to reach the Well of the Star, so that he may pray for his family.

"The author has drawn a charming and life-like portrait of a child, and the well-sustained atmosphere and dramatic quality of the tale make it an excellent one for telling or reading aloud." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 D 14 '41 200w

"Elizabeth Goudge again reveals her ability to create a delicious fairy tale atmosphere in this 42-page story of Bible lore."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 14 '41 70w

GOULD, JOHN. Pre-natal care for fathers. 70p il $1.50 Daye

817

41-21091

"This 'non-medical, non-technical, non-scientific explanation of the masculine side of the matter' is consistently funny, but not so much so as to interfere with sense; it speaks as one man to another but a woman listening in will laugh and generally agree. Part of the fun comes from the pictures, woodcuts lifted from minor fiction of the crinoline and polonaise periods, and provided with captions for which the artists never planned." Books

+ Books p12 S 14 '41 120w

"If a father-to-be can find anything at all amusing about impending parenthood, John Gould's 'Pre-Natal Care for Fathers' should provide him with a mildly entertaining half hour. The suspicion arises, however, that only those safely past the ordeal will respond with uninhibited chuckles and an occasional belly laugh."

Springf'd Republican p7e N 2 '41 170w

GRABBE, PAUL, and SHERMAN, JOSEPH E. Outdoors with the camera. 104p il $2.50 Harper

770 Photography

(W) 41-51953

Practical guide for the beginning photographer, discussing the step-by-step processes involved in taking outdoor pictures. Illustrated with many photographs and diagrams. One section describes developing. Index.

Booklist 38:92 N 15 '41

"His chapter on cropping, a still woefully neglected phase of picture-creation, should be mighty useful to beginners and even a few old timers."

+ Books p33 N 23 '41 80w

GRAF, HERBERT. The opera, and its future in America. 305p il $4.75 Norton

782 Opera (W) 42-840

The stage director of the Metropolitan opera association of New York has not attempted to write a complete history of opera, but to "explain out of the historical material of its past the nature and situation of opera today." He describes the high spots of operatic history, and shows how it has kept pace with the social changes in each country where it has developed. He devotes a section to the consideration of the opera in America, and closes with a glimpse at the opera of the future. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by R. S. Angell

Library J 66:1046 D 1 '41 80w

Reviewed by Howard Taubman

+ N Y Times p9 Ja 11 '42 550w

"Herbert Graf, who writes of the future of opera in America, against the background of the opera's history the world over, is perfectly equipped for his task. . . It is difficult to give an adequate impression of the service rendered both to the history of music-drama the world over and to the future of music-drama, especially in America, by Dr. Graf's brilliant book in which the text is accompanied by a lavish sequence of excellent illustrations. It is seldom that a successful practising artist is also at once a scholar and a pioneer. It is even more unusual for him to be a writer as well." E. J. R. Isaacs

+ Theatre Arts 26:138 F '42 1200w

GRAHAM, AELRED. The love of God; an essay in analysis. 252p $2.50 (7s 6d) Longmans
231 God

"A devotional work on the nature, conditions, expressions and effects of the love of God." (America) The author is a Benedictine monk of Ampleforth Abbey.

America 65:23 Ap 12 '41 30w

"An admirable treatise, enlightening and inspiring, with occasional incursions into the realm of metaphysics, not too difficult for the serious reader to follow." J. McS.

+ Cath World 152:499 Ja '41 370w

GRAHAM, FRANK DUNCAN. Audels machinists and tool makers handy book. [1636p] il $4 Audel

621.75 Machine shop practice. Machinery. Tools (W) 41-9529

"The purpose of this book is to provide a complete course of study for those desiring to become machinists, and to help machinists become tool makers." (Author's note) The book contains five sections: Machine shop practice; Drawings and blue print reading; Mathematics; Physics; and slide rule. Includes the American standard drawings and drafting room practice, approved by the American Standards association, May, 1935. Index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:24 Ap '41

GRAHAM, FREDERICK P., ed. See Model plane annual

GRAHAM, FREDERICK P., ed. See Young America's aviation annual

GRAHAM, GEORGE ADAMS. Education for public administration; graduate preparation in the social sciences at American universities. 366p $3.50 Public administration

350.7 Social sciences—Study and teaching. Colleges and universities—Curricula 41-9308

"Here are reported the results of Professor Graham's study sponsored by the Public Administration Committee of the Social Science Research Council. During 1938-39, the author visited over twenty campuses and several seats of government, conferring, observing, and interviewing. The book is divided into two parts, the first dealing with general problems, and the second describing and commenting upon the public administration programs at specific universities. The underlying theme of the volume is the duty of the universities to teach public administration." Am Pol Sci R

"The book is very well written, especially the first part, which lends itself to flowing sentences and brilliant phrasing. Indeed, the author reveals himself as a stylist of merit, an aptitude for well chosen phrases and figures of speech giving sparkle and life not ordinarily encountered in work of this nature. The result is a volume which is highly readable, yet at the same time dignified and scholarly." J. M. Pfiffner

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:788 Ag '41 850w

Reviewed by Harvey Pinney

Ann Am Acad 217:217 S '41 650w

GRAHAM, GERALD SANDFORD. Sea power and British North America, 1783-1820; a study in British colonial policy. 302p il maps $3.50 Harvard univ. press

325.342 Great Britain—Colonies—North America. Great Britain—Commercial policy. Great Britain—Commerce. Canada—Commerce. U.S.—Commerce A 41-3159

"British foreign policy is founded on sea power and its political basis in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries was the monopolistic navigation system. Though profit was a motive, the author shows that its immediate objective was the enhancement of British sea power. The book is the story of the breakdown of this system as applied to British North America, the main factor being colonial dependence on the United States for supplies, and the increasing reliance of industrialized Britain on the American consumer." New Repub

"This is a book for scholars rather than for the general public, but in view of the importance of new developments in Canadian-American relations it has a special relevance at the present time." F. H. U.

+ Canadian Forum 21:157 Ag '41 260w

"Excellent book. It is more than Canadian economic history alone; like the trade of that period, it should have a triangular appeal—to the Canadians first and foremost; to the British, as a study of imperial readjustment; and to the United States because of the rich detail of rivalry and clandestine commercial collusion between the Yankees and the Bluesoes. . . It is well thought out and is presented in a thoroughly clear, competent and interesting manner. The warships, which one might expect from the title, appear only indirectly through their supposed need for sailors from the merchant marine and fisheries. That, and the paucity of critical bibliography are the only two adverse criticisms which occur and they by no means diminish one's real enthusiasm for a study which explains so adequately a complicated subject in a difficult period." R. G. Albion

+ Canadian Hist R 22:326 S '41 500w

"The author is to be commended for his careful organization and for a comprehensive coverage that is free from excessive detail and quotation. The book contains numerous statistical charts, a brief note on the primary sources, a good index, and several contemporary maps which are more ornamental than useful." R. W. L.

+ New Eng Q 14:774 D '41 210w

"Based on Canadian and English archival materials, this scholarly work is of importance to students of British colonial policy and American-Canadian relations."

+ New Repub 105:518 O 20 '41 120w

GRAMAN, HERMAN R. A good mechanic seldom gets hurt; Safety Joe talks on the safety precautions needed for each machine tool in the shop. 94p il spiral binding pa 50c Am. tech. soc.

614.85 Accidents, Industrial. Accidents—Prevention 41-13381

"Brief pointers on the safe operation of all machine shop tools." Cleveland Open Shelf

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '41

Management R 30:431 N '41 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:43 Jl '41

GRAMATKY, HARDIE. Loopy; il. by [the author]. [72p] $1.75 Putnam

(W) 41-17579

Picture-story book about a little training airplane with a desire to fly alone. One day when a know-it-all pilot went up in Loopy and flew into a hurricane, the little plane got his chance. The pilot took to his parachute, but Loopy used all his scientific knowledge, rode out the storm, and made a perfect landing.

"Loopy is completely believable to a small child who loves to personalize his toys." M. L. Becker

+ Books p26 N 2 '41 170w

Reviewed by H. L. Binns

Commonweal 35:110 N 21 '41 30w

"Patterned after Little Toot, but, I am afraid, not nearly as clever. . . The subject is a favorite with little boys, of course, but story and pictures lack the originality we look for in Mr. Gramatky's work. Loopy's fat, round face peers out from all the illustrations with a sameness which dulls the interest. Opinions will vary on this picture book for five- to seven-year-olds." R. W. Stewart

Library J 66:908 O 15 '41 90w

Reviewed by Jessie Stanton & E. W. Steele

New Repub 105:837 D 15 '41 20w

"Though his habitat is the sky, Loopy is a worthy companion to Little Toot, and one which an air-minded generation can take to its heart as readily as it did that doughty little tugboat. . . The Puckish imagination which gave us one of the best loved of recent picture-books is as vigorous and as unpredictable as ever in this story, and in the joyous swoops and swirls of the exciting pictures. And, if you look hard enough, as you cannot help but do, you will find Little Toot here too." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p39 N 2 '41 160w

"The bright-colored pictures have dash, but though the plot is entertaining, the text could have been better written."

+ New Yorker 17:140 D 6 '41 50w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

Sat R of Lit 24:14 N 8 '41 30w

GRANICK, HARRY. Run, run! il. by Gregor Duncan. 276p $2 Simon & Schuster

41-22368

Two children, a boy and a girl, winners of a contest, are awarded a free tour of New York. Due to a mistake they arrive a day early, and in their efforts to evade a mysterious stranger with a patch over one eye, have an informal tour of the city.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p16 My 11 '41 360w

"Seeing New York as the workers know it [the children] come to see not only its quick throb of excitement, but also much of its injustice and pain, but though the social commentary implicit in their experiences is an important part of this book, and gives to it a deeper value (and unfortunately an occasional note of bathos) it does not dim the riotous fun of its headlong chase." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p12 N 9 '41 240w

"Interesting and amusing." Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 24:10 N 8 '41 30w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 2 '41 60w

GRANT, BLANCHE CHLOE. Doña Lona. 331p $2.50 Funk, W.

41-21541

"More than a century ago in Santa Fé the equivalent of cafe society could be found nightly in the rooms of one Madame Barcelo, who had come from Spain as a child and rose to affluence as the owner of one of the most fashionable of the gambling saloons in the Southwest. An aristocrat by birth and a woman of beauty, she engaged in a business which—in that time and place—was 'definitely respectable,' the author says in a foreword. Miss Grant has given the lady's career an appropriate embroidery of fiction." Books

Booklist 38:96 N 15 '41

"The tale is romantically told, with plenty of frontier atmosphere and political intrigue. Kit Carson and other real characters appear, and Dona Lona nips a Mexican plot in the bud." Lisle Bell

Books p29 O 5 '41 120w

"This tale, unpretentious and credible, manages at times to achieve an air of excitement and tenseness, but falls short of doing justice to the original Lona and the hectic period of the great Southwest's development. . . This book lacks the epic grandeur of many historical novels. But it undoubtedly is a true picture of its period. The reverent portrayal of Lona, through lack of power to make her real, does not, however, make for a satisfying novel." George Froede

+ — N Y Times p34 N 23 '41 350w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 12 '41 70w

GRANT, WILLIAM JOHN. The new Burma.

159p il $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Allen, G]

915.9 Burma

[A41-151]

Short descriptive account of Burma, its industries, politics, religion, and its inhabitants and their characteristics. The author, an English journalist, has lived for some years in Burma, and edited the Rangoon Times. Short index.

Booklist 37:323 Mr 15 '41

Books p25 Ap 20 '41 180w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:882 Jl '41 20w

"It is an unpretentious piece of writing on a subject obviously near its author's heart, and it gives a clear picture of Burmese life and institutions. The only disadvantage of its author's having lived there so long is that the clubs and bungalows and golf courses have for him a glow they haven't for us. But his descriptions of native life are sympathetic."

+ — New Statesman & Nation 20:452 N 2 '40 90w

"As rambling as Burma itself, the book has a certain charm and value. There is no more reason for sandwiching a charming description of the mango in between the silverlead mines of Bawdwin and the tin mines of Tenasserim (all in a chapter on industry) than there is for the meandering streets of a Burmese village. On the other hand, Grant's chapter on Mandalay perhaps gives a better sense of the spirit of old Burma than do the more ponderous standard works on the country." J. L. Christian

+ — Pacific Affairs 14:372 S '41 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p587 N 23 '40 280w

GRANT WATSON, ELLIOT LOVEGOOD
(JOHN LOVEGOOD, pseud). The nun and the bandit. 344p $2.50 Smith & Durrell [7s 6d; 3s 6d Cresset]

41-25255

"A story of a kidnapping in the Australian bush country. An adolescent girl and a nun are seized and held for ransom by three brothers. One is a half-wit, one a big hulk, one is clever, wiry, and wicked. The book resolves into a struggle between the clever brother and the nun, or between hate and love, or sin and virtue." New Yorker

"This is not a pleasant book. But its violence is of its essence and is not superimposed for the sake of the impact on the reader's sensibilities. The opening pages of the book are stiff and awkward, one feels that Grant Watson had lived with these people so long that he found difficulty in introducing them for our knowledge. As the book moves on, we have the austere lovely prose and the gift for seeing which distinguishes his other work. There are passages telling of the land which are pure poetry. The author needs none of the ornaments of speech to convey beauty. He sees it, and we see it with him." Clare Godfrey

+ — Books p6 O 26 '41 800w

"A picture of mental and moral disintegration with no relieving feature."

— N Y Times p22 N 2 '41 440w

"Forceful, moving, credible."

+ New Yorker 17:90 O 25 '41 50w

"If Mr. Grant Watson had not already established his reputation as a writer of high sensitivity, poetic power, and a very definite sense of taste, this book would certainly win it for him. For he has not only written a novel with a strongly appealing charm of its own, but has also presented a delicate problem which, if less expertly and carefully handled, might have been annoyingly obtrusive." Klaus Lambrecht

+ Sat R of Lit 24:14 O 25 '41 450w

GRANT WATSON, ELLIOT LOVEGOOD
(JOHN LOVEGOOD, pseud). Priest Island. 292p $2.50 Smith & Durrell [7s 6d Cresset]

41-5575

"Peter Costello, having stolen three sheep for love of Jean and been betrayed by her, is flung on an uninhabited island in lieu of death, and left with bracken for a bed, seed potatoes for hope of food, a spade for husbandry and flint and tinder for warmth. He sinks deeply into the life of wild nature, he hunts and preys, lusts and hates and fears, he is swayed by lunar and ocean tides, and is haunted by a visionary Jean and by the ghost of a hermit. At last, flesh and blood come again to him. Mary, a lonely woman of the mainland, hearing his story, rows over to his rock with a goat and hens, and offers him her service and herself." Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 37:439 My 15 '41

"Here is a gracious and lovely book which does for the reader what few books can accomplish during these times. For it shuts out the brutality of the present world and makes us companions of the sea, the winds, and the sky." Clare Godfrey

+ Books p6 Ap 6 '41 600w

"The situation is good. So is the description of the sea and of their method of living. The story itself is mediocre." V. C. Perkins

+ — Boston Transcript p8 Ap 12 '41 100w

"In 'Priest Island' Mr. Watson has attempted and accomplished with skill and insight the difficult task of remaking a man who had gone to pieces." Charles Marriott

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Je 7 '40 200w

"The novel is interesting throughout and exceptionally well written." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p22 Ap 6 '41 850w

"As entertaining as novels à la Robinson Crusoe are likely to be."

New Yorker 17:91 Ap 5 '41 50w

"I have said that this novel is an example of purely creative writing. This does not mean that it is great writing, for creation need not be on the grand scale. It is good writing of a rare sort, informed with a poetry that is pervasive but unobtrusive; and I cannot imagine its failing to give solid satisfaction to any thoughtful reader. Those who ignore 'Priest Island' will be the losers." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 23:17 Ap 12 '41 750w

"The book has good points; its practical Robinson Crusoe side will appeal to sensible people, who always like to read of the overcoming of the elementary difficulties of living, even when these are recorded by such bores as the Swiss Family Robinson. But Peter Costello is a special kind of bore, the introspective, mystic kind, and not all his knowledge of bird and wild life could make me have patience with his bogus visions and intimations. Mary Byrne had courage indeed to face a whole lifetime alone with such a ponderous brooder." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 164:844 Je 21 '40 170w

"Mr. Grant Watson is not an easy-going novelist. His figures have something of the stiffness, the harsh and angular significance of primitive art; his story wavers between realism, allegory and parable; its transcendental passages do not always come off. But this is a haunting book, the work of a naturalist looking closely into the rebellious heart of man and finding in the pounding of his blood an echo of the pounding and the peace of the sea on a rocky shore. He does not decorate Robinson Crusoe or bring him up to date; he pushes him back to his origins and makes him plain."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p301 Je 22 '40 330w

GRAVES, ROBERT. Proceed, Sergeant Lamb. 322p $2.50 Random house [8s 6d Methuen]

(W) 41-17321

Historical novel of the American revolution, a sequel to Sergeant Lamb's America (Book Review Digest, 1940). This book describes the sergeant's experiences as a war prisoner, his escape, his service under Lord Cornwallis, and the surrender at Yorktown.

Booklist 38:113 D 1 '41

"'Proceed, Sergeant Lamb,' is, like its predecessor historical fiction of an unusual and stimulating kind." Milton Rugoff

+ Books p14 N 9 '41 700w

"The historical interest outweighs the story interest and the appeal is to the reader already interested in the period. Recommended though somewhat limited in appeal by its style." H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 66:793 S 15 '41 80w

Reviewed by J. D. Beresford

Manchester Guardian p7 F 28 '41 210w

"In spite of the ponderous eighteenth-century style which Mr. Graves affects for the purpose of presenting history as autobiography, the book is vigorous and flavorful."

+ Nation 153:409 O 25 '41 70w

Reviewed by Max Gissen

New Repub 106:27 Ja 5 '42 300w

"It is not often that so versatile and peripatetic a person falls into a novelist's hands. Mr. Graves makes the best of Sergeant Lamb, and one of the best of historical novels." P. M. Jack

+ N Y Times p6 O 19 '41 1000w

"Mr. Graves is intelligent, sensible, and matter-of-fact."

+ New Yorker 17:97 O 18 '41 50w

"This volume is even better than the first; its romance is less fanciful, though equally exciting. Just as Gibbon's service in the Militia served the historian of Rome, so Mr. Graves's own war-experience has served him as an historical novelist. The original documents not being available to us, we cannot tell how much Mr. Graves adds; nor do we care, for the whole account is so coherent, so built up of verisimili-

GRAVES, ROBERT—Continued

tude—which is at any rate more important than truth—that Lamb lives with us by our side." Bonamy Dobree

+ Spec 166:236 F 28 '41 600w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 19 '41 420w

"From first to last the narrative wears an extraordinary air of authenticity; the lightest or most casual detail has a ring of uninhibited and almost artless personal testimony. Detail of this circumstantial kind, indeed, at once spontaneous and full of small surprises, is seldom 'imagined,' and Mr. Graves's art, it may be supposed, has been to transcribe fragments from a crowd of eye-witnesses other than Sergeant Lamb to match the Sergeant's devoted and sensible personality."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p89 F 22 '41 1050w

GRAVES, ROBERT, and HODGE, ALAN. The long week-end: a social history of Great Britain, 1918-1939. 455p $3 Macmillan [12s 6d Faber]

914.2 Great Britain—History. Great Britain—Social life and customs (W) 41-8248

"What Mark Sullivan did for two generations of American life in the successive volumes of his Our Times, Graves and Hodge here do for the inter bella period in Great Britain. The material for such history is what is printed in the newspapers from day to day, much of which is soon forgotten. . . . So here we have a record of the manners and customs of the English people—economic conditions, amusements, books, plays, dress, morals (and immorals), fads and crazes, politics, sport, projects for social betterment, and whatever else goes to make up the news of the days when it is occurring and to make up the history of a period when it is past." Christian Century

Reviewed by G. T. Hankin

Am Hist R 47:413 Ja '42 210w

Reviewed by A. M. Lee

Am Soc R 6:923 D '41 380w

Reviewed by W. P. Hall

Ann Am Acad 218:207 N '41 450w

"The twenty-six chapters will be widely received as a brilliant example of the saving British talent for self-criticism. Brilliant they are; but a reader here and there will ask himself if their persistent bright mockery of transient follies and fatuities is not a little excessive for the times, and if the two gifted pens have not themselves fallen into the compromise that they find in 'the whole fashion-sense of the Thirties'—to wit, the compromise between what is 'amusing' and what is 'functional.'" Wilson Follett

+ Atlantic S '41 300w

Booklist 37:488 Je 15 '41

Reviewed by John Chamberlain

Books p12 Ag 24 '41 750w

Christian Century 58:722 My 28 '41 180w

"The Long Week-End,' judged even by the most austere standards, is a significant work, and as entertainment it is superb. The films, theaters, literature, art, the social developments, the hiking, community singing, and even the political arguments of the days between the two wars are excellently evaluated in a most amusing book." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 18 '41 190w

"While the daily press of the United States has carried far fuller reports on life in England since the first World War, they have failed to convey to Americans any such full picture of what life in England is like as that set forth here. By and large the same interests have been characteristic of both peoples. Such a volume is far more effective toward a better understanding between the two countries than elaborate treatises keyed to a solemn note." James Van Zant

+ Churchman 155:19 Je 15 '41 220w

Reviewed by W. J. Grace

Commonweal 34:307 J1 18 '41 490w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:384 Ja '42 40w

Reviewed by John Mitchell

Living Age 360:596 Ag '41 550w

"Take the book for what it really is—a string of lively, one-eyed personal impressions and epigrams about the social, literary, and artistic fashions of the past two decades—and plenty of amusement can be got out of it." R. C. K. Ensor

+ Manchester Guardian p7 D 31 '40 550w

"What one is given is an amusing account of matters of public gossip, of the attitude of the press, and of the furors of the intellectual tea parties. The woman question, sex, screen, and stage, pacifism, nudism, and hiking—the last three nicely conjoined in one chapter—and so forth, are only occasionally ballasted by common-sense political observations. In the chapter Revolution Averted, 1919, and Revolution Again Averted, 1926, the authors touch lightly upon profounder realities. They have no prejudices, except in favor of being bright, and they write well and wittily." Ralph Bates

+ Nation 152:673 Je 7 '41 300w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 104:798 Je 9 '41 850w

"The best parts of The Long Week-end are those which describe fashions, scandals, anecdotes, newspaper scoops. To the treatment of such things, their method—the easy speed, the ironic comment, the amusing collocation—is well adapted. But this smooth and ready flippancy is less happily employed on major events, serious artists or important thinkers." T. C. Worsley

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:626 D 14 '40 1300w

Reviewed by P. W. Wilson

N Y Times p9 Je 8 '41 1450w

"This book not only takes in just about every surface aspect of the period you can think of, from the dawn of short skirts to the Lambeth Walk, but it also gets down to the germinal ideas and international influences that affected politics, science, behavior, business, the church, and so on. You're almost sure to like it."

+ New Yorker 17:71 My 31 '41 50w

Pratt p24 autumn '41

"Though this is not a war-book, it is bound to be read as such in America, and indeed it is not altogether unfair to the authors to ask what Americans are likely to make of their book, what answer Americans are likely to find in it for the absorbing question as to England's chances of victory in this war. It must be admitted that Anglophobes will be able to quarry abundantly in its pages. . . . Yet lovers of England may well take hope from this book. For one thing, the England here described—of course, most incompletely—is not an obsessed nation." Crane Brinton

Sat R of Lit 24:5 My 31 '41 1700w

"For all its faults, The Long Week-End is well worth reading. Its very defects are closely connected with its merits. For it is full of character. It denounces and deplores; it explains and defends; all in terms of a highly personal view of modern history." D. W. Brogan

+ Spec 165:644 D 13 '40 700w

"The authors share equal credit for this volume, and there is no indication as to which parts each is responsible for. Mr Graves is, of course, the well-known English writer of I, Claudius and other books. He calls Mr Churchill Winston in one extract from his diary, and is himself briefly discussed in a most impersonal third-person tone worthy of Edward Bok. Mr Hodge is a younger man, now employed by the British ministry of information. Together these two writers have produced a work which grasps and records with remarkable success the spirit and flavor of a period near at hand, chronologically, but already as far removed from 1941 as 1918 was from 1914." Donald Derby

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 1 '41 800w

Time 37:86 Je 30 '41 330w

Times [London] Lit Sup p578 N 16 '40
2700w

Reviewed by S. K. Ratcliffe
Yale R n s 31:188 autumn '41 600w

GRAY, GEORGE WILLIAM. The advancing front of medicine. (Whittlesey house publication) 425p $3 McGraw

616 Medicine (W) 41-52015

"[A] review of representative problems of present-day medicine, designed for the layman. The author succeeds in his effort to outline the aims of medicine, the standards and procedures used, the achievements, the setbacks, and the problems of research men. Emphasis is placed on common ailments and on habitual indulgences and their effect on health and longevity. A historical introduction is followed by chapters on nutrition, the blood, sulfanilamide, influenza, allergy, mental diseases, psychotherapy, sleep, pain, tobacco, drink, cancer, and aging. A list of references for further study is appended." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 38:126 D 15 '41

Reviewed by W. G. Lennox, M.D.
Books p26 N 23 '41 480w

Reviewed by H. A. von Urff
Library J 66:840 O 1 '41 100w
New Yorker 17:111 N 22 '41 60w

"That a writer, not a scientist himself, can so successfully assemble, analyze, and relate scientific facts and theories is amazing enough. When this sort of reporting has the added virtue of clean, persuasive writing it becomes an art. Mr. Gray has no equal in this field. Read 'The Advancing Front of Medicine.' It may even restore your faith in little man's destiny." M. S. Ulrich

+ Sat R of Lit 24:17 D 13 '41 650w

Reviewed by A. H. Compton & others
Scientific Bk Club R 12:1 N '41 900w

GRAY, GEORGE WILLIAM. Education on an international scale. 114p il $2 Harcourt

378.32 International education board. Rose, Wickliffe 41-9850

"A history of the International education board, 1923-1938." (Subtitle) "The story of the foundation and work of the board, originating with Wickliffe Rose, and carried out by the generous support and aid of John D. Rockefeller, Jr. It is the story of how, in the fifteen years of its existence, a great foundation expended millions of dollars . . . with no other purpose than the 'promotion and advancement of education throughout the world.' In the course of its activities, the foundation appropriated six million dollars for the construction of the great 200-inch telescope by the California Institute of Technology. It built laboratories and schools, provided equipment and financed invaluable research, not only in the United States but in Denmark and Britain, Italy and Egypt" (School & Society) Index.

Christian Century 58:723 My 28 '41 230w
Churchman 155:34 O 1 '41 120w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:376 Ja '42 20w
School & Society 53:712 My 31 '41 130w

Reviewed by E. C. Lindeman
Survey 77:342 N '41 260w

GRAY, JAMES. Vagabond path. 494p $2.50
Macmillan 41-21888

This is the story of Michael Fontaine from the age of eight to sixty. It is the story of a talented, cosmopolitan man who is a successful writer, yet who has the feeling of the futility of his life. In the end he is able to give strength and courage to a younger man, son of the one woman he has truly loved, a courage to make something out of near disaster.

"There is not a line of careless prose in it, and much of it is beautifully composed. It is a civilized novel of subtle relationships and cosmopolitan flavor and has only the defect of its virtues—a studied detachment that keeps James Gray's characters at arm's length. They express what they feel a shade too eloquently; vitality is sacrificed to the apt phrase. Mr. Gray uses the rapier even where a blunt instrument would be more effective." George Conrad

+ — Books p10 N 16 '41 370w

"Michael emerges the eternal dilettante, a failure through lack of moral fiber. Recording the peregrinations of this charming failure Mr. Gray has admirably achieved his 'thorny and crabbed enterprise.'" Drake de Kay

+ N Y Times p7 N 16 '41 800w

"An unusually penetrating study of a man's life, various, civilized, and entertaining."

+ New Yorker 17:95 N 8 '41 60w

"'Vagabond Path' is not a very good novel." Clyde Beck

— + Sat R of Lit 24:13 N 15 '41 550w

GRAY, STANLEY. Half that glory. 468p $2.50
Macmillan 41-7649

"Novel of the American Revolution. The son of a Virginia planter runs away from home with his gigantic mulatto half-brother. He takes to the sea, turns temporary pirate, adventures in Holland and England, and on the advent of the Revolution, allies himself with the French playwright-adventurer, Beaumarchais, in securing unofficial aid from France." Library J

"'Half That Glory'—despite the somewhat predictable story of Christopher's private life—is a good historical novel for the adequate reason that Mr. Gray has a very good knowledge of the events around which he has spun his plot. No chapter in all American history is more complicated than our Revolutionary diplomacy. In some respects, no chapter is less creditable; in others, more remarkable. Mr. Gray has interpreted it wisely and used it well. His novel is a real addition to historical fiction if for no other reason than that the persistent, sparkling Beaumarchais at last comes into his own." A. B. Tourtellot

+ Books p8 Ap 27 '41 650w

Christian Century 58:865 Jl 2 '41 50w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 66:304 Ap 1 '41 70w
Nation 152:648 My 31 '41 40w

"A tale which has its exciting moments. One feels, however, that judicious cutting of many historical passages would improve the fictional value, and that a more artful delineation of Chris's character would gain for him a warmer sympathy. In truth, one cannot quite like Chris, who, until his escape from home, is portrayed as a rather effeminate youth afflicted by an inferiority complex and a mother-fixation. Only after humiliations at William and Mary College, scholastic disgrace and the paternal beating does he commence his career of lusty masculinity, and his later bravery seems in every case to have a strongly egoistic motive." D. De K.

+ — N Y Times p23 My 4 '41 700w

Sat R of Lit 23:21 Ap 26 '41 80w

GRAYSON, CHARLES, ed. New stories for men. 644p $3 Doubleday 41-20881

This anthology of thirty-six short stories contains works by Hervey Allen, Benjamin Appel, Irvin S. Cobb, Vardis Fisher, Paul Gallico, MacKinlay Kantor, Sinclair Lewis, John

GRAYSON, CHARLES, ed.—Continued.
Steinbeck, T. S. Stribling, James Thurber, Jerome Weidman, Wythe Williams and others.

Booklist 38:113 D 1 '41

"The book is a good job of its kind. These are in general stories that have a beginning, a middle, and an end; their action is single, entire, and of a certain magnitude; and their plot is more important than their characters."

Basil Davenport

+ Sat R of Lit 24:10 N 22 '41 450w

GRAYSON, DAVID, pseud. See Baker, R. S.

GREAT BRITAIN. Air ministry. Bomber command. 124p il maps pa $1 Doubleday

358.4 Great Britain. Royal air force. Bomber command. World war, 1939—Aerial operations

"Story, as comprehensive as possible in wartime, of the set-up of the bomber arm of the RAF, together with a history of operations and many reports from flight logs, etc. They started out weak in materials, getting fairly negligible results. The book says that now they are warmed up. Eighty illustrations, some fine." New Repub

New Repub 106:30 Ja 5 '42 60w

"The best official pamphlet the war has yet produced."

+ New Statesman & Nation 22:382 O 25 '41 60w

Springf'd Republican p6 N 24 '41 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p503 O 11 '41 800w

GREAT BRITAIN. Air raid precautions department. Air raid precautions. American ed [293p] il $3 Chemical pub. co.

623.38 Great Britain—Air defenses. Air raids —Protective measures 41-9898

"The Chemical Publishing Co. has put together in one volume for American readers ten official British reports on air raid precautions giving the procedures and methods used in the past two years. Detailed instructions and specifications are presented in these reports regarding the organization and practices for the various services required in air raid activities, such as local communication service, clearance parties, air wardens' service, structural defense, building protection, respirators, etc. Of particular interest to health officials in this country who may under future eventualities be called upon for air raid service are the sections on first aid and rescue parties, requirements for shelters, detection of poisonous gases, and decontamination services." Am J Pub Health

"The bringing together of this material into one convenient volume should be of great value to the civilian defense committees now being established throughout this country. Although the procedures adopted in Britain were drawn to meet their special conditions and under great pressure, a study of these reports should make our own preparations more efficient." Sol Pincus

+ Am J Pub Health 31:1094 O '41 350w
Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '41

"It should be noted that much of this information is outdated by the high-powered bombs now in use, bombs that were not in use when this information was collected."

Eng N 127:76 Ag 28 '41 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:36 Jl '41

GREEN, ELEANOR. Ariadne spinning. 268p $2 Doubleday

41-20161

Short novel about Francesca Brown, wife of a rector in a small town. To eke out the little excitement in her life Francesca very nearly commits an indiscretion, but it is the rector himself who is really indiscreet.

"Articulate and passionate herself, Miss Green has published two other novels, 'Pastoral,' and 'The Hill.' Her breathlessness is embarrassing, her subtleties obscure; ridiculously sublime, her characters seem less real than their mythical prototypes. Two hundred and sixty-eight short pages suffice for the legend of this modern Ariadne. But weary of humorless intensity, the reader may echo Chaucer—"It is so long, it were an heavy thing." Nancy Flagg

Books p14 O 5 '41 400w

"One reads this short novel about a handful of people in a small town with a mixed feeling of admiration and disappointment; admiration for Miss Green's sensitive, often exquisite manner of writing, and disappointment over the fact that so much care and so much talent should be wasted on such a threadbare tale. . . Miss Green is a gifted writer who, we feel, should have more to offer than good style. Her sense for the unusual, so intense and persistent throughout the book, should lead her toward a deeper curiosity as to the sources of human action. We think that she should be able then to write not only a sensitive story but a strong novel." Marianne Hauser

+ — N Y Times p6 S 23 '41 750w

"Extremely sensitive writing does not quite redeem the story's unreality."

+ — New Yorker 17:109 S 20 '41 30w

"Somehow there seems to be an unreality about 'Ariadne Spinning' which weakens the development of the main character. Individual passages in the book are simply yet beautifully expressed but these are not enough to make the novel a memorable one. It is a short novel, and at the same time, incomplete."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e O 12 '41 300w

GREEN, JAMES A. William Henry Harrison; his life and times. 536p il $5 Garrett

B or 92 Harrison, William Henry 41-25076

"The author is an Ohio man. . . His concern is to show that Ohio's first military hero has substance as a soldier and not mere militia stuffing—that he played a significant part in saving the Northwest Territory from the British in the War of 1812. Mr. Green . . . has used prodigal detail to build up the picture of the country into which William Henry Harrison came in 1791 as a brand-new ensign of infantry, the country in which he grew up as the country grew up and which he left, in 1840, at the age of 67, in a tumult of band music and shouting, bound back East as President-elect." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

"It is a long book. It gets tedious at times. It magnifies the stature of the ninth President, glorifies the growing West and puts the East in a place which the East will not gracefully accept as its own. But the Ohio man knows his Ohio river people, he has assembled their history—and he is not ignorant of the history of which their history is a part. He has written a book full of corroborative detail, not a bald and unconvincing narrative. And it materially assists toward a broader and fairer mental picture of a period which the furor politicus has made legendary." H. I. Brock

+ N Y Times p3 Ja 11 '42 750w

"The book is most valuable for its copious quotations from the sources about contemporary social life—detailed descriptions of banquets, meetings, taste in architecture and furniture, campaign songs and similar Americana. But it has serious weaknesses. . . This volume is an example, unfortunately, of what can happen when an author tackles a subject earnestly and reads everything he can lay hands on that might possibly contribute—but without the necessary background in history and historical method." S. L. Jackson

+ — Springf'd Republican p10 D 23 '41 500w

GREEN, JULIAN. Then shall the dust return; tr. from the French by James Whithall. 290p $2.50 Harper

(W) 41-7859

There are three parts to this tale of the transmigration of souls. In the first part a young boy living in Wales before the beginning of English history finds a chain and in a dream is shown how the chain links him with two men of still earlier times. We follow Hoël's life to its end; then read the story of the sixteenth-century Frenchman Bertrand Lombard and his daughter, Helene; and finally there is, in somewhat briefer form, the story of the twentieth-century Jeanne and her husband Louis. In dreams and visions all these become aware, from time to time, of the chain, symbol of their continuation thru time.

"A contrived, put-together novel and a device for bridling fancy. . . His writing is strong-fibred as a cable. But the seaweed and barnacles have all but covered the cable, the ends have almost sprung loose and the voice that would communicate comes vague and unsteady through space." Milton Lehman
+ — Books p8 My 18 '41 500w

"The three tales seemed brewed from a decoction of palingenesis, metempsychosis, cultural anthropology and psychoanalysis, with a tincture of black magic. No conclusion seems to be reached other than that dreams are atavistic and that human lives seem to have inexplicably loose threads—unless they are part of a larger skein. How the chain received its evil properties is Varouna's mystery. There is however, an optimism unusual to the author in the final reunion of the man and woman who had eluded each other through the centuries, and the picaresque adventures of the vagabond, Hoel, are told in excellently simple and direct narrative." E. V. R. Wyatt
+ Commonweal 34:139 My 30 '41 500w

Reviewed by Catherine Van Dyne
Library J 66:357 Ap 15 '41 80w

Reviewed by Dorothy Chamberlain
New Repub 104:894 Je 30 '41 480w

"A subtle writer with a strong sense of the invisible, Julian Green fuses dream and physical reality into a new reality. He is a visionary who escapes what one French critic calls the present-day epidemic of documentation. And his somber visions, instinct with the tragic sense of life, prove him to be a poet among novelists—a poet in the direct line of descent from Rimbaud." Justin O'Brien
+ N Y Times p6 My 11 '41 950w

"Finely written but otherwise not very impressive story. . . The people are interesting, but somehow the story doesn't hang together."
+ — New Yorker 17:91 My 10 '41 50w

"Julian Green sees man as a fragmentary being in the space of time. He has written a timeless story that has the poetic qualities and the pure beauty of an old legend." Klaus Lambrecht
+ Sat R of Lit 24:9 My 17 '41 450w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 20 '41 160w

"In Personal Record Green speaks of his difficulties in writing this new book. . . Its theme is transmigration, or, from another standpoint, human destiny. It is a strange, scrupulous, uneasy piece of work; small wonder that he was troubled in the making of it."
+ — Time 37:100 My 12 '41 500w

"The first part of Julian Green's Then Shall the Dust Return promises better things than are later delivered. It is a story with a vivid sense of the very long ago, and mediaeval hearts and minds, but why so capable a craftsman should have thought it worth doing is difficult to explain." Robert Littell
+ — Yale R n s 30:xiv summer '41 50w

GREEN, PAUL. The Highland call. 280p il $2.50 Univ. of N.C. press

812 MacDonald, Mrs Flora—Drama 41-51925

"A symphonic play of American history in two acts; with hymn tunes, folksongs, ballads, and dance." (Subtitle) The theme is Flora MacDonald's life in the Carolinas. The Scottish heroine, having taken the oath of allegiance to the king, was given a plantation. When the Revolution came, she with other Scottish loyalists, refused to join the colonists, and so was forced to leave. Illustrated with scenes from the play as produced in Fayetteville, N.C. Includes music.

Booklist 38:49 O 15 '41

"'The Highland Call,' is drama which cannot be transplanted, but in its rightful place is extremely interesting, and gives to all the participants an opportunity for creative expression in worthy and significant form. It could well be adapted to other regions. At present North Carolina seems to have rather a monopoly." W. P. Eaton
+ Books p24 O 19 '41 110w

GREEN, PHILIP LEONARD. Our Latin American neighbors. 182p $2 Hastings house
918 Latin America (W) 41-12192

Analysis of the historical beginnings, racial strains, and other forces which have shaped Latin American life, and its relations with the leading European countries. Bibliography. Index.

"This little book has a distinctly popular style, and the material included is elementary in character. One could have no quarrel with this level of presentation if accuracy and a discriminating acquaintance with modern scholarship in the various fields were consistently exhibited. . . The book as a whole offers an uninformed reader a considerable amount of information in tabloid form. . . The book has an index and a brief bibliography. It is a useful tour de force and perhaps the author should not be too strenuously condemned for the superlatives used in the publisher's 'blurb.'" A. S. Aiton
+ Ann Am Acad 218:213 N '41 360w

"Mr. Green gives sympathetic and intelligent treatment to his subject." Joseph McSorley
+ Cath World 153:753 S '41 550w

School & Society 54:48 Jl 19 '41 30w

GREENAWAY, EMILY. Sweepstakes. 220p $2 Houghton

(W) 41-2314

When the Community Welfare Committee attempted to persuade Frank Collins not to sell sweepstake tickets, he argued that many people, having some problem money could solve, buy the tickets on a gamble, the purchase gives them a mental "lift," and often they find the solution before the winning numbers are published. In a series of connected short stories, the author here shows proof of Frank's reasonings.

Booklist 37:324 Mr 15 '41

"The sketches range from romance to tragedy; they are set forth compactly and with feeling." Lisle Bell
+ Books p11 F 16 '41 240w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Merrill
Boston Transcript p3 F 15 '41 390w

"The stories are vivid sketches of the particular problems of typical village people, sympathetically told. Each brief episode does an economical job of illuminating the character, needs and ambitions of the ticket-holder and his nearest relatives and friends. . . On the whole this is a cheerful, entertaining and optimistic book, fresh with sincere sympathy for the problems of ordinary people." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p7 F 16 '41 440w

"A pleasant book."
+ New Yorker 17:82 F 15 '41 30w

"It is impossible to keep any continuous thread of suspense in so many stories, except the mild interest in where some possible prize may fall, and none of the separate stories have enough strength to carry the book. The scheme is interesting but there is too much scheme." P. S.

GREENAWAY, EMILY—Continued

— + Sat R of Lit 23:21 Mr 1 '41 270w
Wis Lib Bul 37:55 Mr '41

GREENE, MRS ALICE (BORCHARD). The philosophy of silence. 254p $2.50 Smith, Richard R.

179 Silence 41-932

"The author outlines a brief history of her subject... Dr Greene summarizes the contribution of silence to religious practice as twofold: First, 'to detach the attention from outer stimuli'; and, second, 'to focus them upon inward promptings and spiritual awakening'... The remainder of the book is devoted to the practice of silence: (1) As a self-discipline; (2) as a source of healing, power and refreshment, and (3) as a source of knowledge." Springf'd Republican

Cath World 152:766 Mr '41 360w

"The practical technic in concluding chapters makes this work a valuable text-book for those who desire to understand and practice silence whether their approach be intellectual or emotional." A. L. Murray

+ Churchman 155:17 Mr '41 170w

"Mrs. Greene's volume belongs to the great tradition of her subject, adding to philosophic reflection much quiet exhortation." H. W. S.

+ J Philos 38:502 Ag 28 '41 180w

"The Philosophy of Silence,' well written and with its text substantiated by eminent personages in this field, offers much that is helpfully suggestive. Worthy of specific commendation is Dr Greene's attempt to bring about a closer understanding between the East and the West. This makes the book of interest whether silence is placed to a practical use or not."

+ — Springf'd Republican p16 Ja 31 '41 500w

GREENE, FRANK F. How to create cartoons; a text book for class instruction, cartoon clubs, and self-instruction. 197p il $3.50 Harper
741 Caricatures and cartoons. Drawing—Instruction (W) 41-4423

In three parts: the first gives the fundamentals of drawing cartoons; the second explains the comedy elements in them; and the last section describes the making of comic strips. Index.

Booklist 37:354 Ap 1 '41

Wis Lib Bul 37:52 Mr '41

GREENHOE, FLORENCE. Community contacts and participation of teachers. 91p $2; pa $1.50 Am. council on public affairs 371.104 Teachers

"This is a sociological study dealing mainly with teacher-community contacts in leisure pursuits. Attention is centered on teacher mobility, teacher reaction to community conduct codes, and teacher participation in organized community life." Social Educ

School & Society 53:456 Ap 5 '41 40w

Reviewed by J. C. Aldrich

Social Educ 5:633 D '41 160w

Social Studies 32:336 N '41 20w

GREENOUGH, RUTH (HORNBLOWER) (MRS CHESTER NOYES GREENOUGH). Chester Noyes Greenough; an account of his life and collected studies. 2v 328;303p il v 1 $3.50: v2 $2.50; set $5 Harvard co-op.

B or 92 Greenough, Chester Noyes

Chester Noyes Greenough (1874-1938) was dean of Harvard College from 1921 to 1927. Volume one of this work contains "an account of his life as teacher, dean, master and scholar," written by his wife. Volume two contains a collection of his "studies" on English literature and related subjects.

Reviewed by D. F. Bond

Am Hist R 46:954 Jl '41 700w

"Those who, like the reviewer, did not have the privilege of knowing Professor Greenough may find some compensation in these handsome volumes. Such readers will be especially grateful for the account of his life by Mrs. Greenough, which, as it deals with the quiet activity of a scholar and teacher, might as appropriately be called a portrait or expanded 'character' as a biography. We are admitted to an intimacy with Greenough as he worked, as scholar, teacher, and dean, and we lay down the volume with a deep appreciation of his qualities of mind and character." L. I. Bredvold

+ New Eng Q 14:145 Mr '41 700w

"Mrs. Greenough has done an excellent biography of her late husband, free from rhapsody yet ever warmly and understandingly appreciative of 'C. N. G.'s' work as a human person and scholar. Harvard graduates of the Greenough era will derive a nostalgic pleasure from these pages. But it is not merely a Harvard book. Students in whatever college, and parents of students, will find many of the workings of their chosen university made helpfully clear to them." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p35 Mr 23 '41 1500w

Springf'd Republican p12 Je 13 '41 460w

GREENWOOD, HERBERT WILLIAM. Infra-red for everyone. 94p il $5 Chemical pub. co. [12s 6d British periodicals]

778 Photography, Infra-red A41-3712

"Since infra-red photography was taken up by the Press some years ago photographers have followed its development with keen interest. Though a comparatively old branch of photography, the discovery of new sensitizing dyes allowed exposures to be speeded up so that the process could be used by ordinary camera workers... The novelty wore off after a year or so—and Mr. Greenwood now gives us a very interesting summary of what has been achieved, and also of the future possibilities of this interesting and valuable branch of photography." Times [London] Lit Sup

"The author is to be commended not only for presenting effectively the value of infra-red as a discriminating medium of investigation, but also for his repeated warnings regarding its limitations. Frequent disappointments have resulted from exaggerated expectations and from a lack of understanding of the conditions determining the peculiar characteristics of infra-red radiation." E. F. Barker

+ R of Scientific Instruments 12:495 O '41 430w

"This book can be thoroughly recommended to those who are interested in the subject."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p571 N 9 '40 550w

GREENWOOD, ROBERT. Mr Bunting in peace and war [Eng title: Mr Bunting, also Mr Bunting at war]. 480p $2.50 Bobbs [7s 6d; 8s Dent]

41-23062

Story of a quiet little middle-class Englishman, to whom his work, his family, and his home is all the heaven he asks. When he loses his job Mr Bunting is able to carry on, because he has always been reasonably careful of his money. With the outbreak of the war Mr Bunting steps into action again, a man with a vision and a job of work to do.

Booklist 38:130 D 15 '41

"Mr. Bunting in Peace and War' gives an accurate picture of the pedestrian little people who are really fighting this war. It is their sons who came out of Dunkirk, who unbelievably beat back the Luftwaffe, who patrol city streets and countryside at night, who pay the taxes and will foot the bill of the subsequent peace. The account that Mr. Greenwood gives of them is accurate, not very exciting and not even rising to a high emotional pitch when tragedy strikes at his characters. But it gives a cozy, substantial, dogged portrait of those small, dogged English people." Iris Barry

+ Books p12 N 16 '41 550w

"Many readers will be glad to meet Mr. Bunting again, and in the larger events of the war he is as consistent to his character as conceived as he is attractive. Mr. Greenwood's new novel brings out the secret of his success in dealing with the 'little man.' On the one hand he does not condescend, and on the other he does not use the 'little man' as a stick to beat larger people." Charles Marriott

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 31 '41 160w

"The Buntings are, quintessentially, England. . . An England whose common, decent people, as seen here, bear a startling resemblance to common, decent people anywhere, and whose inflexible objection to knuckling under derives from uncounted generations of assured independence. . . Herr Hitler has had many testimonials, but never one more quietly grim." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p22 N 9 '41 850w

New Yorker 17:109 N 15 '41 100w

Reviewed by George Dangerfield

Sat R of Lit 24:12 D 6 '41 550w

"In these times when the common people, the bulk of us, have given resounding proof of our qualities of fortitude and endurance, it seems a pity that praise must be withheld from a novel which attempts the praise of a common man. But Bunting is a bore, and only genius could make such a fatuous, opinionated and insular creature supportable, in spite of his variety of big moments. . . He is a low-brow of low-brows, with an ignorance which is appalling in its pretentiousness and in him Mr. Greenwood does far less than justice to the honest, decent British workingman." John Hampson

— Spec 167:454 N 7 '41 170w

"All the qualities which we are taught to believe are peculiarly British are intrinsic to this obscure little man. The book will be received by many readers with enthusiasm and sympathy."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 9 '41 360w

"After 'Mr. Bunting,' as was only to be expected comes 'Mr. Bunting at War.' It is a fetching story, all the more amusing for being a shade less innocent than it seems, about the arduous of the not specially heroic during the Battle of Britain, and in the reading it cannot fail to produce a glow of pride or thanksgiving, or something vague but very like it."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p541 N 1 '41 450w

GREGG, ALAN. The furtherance of medical research, 129p $2 Yale univ. press 610.7 Medical research 41-51937

"The director of medical sciences at the Rockefeller Foundation analyzes the nature of medical research and its relationship to society. The university, as the older institution, is contrasted with the newer, the foundation. Specific advice upon the management of foundations is offered. A third of the book is devoted to the research workers themselves, the nature of their work, their qualifications, their careers, the best ways of selecting, training, and aiding them. An outline docket item and an outline for presenting a proposal for a capital grant for building an institute are appended. Based upon the eighteenth series of Terry Lectures at Yale." Library J

Reviewed by A. J. Carlson

Ann Am Acad 219:205 Ja '42 140w

Booklist 38:75 N 1 '41

Christian Century 58:1213 O 1 '41 70w

Reviewed by H. A. von Uff

Library J 66:792 S 15 '41 110w

GREGG, ALAN. Hidden wings mystery, 271p
$1.75 Doubleday

41-14050

Mystery story for older boys.

"The style is expert and adult, and there is not a girl in sight." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 N 30 '41 120w

"A gripping tale." E. V. Wyatt

+ Cath World 154:379 D '41 40w

GREGG, JOSIAH. Diary and letters; v 1, Southwestern enterprises, 1840-1847; ed. by Maurice Garland Fulton; with an introd. by Paul Horgan. (Am. exploration and travel ser) 413p map $3.50 Univ. of Okla. press

B or 92 Southwest

(41-13261)

Josiah Gregg is known to history as the author of a book dealing with the Santa Fe trade in the 1830s: The Commerce of the Prairies. This first volume containing his diary and letters covers the years 1840 to 1847 and records his travels in the Southwest and his services in the War with Mexico. A second volume is designed to complete the record to his death in 1850. A biographical essay on Gregg by Paul Horgan introduces the volume. Index.

"Mr. Fuller has put all students of western history under deep obligation to him by his discovery and editing of Gregg's Diary and Letters, which throw much light upon Gregg the man, and present one of the best sources of the history of the frontier of the period covered. . . Whether or not Gregg was a man of imagination, his faithful recordings of his life and journeys upon the Great Plains fire the imagination of others and arouse a secret nostalgia for days when men rode more slowly on horseback or in covered wagons, and not in armored cars and tanks." F. L. Owsley

+ Ann Am Acad 218:247 N '41 550w

"The editorial work is thorough and scrupulous rather than selective; the determination to include everything has resulted in tiresome repetitiousness—the same stories, the same observations, the same criticisms appearing again and again in diary, letters, and newspaper articles. Much of this might well have been omitted, or relegated to hospitable footnotes. The introductory essay by Paul Horgan on Josiah Gregg himself is the best thing that has yet been written on the historian of the Santa Fe trail, charming as literature, valuable as history, penetrating as criticism." H. S. Commager

+ — Books p2 J1 20 '41 650w

"The editing is careful and competent, the arrangement of the great mass of material orderly. Paul Horgan's introduction has a classical finish. The book is a landmark in Southwestern chronicles." K. C. K.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 N 15 '41 440w

"Mr. Horgan has unearthed a great amount of new material. Perhaps he or some one else will one day make it into a narrative biography. In its present form it is fascinating to any one who likes to dabble in Western history. . . The editing is good, though not exhaustive. The book could have been shortened and improved by omitting material which is duplicated in the letters and journals." R. L. Duffus

+ — N Y Times p4 J1 20 '41 1350w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 14 '41 130w

GREGORY, FRANKLIN LONG. White wolf, 271p $2 Random house

41-16488

A modern horror story. A young American neifress apparently reverts to the type of a lycanthropic French ancestor, and at night roams the countryside near Philadelphia attempting to appease her desire for human blood.

GREGORY, F. L.—Continued

"Try as we would, we couldn't feel gripped by this horror tale. . . . In our opinion—a prejudiced one, like as not—this didn't quite jell into a slick-paper exhibit, but that's no reason why a fancier of werewolves shouldn't investigate and see for himself." Will Cuppy
— Books p17 Ag 24 '41 120w

"It is a tragic tale and one calculated to chill the blood of any reader whose nerves are not well under control." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p16 Ag 31 '41 200w
New Yorker 17:68 Ag 23 '41 30w

"Twentieth-century American version of loup garou lore handled with due regard to traditional trappings and plentiful, if heavy-handed, thrills. Scary."

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:16 Ag 30 '41 40w
Springf'd Republican p7e S 7 '41 180w

GREGORY, HORACE. Poems, 1930-1940. 163p
$2.50 Harcourt

811 41-6403

This volume contains a selection of poems from the author's books Chelsea, Rooming House, No Retreat, and Chorus for Survival (Book Review Digest, 1930, 1933, 1935), together with some new poems not heretofore published in book form.

"Gregory's emotional range is perhaps the most comprehensive among modern poets, and as a craftsman in the movement and texture of words he is equally varied, commanding a precision of phrase and purity of line which can evoke effects of concentrated and sinewy intensity, of emotional warmth and vigor, and of disciplined, formal grace." Elizabeth Drew
+ Atlantic Je '41 270w

Booklist 37:461 Je 1 '41

"Mr. Gregory's technical equipment has grown in intricacy and sureness with the enlarging of his themes. As Kenneth Burke has already noted, the staccato of his earlier poems has tended to give place to more sustained rhythms. The violently elliptical quality of sound and image becomes less abrupt. . . . One feels behind his sharp awareness of what is about him a depth of terror and a depth of tenderness for the human lot. These things are not modern but timeless." G. F. Whicher

+ Books p2 My 4 '41 650w

Christian Century 58:659 My 14 '41 40w

"In general, the earliest and the latest poems in this volume seem the most successful. Those in the final section show a mind restless and still capable of change. If books are being read at all ten years from now, Gregory's will be. Or fifty years." Kenneth Fearing
+ Living Age 360:497 Jl '41 330w

Reviewed by Randall Jarrell
Nation 153:257 S 20 '41 1200w

Reviewed by Conrad Aiken
New Repub 105:346 S 15 '41 550w

"Lucid and eloquent writing is found everywhere in the new poems where Mr. Gregory's serious feeling moves with ease and certainty, and what he says is relevant to the life of our day." P. M. Jack

+ N Y Times p2 My 4 '41 800w

"Gregory writes well, and his chosen manner improves as he goes along, but his poetry has a definite Graeco-Roman air about it, the air of a tendency pushed to its limit, of writing-in-the-manner-of-writing. No toughness of subject can help this manner. Nothing can break through it. It is lifeless, it is 'literature.'" Louise Bogan

+ New Yorker 17:85 Ap 12 '41 200w

Reviewed by S. J. Kunitz
Poetry 58:152 Je '41 1000w

"I began by saying that the book is important; I should end by saying it is exciting. Putting aside the yardstick of the appraiser and once more assuming the robe of the crystal-gazer, I predict that this volume will be awarded this year's Pulitzer for Poetry. I predict, moreover, that it will be an easy winner." Louis Untermeyer

+ Sat R of Lit 23:15 Ap 12 '41 800w
Wis Lib Bul 37:72 Ap '41

"Gregory is primarily a dramatic poet with the command of lyric which, in our poetic tradition, has always accompanied true dramatic expression. His early monologues concentrate on the apprehensive self-deceptions and innocent bewilderment of humanity. He deals with each situation ironically but gently. Human experience is his material, but he does not patronize or poeticize it. He simply extracts its essence, adding nothing which might artificially dignify it. The inherent dignity of the essential is the beauty of Gregory's poetry." J. L. Sweeney
+ Yale R n s 30:821 summer '41 450w

GREGORY, JACKSON. Ace in the hole. 245p
$2 Dodd

41-4132

Western story.

Booklist 37:410 My 1 '41

"Jackson Gregory is a past master at devising plots with novel twists, portraying to the life odd and unusual and amazing characters, and combining startling adventure and wholesome romance in a fusion that both astonishes and delights his readers. In this new story he is in top form and writes in a crisp, terse and vivid style that makes every word count." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 17 '41 360w

GREGORY, JACKSON. I must ride alone. 245p
$2 Dodd [8s 3d Hodder]

40-3849

Western story.

Booklist 36:307 Ap 1 '40

"A galloping tale, written in Jackson Gregory's crisp, vivid and breezy style, and with his steadily growing skill in characterization, and while perhaps not quite so good in all respects as its immediate predecessor from this prolific writer, 'Mad O'Hara of Wild River,' it is far superior to the ordinary run of Western yarns." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p16 F 18 '40 240w

GREGORY, JACKSON. The red law. 244p $2
Dodd

41-21724

Western story.

Booklist 38:160 Ja 1 '42

"It's a hearty, earnest story of life in the raw, with lingo to match." Will Cuppy
Books p28 N 16 '41 90w

"One of the best as well as one of the most prolific of present-day writers of Western fiction, Jackson Gregory excels not only in narrative skill, but also in diversity—amazingly differentiating each new tale in plot, scene, setting, type of characters from all its predecessors in the long list of his novels. It is several years since he turned out a story of fighting cowboys, but this is such a story, and an exceptionally good one." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p40 N 9 '41 130w

GREIG, MAYSIE (JENNIFER AMES, pseud).
Ring without romance. 275p $2 Doubleday [8s 3d Hodder]

41-2432

Story of the young social secretary to a fashionable London woman. At a seaside resort in Devon she met a dashing young Londoner, masquerading as a clerk, and there her troubles began. The scene shifts from London to New York and Florida, and ends in Africa.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p18 F 23 '41 90w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p28 Mr 2 '41 200w

GRENFELL, RUSSELL (T 124, pseud). Sea power. 244p $2 Doubleday

359 Sea power. Great Britain—Defenses. Great Britain—Navy. Strategy 41-51863

The author, a British naval officer and a disciple of Mahan, argues that Great Britain should put faith in a strong navy, defend the empire, and not try to settle European affairs by means of armies. His arguments are based on studies of England's past wars during the last five centuries.

Booklist 38:2 S '41

"The contents of 'Sea Power' will be very comforting to isolationists in the United States and to all who have opposed use of American soldiers outside the Western Hemisphere. To those who take a broader view, the contents of the book will be easily refutable. There is no attempt to decry the value of Captain Grenfell's literary effort, for it is well written and based upon extensive historical knowledge, yet its final importance may well be that his overemphasis on naval superiority leads to a re-estimation of the necessity of an equally strong army." P. J. Searles

+ — Books p16 S 28 '41 950w

"What held true for the former times which Mahan interpreted so effectively does not necessarily hold true today. Many readers probably will disagree with Captain Grenfell's concept of the strategic nature of this war. Britain is not simply on the defensive against Germany. The Churchill Government's avowed policy is aimed at the complete overthrow of the Nazis, and the restoration of individual liberty among the oppressed peoples of Europe. The author has not proved that that end can be achieved merely by making the British Isles impregnable behind the shield of the British navy and air force." H. T.

Christian Science Monitor p20 S 10 '41 550w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:384 Ja '42 30w

Reviewed by G. W. Hill

Library J 66:668 Ag '41 90w

Reviewed by Samuel Grafton

New Repub 105:556 O 27 '41 1200w

Reviewed by H. E. Yarnell

New Repub 105:554 O 27 '41 1450w

Reviewed by Kingsley Martin

New Statesman & Nation 20:448 N 2 '40 1600w

"Able argued as some of his views are, it is not possible to acquit T 124 of some special pleading. He advocates economic pressure, but passes somewhat lightly over the difficulties the statesmen have always had to meet from neutrals. He asserts that the Englishman has a peculiar aptitude for the conduct of war at sea denied to 'military' nations; and an ineptitude for war on land, using selected passages from Fortescue to illustrate it. It would not be difficult to match those in naval annals. In spite, however, of these exaggerations there is much sound and well-reasoned matter, much to stimulate thought, and some comparisons of expenditure that deserve serious consideration, in this book." H. W. Richmond

+ — Spec 165:342 O 4 '40 700w

"An author who is so careless in regard to historical developments which come within the special province of his own profession hardly gains authority for himself when he assumes the role of an historical critic on a broader scale. Yet the book has a real value. In addition to being a challenge to accepted ideas, its publication is proof that freedom of opinion and of speech still persists in Britain."

— + Spring'd Republican p6 O 20 '41 550w

"The book contains much food for serious thought. When writing of matters of history, and pure strategy, the author is temperate, cogent, and all the more convincing by reason of those qualities. But when he turns to questions of international policy, and advocates for this country an isolationist policy of expediency, the reader feels that he is in that respect out of touch with realities. That criticism, however, applies only to the last of the ten chapters, and the preceding nine contain an exposition of the nature of sea power, and its application to the circumstances of this country, which is of the highest value."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p491 S 28 '40 900w

GREY, ZANE. Twin Sombreros. 301p $2 Harper

(W) 41-51902

Western story.

Booklist 38:36 O 1 '41

"Complete with Indians, scenery, lingo and everything you could ask in a Zane Grey story." Will Cuppy

Books p10 Je 22 '41 80w

"By his love for the out-of-doors, his wide travels in the West, his genuine story-telling talent, and repeated practice in the writing of stories dealing with the West, Zane Grey brought this kind of fiction to a high state of perfection, so far as his public was concerned at least, and there must be scores of men and boys who have read all of his other 52 titles. 'Twin Sombreros' is made up of the same ingredients as previous successes, and these are mixed, with a professional skill born of long practice."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Je 22 '41 300w

Wis Lib Bul 37:140 J1 '41

GRIEVE, CHRISTOPHER MURRAY (HUGH MCDIARMID, pseud), ed. Golden treasury of Scottish poetry, 415p $2.50 (8s 6d) Macmillan

821.08 Scottish poetry—Collections

(W) [A41-2981]

Anthology of Scottish poetry from earliest times to the present, including some translations from the Gaelic and the Latin. Contains a long introductory essay by the editor. Glossary. Indexes.

Booklist 38:92 N 15 '41

"The Golden Treasury of Scottish Poetry' will make history. It is no ordinary anthology, nor has it been done with the editor's left hand. Hugh MacDiarmid was consumed with the desire to establish something, and his labors were those both of love and of hate: love of Scotland's language and hate for those who wish it away, or who condescendingly doubt that a great poetry can continue to be written in it. . . Mr. MacDiarmid's search among Scottish poems has been a passionate one, partly because he wants to prove that any poetry as glorious as this one has been cannot be dying, and partly because—well, let it go as a consuming love for his subject, which he evidently knows from top to bottom."

+ Books p21 S 14 '41 500w

"A remarkably comprehensive and well chosen anthology."

+ Christian Century 58:1113 S 10 '41 80w

Reviewed by Harold Hobson

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 18 '41 50w

"This new anthology of Scottish poetry deserves to stand beside Mr. Lennox Robinson's Golden Treasury of Irish Verse and I mean this as high praise. But first I should say that in my opinion Mr. MacDiarmid's introduction is largely pedantic mumbo jumbo." Louis MacNeice

GRIEVE, C. M.—Continued

+ — New Statesman & Nation 21:66 Ja 18 '41 700w

"Mr. Macdiarmid's anthology of Scottish poetry could have done with more poems and fewer opinions by the editor. . . Chiefly, the quarrel is with the critic Edwin Muir. . . Mr. Macdiarmid has been so busy arguing with Mr. Muir that he has forgotten his task of explaining and illustrating Scottish poetry and its language. Nevertheless, the poetry or a great deal of it is here and it is a poetry of variety, extremely ranging from the sentimental to the caustic, from the macabre Scots humor to the tender miniatures of the hearth: a great poetry in a mixed language, intensely national and extensively international. Mr. Macdiarmid will, though, I hope, revise and re-edit a new edition concerned only with the poetry, bequeathing his erudition to some learned society." P. M. Jack

+ — N Y Times p8 N 16 '41 600w

"The material, in spite of language difficulties, is enchanting, and it is well arranged in non-chronological order. There are interesting notes and a helpful glossary." Louise Bogan

+ New Yorker 17:96 O 18 '41 110w

"The book remains a record of one person's enthusiasms and prejudices rather than the authoritative and balanced collection that the title makes us expect. Yet even at his most wrong-headed, Mr. MacDiarmid is a valuable and stimulating critic. He cares a great deal about Scottish poetry, but he is not, like many Scots, parochial about it; he has read widely in many languages and, like a flightier W. P. Ker, points out affinities between Scottish poetry and European literatures. His strong likes and dislikes . . . jerk the reader out of the usual text-book categories . . . and make him look at the poems with a sharper eye." J. A. Smith

+ — Spec 166:122 Ja 31 '41 650w

"The first anthology to be made in English of the rich and varied landscape which is Scottish poetry. The generous and widely inclusive selection of poems is preceded by a scholarly introduction by the compiler. . . Here is full and sufficient proof that porridge is the true food of romance and that the harsh winds that blow across the moors stir the blood and heart to dream great dreams and record brave stories."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 S 2 '41 490w

Time 38:104 D 8 '41 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p78 F 15 '41 2350w

GRIFFIN, ALAN F. Freedom, American style [il. with contemporary cartoons]. 184p $1 Holt

323.44 Liberty. Democracy 40-33820

An account of the struggle for civil liberties in this country, tracing their English origins, and showing their denial in the totalitarian countries. Can be used as a high school text-book, or as supplementary reading. Index.

Books p38 D 1 '40 90w

"Vigorous and straightforward, it is a book which should be in every highschool library." Phillips Bradley

+ Survey G 30:258 Ap '41 30w

GRIFFIN, HENRY FARRAND. White cockade. 359p $2.50 Greystone

In the year 1794 Jonathan Brewster, captain of the Yankee brig Sally, fished a half-drowned youth out of the water near Nantes—a victim of the wholesale drownings of Royalists under the terror. The friendship which developed between the scion of royalty and the staunch young Yankee captain, is the main theme of this story which ranges from France, to the slave revolt in San Domingo and pioneer life on the Niagara frontier in the days of John Jacob Astor.

"It is exciting enough in a romantic and swash-buckling way. The characters, as is the usual case in such stories, are excuses for events rather than ends in themselves. Fault should not be found with Mr. Griffin on this account. But even in terms of its own genre, which is the historical romance, 'The White Cockade' must be judged imperfect. The introduction is much too long and the story is not long enough for its proper development. It is not too clear, on occasion, if the story of Charles Stuart is only a digression from that of Jonathan Brewster or vice versa. In the hands of a master of this form of the story telling art, such as Rafael Sabatini, we may be sure that an ambiguity of this kind would never have been felt." Milton Hindus

+ — Books p12 N 30 '41 440w

"This is a plot for which Mr. Griffin—although he contrives to give it a certain plausibility—claims no probability at all. He has used it for the core of a lavish and wide-ranging adventure story, full of romantic plots and daring deeds, and rising to a climax of positively cinematic violence. There are traces here of amateurish workmanship. Mr. Griffin has trouble with his dialogue, particularly when dialect is called for, and he sometimes leans more heavily upon the long arm of coincidence than seems altogether warrantable." Margaret Wallace

N Y Times p7 N 30 '41 500w

"The pretense that this is a novel for adults is little more than a transparent disguise. Before the vogue for blood and thunder, this book would have been issued modestly 'for boys from twelve to sixteen' among whom it deserves an approving public. It should satisfy their simple taste for action, and it contains no emotion they would not find elementary." Garrett Mattingly

Sat R of Lit 25:9 Ja 10 '42 310w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 4 '42 330w

GRIGGS, EARL LESLIE. Coleridge file; a biography of Sara Coleridge. 280p il $3.75 (12s 6d) Oxford

B or 92 Coleridge, Mrs Sara (Coleridge) A41-152

"Professor Griggs, known in the United States and in England for his scholarly edition of Coleridge's hitherto unpublished letters, for his biography of Hartley Coleridge, and for other studies in the same field of literary inquiry, has now added to his reputation by writing this biography of Coleridge's daughter. Being in the confidence of the present generation of the family, who have given him access to a quantity of manuscript material, he has been able to produce a book as authoritative as it is sympathetic." Christian Science Monitor

"Professor Griggs has told [the story] with grace, learning, sensitiveness, and sympathy. It is a worthy addition to the growing library of books about one of the most wonderful of English poets and his kinsfolk." S. C. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 F 15 '41 700w

"Mr. Griggs' life of Sara Coleridge, drawn mainly from unpublished manuscripts, is admirable. It would be difficult for a biographer to be unfair to so gentle and sensible a character. But Mr. Griggs is no less fair to those in her circle who have been a centre of controversy, and notably to her mother, whose virtues have so often been overlooked and defects exaggerated. He treats equally well the domestic and the literary sides of her life and particularly her editorial labours on her father's works. She is one who has long deserved such a study as this. It is a true and balanced portrait." H.I.A. F.

+ Manchester Guardian p6 S 27 '40 450w

Reviewed by Virginia Woolf

New Statesman & Nation 20:418 O 26
40 1850w

"Had Coleridge been alive today he would have argued for an hour the use of the French word, a practice he abhorred when there existed a perfectly good English equivalent. He could have had nothing but praise, however, for the sympathy of Professor Griggs's treatment of Sara, and the honesty and thoroughness of the research. 'Coleridge Fille,' good as a biography of Sara, is even better for the sidelights it throws on the later Coleridge." Frances Winwar

+ N Y Times p4 F 9 '41 1150w

"The presentation of Sara in full portrait has of course thrown new light on her father, as well as on many other members of the Coleridge, Southey, and Wordsworth families. Mr. Griggs's presentation is not extremely artful, but it is satisfying clear, concise, and direct. Best of all, it is natural: the author makes no compromise with the current demand for 'romantic' biographies. An authority in the field, he relies upon the solid merit of his work and upon the inherently interesting story of Sara Coleridge." Alexander Cowie

+ Sat R of Lit 24:19 Je 14 '41 320w

Times [London] Lit Sup p484 S 21 '40
800w

GRISWOLD, LAWRENCE. The other America.
360p maps $3 Putnam

918 South America (W) 41-12331

Analysis of the countries of South America, including Panama, as to history, government, military and naval forces, geography, communications, metropolitan areas, natural and mineral resources, industrial development, and general health conditions. A final chapter points out the economic readjustments of the future. Index.

Booklist 38:50 O 15 '41

"Here is another 'must' for the list of Latin-American reading. . . This volume is not as well written as Mr. Hubert Herring's, [Good Neighbors] but is more comprehensive, especially in its treatment of the nations other than the 'A. B. C.' powers . . . and in its inclusion of more historical material. In fact, one gathers the impression that history and geography, rather than economics and politics are Mr. Griswold's real interests, even though the current political and economic information is adequate." Nicholas Roosevelt

+ Books p2 Ag 3 '41 480w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:387 Ja '42 20w

"In general, the volume should prove most useful to those who want to have at hand information about South America in compact form, without frills and détours and controversial digressions. Mr. Griswold provides information of that kind; and he contrives to do it without dryness or dullness." T. R. Ybarra

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 17 '41 1000w

"This is a useful reference book, containing material which otherwise would have to be looked up in several reference works and standard histories. . . In spite of the general accuracy of the facts, the writing, in spots, might qualify for the Non Sequitur Department of the New Yorker. . . Whether a book on Latin America written in such a spirit will contribute much to our good relations with our best friends—the more liberal countries there—and further mutual hemisphere defense, is open to question." Stephen Naft

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 Ag 2 '41 700w

Scientific Bk Club R 12:3 Ag '41 130w

GRONDAL, MRS FLORENCE (ARMSTRONG). Stars, their facts and legends; il by Ralston Crawford. 57p $1 Garden City pub. co.

523 Stars—Juvenile literature (W) 41-699

"Fourteen sky charts, each faced by a page of simple, factual data, the explanatory text in about two brief paragraphs, make this book notable for its successful presentation of a large subject reduced to simplest terms. The two pages following each study give briefly the legend connected with the constellation, and this in no way interferes with purely factual material. The charts are blue background, the stars in their relative positions are white." Wis Lib Bul

"While the charts will not help actually to locate the constellations, they will serve admirably to stimulate the imagination and arouse interest in the mythological characters with which the ancients peopled the heavens. These drawings of Pegasus; of Orion the hunter; of Hercules the dragon, and the daughters of Hesperus; of the twins Castor and Pollux, and the rest, will make an excellent first book of the sky for the imaginative child, and will pleasantly supplement the more factual volumes." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 6 '41 150w

"A good introduction to star-finding for boys and girls or for any beginner."

+ Wis Lib Bul 37:160 O '41

GROVE, SIR GEORGE. Dictionary of music and musicians; ed. by H. C. Colles; supplementary volume [to 3d edition]. 688p il $5 Macmillan

780.3 Music—Dictionaries. Musicians—Dictionaries (W)

"Musical events of the 13 years since the publication of the third edition are covered briefly, and some previously recorded information is amplified. Biographies of living musicians are enlarged; particular attention is given to the broadcasting of music. Only those facts are included which are of interest to the musical amateur. References to material treated previously are given." (Booklist) For third edition of Grove's Dictionary see Book Review Digest, 1928.

Booklist 37:170 Ja 1 '41

"Some of the most illuminating articles are contributed by Egon Wellesz: those for example on eastern church music, the Ballet de Cour and modern opera. Disappointing, on the other hand, in Edwin Evans' judgment of Hindemith's recent compositions, is the imperviousness displayed to the fact of their increasing conventionalities. The thoughtful, comprehensive volume, of course, is extremely valuable, even though in spots it smacks of insularity." Paul Rosenfeld

+ New Repub 104:221 F 17 '41 330w

"Cross references are frequent but still more could have been used. . . Many biographies of living composers and musicians are found. Pronunciation is not given. . . The volume is well bound in green cloth to match the 1927 edition and also has the two-column page. This supplementary volume is recommended to all libraries which have the third edition."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 12:9 Ja '41 550w

GROVER, MRS BEATRICE (BEARD). Broad stripes and bright stars; il. by [the author]. [83p] $1 Greystone

929.9 Flags—U.S. U.S.—History—Juvenile literature 41-21912

The author-illustrator of this book for young readers has a five-year-old son who wanted a picture book about the Star Spangled Banner. This book is his answer. It tells the story of the flag itself and of the original thirteen states from which the United States sprang.

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p10 N 24 '41
30w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 35:113 N 21 '41 20w

"Each of the original thirteen states is presented as a child and the child is pictured standing on the outlined map of that state.

GROVER, BEATRICE—Continued

This might be confusing to the young reader. In spite of this criticism, the book contributes a good deal of information for children under eight. A section devoted to the history and care of our flag will be most useful. The book also contains a very brief account of the writing of "The Star-Spangled Banner." Recommended." A. M. Wetherell

+ — Library J 66:951 N 1 '41 140w

"Good for the very young." R. C. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 24:14 N 8 '41 20w

"It is a gay book, but no less instructive because of that."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 28 '41 130w

GROVES, CATHERINE. Get more out of life. 136p $1.25 Assn. press

173 Family. Psychology, Applied. Happiness

A brief resumé of the need for and the kind of work done by Family Counselors. Many case histories, usually very brief, are given as illustrations. Bibliography.

"How troubled people can find help is the concern of this simply worded, sensibly planned manual by a trained counselor with a family of her own. . . What we can do with ourselves when at cross-purposes with life, where we can go to get help from others; the place in our social scheme of the new occupation of family counselor; what social agencies can do, and some of the misconceptions prevalent on this subject, are discussed briefly and quietly, and a short reading list added for those engaged in solving personal problems for themselves or others."

+ Books p17 Ja 11 '42 150w

Christian Century 58:1475 N 26 '41 80w

J Home Econ 34:52 Ja '42 60w

GROVES, ERNEST RUTHERFORD. Marriage. rev ed 671p il $3.20 Holt

173.1 Marriage. Sexual ethics 41-10416

"The book is enlarged, but except for mention of increased reference material there is no statement of specific revision. For first edition see [Book Review Digest, 1933]." (Booklist). Chapter bibliographies. Indexes.

"Professor Groves suffers the heroic fate of the pioneer—namely, of being outmoded in his own territory. He is behind the newer, jazzier texts on preparation for marriage. Whereas he still clings to some of his sociological generalization and insight and thus produces a superior book from the point of view of scientific study, the newer models dispense with dull theorizing altogether and give straight, unadulterated advice." Kingsley Davis

+ Ann Am Acad 218:241 N '41 400w

Booklist 37:549 J1 15 '41

GROW, MALCOLM CUMMINGS, and ARM-STRONG, HARRY GEORGE. Fit to fly; a medical handbook for fliers. 387p $2.50 Appleton-Century

629.13256 Aeronautics—Medical aspects (W) 41-11671

"Stresses the place of physical fitness in aviation, and discusses health problems and prevention of diseases peculiar to today's flying." (Cleveland Open Shelf) Index.

Booklist 38:4 S '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 J1 '41

GRUBER, FRANK. The hungry dog. 280p $2 Farrar

41-9965

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p9 J1 20 '41 160w

"All good, riotous fun, with the detective element reduced to a minimum." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p10 J1 6 '41 180w

"Exuberant leading men and their plentiful stooges, canine and human, romp through plot packed with action and fun—tho' slightly incredible. Brisk and boisterous."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 Ag 2 '41 40w

GRUBER, FRANK. The Navy Colt. 278p $2 Farrar

(W) 41-19415

Detective story.

Booklist 38:177 Ja 15 '42

"It takes all kinds, and that goes for mystery reviewers, too. This department has never shouted with glee over the work of Frank Gruber, yet other critical authorities never fail to do so. Once more Gruber baffles Cuppy, but completely." Will Cuppy

Books p17 O 12 '41 100w

"If you have a soft spot in your heart for Johnny Fletcher and Sam Cragg you will enjoy this swiftly paced story of their further adventures." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p26 O 19 '41 250w

"Exhilarating."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:36 O 18 '41 40w

Time 38:96 N 3 '41 40w

GRUBER, FRANK. Outlaw. 277p $2 Farrar

41-14663

Western story.

Booklist 38:36 O 1 '41

"The author, a connoisseur of such matters, has lavished period color on this active Western. Gruber at his best." Will Cuppy

+ Books p17 S 21 '41 80w

"Not a dull moment."

Sat R of Lit 24:20 S 27 '41 40w

GRUBER, FRANK. Simon Lash, private detective. 281p $2 Farrar

41-5875

Detective story.

Booklist 37:492 Je 15 '41

"If, by any chance, you were allergic to Johnny Fletcher and Sam Cragg, the book salesman and gorilla who detected in 'The Talking Clock' and other Gruber works, we bring you glad tidings. Simon Lash, bibliophile, and Eddie Slocum, general factotum, are quite an improvement, though a gleam of good nature on Simon's part might help." Will Cuppy

+ — Books p17 Ap.13 '41 150w

"The steps by which Lash reaches the correct conclusion concerning these crimes are not easily understood even after one reads the explanation. Unless something is done to remedy Lash's acid disposition, we fear that we shall never like him as well as we did Johnny Fletcher." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p23 Ap 20 '41 160w

"Lash is pleasantly disreputable addition to tough-guy detective regiment. Plot may not baffle experts but wind-up has exhilarating touches. Routine."

Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ap 26 '41 40w

GRUBER, FRANK. The talking clock. 276p $2 Farrar

40-29643

Detective story.

Booklist 37:325 Mr 15 '41

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p14 Ja 12 '41 110w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 11 '41 60w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p16 Ja 5 '41 190w

"The solution is rather silly."

New Yorker 16:64 Ja 11 '41 50w

"Good fun."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ja 11 '41 50w

GRUSHEVSKII, MIKHAIL SERGEEVICH. A history of Ukraine; ed. by O. J. Frederiksen; pref. by George Vernadsky; pub. for the Ukrainian national association. 629p maps $4 Yale univ. press

947.7 Ukraine—History 41-18191

"The Ukrainians are the second largest Slavic nation, and some familiarity with Ukraine and her history is essential to an understanding of the present developments in Eastern Europe. . . Michael Hrushevsky was the leading Ukrainian historian, whose authority has been widely recognized both in and outside of his country. His ten-volume History of Ukraine is the standard work on the subject. . . In 1911 Hrushevsky published a popular one-volume Illustrated History of Ukraine, in Ukrainian. For the present English translation a copy of the Ukrainian edition of this history printed at Winnipeg, Canada, has been used by the editors." (Pref) The history begins with the earliest evidences of Ukrainian civilization and was brought to modern times. The author died in 1934, but the work has an added chapter by Professor O. J. Frederiksen of Miami university which brings the history down to the eve of the outbreak of the German-Soviet war. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by B. W. Maxwell

Am Pol Sci R 35:1216 D '41 300w

"It is disappointing to find that almost no attention has been paid to the economic development of the Ukraine during modern times. This has to some extent determined the role of the Ukraine in the Russian state and has largely shaped the policy of both Czarist Russia and the Soviet Union toward the Ukraine. The adoption of the Ukrainian to the exclusion of Russian, Polish, or other spelling has led to some anomalies, but on the whole, there is little to complain of in the editing." S. R. Tompkins

+ — Ann Am Acad 219:176 Ja '42 700w

"Anyone who wants to understand the fiery Balkans should read at least a few chapters of this ambitious history of Ukraine since the seventh or eighth century. Not because it is a scientific, accurate history of Ukraine and the Ukrainian people, for it is not. Although more than 300 pages are devoted to the period up to the Kozak uprising under Bohdan Khmelnytsky (1648), the reader will not guess from Mr. Hrushevsky's story how close the Ukrainians are to the Moscow Russians and how identical their languages are. . . Yet the book is important. It constitutes an invaluable guide to the understanding of the turbulent and truculent nationalism of southeastern Europe. It is a splendid example of the type of history and literature which has constituted the mental nourishment of intellectuals in those countries." Albert Viton

+ — Christian Century 58:1376 N 5 '41 600w

"Publication in English of this massive history by one of the greatest Ukrainian scholars and patriots would have been a welcome and significant event under any circumstances. It derives special topical interest from the fact that Ukraina . . . is now experiencing all the fury and desolation of large-scale modern war. . . Professor Hrushevsky devoted a lifetime of scholarship to reconstructing the story of his people and there is nothing in English, or in any language, for that matter, comparable in authority and solidity with his work." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 N 15 '41 850w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 35:202 D 12 '41 80w

"The volume, as a whole, is quite readable, although the earlier chapters are likely to tax somewhat the patience of the student. The translation is adequate." M. T. Florinsky

Survey G 31:42 Ja '42 260w

Reviewed by Michael Karpovich

Yale R n s 31:424 winter '42 1300w

GUERRIER, EDITH. We pledged allegiance; a librarian's intimate story of the United States Food administration. (Hoover lib. on war, revolution, and peace. Miscellaneous publication) 170p $2.50 Stanford univ. press

940.37305 U.S. Food administration. European war, 1914-1918—Food supply. Food supply—U.S. 41-2121

"Librarians are familiar with the fact that they as a body took a very important part in the work of the Food Administration. This book is a report of one phase of this work during the war years of 1917-1918. It is published as the first of the 'Hoover Library Miscellany' by the Directors of the Hoover Library on War, Revolution and Peace." Library J

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:381 Ja '42 20w

"The whole book is of particular interest to all librarians who bore any part in the useful work of the Food Administration and doubtless will be of value to librarians everywhere, for librarians must all be proud of this special phase of their war work and particularly of the part played in carrying it on by Miss Guerrier." A. E. Bostwick

+ Library J 66:300 Ap 1 '41 650w

Social Studies 32:240 My '41 20w

GUIDE to Catholic literature, 1888-1940. 5v 1240p subs pa $15.25 c1940 Walter Romig & co, 14 Nat. bank bldg, Detroit

013.282 Roman Catholic literature—Bibliography

"This bibliography, according to the title-page, is 'An author-subject-title index in one straight alphabet of books and booklets, in all languages, on all subjects by Catholics or of particular Catholic interest, published or reprinted during the fifty-two years, January 1, 1888 to January 1, 1940, with more than a quarter of a million biographical, descriptive and critical notes, each with complete reference to its authoritative source for further reference, reading and study.' Careful study of the work reveals that two of the above statements are misleading. While some foreign language publications are included, the list is not by any means complete. . . The entries are in dictionary arrangement. In most cases author entries include: (a) a biographical sketch, (b) a list of books by the author, a majority with descriptive annotations, (c) books or parts of books about him and his works, and (d) a list of magazine articles about him and his works. Most of the biographical information for living persons is taken from the American Catholic Who's Who, v.4, 1940-41." Subscription Bks Bul

"The format does not make for legibility or for quick reference use. Main entries are in bold type. The items appearing under each entry are not adequately spaced or indented. Close attention is necessary to distinguish the biographical data from the book titles, and the titles from the book reviews quoted. The general effect is confusing. While some cross-references are used, they are neither consistent nor adequate. . . In spite of the numerous small inaccuracies and its incompleteness as an index to works on general subjects, The Guide to Catholic Literature is recommended, particularly for Catholic libraries and large public libraries."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 12:22 Ap '41 950w

GUILLEBAUD, CLAUDE WILLIAM. The social policy of Nazi Germany. (Current problems ser.) 134p $1.25 Macmillan [3s 6d Cambridge]

331.8 Labor and laboring classes—Germany. Germany—Nazi movement [A41-3025]

"Mr. Guillebaud takes for his point of departure the statement in Mr. de Courcy's 'Searchlight on Europe' that in April, 1939, there was 'a general contentment among the working class' in Germany. His own observations before the war tended to confirm this judgment and his aim is to discover why it should be so, despite the extreme harshness of many sides of Nazi social policy." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Index.

Reviewed by J. H. Herz

Am Pol Sci R 35:1202 D '41 370w

"While the value of the book might have been enhanced by a somewhat more extensive comparison of the achievements of the present and Weimar regimes—had space permitted—the volume as it stands represents a highly objective treatment of the subject, and one which should be of the greatest interest to the general reader." M. M. Ball

+ Ann Am Acad 218:244 N '41 450w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:201 O '41 20w

Social Studies 32:334 N '41 10w

"It is true that in reading it one feels at times apprehensive about the effect this objective account will have on some readers to whom official propaganda (if the B.B.C. may be thus described) has represented Hitler as the very antithesis of socialism and as the servant of capitalist interests. But this is not Mr. Guillebaud's fault. It is surely more important to know the sources of Nazi strength than to cherish illusions on this score—even if to some the Nazis may in consequence appear less odious than they nevertheless are. And Mr. Guillebaud cannot be accused of suppressing the discreditable aspects of the régime where they come into his field." F. A. Hayek

+ Spec 166:375 Ap 4 '41 350w

"The author's attempt to write objectively will undoubtedly lay him open to the charge of sympathizing with the policy he describes. In fact, it may be said that he is inclined to pass too lightly over the evil essence of a policy which destroys freedom and enslaves the workers; but that no doubt was to some extent deliberate, for these evils have too often been dwelt on alone and the positive achievement of Nazism ignored. Mr. Guillebaud analyses this achievement in detail and elucidates the philosophy underlying it, which has an appeal certainly capable of arousing fanaticism."

Times [London] Lit Sup p134 Mr 22 '41 330w

GUMPERT, MARTIN. First papers; with a pref. by Thomas Mann; tr. by Heinz and Ruth Norden. 310p $2.75 Duell

917.3 U.S.—Social conditions (W) 41-51943

Impressions of America, as it appears to a doctor who escaped from Nazi Germany five years ago. The time he has spent studying Americanism corresponds to the years between his receipt of his first papers, and his final achievement of citizenship.

Booklist 38:78 N 1 '41

"Some of Dr. Gumpert's commentary on America is the sort of stuff which Europeans have been handing out for years. Dr. Gumpert still believes in the myth of American 'standardization,' even though he is no longer afraid of it. . . . Then there is the old chestnut about American women: they don't know how to conduct a love affair in the proper European manner. . . . 'First Papers' is an engaging mixture of the profound and the trifling. Readers should welcome it as an accurate reflection of a maturely happy personality." John Chamberlain

+ — Books p4 N 2 '41 850w

Christian Science Monitor p12 D 13 '41 250w

"In the spate of personal narratives here is one that will repay the careful attention of native-born Americans, as well as furnishing encouragement to the author's fellow sufferers. Recommended to the discriminating libraries that are trying to choose timely and significant books." G. E. Brown

+ Library J 66:902 O 15 '41 100w

New Repub 105:709 N 24 '41 50w

"A charmingly persuasive book by a distinguished German émigré who considers it a great privilege to be allowed to become a citizen of this Republic. . . . What is new and delightful about his book is the fresh illumination he gives these facts, and the enthusiasm with which he presents them. It will not be Mr. Gumpert's fault if, after reading this book, Americans of all races, creeds and parties do not throw out their chests with pride and satisfaction." John Curnos

+ N Y Times p3 N 2 '41 800w

"Because [the] author is observant, receptive, contemplative, and intelligent—and knows how to write—his picture of America is engaging. . . . 'First Papers' is so simply written, so unassuming; it touches so many subjects with so little apparent effort; indeed, it is so beguiling, that you don't immediately realize its scope and depth. It spreads far beyond its 300 pages, like a picture that is larger than its frame. It deserves every bit of the praise in Thomas Mann's preface." Louis Adamic

+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 N 1 '41 700w

"There could hardly be more interesting reading for any thoughtful American man or woman than Dr. Gumpert's shrewd, human, warm-hearted, and sharply penetrating report on what an intelligent, open-minded, new American sees as he lives, moves, and makes his living in the U. S. A." Dorothy Canfield

+ Survey G 31:40 Ja '42 500w

GUNNARSSON, GUNNAR. The good shepherd; tr. by Kenneth C. Kaufman; ill. by Masha Simkovitch [Eng title: Advent]. 84p $1.50 Bobbs [5s Jarrolds]

(W) 40-32078

At the beginning of every Advent season the shepherd, Benedikt, went out into the upland fells of his native Iceland to bring in the lost sheep which had not returned to their folds in time for the winter gathering. His only companions were his dog Leo, and the bellwether, Gnarly. This is the story of Benedikt's twenty-seventh winter trip, which almost ended in tragedy.

"One would be hard put to describe it properly; it is certainly not a nouvelle, nor a long short story, nor a short novel, either; but it is perfect, and its length organic, like a sonnet or a Japanese haiku. Mr. Gunnarsson has written a modern saga that in spirit and excellence is very close to the old Icelandic tale of Hrafnkel, the Priest of Frey." C. A. Brady

+ America 64:304 D 21 '40 300w

Booklist 37:409 My 1 '41

"When Loti left the world he left a pearl to literature, the story of an Iceland fisherman. We have another pearl now, this story of an Iceland shepherd. Its beauty is as great, and its value is higher." M. L. Becker

+ Books p2 Mr 23 '41 480w

"Good things come in small packages, and if the scanty writings of Gunnar Gunnarsson were the only literature in Iceland they would be representation enough and to spare for that remote land. Too unpretentious, perhaps, to be ranked with the great international writers like Ibsen, Tolstoy, Maeterlinck, Gunnarsson has the same directness of approach and universality of thought, and merits the same world-wide attention." J. C. Moynihan

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ap 12 '41 240w

"This little book, so idyllic in its simplicity, so mystical in its piety, so elfin in its atmosphere, is scarcely more remarkable than the fact that the Book-of-the-Month Club has selected such a book for distribution. If James M. Barrie had chosen religion as a motif and Iceland for a locale, he might have written a book like this."

Christian Century 58:464 Ap 2 '41
60w

Churchman 155:35 Je 15 '41 80w

"For young people and adults. Worth while."
E. H. Crowell

+ Library J 66:265 Mr 15 '41 30w

"Gunnar Gunnarsson writes as if prose had changed little since the King James version of the Bible, as if simple faith and good works were still as efficacious as ever they were. The mood of this little book is more vigorous than mere nostalgia, but that is where such writing derives its genesis."

+ Living Age 360:198 Ap '41 90w

"This beautiful story with its inspirational message is too spontaneously human, too universal in its truth to be capable of being dated. Yet, though it is for all or any time, it has, in this Spring of 1941, a significance peculiar to the moment." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p8 Mr 30 '41 700w

"Gunnar Gunnarsson—he must comprise in himself a considerable part of Iceland's literature—writes like few literary chaps you're apt to think of, unless it be the early Knut Hamsun. His tales have a flavor, exceedingly simple and devout, of the medieval conte. It seems most unfitting for 'The Good Shepherd' to be printed in Bridgeport, published in Indianapolis, and reviewed in New York City. Some pious monk should have inscribed it laboriously on parchment, with illuminations." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:69 Mr 29 '41 270w

Pratt p11 autumn '41

Wis Lib Bul 37:92 My '41

GUNTHER, JOHN. Inside Latin America. 498p
$3.50 Harper

980 Latin America (W) 41-21925

"This book follows closely the pattern of Inside Europe and Inside Asia, to which it is an obvious companion. It attempts to give a picture of the political situation in each Latin American country, an appraisal of its personalities, and a survey of its more pressing problems. It is a job of reporting above all, as were Inside Europe and Inside Asia. If it includes brief historical passages this is because no one can grasp the contemporary realities of Latin America without some knowledge of the background, which is unfamiliar to most of us." (Note) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Karl Loewenstein

Atlantic D '41 850w

Booklist 38:93 N 15 '41

"[The book] is written much as 'Inside Europe' and 'Inside Asia' were written, which is high praise. Latin Americans have a disconcerting and unneighborly but very human habit of being different, not only from us but from each other. Mr. Gunther points this out at the beginning of his book, and then proceeds to document their dissimilarities. He does it with great good humor, with considerable patient scholarship, and with a solid sureness that his sampling of a continent will make up in timeliness and in usefulness what it may lack in erudition or the discreet good manners of many Americans who have preceded him on the hemispheric grand tour." Joseph Barnes

+ — Books p3 N 2 '41 1050w

"To say with Whit Burnett that 'he is not only a journalist, he is a historian,' is to do him no kindness; for he does not take seriously the obligation of giving proof or even adequate reference for statements that he circulates; and, judged by the strict standards of scientific history, he would fare ill. Although his writing is often colorful, and well informed, it is also superficial, exaggerated and inaccurate." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 154:368 D '41 600w

"No literate citizen of the United States who has access to a bookstore or a library need be ignorant of Latin America. Within recent months not less than three excellent books dealing with Latin America as a whole have been reviewed in these pages, the most important and generally serviceable of which was Hubert Herring's Good Neighbors. But no abundance of good books in this field can make Mr. Gunther's contribution superfluous. To an extraordinary degree he unites the best qualities of the newspaperman and the historian, and the complex Latin American facts and problems can be treated competently only by one who applies both techniques to its interpretation." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 58:1473 N 26 '41
900w

"John Gunther has imparted his own personal enthusiasm to this book. He writes informally and simply of the vast tapestry that makes up Latin America, weaving in the influence of history, geography, climate, natural resources, the race problem and trade. But he subordinates all these details to the situation as it is now." Dorothy Karr

+ Churchman 155:17 D 1 '41 300w
Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '41

Reviewed by Gregory Smith

Commonweal 35:250 D 26 '41 500w

Reviewed by Hubert Herring

Current Hist 1:375 D '41 650w

"Even though the author colors his story crudely and asserts his own opinions too loudly, the book is indispensable for most libraries." G. E. Brown

+ — Library J 66:902 O 15 '41 130w

"The material for 'Inside Latin America' was gathered on a plane trip through twenty countries south of the Rio Grande, and the quality of its writing conveys the rhythm and the kaleidoscopic changes of history and scene which a plane, speeding through time and space, alone can achieve. History, anecdotes, personalities, political trends, and scenic descriptions are juxtaposed in vivid, telling patterns that reveal underlying trends. This readable and informative book was compiled quickly and published quickly, just four months after Gunther completed the last lap of his journey." H. F. Artucio

+ Nation 153:616 D 13 '41 550w

Reviewed by Hubert Herring

New Repub 105:769 D 8 '41 1250w

"When all is said and done one cannot but marvel that Mr. Gunther should so neatly and unfailingly pick out as a rule the right amount of facts on which to make his representative characters speak and move about. Incidentally, it is evidence that the author is not merely a good observer himself but that, secondarily, he has the knack to pick the right sort of informer for the initial lesson as to where things and people stand." Ernesto Montenegro

+ — N Y Times p3 N 2 '41 1500w

"Mr. Gunther is particularly good on such important personalities as Vargas, Cárdenas, Camacho, Batista, and Haya de la Torre, men more important to us, it may be, than Laval or Goebbels or Bevin. He is especially informative on the strategic importance of Brazil and certain other countries. In this connection, the chapter on Panama and the Caribbean should be read with great care. Altogether, it's a useful job, enormously readable and full of those nuggety Guntherian phrases that light up a whole problem or individual with a few flashing words." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:84 N 1 '41 750w

"Thank all the Inca and the Aztec gods, this is a good book! Not only because good books on Latin America are distressingly rare, but because this is the one that everybody is going to read. And my relief and pleasure that it is a fine job do not come from any prior doubts as to Mr. Gunther's ability, but rather from my conviction that a wide popular understanding of Latin America is of incalculable importance to us. Nobody needs to be told that Mr. Gunther is a superb reporter, but if dramatic proof were needed it lies in a comparison of his book with any of the recent products of the Pan-America-via-Pan-American-Airways school." Katherine Rodell

GUNTHER, JOHN—Continued

+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 N 15 '41 850w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 2 '41 950w

Discussion by Prof J. A. Arze

Springf'd Republican p14 N 14 '41 2000w

Time 38:92 N 3 '41 1800w

Wis Lib Bul 37:199 D '41

"Mr. Gunther's book, entertaining and vivid as it is, often gives the effect, and seemingly against the author's intention, of describing us as an assemblage of peoples without discipline, a land of gunmen, in which Buenos Aires taxi-drivers can be humorously called 'assassins' . . . Another swing around the circle by Mr. Gunther should yield new and more accurate observations, which would enable him to make a larger contribution to mutual understanding. It should yield a book which would more amply justify the title of this one." L. A. Sánchez

+ — Yale R n s 31:427 winter '42 1150w

GUTTMACHER, MANFRED SCHANFARBER.

America's last king; an interpretation of the madness of George III. 426p il $3.50 Scribner

B or 92 George III, king of Great Britain (W) 41-21623

Biography of George III of England by an American physician, who is also a psychiatrist. Basing his thesis on much searching of English archives, he shows that the king was not a foolish, reckless tyrant, as Americans have been accustomed to think him, but a highly moral man, much plagued by his duties as king, and by the actions of his oldest son, the Prince of Wales. The author is chief officer of the Supreme bench of Maryland, president of the mental hygiene society of Maryland, and a fellow of the American psychiatric associations. Bibliography. Index.

"Dr. Guttman has handled the material for his interesting and valuable study in a masterly manner." Logan Clendening, M.D.

+ Books p20 N 16 '41 600w

"Without possessing competence to place Dr. Guttman either as historian or as psychiatrist, we vote him admirable in both roles. He has, be it said, dwelt too minutely for our taste on the dreary dragging illnesses and the dreary squabbling doctors, but he has given us a lot of newly resurrected quotations from the wits, writing a sad tale with a happy pen. The appendix is charming, the index excellent, the typography commendable." E. L. Keyes

+ Commonweal 34:595 O 10 '41 500w

"An intimate picture of George III as ruler, man, and patient which makes him seem not only a very real person but a sorely tried friend. It is all the more surprising—and certainly necessary to note of a book whose purpose is to inform and clarify—that literary talent, wide learning, and a sympathetic grasp of a character and a period should not exclude ignorance and inattention in matters of detail. Cliveden is called 'Clinden'; Queensberry and the first name of the celebrated Duchess of Devonshire are misspelled. . . Let us repeat, however, that this is a first-class biography with really delightful contemporary illustrations." James Orrick

+ — Nation 153:518 N 22 '41 400w

"In undertaking to expand a study of the royal madness into a study of the reign, Dr. Guttman invaded the field of lay history. In playing another man's game, one should pay due attention to his rules, which have usually been formulated for good reason. . . This is criticism of minutiae, but minutiae may be straws in the wind. Medicine aside, the book is a compendium of gossip, more or less accurate. It does not add to our understanding of one of the most epochal reigns in English history. It does not do so because the author has not himself grasped the issues involved." E. P.

New Eng Q 14:780 D '41 350w

New Repub 105:709 N 24 '41 60w

"'America's Last King' is at once painstaking and lively, a rare and admirable combination. . . Only a psychiatrist could estimate the scientific value of Dr. Guttman's findings. The critic can but say that he has done his task with skill, delicacy, and imagination. However much one may dislike the practices of George III, one cannot withhold sympathy from him as he battles against the mists that threaten to engulf him." George Dangerfield

+ N Y Times p5 S 21 '41 1600w

"The ideal biographer of George III would have to be an expert in eighteenth-century history who was also an expert in mental diseases, a combination unreasonable to hope for. Dr. Guttman is that ideal biographer. His competence as a psychiatrist is attested by his position in the world of American medicine; his competence as a historian will not be doubted by anyone who reads a hundred pages of this book. He has read an enormous amount of source material, printed and in manuscript, criticized it acutely, and presented a deft selection of it with high literary skill. . . It comes as close, I think, to an understanding of the character of George III as we are ever likely to get. And it is an entirely fascinating book." Garrett Mattingly

+ Sat R of Lit 24:17 S 27 '41 550w

"Dr Guttman has read through hitherto little known archives on George III's illnesses, and he has also used all important published memoirs and similar sources. He never stints to give descriptions of the general life of the period, particularly its more lurid aspects, so that a great deal of English history is presented in his pages. These materials are not, it may be said, extraneous. They assist, with his biographical interpretation, in giving an indication of what the medical-psychological sciences, applied to history in reasonable doses, can accomplish." Donald Derby

+ Springf'd Republican p14 O 3 '41 650w

GUYTON, BOONE T. Air base. (Whittlesey house publication) 295p il $2.50 McGraw

358.4 Aeronautics, Military (W) 41-25367

An American navy pilot from Missouri describes his experiences after he left the Navy Air school at Pensacola, Florida, when for three years he belonged to a dive-bombing squadron attached to the carrier Lexington and the shore base at North Island, California. Index.

Booklist 38:172 Ja 15 '42

"In his 'Air Base' Boone Guyton has written a thriller for young and old. . . May all his landings be happy and all his books as entertaining as this one!" Joseph Driscoll

+ Books p14 D 14 '41 440w

"Informative and even heartening in its detailed picture of a thorough seasoning process. In the frequent stretches of human interest, not very interesting."

+ — New Repub 105:870 D 22 '41 50w

GWYNN, AUBREY OSBORN. English Austin friars in the time of Wyclif. 305p $5 (15s) Oxford

271.4 Augustinian hermits. Wycliffe, John [41-10326]

"A study of the mind of the Augustinian Eremites (Ordo Sancti Augustini). . . The book is divided into five parts. Part I is a brief survey of the origins and organization of the order; Part II treats of the theology of leading Augustinians on the Continent—Giles of Rome, Thomas of Strassburg, and Gregory of Rimini; Part III discusses the Austin Friars in England from the Black Death to the end of the fourteenth century; Part IV is the story of William Flete. . . Part V tells of the relations between Wyclif and the English Augustinians." Am Hist R

"The book is an important contribution to critical historical scholarship. Theologians will find in it many new lights on the theological controversies of the later Middle Ages." H. A. Callahan

+ America 63:582 Ag 31 '40 320w

"The desire of the author to fill a gap in our literature on the spiritual history of fourteenth century England is praiseworthy, but it is regrettable that his work shows such signs of haste in preparation and judgment that the reader should feel reserve concerning the conclusions reached on any given point." S. H. Thomson

— + Am Hist R 46:620 Ap '41 900w

"Father Gwynn has made a notable contribution to the history of scholastic thought at a critical period, and his book should stimulate further inquiry along many divergent lines."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p390 Ag 10 '40 700w

GWYNN, STEPHEN LUCIUS, ed. Scattering branches; tributes to the memory of W. B. Yeats. 229p $2 (8s 6d) Macmillan

B or 92 Yeats, William Butler 41-9842

Essays on the various phases of Yeats' personality and work, by eight writers who knew him well. Contents: Scattering branches, by Stephen Gwynn; Yeats and Ireland, by Maud Gonne; Yeats as a painter saw him, by Sir William Rothenstein; The man and the dramatist, by Lennox Robinson; The poet and the actor, by W. G. Fay; Without the twilight, by Edmund Dulac; Yeats as Irish poet, by F. R. Higgins; A note on W. B. Yeats and the aristocratic tradition, by C. Day Lewis; William Butler Yeats, by L. A. G. Strong.

"This book is aptly titled, for it is no collection of formal wreaths laid on the tomb of a great poet, lately dead; rather it is an armful of branches, alive and leafy, thrown on the grave, to make Yeats's days and works, like the actions of the just, 'smell sweet and blossom in their dust.'" Babette Deutsch

+ Books p2 My 11 '41 1000w

"Although one gains a better appreciation of the artist, it is only in the recollections of Miss Maud Gonne, Mr. Edmund Dulac, and Mr. Lennox Robinson that the man occasionally steps from the muffling folds of the poet's mantle. It is a rather awe-inspiring mantle, and one is glad to see him emerge—even if it is merely such a trifling glimpse as Mr. Robinson gives us when he says that Yeats loved birds, 'but it distressed him that they would use their bath water for drinking purposes, and he sought vainly from a bird fancier's shop for a cure for this deplorable habit.'" Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 31 '40 150w

Reviewed by James Burnham

Commonweal 34:88 My 16 '41 480w

"This book could have been better edited. Each writer should have been given a limited subject and told to stick to it. As it is, most of the writers cover too much ground, generalise too much, deal with the same topics, contradict each other even. But Cecil Day Lewis sticks to his subject, 'Yeats and the Aristocratic Tradition,' and has something to say; and F. R. Higgins is always good about his fellow poet. Lennox Robinson and W. G. Fay write as though it were generally accepted that Yeats was a great dramatist, whereas L. A. G. Strong comes out with the remark that his plays are 'the least satisfactory part of his work.' Such disagreement would matter little if some attempt were made to arrive at a critical estimate of Yeats as man, poet, and dramatist. But in the pious atmosphere of admiration everyone assumes that everyone is agreed, where really there is little agreement." Stephen Spender

— + New Statesman & Nation 20:214 Ag 31 '40 1100w

N Y Times p2 My 18 '41 400w

"The most revealing comment, biographical and critical, is by L. A. G. Strong."

+ New Yorker 17:71 Mr 29 '41 40

"There is a preface by Stephen Gwynn, which we could have wished much longer, and in which he might have discussed, compendiously, his reasons for preferring the earlier to the later Yeats. Mr. W. G. Fay's essay, also, is too short. He is the greatest comedy actor that Ireland has produced, and to those who have seen him in his triumphs he is as unforgettable as Yeats himself. . . None of the contributors to this book has written at sufficient length, or at sufficient closeness to his subject. They have all, even Lennox Robinson, written of Yeats as at a distance; as if he had not been a companion, a man who lived next door, and whose wife and children and tastes were known to them. And, again, they all write as if they had been more than a little fearful of him while he was alive, and as still somewhat dreadful of his ghost." James Stephens

+ — Spec 165:40 Jl 12 '40 700w

"These tributes to the memory of Yeats, because of their fine purpose, have in common a mood of calmness and contented recollection. As we read them the serenity of literature seems certain, and we forget for the moment the dark uncertainties of our time and all its tragic wastefulness. Even the critical controversies which have raged around the vexed question of modern poetry seem suspended for the time being. We must acknowledge the benevolent and discreet choice made by Mr. Stephen Gwynn in collecting these tributes."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p376 Ag 3 '40 490w

GYNGELL, ERIC STEPHEN, Applied chemistry for engineers. 336p il $4 Longmans [15s Arnold, E. & co]

660 Chemistry, Technical [41-19808]

"This book should be of value to practicing engineers desirous of referring to the chemistry, chemical processes and materials involved in common engineering practice. . . There are six sections: Fuels and Combustion; Metallic Corrosion; Paints and Varnishes; Water Treatment and Sewage Disposal; Cements; and Lubrication." Chem & Met Eng

"The book undoubtedly satisfies a need among engineers and technicians who wish a handy ready reference on the chemical nature and manufacture of many commodities which they are required to select, purchase, or recommend daily, and an understanding of a number of problems whose solution lies in the field of applied chemistry." R. F. Larson

+ Chem & Chem Eng N 19:226 F 25 '41 330w

"On the whole the author gives a clear insight into the chemistry of the important engineering processes, and if used in conjunction with problems, this work has the orientation requirements of a good textbook." J. J. Jacobs

+ Chem & Met Eng 48:131 Mr '41 250w

Nature 147:312 Mr 15 '41 230w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:39 Jl '41

H

HAAS, WILLIAM HERMAN, ed. The American empire; a study of the outlying territories of the United States; contributors: W. O. Blanchard [and others]. 408p il maps $4 Univ. of Chicago press [24s Cambridge]

917.3 U.S.—Territories. U.S.—Insular possessions. U.S.—Territorial expansion (W) 40-32210

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"This series of factual studies of the outlying possessions of the United States has greater unity and balance than is usually found in co-operative volumes. All the chapters on in-individual areas are well done, especially that on Hawaii." C. L. Jones

HAAAS, W. H., ed.—Continued

+ Am Econ R 31:133 Mr '41 170w

"The note of pessimism which predominates is, by general admission, well justified. The criticism of American colonial policy is scrupulously fair; it does not indulge in gratuitous condemnation and certainly does not award laurels. This is as it should be. . . The conclusion to which the authors come is sound: that only on strategic grounds can our policy of over-seas expansion be justified. But curiously enough it is in an examination of strategic factors that the book is weakest." E. M. Earle

+ — Am Hist R 47:201 O '41 280w

"The volume describes in a very satisfactory manner the geographic and economic background of each territory and weighs its value to the United States. . . To the student of government, it seems unfortunate that so little attention is given to the government of the territories and to the ties that bind them to the government at Washington. At a time when the Philippines are on the verge of independence, while other dependencies are wanting statehood, information of this type would add considerably to the value of the volume." R. S. Rankin

+ — Am Pol Sci R 35:381 Ap '41 220w

"Footnote citations to authorities and a bibliography might have compensated in part for the incompleteness of the volume. . . It does include maps and illustrations, but these are not listed in the table of contents. The index is by no means adequate. Nevertheless, this volume is a valuable contribution to an important subject. The topics with which it deals are treated accurately and with sound judgment." J. F. Rippey

+ — Ann Am Acad 216:180 Jl '41 360w

"The editor and the compilers of this useful book have succeeded in the task which they undertook—to set forth in one volume the main facts about the acquisition, the commercial value and the strategic importance of our outlying possessions. These are Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, the Panama Canal Zone, Alaska, Hawaii and the Philippines. A study of this book will give a real insight into the geographic background of these dependent territories and into the conditions of life of their inhabitants." W. C. Rivers

+ Books p13 F 16 '41 700w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 19 '41 130w

"The illustrations are good, although small. Written by a number of authors, the style is remarkably uniform, indicating careful editing." C. W. Sternberg

+ J Geol 49:672 Ag '41 100w

Reviewed by B. D. Wolfe
 New Repub 104:284 F 24 '41 70w

Pratt p13 autumn '41

Reviewed by W. R. Sharp
 Survey G 30:298 My '41 230w

"In view of the inevitable queries to be raised by a contemporary reader, the book's failure to treat adequately the strategic position of the various possessions is unfortunate. The gap is especially notable in the absence of any full discussion of defense of the Panama Canal, and of the functions of Pearl Harbor and Dutch Harbor. Apart from these deficiencies, the volume may be set down as a painstaking survey which should go far towards informing the American public of regions which must be increasingly the daily concern not only of statesmen but of every plain citizen." W. G. Fletcher

+ — Yale R n s 30:638 spring '41 600w

HABAS, RALPH ALFRED. The art of self-control; how to make your habits work for you. 284p $2 Reynal 159.24 Self control. Psychology, Applied.

 Habit 41-21441

Discussions on the making of good habits and the breaking of bad ones. Partial contents:

Your habits and your life; Some techniques of self-control; Principles and methods of habit-making; Principles and methods of habit-breaking; The role of desire; Improving your work habits; Keeping physically fit; Controlling your emotions. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:89 N 15 '41

Books p27 O 19 '41 200w

"Familiar psychological principles, cleverly marshaled and vivaciously expressed."

Christian Century 58:1213 O 1 '41 120w

"Entertainingly presented, the suggestions are often pithy, and for the most part practical."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 11 '42 220w

Wis Lib Bul 37:173 N '41

HABE, HANS, pseud. (JEAN BEKESSY). A thousand shall fall [tr. by Norbert Guterman]. 442p $3 Harcourt

940.5472 World war, 1939—Prisoners and prisons. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, Hungarian. World war, 1939—France (W) 41-15499

The author, an anti-Nazi Hungarian writer, joined the French forces early in the war and was made a prisoner after the fall of France. His book, a semi-fictional narrative of his experience, is in two parts: Battle and retreat, and Imprisonment and flight. He is now in America.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic N '41 220w

Booklist 38:32 O 1 '41

"No book could be more timely at this moment, or more instructive, than Habe's account of the Battle of France. It is a tragic, ominous book. Unsentimental and straight to the point, it tells us how forty million Frenchmen were criminally deceived, not simply by their Fascist aggressors, but by their own political aimlessness and the obscene egotism of their leaders." Marianne Hauser

+ Books p2 Ag 24 '41 1000w

"Hans Habe has written a remarkable book which is really two books in one. The first, which tells his experiences as a sergeant in the French army during the days when the German advance was crashing across France, reveals more about why France fell than dozens of other volumes which have been written on that subject. The second is simply a narrative of personal adventure, telling how Habe, a prisoner in Nazi hands with a price on his head, managed to escape from a prison camp near Nancy."

+ Christian Century 58:1177 S 24 '41 240w

"Mr. Habe has not been easy with his readers. He has spared them no painful details—at least one supposes not—either concerning the major cruelties of war and prison camps or of the ways in which man can sink to the animal under the stress of disaster or the almost equally dangerous influence of conquest. Nor has he shunned specific mention of the lack of the common decencies of life. This is war that he is writing about. To make this more bearable for the reader are the luminous simplicity of the style, the quality of certain true men."

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 S 27 '41 700w

"The book is an autobiography but the form is more that of the novel, brisk, crystal clear and intensely interesting. It is not pleasant reading but it should be required reading." E. S. Hertell

+ Churchman 155:19 S 15 '41 210w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
 Foreign Affairs 20:377 Ja '42 50w

Reviewed by H. A. Wooster
 Library J 66:668 Ag '41 100w

"Taken simply as a story of personal adventure, 'A Thousand Shall Fall' offers as much exciting reading as any book that has thus far come out of the war. Habe's flight through occupied France to the free zone matches anything in 'Out of the Night' for sheer melodrama. If this aspect of the book insures a wide reading for it in this country, we should be grateful indeed for the author's skill in narrative, for what Habe's story reveals in the way of evidence concerning the nature of the French defeat points a lesson so vital for us that its importance cannot be overemphasized." W. J. Gold

+ Nation 153:185 Ag 30 '41 650w

"Among all the writers who have described the debacle in France, Habe has the most interesting story to tell. Moreover, his training as a novelist can be read on every page of the book, which incidentally had the luck to be well translated. Habe knows which details to choose and which episodes to set in relief; he has an almost perfect sense of timing. He also has a popular novelist's weakness for heightening his effects, but he manages to restrain it when describing the French defeat; here his chief purpose is to serve as a voice for all his nameless and voiceless comrades. This part of the book is altogether convincing. It is only later, when he escapes from a prison camp and lies hidden for a week in a brothel at Nancy where all the girls were heroines and the madam was almost a saint—only in this one passage does he seem to be writing fiction." Malcolm Cowley

+ — New Repub 105:345 S 15 '41 650w

"Throughout, the book is a human story, rich in human detail. It has been written, obviously, with the emotions of the experience still raging, not reflectively and judicially; but equally obvious are the efforts to be just and the pains to be exact. The result is a work in which the reader becomes completely absorbed and remains profoundly impressed. Every detail—name, date, place or remark—is announced as actual save in instances where it was felt necessary to disguise in order to protect certain individuals now prisoners. I think the book is one that every American should read, not to change his opinions, whatever they may be, but to increase and deepen his understanding." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 24 '41 1450w

"A fine professional job, the product of a warm and acute sensibility. The translation is excellent."

+ New Yorker 17:110 S 20 '41 70w

Pratt p23 D '41

"Hans Habe's book shows that he is a great writer. His simple and powerful style, his warm heart, his clear eyes, his faith in human freedom should put him in the forefront of contemporary writers. Here is a book which deserves to become a best-seller." H. B. Kranz

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 Ag 23 '41 1000w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 24 '41 700w

"As human and real as a nightmare is this first-hand account of the Fall of France by a soldier of the French Army. That enormous and intricate catastrophe might have cramped the hand of a Tolstoi. Hans Habe, previously a minor novelist, has turned it into the most vivid book World War II has yet produced. He tells nothing he did not see with his own eyes. But he saw the disintegration of a great people."

+ Time 38:80 S 15 '41 1650w

Reviewed by Barnet Nover

Yale R n s 31:379 winter '42 390w

HACKETT, FRANCIS. What Mein Kampf means to America. 288p $2 Reynal

B or 92 Hitler, Adolf. Germany—Nazi movement. World war, 1939—U.S.

(W) 41-11150

Because he had never read Mein Kampf, which he calls "the Bible of dementia praecox," Francis Hackett went to a tropic island some 1400 miles from New York, and read it at the rate of a hundred pages a day. This book which resulted is a combination of lengthy book review and point by point interpretation. "He points to the most radical ideas of the Nazi ideology and underlines their meaning with passages from the book. In this way Hitler's nationalism, his contempt for Democracy, his creed, his ideas about a master race and domination at home and abroad, his challenge to Britain and America, become as transparent as his split personality and his ability as propagandist." (Sat R of Lit) Indexes.

Booklist 38:10 S '41

Bookmark 2:10 N '41

"There is little that is new in this commentary on what Hitler wrote or dictated in his comfortable prison at Landsberg. Mr. Hackett . . . has some shrewd observations to make on the schizoid aspects of Hitler's personality. He is refreshingly impatient with the point of view which discusses the Nazis as gangsters without trying to understand the perversion of ideas and emotions which underlies their very real courage and capacity for self-sacrifice. But his book is chiefly interesting as a statement of the position of a literary liberal on whom, as he admits, a political choice has been thrust with all the urgency of life and death." Joseph Barnes

+ Books p3 Jl 13 '41 700w

Cath World 154:127 O '41 140w

Christian Century 58:935 Jl 23 '41 80w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 30 '41 700w

"Francis Hackett read 'Mein Kampf.' Good. Then he got such a mad on that he wrote a book about it. Not so good. The book about 'Mein Kampf' is unworthy of Mr. Hackett who, I think, could have written a very skillful analysis of Hitler and his ideology if he set about it. Instead, Mr. Hackett, who as a leftist-trending liberal has been mad at Hitler these long years, suddenly 'discovers' what he knew all along."

— Commonweal 34:452 Ag 29 '41 280w

"A useful interpretation and guide." R. G. Woolbert

+ Foreign Affairs 20:198 O '41 40w

"Mr. Hackett succeeds remarkably well in his main task—to make Americans aware of the meaning and implications of 'Mein Kampf.' His book does not probe very deeply into the background or into all the philosophical or pseudo-philosophical premises of Hitlerism, but that is in keeping with its intention not to become a treatise for the specialist or the intellectual historian. Specialists in the field can easily afford to miss the book, but the many millions who still have no clear idea of what 'Mein Kampf' means should be induced to read it." Hans Kohn

+ Nation 153:165 Ag 23 '41 300w

"Its method is largely interpretative; in style it is as urbane and unsensational as the reviews he used to write for The New Republic (and there were few that excelled them)." Malcolm Cowley

+ New Repub 105:60 Jl 14 '41 1000w

Reviewed by G. N. Shuster

N Y Times p9 Jl 20 '41 1200w

"Temperate, shrewd, and simply written, though hardly news, and not the most penetrating word on the subject."

+ New Yorker 17:71 Jl 12 '41 90w

"Mr. Hackett's interpretation is illuminating, original, and vigorous. The author does not merely try to pre-digest 'Mein Kampf.'" H. B. Kranz

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 Jl 12 '41 700w

Springf'd Republican p10 S 5 '41 550w

"People may not read Mein Kampf, but they will read Hackett—and that is all to the good. He makes the doctrines of destruction stark clear under the X-ray of his feelings." Leon Whipple

+ Survey G 30:480 S '41 200w

HACKETT, FRANK SUTLIFF. Touch of life. 118p $1.25 Harper

170 Conduct of life. Christian life 41-7496

Brief essays on the meaning and conduct of life, based on chapel service talks at the Riverdale Country School, of which the author is founder and headmaster.

Christian Century 58:531 Ap 16 '41 20w
School & Society 53:552 Ap 26 '41 30w
Wis Lib Bul 37:111 Je '41

HADER, MRS BERTA (HOERNER), and HADER, ELMER. Little town. [87p] il $2 Macmillan

(W) 41-26744

Describes in simple text and many pictures just what goes on in the daily life of a small town, from midnight to midnight. For readers of five to ten.

"For little children, this book has the sure appeal of the toy village—for those somewhat older, that of a dear, familiar scene." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 N 30 '41 320w

Churchman 155:5 D 15 '41 30w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Babcock

Library J 67:41 Ja 1 '42 40w

"The text is simple and explicit; the illustrations have an innocent and direct quality which is delightful."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 7 '41 120w

HADIDA, SOPHIE C. The new Pitfalls in English. [rev ed] 467p $2 Putnam

428.3 English language—Errors—Use of words 40-27754

"A manual for self-study, simply written with examples of good and bad English. The material has been broadcast in radio lessons. The book was first published in 1927, and has been brought up to date on current usage and pronunciation." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 37:119 N 15 '40

"'Pitfalls in English' [is] an example of the traditional handbook that is eagerly sought by the public and sternly repudiated by the scientists. . . The author never tells us why; and that is one of the selling points of the book. No technicalities of grammar are allowed. Nothing is said of subject, predicate, infinitive or preposition. The rules are all arbitrary, and remembered by little mnemonic tricks, called Devices." Ted Robinson

New Repub 104:187 F 10 '41 320w

HADLEY, MORRIS. The citizen and the law. 363p $3 Farrar

340 Law—U.S. Law—New York (state). U.S.—Politics and government 41-8821

A resume of the laws which may in any way affect the ordinary citizen, written for the layman. The author writes of the laws in force in New York city, but from time to time refers to differences in other places. The book is in six parts: The law of government; The law of procedure; The law of persons; The law of property; The law of organizations; The law of crimes. Index.

Reviewed by P. S. Sikes

Am Pol Sci R 35:1195 D '41 380w

Booklist 37:540 Jl 15 '41

Reviewed by B. H. Levy

Books p8 Ag 17 '41 330w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '41

"A layman reading this book fears once more that the citizen is destined to be buffeted throughout his literate life by myriad varieties of condescension. . . In fine, the faults of this book are these: amateurishness with expository English, provincialism, and shallowness. But it has also its virtues. It is not the Sanskrit-in-two-weeks or 1000-home-remedies sort of thing. Mr Hadley does not make the error of assuring his reader that the latter will emerge from all this an expert. Moreover, he does not tout his book as a reference work—although for the light legal research of the laity it should prove occasionally useful. One succinct chapter on elementary jurisprudence and possibly one more on legal history would bolster the book immeasurably. . . Mr. Hadley mires himself down in the complexities of legal picayunities rather than attempting anything in the direction of perspective or depth. Both the citizen and the law are inadequately served. Better one chapter of the Romans or one decade of constitutional history than an entire volume of details undistinguished and poorly assimilated." J. S. G. — + Harvard Law R 55:176 N '41 480w

"The work was well conceived and most competently done. It is almost wholly free of the ambiguities and incomplete statements which all too frequently mark and mar popularizations of technical subjects. It obviously lacks the historical background and some of the detail of the six-volume 'National Law Library' published in 1939 under the editorship of Roscoe Pound, but it is sufficiently complete for the purpose of the layman desirous of acquainting himself with our law as it is today." Chester Rohrich

+ N Y Times p15 Ag 24 '41 330w

"There must be of course a good many amateurs who do not require that their introduction to law be made through the agency of a frolicsome primer (Mr. Mortenson's sense of fun and Mr. Alain's entertaining drawings make 'You Be the Judge' agreeably painless), but can start with a stiffer dose. These harder ones can proceed through Mr. Hadley's book, certainly, and not come to grief. Its extraordinarily comprehensive survey of the law as it touches our daily life may not be infused with wit, but it is very well written indeed and so competently organized that I don't believe the truly curious will object too strongly." J. R. Parker

+ Sat R of Lit 24:13 Je 14 '41 650w

HAFEN, LE ROY R., and RISTER, CARL COKE. Western America. 698p il maps $4.65; to schools $3.50 Prentice-Hall

978 West—History. West—Discovery and exploration 41-4128

A history, following as far as possible a chronological sequence, of the exploration, settlement and development of the trans-Mississippi West. The authors are professors of history at the University of Denver and the University of Oklahoma, respectively. Index.

"Fundamentally sound, this book will doubtless be for many years a useful text for the student and a valuable and standard reference work for the general reader." C. B. Goodykoontz

+ Am Hist R 47:368 Ja '42 600w

Booklist 37:436 My 15 '41

"On the whole, the authors are to be congratulated on the manner in which they have achieved their object; for much that might arouse criticism results from the difficulties inherent in compressing so immense an amount of historical information within such narrow limits. . . Western America is, however, a worthwhile publication and should readily find a place as a text-book. To have embodied within 700 pages as compact and detailed a story of four centuries of exploration and settlement is no mean accomplishment." W. E. Ireland

+ Canadian Hist R 22:336 S '41 650w

Reviewed by T. R. Hay

N Y Times p32 Mr 23 '41 500w

Social Studies 32:192 Ap '41 10w

"For every teacher of western history this book will be a great help, since it packs a great amount of accurate information between its two covers. For its authors, it should demonstrate once more their grasp of their subject. For the general reader it will prove pretty heavy going, with few alleviating bits of insight and generalization. For the undergraduate student the reviewer feels it to be somewhat stern diet, and then hastens to hope that he is wrong, particularly because he has found the book personally useful and recognizes fully the immense amount of careful and intelligent work that has gone into its preparation." R. E. Riegel

+ Social Studies 32:231 My '41 600w

HAFNER, SEBASTIAN. Germany: Jekyll and Hyde; tr. from the German by Wilfrid David. 318p $2.50 Dutton [8s 6d Secker & Warburg]

943.085 Germany—Nazi movement. Germany—Politics and government. Hitler, Adolf (W) 40-29613

In this analysis "of the habits of mind that have dominated the German Reich from Bismarck to Hitler, the author, a young German émigré, suggests that his countrymen have demonstrated that they lack the political sense necessary for peaceable control of a large power state. Once the Nazis have been eliminated, he writes, the considerable minority of Germans now helplessly opposed to them should be allowed to restore the small, organic German states of 1866." (New Yorker) The author is said to be a German lawyer, under forty, who left his native country in 1939.

"We doubt whether this counter-myth of 'the Reich' and this peace program of a return of the princes can inspire any armed forces or serve as a cause for effective underground work." H. H. Gerth

Am J Soc 47:633 Ja '42 340w

"The book is stimulating and well written. In a few instances one would like to see the evidence for the author's assertions." Gerhard Krebs

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:384 Ap '41 380w

Booklist 37:267 F 15 '41

Bookmark 2:8 My '41

"The anonymous author of the book . . . must have written [it] during the first months of the war. Though much has changed, nevertheless this book remains a most valuable, well-informed, judicious and interestingly written account of Germany and the German people, of Nazi mentality and Nazi aims. In view of the central importance of those problems for the present war and for the peace to come after the war, the book should be widely read." Hans Kohn

+ Boston Transcript p1 F 1 '41 400w

"Here is a shrewd analysis of German mentality and Nazi outlook."

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 S 21 '40 340w

"A very illuminating and stimulating study. . . Haffner's approach lies through psychology and to a lesser extent through history. His insufficiencies probably spring from his almost complete neglect of economic issues, but he can be forgiven an omission for which such ample compensation is made in other works."

+ Economist 140:4 Ja '41 1500w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:879 J1 '41 20w

"This book is based on personal observations and impressions. It has the advantages and weaknesses of such closeness. To speak first of the latter, there is an understandable, but nevertheless regrettable lack of that minimum of objectivity without which we cannot get the true picture of Haffner's fatherland. Foreigners less moved by emotions than this German who left his country and his people with a broken heart, have given us more valuable insights about Germany; Henri Lichtenberger, Stephen Roberts, and Nora Wain may serve here as examples. Haffner's book, therefore, cannot be recommended as a thorough survey of contemporary Germany. But some chapters contain interesting sidelights. In particular, his remarks about the fate of the emigrants are worth careful attention because they are so bitterly true." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 66:31 Ja 1 '41 220w

Reviewed by Albert Lippman

Living Age 360:191 Ap '41 950w

"The book is the best socio-psychological study of contemporary Germany published since Herr Rauschning's famous treatise and is, in fact, a considerable improvement on the latter. In half the space and in simple language Herr Haffner justifies his claim 'to furnish a map of the German psychological landscape,' exposing not only the mentality of the Nazis but also that of their opponents, above all of Herr Rauschning's friends the former German Nationalists. [This is] a brilliant study of the psychology of egotism, of Hitler the social outcast." A. Löwe

+ Manchester Guardian p7 J1 16 '40 500w

New Repub 104:381 Mr 17 '41 80w

Reviewed by John Cournos

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 3 '41 650w

"Strikingly realistic and discriminating analysis. . . Already dated here and there, and badly proof-read, but a fresh and original book."

+ New Yorker 16:79 Ja 18 '41 110w

"Everything Sebastian Haffner—apparently a pseudonym—says shows him a master of psychological analysis and an excellent expert of the special psychology of the German masses. He writes with vigor, passion, and originality. His voice should be widely heard." H. B. Kranz

+ Sat R of Lit 23:13 Ja 11 '41 550w

Reviewed by A. L. Rowse

Spec 165:96 J1 26 '40 370w

Springf'd Republican p8 F 11 '41 700w

"This is one of the shrewdest diagnoses of German mentality and Nazi moods that we have seen, though it is irritating for the reviewer to find that Mr. Wickham Steed and Mr. Vernon Bartlett have said so first on the dust cover. When they agree who would dare demur? The author shows all the capacity of his race for ruthless self-analysis and for mixing up things and ideas. He approaches Hitler and his followers and cronies in a thoroughly realistic way, and is not going to be misled by explanations of their behaviour based either on economic theories or humanitarian broad-mindedness."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p286 Je 15 '40 550w

HAGGIN, BERNARD H. Music on records; a new guide to the music, the performances, the recordings. 247p $2 Knopf

789.9 Phonograph records. Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation (W) 41-25374

This new edition of a work first published in 1938 (Book Review Digest, 1938) incorporates supplementary material which appeared in monthly bulletins and in the columns of the Nation during the intervening years. Index.

Booklist 38:192 F 1 '42

"Haggin scrupulously re-examines standard evaluations and has no hesitation in tartly rejecting them when they fail the test of the touchstone of his own sensibilities. Many well known composers are ignored entirely; others (like Rachmaninoff and Ravel) are contemptuously dismissed with the mention of a single work, and that as a 'dissipation.' At times the vehement (but invariably precise) dicta seem almost deliberately calculated to infuriate the musical orthodox. But if one really knows the works he is discussing or is willing to listen to them with a care and perception comparable to Haggin's own, one quickly comes to realize that his iconoclastic opinions are firmly based on an extraordinarily acute insight and, fully considered, provide astonishingly revelatory illumination on music whose profound implications one had never grasped before." R. D. Darrell

+ Books p8 Ja 4 '42 480w

"No owner of the first guide and no reader of The Nation's Records page will want to miss Mr. Haggin's new work. It differs from the other handbooks on the market in a number of important ways. It is, for one thing, brief and selective, not pseudo-encyclopedic; it consists, for another, not merely of facts and opinions but of critical judgments. . . . Lastly, and not lightly to be dismissed, is the fact that the text is written in a vigorous and personal idiom, free from the affectations of the pundit and the verbal lather of the blurb writer. . . . To Mr. Haggin's procedure, admirable as it is, I would nevertheless make two objections, one trivial, one more serious. The first is to his occasional lapse into personalities. . . . My deeper objection is to the opening statement that the book is intended, at least in part, to tell neophytes which recorded works are the greatest." Jacques Barzun

HAGGIN, B. H.—Continued

+ — Nation 153:516 N 22 '41 750w

"Haggin has an axe to grind. . . . He is obviously obsessed with a small-boy feeling that he must strike out and hurt to defend himself. His every paragraph is loaded with defiance; he is compelled to exaggerate every opinion, to make arbitrary and sensational statements. The whole emotional pattern of a ten-year-old child is there. But what is amusing in the comic 'Reg'lar Fellers' is tragic in a book of this sort, especially since Mr. Haggin's information, if untangled from his emotions, would be well worth having." E. T. Canby

— + Sat R of Lit 24:21 N 29 '41 300w

HAHN, EMILY. The Soong sisters. 349p il $3 Doubleday

920 K'ung, Ai-ling (Sung) (Mme K'ung Hsiang-hsi). Sun, Ch'ing-ling (Sung) (Mme Sun Yat-sen). Chiang, Mei-ling (Sung) (Mme Chiang Kai-shek) (W) 41-6358

Story of the lives of three famous modern Chinese women, Mme Sun Yat-sen, widow of the father of the Chinese revolution, Mme Kung, wife of China's financial wizard, and Mme Chiang Kai-shek, wife of the Generalissimo. The book begins with the story of Charlie Soong, the sisters' father, his associations with America and his friendship and collaboration with Sun Yat-sen. The book also tells informally the story of the Chinese revolution and the parts played by various members of the family. Index.

"A spirited, well-informed book." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic Je '41 230w

Booklist 37:463 Je 1 '41

Bookmark 2:14 N '41

"Any story of the Soong family in this generation must have been of necessity a story of their country. . . . Through it all we see also, despite the natural reserve, dignity and shyness of the three, the outstanding roles which these beautiful and remarkable women have played in their own right. Miss Hahn shows them as human beings, legendary as they are to most of their countrymen, and with a dignity and reticence worthy of her subjects." Mary Ross

+ Books p5 Ap 20 '41 1450w

Reviewed by J. F. Thorning

Cath World 153:501 J1 '41 500w

Christian Science Monitor p18 N 10 '41 40w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '41

Commonweal 34:189 Je 13 '41 120w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:206 O '41 20w

"The Soong Sisters, by Emily Hahn, is a possibility for girls alert to current affairs. It is a long book, giving a clear picture of conditions in modern China, as well as a lively account of the three sisters." Mabel Williams

+ Horn Bk M 17:486 N '41 148w

Reviewed by H. R. Burdett

Library J 66:304 Ap 1 '41 60w

"It is to be regretted that this biography, because it evasively skirts internal family feuds and the political problems which determine the character of its subjects and their role in China, falls short of being a critical work. It is not without authority, however. It is that part of the story which Madame Chiang and Madame Kung wish to see presented to the public, and is to be considered in the general class of 'authorized biography.' Miss Hahn is eminently qualified to have done a much better study had she not been obliged to pussyfoot in order to secure the necessary cooperation. Nevertheless, 'The Soong Sisters' is a delightful and well-written book, and the author has handled a delicate subject with much skill." Nym Wales

+ — Nation 152:478 Ap 19 '41 900w

"Here is 'real life' in a book whose material is as absorbing as any novel's and much more important. The story of the Soong family is incredible because it is great, and it is great because it is true. . . . Emily Hahn, who knows China and the Soong sisters, has told their story with a self-effacing intimacy and balanced restraint which make it seem as if the story were telling itself, and with the effective communication of both its engrossing human interest and its historic worth." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p9 Ap 20 '41 1650w

"Miss Hahn is handicapped—this again is hardly her fault—by the fact that so much of the story—the Sian kidnapping, for example—has been recounted in other books by equally competent journalists. On the whole, however, her readable book fills its niche most acceptably." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 17:88 Ap 19 '41 400w

Pratt p6 autumn '41

Reviewed by Florence Ayscough

Sat R of Lit 24:13 My 10 '41 700w

"Those who have enjoyed Miss Hahn's excellent sketches in The New Yorker will recognize her rare flair for entertaining narrative. This is an altogether pleasant book, and should be required reading. Its only fault is that it is a little too pleasant; is there nothing to report about any of the Soongs that is not rosy, according to our standards? Nothing at all?" E. O. Hauser

+ — Survey G 30:484 S '41 280w

Wis Lib Bul 37:115 Je '41

"Miss Hahn looks at China with the eyes of today. Her sympathetic understanding eliminates distances and brings the Eastern democracy, its leaders and its people, to our doors. She writes of China's first lady and her sisters as she might write of Mrs. Roosevelt." Ida Treat

+ Yale R n s 31:204 autumn '41 1000w

HAIG-BROWN, RODERICK LANGMERE
HAIG. Return to the river; a story of the Chinook run; with il. by Charles DeFeo. 248p $3 Morrow

597.55 Salmon

(W) 41-16041

The story of the complete life cycle of a Columbia River salmon, designated by the name Spring, from her hatching thru the maturing period.

"As a work of the imagination the life story of Spring, the Chinook salmon, is perhaps somewhat less exciting than Grim: The Story of a Pike. But it is incomparably more striking as news. The completion of the Grand Coulee dam, which permanently cuts the salmon off from hundreds of miles of Columbia River breeding waters, has led the government into an elaborate and costly experiment in artificial propagation, the outcome of which cannot be known within four years. If it succeeds, the salmon fry hatched from the spawn of salmon born in those upper waters will themselves be content to spawn in the lower tributaries in which they are being released as fingerlings. If it fails, they will thrash themselves to death against the impassable barrier in an effort to breed where their parents bred. . . . These circumstances are the immediate occasion of Mr. Haig-Brown's story." Wilson Follett

Atlantic N '41 240w

Booklist 38:75 N 1 '41

"As Mr. Haig-Brown tells it, Spring's story is neither simple nor ordinary. There is not a single aspect of the fish's life with which he does not deal thoroughly. . . And, beyond that, he gives you the men whose lives touch those of the fish, in a series of brief vignettes striking in their brevity, their sharpness, the fundamental justice and humanity of the author's outlook. . . But chiefly it's the fish you will remember, and the magnificence of their struggle up the waterways to die—and, in dying, to give life to a new generation of their kind. 'Return to the River' is, in its way, nothing less than a masterpiece; and R. L. Haig-Brown a trained ichthyologist who thinks as a scientist, feels as a humane and broad-minded man and writes like an angel." J. R. De La Torre Bueno, Jr.

+ Books p1 S 28 '41 850w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 D '41

"So pleasantly and easily does the story run, you are somewhat surprised at its conclusion to realize that you have learned quite a bit about Chinook salmon, the waters in which they live and the men who seek them for recreation, profit or study. . . The illustrations by Charles DeFeo are unusually fine, and, like the author, the artist shows a real familiarity with his subject." R. R. Camp

+ N Y Times p11 O 5 '41 480w

"A remarkable study, cast in narrative form. . . Mr. Haig-Brown is not only a naturalist of obvious authority but the master of a sinewy prose. A perfect job of its kind."

+ New Yorker 17:79 S 27 '41 40w

"The book is best in its picturing of Spring's behavior and life-story. It is weakest in its dialogue." R. L. Neuberger

+ Sat R of Lit 24:19 N 29 '41 550w

HAIGHT, FRANK ARNOLD. A history of French commercial policies. (Carnegie endowment for int. peace. Division of economics and history. Commercial and tariff history) 285p $2.50 Macmillan

382.0944 France—Commercial policy 41-6888

"Mr. Haight presents an account of the tariff and commercial policies of France written against the background of the country's economic development and the chief currents of economic thought. . . The book traces the evolution of French commercial policy from the beginning of the nineteenth century to the outbreak of the war of 1939. . . The bulk of the book, however, is devoted to the post-war period, especially since the depression of 1929, when France adopted the methods of quotas, licenses, bilateral agreements, and other devices restricting the free flow of international commerce." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

"Within the compass of less than three hundred pages, Mr. Haight has written a readable and judicious book on French commercial policies from the days of Colbert to, what now seem like, the pre-historic days of Reynaud. Mercantilism; the liberal trade policies of the middle nineteenth century; the protectionism of the post-Civil War days; the vain attempts at tariff reduction in the twenties; the quotas, clearing agreements, and other devices of the thirties—all of these are handled with skill and clarity." S. E. Harris

+ Am Econ R 31:639 S '41 380w

Reviewed by M. M. Knight

Am Hist R 47:126 O '41 650w

Reviewed by Grayson Kirk

Ann Am Acad 217:187 S '41 500w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:878 J1 '41 10w

"Lucid, comprehensive."

+ New Repub 104:737 My 26 '41 40w

"Mr. Haight's painstaking description of the manifold devices of French trade control is a valuable contribution to this department of economic science. Mr. Haight holds economic nationalism primarily responsible for the vicissitudes of world trade between two wars, and inclines to judge leniently French political leadership. He refrains, to the regret of this reader, from dealing with the basic defects of French economy. Could ever so ingenious tariff policies and an ever so improbable return of the world to free trade have restored to competitive vigor an economy which had fallen out of step with the pace of the power age? Mr. Haight, who has written this book before the fall of the Third Republic, left this question unanswered." Robert Strausz-Hupé

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:18 Mr 1 '41 650w

HALE, CHRISTOPHER, pseud. See Stevens, F. M.

HALE, ORON JAMES. Publicity and diplomacy; with special reference to England and Germany, 1890-1914. 486p $4 (21s) Appleton-Century

327.42 Press—Great Britain. Press—Germany. Great Britain—Foreign relations—Germany. Germany—Foreign relations—Great Britain. Europe—Politics 40-12764

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"Professor Hale has presented a thorough, painstaking, and helpful book. . . The reviewer hesitates to make any adverse criticisms of so careful a work, especially inasmuch as no one has solved the problem of how to study and present public opinion. Yet the method used in this book is still not entirely satisfactory. In giving the skeletal events of diplomacy and publicity it has been necessary to narrate extensively. As a result the whole book takes on a narrative cast, and the statements about motives or explanations, often the most original and certainly the most useful part of the research done by Professor Hale, fail to stand out." F. R. Anderson

+ — Am Hist R 46:640 Ap '41 550w

"To say that Professor Hale has done a splendid job would be an understatement. He writes with grace and erudition. He has an ear for detail, much of it fascinating, and an eye for the grand design. Best of all, he has what too many historians lack: a point of view and a set of clear concepts. . . His chapter on the English 'spy-panic' and 'invasion-scare' of 1908-10 is a masterpiece, too contemporary for comfort. One can regret only that the final chapter on 1914 is not quite up to the level of its predecessors, and that the author did not add a chapter of conclusions, generalized from his rich data. The conclusions are in his pages, however, and they will repay careful study by all interested in the arts of conducting foreign affairs in an age when the successful gain their ends not only by the Sword but by the Word." F. L. Schuman

+ — Am Pol Sci R 35:159 F '41 650w

"There is one word to describe Publicity and Diplomacy—terrific. In my view it is one of the most significant studies that has been made in this field. Professor Hale is an expert on the pre-war era and on the Press of that era. . . This book is more intricate than any Ph.D. thesis, more exciting than any detective story. When you have read even a small part of it your attitude to high diplomacy and national hatred is likely to be deeply affected, if you are (as I am) still rather naive and ignorant about the way high politics is conducted." Tom Harrison

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:462 My 3 '41 1000w

"Here is a book which is thrice welcome: as a contribution to our knowledge of Anglo-German relations, as a thoughtful study of the relationship between publicity and policy, and as nourishment for the loyal legion, rapidly dwindling from starvation, of those who read history for pleasure as well as for instruction. Many of Professor Hale's arguments and conclusions seem to me unwarranted. In general, I think he shows scant sympathy for, and only a wavering understanding of, British policy, particularly in the decade before 1914. At times he 'angles' his material in a way worthy of some of the newspapers he castigates. . . . The struggle between Britain and Germany affects us all so intimately that agreement is not to be expected. All readers of this book will agree, however, that it shows a combination of knowledge, thought and imagination possessed by few American historians." R. J. Sontag

HALE, ORON JAMES—Continued

+ — Pol Sci Q 56:129 Mr '41 700w

HALE, RICHARD WALDEN. Democratic France. 414p $3.50 Coward-McCann 944.08 France—History—Third republic
1870-1940. France—Politics and government (W) 41-14079

"Sociopolitical history of the Third Republic between Sedan and Vichy, in which the author traces, amid the detail of party maneuvers and international crises, the underlying problems that came to a head in France's failure to turn back the Nazis." (New Yorker) Bibliography. Index.

"'Democratic France' is a book which should be read with the utmost caution. The author is fair; when he is biased, as we all must be, his bias, in most cases, happens to coincide with our own. The narrative is somewhat confused and dull, but then the story it has to tell is rather drab and tangled. . . . But, with an effort, one may profit even from a dull book, provided it be reliable; and Mr. Hale seems to have sedulously cultivated inaccuracy." Albert Guerard

+ — Books p15 S 21 '41 550w

"The story of democratic France, as told by Richard Walden Hale, Jr., is a pro-reader history of the Third Republic. It is written with malice toward none, an engaging style, and thorough preparation. Mr. Hale's tone is that of an admirer of France, apparently unblinded by any too-consuming love either of French republicanism or of that France that has outlived recurring periods of freedom and dictatorship. Thus, if the book has one pervading fault, it lies in detachment, which, after all, is a virtue in a history." C. W. M.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 23 '41 360w

Reviewed by Cuthbert Wright
Commonweal 34:403 Ag 15 '41 600w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:381 Ja '42 20w

Reviewed by H. A. Von Urrf
Library J 66:614 Jl '41 70w
Nation 153:289 S 27 '41 110w
New Repub 105:869 D 22 '41 60w

"In a thoughtful, diligent and generous appreciation of French political democracy, Mr. Hale has performed a labor for which his fellow-countrymen should be grateful. His book does not approach the high level of that masterly historical study which preceded it by only a few months and which stands as the definitive work on this subject: D. W. Brogan's 'France Under the Republic' [Book Review Digest, 1940]. But there is place for this American volume with its somewhat different emphasis, its more popular appeal, and its prolongation to include the military defeat which ended the Third Republic." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p3 Jl 27 '41 1500w

"An excellent piece of work, substantial, readable, and objective."

+ New Yorker 17:56 Jl 19 '41 40w

HALIFAX, EDWARD FREDERICK LINDLEY WOOD. 3d viscount. Speeches on foreign policy; ed. by H. H. E. Craster; issued under the auspices of the Royal inst. of int. affairs. 368p $4 (10s 6d) Oxford

327.42 Great Britain—Foreign relations. World war, 1939—Diplomatic history

A40-3349

"Fifty speeches are given, ranging in date from February 6th, 1934, to February 27th, 1940; and, with the exception of one which was delivered at the unveiling of a memorial to Col. T. E. Lawrence, they all deal with foreign affairs. Lord Halifax was, of course, one of the Ministers chiefly concerned with that subject for some years before he became Foreign Secretary; so that all the speeches here printed, from the first onwards, carry the weight, and are limited by the reticence, of Ministerial responsibility. Though constantly coloured by the speaker's individuality, and particularly by what Dr. Craster calls his 'philosophical' mode of approach, they are largely statements of a composite opinion—the opinion of the Government." Spec

Am Hist R 46:709 Ap '41 90w

Reviewed by W. H. Heicher

Am Pol Sci R 35:391 Ap '41 330w

Reviewed by Eric Beecroft

Ann Am Acad 215:195 My '41 550w

"To Americans striving to define their own country's role in the defense of democracy, this volume presents step-by-step developments in the thinking of an unusually sincere and well-informed man who has lived intimately with the same basic problem for several years. The value of Lord Halifax's experience is all the greater because he loved peace as only a religious man can love it and explored every hope of avoiding war. Some people might call the record 'The Education of an Appeaser.' 'The Education of a Peacemaker' would be fairer, more accurate." D. M. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 F 12 '41 550w

Foreign Affairs 19:685 Ap '41

"Whether it was wise from the point of view of his reputation, or from that of the public interest, to publish these speeches today is doubtful."

Manchester Guardian p7 Ag 9 '40 210w

"Lord Halifax has the complacency of the man who knows he is right and is not prepared to let intellectual argument influence his moral convictions. He has the insularity of the Anglican, out of touch with either Lutheran or Catholic theology—almost contemptuous indeed of any religion based upon intellectual dogma. And his politics display the same characteristics, a slightly complacent disregard of rational analysis and a moral poise which can too easily rationalise a fear of war into a desire for peace." Richard Coventry

New Statesman & Nation 20:192 Ag 24 '40 650w

"The editing of this very useful volume has been excellently done. Dr. Craster has carefully checked the reporters' versions by reference to the speaker's notes, and given due attention to those problems of punctuation, paragraphing and omission of unessential passages which are so important, if the values of the spoken word are to be properly reproduced in print. His preparatory notes prefixed to each speech are models of compression and relevance. It is so rare to see high intelligence exercised on work of this kind, that one cannot refrain from gratitude for the example set." R. C. K. Ensor

+ Spec 165:224 Ag 30 '40 340w

Times [London] Lit Sup p382 Ag 10 '40 750w

HALL, DAVID. The record book; a music lover's guide to the world of the phonograph. 771p $3.50; 1941 supplement $1 Smith & Durrell

789.9 Phonograph records (W) 41-1274

Guide to recommended recorded music—orchestra, chamber ensembles, solo instruments, and the human voice. Each entry includes name of composer, composition, kind of record, catalog number and price, with descriptive evaluative running text. The text contains advice on record collecting, material on different kinds of music, and technical information on phonographs. Index.

Booklist 37:266 F 15 '41

Booklist 38:186 F 1 '42 (Review of supplement)

"If 'The Record Book' is awkward for reference use, neither that nor any of its other shortcomings is likely to disturb the audience to which it is directed. The experienced collector may cavil, but even he will find it difficult to resist the contagion of Mr. Hall's enthusiasm, ranging indefatigably and impartially over the entire realm of recorded music. The novice, making his first explorations into this world of the phonograph, will find in 'The Record Book' exactly the pragmatic information he has been seeking and in Mr. Hall the most welcome and stimulating of mentors—overflowing with gusto himself and fluently articulate in communicating his gusto to others." R. D. Darrell

+ — Books p21 Mr 2 '41 750w

"Mr. Hall is a knowledgeable student of phonograph records, and his 771-page book is sound and up-to-date. The plan of The Record Book has its faults: it is not easy to locate a work at a glance, since records are catalogued (symphonic, chamber, keyboard music, etc.) on left-hand pages, while a running commentary hastens along on the right."

+ — Commonweal 33:405 F 7 '41 90w

"There are still more valuable things than scope, particularly in works that profess to initiate a public of laymen to one of the arts, and it is in these preferable qualities that Mr. Hall, who cannot achieve an impossible exhaustiveness, fails to achieve even a moderate measure of success. I have in mind lucidity, oneness of critical tone, and the power of mediation between ignorance and the beginnings of true knowledge. I have no doubt that many people will find his book easy to read and rich in plausible remarks about music and musicians; others will take pleasure in seeing their prejudices confirmed by an expert; but I believe, nevertheless, that apart from the routine data about late and early records the book will enlighten very few." Jacques Barzun

— + Nation 152:674 Je 7 '41 1000w

"This book takes rank as the most up-to-date and comprehensive available. . . In the final analysis, a book of this kind is valuable in direct relation to the author's background and taste, and on both counts Mr. Hall seems to merit confidence." Howard Taubman

+ N Y Times p20 F 16 '41 700w

Pratt p17 spring '41

"The author has done an impressive job and attained his aim of producing a very usable handbook for the private collector. [His] advice concerning equipment and its care, methods of purchasing, and, in general, all matters technical are excellent, as are the running comments relating to the technical part of recording and performance. They are less concrete and objective when they deal with the merit of the composition, the conductor, or the interpretation. There is a good index, with the addenda incorporated in it." P. H. Lang

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:12 D 21 '40 600w

Reviewed by E. T. Canby

Sat R of Lit 24:31 N 29 '41 300w (Review of supplement)

HALL, LAWRENCE KINGSLEY. Work begun. 160p $2 Assn. press

267.3 Young men's Christian associations 40-13558

"The experiences of college graduates entering the secretaryship of the Young men's Christian association." (Subtitle) Bibliography.

Christian Century 57:825 Je 26 '40 20w

Reviewed by F. H. Kirkpatrick
Survey 77:102 Mr '41 300w

HALL, MARJORY. Success in reserve; il. by Jean Baker. 227p $2 Houghton 41-14051

Modern story of a high school girl suddenly faced with the knowledge that family finances will not provide a college education. Trudie's problem is to prepare for a position as soon as possible. She works hard at business school, and afterwards tries several types of work, until she finally finds her place as a secretary and vocational advisor. For older girls.

Booklist 38:58 O 15 '41

"The background of high school activities and a small romance will make this a popular book with older girls. The author's own work deals with high school students and she speaks their language. Recommended for girls twelve to sixteen." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 66:799 S 15 '41 100w

"In the groove." G. G. Bates

+ Sat R of Lit 24:11 N 8 '41 40w

Wis Lib Bul 37:180 N '41

HALL, ROSALYS. Out of Provincetown; il. by Corinne Malvern. 296p $2 Farrar (W) 41-14769

Adventure-mystery story for boys and girls of ten to twelve. It chronicles the doings of some youthful Cape Codders, who are at home on land or sea, and who run afoul of a real criminal.

"Told with the zest in life, understanding of boy and girl nature, and keen sense of words, that marks Rosalys Hall's stories for little children. This is her first for children around ten or so." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 N 30 '41 280w

"Underlying the high spirits of this novel for young people about very real young people is the unmistakable flavor of a Cape town with its neighborly folk, as kind as they are tart-spoken, close-knit in understanding by generations of friendship and their inbred love of the sea. Blithe and easy, it is a remarkably well-written first novel." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p9 Ja 4 '42 350w

HALL, RUTH MASON, and HALL, ALBERT NEELY. Home handicraft for girls; interesting things to make and do. 359p il $2.50 Lippincott

680 Handicraft (W) 41-24454

An up-to-date handicraft book for older girls. Partial contents: Accessories for your bedroom; Accessories for your kitchen and dinette; Accessories for you; Weddings and birthdays; Indoor gardening; Outdoor gardening; Marionettes for fun; The art of photography; The Christmas holidays. Includes bibliographies. Index.

Booklist 38:161 Ja 1 '42

"One of the best handicraft books available." J. E. Wooster

+ Library J 66:1096 D 15 '41 70w

"This book will interest every teen age girl with an urge to do things. It is unusual to find a father and daughter collaborating on a book, and in this case it is a particularly fortunate circumstance. The daughter has chosen things which she as a girl feels that other girls will enjoy doing, and the father's mature judgment makes sure that they are practical and workable. The material is interesting, clearly explained, and profusely illustrated." H. E. Rhodes

+ Survey 78:31 Ja '42 300w

HALL, WALTER PHELPS, and DAVIS, WILLIAM STEARNS. The course of Europe since Waterloo. 901p il maps $5; student's ed $4 Appleton-Century

940.28 Europe—History 41-8025

History of European developments and their effect upon the world, from the battle of Waterloo to the lease-lend bill. The work covers cultural, economic, social, political and military events. The book is based in large measure on the volume, Europe since Waterloo, by

HALL, W. P., and DAVIS, W. S.—Continued
W. S. Davis [Book Review Digest, 1927]. Bibliography. Index.

Am Hist R 47:177 O '41 40w

"Better written and better organized than most texts on the period."

+ New Repub 105:29 J1 7 '41 40w

"A balanced, comprehensive and readable college text. Well-organized for classroom use."

+ Social Studies 32:335 N '41 10w

HALL-QUEST, MRS OLGA (WILBOURNE), and SANDO, ANNE. Fuzzy-Wuzzy; the story of a pet raccoon. 98p il $1.25 Bobbs

Raccoons—Legends and stories 41-16071

Story of a raccoon which was rescued by Nancy and Jerry, and brought up by them as a pet. When Fuzzy-Wuzzy played havoc with knitting and the hats at a Ladies Guild meeting he was in disgrace. But later he made up for it.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p26 N 2 '41 20w

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:377 D '41 130w

+ Spring'd Republican p7e O 12 '41 180w

HALLACK, CECILY. The Legion of Mary. 192p $2 Longmans [5s Muller]

271.79 Legion of Mary

An account of a Catholic society, the Legion of Mary, which was formed in Dublin in 1921. "The Legion's work is practically unlimited, wherever good is to be done, but it might be said to have concentrated on visitations of parishes from door to door, care of prisoners, the unemployed; promotion of reading, retreats, social clubs for the less fortunate; spiritual advancement of the members. Two Popes have blessed the Legion's form of Catholic Action." (America)

Reviewed by D. M. O'Connell

America 66:22 O 11 '41 170w

"It was a fortunate day for the work of the Legion of Mary when Cecily Hallack was chosen to write its story and describe its spirit. This little book was the last work of the brave and delightful author. . . No one who cares for the work of Catholic Action should neglect this short but most illuminating account of one of its phases."

+ Commonweal 35:78 N 7 '41 180w

HALLE, LOUIS JOSEPH. River of ruins. 334p $3 Holt

917.281 Yucatan—Description and travel. Guatemala—Description and travel. Mayas (W) 41-9096

Recounts the experiences of two young American anthropologists among the scattered remains of the Mayan culture in the region of the Usumacinta river in Guatemala and Yucatan.

"Thought is interpenetrated with humor, humor with thought, both with acute and disinterested observation. The writing is unobtrusively delightful, often distinguished. River of Ruins is, in fine, an engaging and in these times a thoroughly refreshing record of travel in space and time." Wilson Folett

+ Atlantic S '41 200w

Booklist 37:513 J1 1 '41

Bookmark 2:12 N '41

"Louis Halle refuses to be hurried. He makes careful preparations in advance, moves at a leisurely pace and takes time to digest his observations. From this, with his sensitivity, powers of reflection and quiet humor, springs the grace and ease of his style and the high literary quality of his output. I have only a few minor criticisms to make of this book. A photograph of a stela, inadvertently placed upside down, appears like a stalactite. Mr. Halle uses many Spanish words and phrases but does not include a glossary. This defect and the absence of an index are, however, partially compensated for by a list of place names with the phonetic spelling." Addison Burbank

+ — Books p3 My 18 '41 950w

"Thoughtfully written, yet with many a light touch, the book should be enjoyed by both nature lovers and those who like adventure told in entertaining style." M. K. G.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 2 '41 700w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:387 Ja '42 20w

"It is an interesting study, whether or not we are willing to follow it to full analogy."

+ N Y Times p3 Je 1 '41 550w

"Rather mild as such stories go, but handsomely written and full of well-informed and sensitive observation. A distinguished job. Photographs and sketches by the author."

+ New Yorker 17:95 My 17 '41 50w

"The author is frank, disarmingly human, and an excellent writer, and this wholly enjoyable book goes on the permanent shelf." Carleton Beals

+ Sat R of Lit 24:14 My 24 '41 800w

Spring'd Republican p12 Je 27 '41 290w

Wis Lib Bul 37:114 Je '41

HALLGREN, MAURITZ ALFRED. Landscape of freedom; the story of American liberty and bigotry. 444p il $3.50 Howell, Soskin

323.44 Liberty. U.S.—Social conditions. U.S.—Moral conditions. Toleration 41-2759

"Ranging from the days of the first Puritan immigrants to the New Deal [the book] presents a . . . concrete picture of what men and women could and could not do throughout our history: how free they were to worship, talk, dress, marry, divorce, work, read and think as they wished under the developing structure of democracy. It covers the stories of women's rights, temperance, birth control, academic freedom and many other issues, and the author has dug up much amusing, factual detail about the various taboos and restrictions on personal freedom which have existed in American life." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 37:318 Mr 15 '41

"Let no one get the idea that this book is written to order for the occasion. It bears evidence of long years of loving labor and is clearly not the work of a man who has discovered the uses of democracy and liberty only belatedly as recruiting slogans. . . It is written with sound and unobtrusive learning, sly, quiet wit and an engaging decency and tolerance that win sympathy for the author, though the first personal pronoun never enters its pages. . . The reviewer noted only two errors of any consequence in this vast panorama of social history." B. D. Wolfe

+ Books p12 F 16 '41 700w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:199 O '41 10w

Reviewed by Dorothy Van Doren

Nation 152:416 Ap 5 '41 550w

"A thoughtful history of freedom in the United States and of the restrictions upon it from colonial times to the present. . . In addition to its importance as a political and economic essay, Mr. Hallgren's book is valuable for its amusing and enlightening material on the relations of the sexes and the drinking and gambling habits of our people." M. R. Werner

+ New Repub 104:801 Je 9 '41 800w

"Mr. Hallgren has told of the strivings for freedom, but he has also filled the chinks and crannies of his story with odd bits of social history that seem far afield, so much so that at times it is not certain whether he is writing social history with an eye to freedom, or a history of freedom with an eye to social curiosa. It makes for entertainment. It is told in breezy, comfortable fashion. But where we are going and why is any reader's guess," Francis Brown

+ — N Y Times p3 F 9 '41 1400w

"There is nothing new in the book but this would be no warranted criticism if the author had combined well-known facts in a new synthesis to create a fresh point of view. Historical writing needs just that. . . For those whose knowledge of our history is not extended it contains much that will be entertaining and interesting. For those who know our story it may prove somewhat irritating because so many disparate topics are picked up briefly in passing without really adequate treatment of any, such as the labor question and others," J. T. Adams
+ — Sat R of Lit 23:14 F 22 '41 950w

HALLIDAY, BRETT, pseud. See Dresser, D.

HALSEY, MAXWELL NICOLL. Traffic accidents and congestion. 408p il $4 Wiley

388.3 Highway engineering. Traffic regulations 41-16524

"This volume attempts to set forth the principles which underlie the scientific methods currently being developed to reduce traffic accidents and congestion. It should not be considered exhaustive, nor should it be regarded as a technical handbook. It aims to present a brief, well-rounded picture of the leading elements in the problem of accidents and congestion. The book is thus intended not only for traffic students but also for those professionally engaged in traffic and highway engineering, for administrators and their staffs, teachers or supervisors, and others concerned with the protection or education of the public in the motorized world of today. . . It undertakes to cover briefly those phases of the automotive transportation field which have come to be known as traffic engineering and traffic planning. These represent the engineering approach to the problem of accidents and congestion as it affects the movement of persons and merchandise." (Foreword) Bibliography. Geographical directory. Index.

Booklist 38:46 O 15 '41

"This book is not an engineering text. It is written from the popular approach rather than a purely engineering approach because it is addressed to laymen concerned with traffic problems, to city and state officials, to teachers and to newspaper writers on traffic and highway problems as well as to the professional highway traffic engineer. This detracts in no way from its effectiveness."

+ Eng N 127:87 S 25 '41 400w

HALSTEAD, IVOR. Wings of victory; a tribute to the R.A.F. 221p il $2.50 Dutton [6s Drummond]

940.544942 Great Britain. Royal air force. World war, 1939—Aerial operations 41-4766

"Opening with a sketch of the events leading up to the Battle of Britain in July, the author surveys man's conquest of the air, the development of the warplane, Germany's vast preparations for an all-powerful Air Force, and then retells the story of the air battle for Britain and the Channel which Hitler hoped would pave the way for invasion. . . Part Two of the book describes the life of a pilot and contains personal stories of a number of famous exploits. It shows the R.A.F. Bomber Command in attack and the little-seen ground work necessary to keep the machines in the air. A third part includes pen-pictures of life in London under air attack, tributes to the R.A.F. and a postscript by J. B. Priestley." Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 37:405 My 1 '41

Books p16 S 21 '41 270w

"It would be saying too much if one claimed that this is a great book or one destined to endure. The author indulges in too much invective, too much editorializing and too much idle fist shaking; all of which is inevitable considering the conditions under which the book was written. One does not develop a god-like detachment under fire and in the wreckage of the city that he loves. Suffice it to say that Mr. Halstead has given us a believable picture of the Royal Air Force in action at a time when the R.A.F. is in command of our respectful attention. Care should be taken not to confuse this book with a recent pitifully inadequate attempt to cover the same field. 'Wings of Victory' does not, at this writing, have a worthy competitor." W. E. Barrett

+ — Boston Transcript p1 Ap 19 '41 550w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates
Nation 152:674 Je 7 '41 40w

Reviewed by Otis Ferguson
New Repub 105:196 Ag 11 '41 30w

Reviewed by Barrington Gates
New Statesman & Nation 21:195 F 22 '41 180w

"Mr. Halstead's book is something of a pastiche, in which chapters by Mr. Gardner and others and pilots' reports are interpolated among the rather disjointed pages contributed by Mr. Halstead himself. It is inaccurate in many of its details and out of date in some of its facts, and the prose is liberally patched with purple. . . It was obviously written with the best of intentions; but its value, because it appears to have been written almost entirely at second-hand, is even more problematical." Derek Verschoyle

— Spec 166:232 F 28 '41 100w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 8 '41 80w

"'Wings of Victory' is a neat, compact chronicle of the R.A.F.'s extraordinary feats in this war. Written with plenty of imagination, dash, and skill, it reveals clearly the brilliance and courage which have enabled Britain's airmen to fly 'with supreme dominion' and deal successfully with the very much bigger Luftwaffe."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p2 Ja 4 '41 300w

HALSTED, WINIFRED. It's not that easy. 236p $2 Dodd 41-5495

Story of two sisters, living in a New York suburb. Isabel was neat and tidy and conventional; she married, had a family, and followed the usual pattern for suburban matrons. Camilla was pretty and untidy; she had a career, and troubled affairs with men.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p24 Ap 6 '41 200w

"Who cares about plot when the characters who people the tale are so vividly three dimensional and when the dialogue keeps its verve and lightsome spirit to the end. The story's lack of why's and wherefore's may be baffling, but it has a completely satisfactory reaction." Margaret Clark

+ — Boston Transcript p8 Ap 12 '41 150w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean
N Y Times p22 Ap 13 '41 250w

"Unimportant but entertaining."
New Yorker 17:91 Ap 5 '41 50w

HAMBLE, STEWART BELKNAP, and ZIMMERMAN, GODFREY FRANK. Wise spending; an introduction to consumer economics. 458p il $1.80 Harper

339.4 Consumption (economics). Buying 42-816

Textbook for a high school course in economics written from the point of view of the consumer. The book is in six parts: Part I, The food we eat; Part II, The clothes we wear; Part III, The houses we live in; Part IV, Providing for the future; Part V, Using our leisure

HAMBLE, S. B., and ZIMMERMAN, G. F.— Continued
 time; Part VI, Health, the cornerstone of life. The authors are members of the faculty of the Senior high school, Cranford, New Jersey.

School & Society 54:536 D 6 '41 30w
 Social Studies 33:46 Ja '42 20w

HAMBURGER, LUDWIG. How Nazi Germany has mobilized and controlled labor. 63p pa 25c Brookings [pa 1s 6d Faber]

331.80943 Labor and laboring classes—Germany. Germany—Economic conditions. Germany—Social conditions 40-34410

"The control of labor in Germany described by Dr. Hamburger in his pamphlet is the technical control of the supply of labor force rather than the political control of workers. The problems which the Hitler government has been facing in its labor market policy were those known not only by the nazi régime: surplus in the supply of labor and lack of work opportunities, maladjustments in the distribution of labor force by industries and occupations, shortage of labor and especially of skilled labor are the most important among them. Characteristic of the nazi régime were, however, the methods used for mastering these problems. Dr. Hamburger shows the trend which these methods followed, beginning with administrative regulations and mild compulsion and ending with rigid regimentation. . . Dr. Hamburger a former professor of the University of Geneva, is now with the Brookings Institution." Am Econ R

"The story is told by Dr. Hamburger in a lucid and condensed way. . . What makes the labor policy of Nazis particularly interesting and instructive for those who do not share their philosophy is the technique they develop for achieving aims toward which all nations are aspiring. The crucial question, whether and to what extent these aims may be achieved at a price short of destroying democratic freedom, is not elaborated in the pamphlet." W. S. Woytinsky

+ Am Econ R 31:417 Je '41 260w

"Dr. Hamburger's survey is a valuable contribution to the scientific study of German social policy. The author limits himself strictly to the terms of his title; his monograph is an unemotional presentation of facts, collected from sources not easy of access."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p186 Ap 19 '41 220w

HAMILTON, HOLMAN. Zachary Taylor, soldier of the Republic [with a pref. by Claude G. Bowers]. 335p il maps $3.50 Bobbs

B or 92 Taylor, Zachary (W) 41-2781

In this first volume of his projected two-volume biography of our little-known twelfth president, the author stresses Taylor's military services, beginning with his defense of Fort Harrison against the Indians in 1812 and ending with his victories in the Mexican war. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by R. E. Danielson
 Atlantic Je '41 130w

Booklist 37:437 My 15 '41

"The story is well told, painstakingly thorough, accurate, fair. Mr. Hamilton is sympathetic to his hero, but preserves his balance and even his sense of humor: he does not insist that Taylor is a great man or even a very interesting man. The portrait that he has given us is faithful and convincing; only the assumption that Old Rough and Ready is worth two volumes is open to criticism." H. S. Commager

+ Books p5 F 23 '41 850w

"The book is an excellent biography of a plain, colorless man who was successful in his undertakings wholly by his own merit without any political aid or publicity." F. S. Ambrose

+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 15 '41 250w

"Mr. Hamilton has made extensive research into the primary sources of material and his volume is authentic and well-documented. Moreover, it is written in a style that is simple and clear. Here is biography at its best." W. P. Sears, Jr.

+ Churchman 155:19 My 1 '41 190w

"A conscientious but pedestrian job that simply ignores the stirring times and issues through which Taylor vegetated. The bibliography is valuable."

+ New Repub 104:769 Je 2 '41 90w

"Holman Hamilton, editorial writer of The Fort Wayne (Ind.) Journal-Gazette, in succession to Claude G. Bowers, author, newspaper man and diplomat who contributes the introduction, has ably filled another gap in the biographical record of the Middle Period in American history. He has painted a clear picture of army life on the advancing frontier. . . There is no discussion of Taylor's attitude toward slavery (he was an owner of slaves) or of politics (he was a Whig). Presumably these subjects will be discussed in the concluding volume." T. R. Hay

N Y Times p23 Mr 2 '41 1300w

"An excellent job, easy to read and exhaustively annotated."

+ New Yorker 17:59 Mr 1 '41 80w

HAMILTON, WALTON HALE. The pattern of competition. 106p $1.25 Columbia univ. press [6s 6d Oxford]

338 Competition. Monopolies 40-33635

"Is competition an effective instrument of order and justice which a society can use at its will? Is it, instead, an institution of transition, an economic order which lives precariously between two eras of authority? Or is it, after all, a great myth by which we reconcile ourselves as best we can to a public system which goes its own way? And what then is to be its place in the national economy which presently we are to redesign? These are the questions that Walton Hamilton asks at the beginning of his book and which he has attempted to answer in its course. . . This book is addressed primarily to the reader who has no special training in the field of economics, and therein may lie its greatest value to the trained economist." (Publisher's note) Index.

Reviewed by P. A. Samuelson

Am Econ R 31:169 Mr '41 420w

"The definite positions taken on many controversial questions are certain to provoke disagreement, but even those who question the conclusions must admire a book which moves so capably from economics to law to politics, and which sparkles so frequently with epigram and allusion. The critic may score a few points on economics, but Professor Hamilton is sure to outpoint him on prose style." L. G. Reynolds

+ Ann Am Acad 214:256 Mr '41 410w

"There are only 100 pages and they are as exciting as a good detective story. This is the sort of education to save us, if education can. . . No economist, not excepting Keynes, can write like Walton Hamilton. . . Everyone should read this little book for the style, for the sharp lights it throws on industrial life in its infinite variety, for the criticism of anti-trust mechanics, and for the suggestions for retooling and invention in social controls." N. J. Ware

+ Yale Law J 50:538 Ja '41 1100w

HAMMOND, JOHN WINTHROP. Men and volts; the story of General Electric [ed. by Arthur Pound]. 436p il $2.50 (12s 6d) Lip-pincott

621.3065 General electric company. Electric industries (W) 41-51630

"When John Hammond died, in 1934, he left a 300,000-word manuscript that told the epic story of electricity. Condensed and edited by Arthur Pound, with an epilogue that highlights the major achievements of the years since 1922, it is published in its present form. While the book is, in its starkest sense, a history of the General Electric Company, the story of electricity is more than that. . . Divided into nine major parts, it begins with 'the creative period of the arc light and the incandescent light.' . . . The General Electric Company came into being in 1892 with the merger of the Thomson-Houston Company and the Edison General Electric Company. The story continues through the days when the power of Niagara was harnessed and large generating units were developed, when the plant at Schenectady grew and the research laboratory was built. . . The names and achievements of many men have gone into the forging of this industry. Big and little, they are found in the pages of this book." (Scientific Bk Club R) Index.

Booklist 37:353 Ap 1 '41

Books p33 O 5 '41 300w

"The magnitude of electricity cannot be over-emphasized, nor its potentialities minimized. History may consider these first sixty years as the mere infancy of the industry. Meanwhile, this book will serve as a valuable record of the deeds of men who in less than a century revolutionized the civilized world." M. H. Hamilton

+ Chem & Met Eng 48:191 My '41 500w

"Any executive who likes to read business history, and especially those identified with the electrical field will find it of absorbing interest."

+ Management R 30:155 Ap '41 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:41 Jl '41

Reviewed by H. G. Garbedian

N Y Times p4 Je 29 '41 600w

Pratt 10 autumn '41

Scientific Bk Club R 12:3 F '41 360w

HANCOCK, LUCY AGNES. Nurses are people. 279p $2 Macrae Smith co.

41-3330

Story of a young nurse, in training and in her subsequent hospital service, and of the two men who loved her—one an engineer; the other a doctor.

Booklist 37:440 My 15 '41

"The suspense is expertly maintained and the outcome generally satisfactory." Lisle Bell

+ Books p23 Mr 2 '41 60w

Wis Lib Bul 37:77 Ap '41

HANCOCK, LUCY AGNES. The shorn lamb. 262p $2 Macrae Smith co.

41-19308

The story of the youngest girl in a family of four. Carolyn was the beauty; Frances was clever; Alma was married young; but Ann was the one who gave up her idea of going to college and took care of her mother and the home; and eventually married the clever young doctor for whom Carolyn was setting her cap.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p29 O 5 '41 70w

"The sugar-coated moral is prettily set forth. Ann was too meek to expect Andy to think of her romantically. He was clearly dazzled by Cara, who had honorable intentions toward him after he got rich, and Fran's sharp, cynical talk delighted him. He never said a word to any one about how they both imposed on Ann, but he knew what to do about it. The shorn lamb got the golden fleece." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p22 O 26 '41 200w

HANCOCK, WILLIAM KEITH. Survey of British commonwealth affairs; 2v; v 2, pt 1. Problems of economic policy, 1918-1939. 324p $4.50 (15s) Oxford

330.942 Great Britain—Economic conditions. Great Britain—Economic policy. Great Britain—Colonies

"The first volume dealt largely with political and constitutional developments. The present one is concerned with 'economic policies against the background of immediate economic fact.' Fully half of the book is an interpretation of the period down to 1918; the remainder discusses in detail the subsequent economic relations between the autonomous communities of the Empire. The economic analysis of British policy with respect to the colonies has yet to be written." Am Pol Sci R

"The author not only has arranged and sifted a truly formidable volume of factual material with scholarly meticulousness, but he also has placed his account in generous historical perspective and interpreted both with rare urbanity and detachment. Taken as a whole, the work constitutes a summing up of the achievements and faults of the British Empire, viewed through a mind deeply imbued with the great liberal tradition. . . Professor Hancock has probed well below the surface. But his methodological apparatus prevented him from exposing the vital parts. By placing them in their economic context, he has been able to show why past policies appeared plausible. He has, however, failed to explain why a given policy was adopted instead of possible alternatives." A. B. Handler

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:156 F '41 800w

Foreign Affairs 19:473 Ja '41 20w

Reviewed by J. B. Condliffe

Pacific Affairs 14:231 Je '41 550w

Reviewed by T. P. Peardon

Pol Sci Q 56:635 D '41 350w

"It is a book well worth study in view of the new relations between the countries of the Empire created by the present war." A. R. Barnard

+ Spec 165:614 D 6 '40 400w

"It is impossible to overpraise Professor Hancock's brilliant survey of a highly complicated period. The work is one which must be seriously studied by every student not only of the history of the Commonwealth since the last War, but by everybody who is concerned with the problems which will emerge at the end of the present struggle."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p382 Ag 10 '40 800w

HANDBOOK annual of the theatre, May 1940-May, 1941 [ed.] by Wilbur Dingwell. 201p $2.50 Coward-McCann

792 Theater—Yearbooks. Theater—New York (city) (W) 41-51954

"An annotated catalogue of the past season's plays, including under each title the cast of characters, a summary of the plot, technical details and a brief statement of its reception by the critics. The [editor] adds recommendations for amateur production." (Cleveland Open Shelf) Index.

Booklist 38:174 Ja 15 '42

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 D '41

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 66:792 S 15 '41 90w

HANDBOOK annual of the theatre—Continued
 "This publication is most convenient for libraries who do not clip New York newspapers."
 + Theatre Arts 26:140 F '42 130w

HANDY, WILLIAM CHRISTOPHER. Father of the blues; an autobiography; ed. by Arna Bontemps; with a foreword by Abbe Niles. 317p il $3 Macmillan

B or 92 Jazz music. Negro songs. Musicians
 —Correspondence, reminiscences, etc.
 (W) 41-12162

Autobiography of a Negro writer of popular songs, particularly famous for his Memphis Blues, St Louis Blues, and others. Index.

Booklist 38:10 S '41

Reviewed by C. V. Vechten
 Books p1 J1 6 '41 1250w

"An interesting story and well told."
 + Cath World 154:252 N '41 280w

"Whether one believes the 'blues' type of music to be a great achievement in creative art, as many do, or rates it as a deplorable aberration, the story of its inventor's life, which he tells with dignity and grace, has an appeal of its own. The going was not easy for a young Negro musician in the south forty years ago. It didn't become much easier when he became an important figure in 'Tin Pan Alley,' but he met the difficulties with good nature and ultimately with success."
 + Christian Century 58:886 J1 9 '41 60w

"Somewhere in his book Mr. Handy says, in substance, 'A song makes a fine peg to hang a memory on.' He has hung a good life on a good song." Horace Reynolds
 + Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 23 '41 480w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '41

"A book that is courageous, entertaining and highly informative." George Streator

+ Commonweal 34:450 Ag 29 '41 650w

"The style, although not literary or finished, is flowing, sensitive, and continuously interesting. This book should be welcomed by libraries and purchased generously." Ernestine Rose

+ Library J 66:399 My 1 '41 70w

"This is the autobiography of one of our first folk-music composers, edited for publication but apparently written by Handy himself. As is nearly always true of non-professional writing, the book is not vivid, it is not eloquent about that which we would wish to know; it is honest but it is rambling and dull. Very few can learn the full discipline of more than one art in a short lifetime. And so we continue to have humdrum, disorganized books out of exciting and even significant lives, all the worse when we know that the man isn't talking very well but he sure could whistle it." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub 105:60 J1 14 '41 800w

Reviewed by H. A. Stevens

N Y Times p4 J1 13 '41 1650w

"For my money give me the early chapters: the little Negro boy in Florence, Alabama; his first guitar, which his sternly religious father made him exchange for a Webster's Unabridged Dictionary; the old days, before the century turned, with Mahara's Minstrels. There's a fine flavor about these chapters that loses some of its mellowness when Mr. Handy gets into the big time and becomes an Influence." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:54 J1 5 '41 200w

Pratt p5 D '41

"An absorbing story of a unique individual in Negro life and a firsthand glimpse of Negro popular music." C. E. Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 24:10 J1 19 '41 470w

Reviewed by Milton Berliner
 Springfield Republican p6e J1 20 '41 1200w

Time 38:71 J1 7 '41 390w

Wis Lib Bul 37:155 O '41

HANKINS, JOHN ERSKINE. The character of Hamlet, and other essays. 264p $3 Univ. of N.C. press

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Hamlet 41-9020

One long essay on the character of Hamlet and seven supplementary essays: Politics in Hamlet; Misanthropy in Shakespeare; On ghosts; Religion in Hamlet; The Bible; Religion in Hamlet; Repentance; Suicide in Shakespeare; Notes on the structure of Hamlet. Index.

"Offhand it might be said that there is no particular need for yet another essay on Hamlet; in fact, some people might regard this as an understatement. But Mr. Hankins has treated the subject so freshly and has argued so cogently and entertainingly that students of the play will gladly make room upon overcrowded shelves for this latest contribution to a seemingly endless discussion." S. C. Chew
 + Books p14 J1 13 '41 500w

"The author is well up on Hamlet studies, offers a few thoughtful suggestions of his own, and writes pleasantly enough, though like most professors of English he dilutes and weakens his effect by thesis-like factual glosses where an ordinary educated writer or reader would be satisfied with an allusion."

+ Nation 153:233 S 13 '41 70w

HANKINS, ROBERT MAXWELL. Lonesome River range. 253p $2 Macrae Smith co.

41-51768

Western story.

Booklist 37:440 My 15 '41

"This contains an abundance of lively action and a likable romantic flavor." Will Cuppy

Books p25 Ap 6 '41 40w

Wis Lib Bul 37:92 My '41

HANLEY, JAMES. The ocean. 233p $2 Morrow [7s 6d Faber]

41-11979

A liner is torpedoed at night and her lifeboats shelled. One boat escapes, carrying a sailor and four passengers, all men. Curtain, the sailor, takes charge. As they drift or row, day after day, with rations and water growing more and more scarce, Curtain has to cajole and encourage the others. Monotony succeeds monotony, and when the boat finally touches land they are all unconscious save one.

"Mr. Hanley has made his story graphic and convincing. The five individuals develop naturally along the indicated lines of their characters. There is no incredible hero in the lot, but one good common seaman, an old, sick priest, and three dubious passengers. It is a fine and moving book." R. E. Danielson

+ Atlantic O '41 70w

Booklist 38:12 S '41

"Attempts to make romantic capital out of the stress and horror of open-boat experiences following disasters at sea are seldom successful unless written with realism and genuine narrative power. Lacking these mainstays, they are apt to be pretty dismal failures. 'The Ocean' is a striking case in point. A thoroughly artificial treatment of a hackneyed theme, it suffers from impressionistic overemphasis and fails to convince the reader by the very effort it makes." Lincoln Colcord

— Books p8 S 14 '41 900w

Reviewed by H. A. Carpenter

Library J 66:669 Ag '41 70w

Reviewed by Harold Brighthouse

Manchester Guardian p3 My 2 '41 150w

"The writing is too muggy for any direct line of action: it is halfway between 'Youth' and 'Men Against the Sea,' without many of the virtues of either. Pass it."

— New Repub 105:446 O 6 '41 80w

"Brilliant only in the hands of its populariser, [Hemingway] laconicism should, like the intricacies of Henry James or the elaboration of Carlyle, remain a literary incident. James Hanley is a person who has had a variety of experience, has enough sensibility to profit by it and enough imagination to add to it. But the very genuineness of his material has given him an inflated reputation. The Ocean is at once pretentious and not ambitious enough." Myfanwy Piper

New Statesman & Nation 21:440 Ap 26 '41 360w

"Not until the war ends will it be possible to assess with any degree of assurance the novels born of the war. 'The Ocean,' short as it is, may, however, take a high place. Written more calmly than certain of James Hanley's earlier stories, it nevertheless is not without the Hanley vigor and punch. In it is the soul of Britain. And when that is said all has been said." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p20 Ag 24 '41 550w

"Ought to be very moving, but Mr. Hanley hasn't quite brought it off."

New Yorker 17:67 Ag 23 '41 50w

Pratt p12 D '41

Reviewed by N. L. Rothman

Sat R of Lit 24:14 Ag 30 '41 550w

"With this novel Mr. Hanley has gained new heights and has learned the proper use of violence. In his fable for the times literary, human and spiritual values are given their old high standards, and are shown as potent, and as excellent as they were in the past." John Hampson

+ Spec 166:454 Ap 25 '41 650w

"Mr. Hanley surpasses anything he has done before. Every small incident speaks for itself, every intimation of strength of soul or human weakness is poignantly clear. . . . In the past Mr. Hanley has exhibited two failings—a fondness for spells of rather turgid eloquence and a mistakenly calculated crudeness of statement. Here there is no trace of either thing. The detail is caught sharply, though perhaps not quite sharply enough sometimes, so that the strain of flesh and nerve of these five men likely to die of exhaustion in the loneliness of the ocean is temporarily dissolved in the mere routine the sailor imposes upon them. But always the atmosphere of inward resistance which he spreads, of moral surrender which threatens them all, comes back strongly."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p189 Ap 19 '41 600w

HANNA, PAUL ROBERT; QUILLEN, ISAAC JAMES, and POTTER, MRS GLADYS (LAMB). Ten communities. 512p 11 maps $1.16 Scott

973 U.S.—History. Cities and towns—U.S. Community life 40-11242

Textbook for classes in social studies. The authors have selected ten American communities, ranging from a Texas village to New York, and have followed the story of their development from their beginnings to the present.

Booklist 37:243 F 1 '41

"Obviously the volume is primarily a history rather than a book for the class in modern problems. However, historical materials have been so carefully selected that a definite application to the present is made throughout much of the discussion. The teaching devices and study aids at the ends of the respective stories are carefully prepared and, in many instances, are unique. . . . Pictures are used to advantage in this book. In many cases these are small sketches, planned to focus directly on and to illuminate predetermined intellectual objectives. They motivate the reader and should assist in a better understanding of the text. There can be no doubt of the value of the book from the standpoint of both the aims of general education and the objectives of social science. It is truly 'enrichment reading,' and it should be read by all pupils." R. B. Weaver

+ El School J 41:473 F '41 900w

School & Society 52:536 N 23 '40 30w

"In all seriousness, I recommend Ten Communities to adults as an introduction to the study of historical, geographical, and cultural heritage of the United States." Fay Rogers

+ Social Educ 5:396 My '41 600w

Survey 77:248 Ag '41 60w

HANNA, WILLARD A. Destiny has eight eyes. 305p $2.50 Harper

(W) 41-19643

This novel of modern China during the early days of the Sino-Japanese war is told in the first person by an American teacher in a Chinese university. The other principal characters include a White Russian engineer and his American wife, a German-Jewish refugee, and a cultivated Chinese.

"Mr. Hanna is able to fill in the Chinese background from his own knowledge of the Orient and in one realistic scene at least to portray the horror of Japanese occupation. In the character of Zen-fu he illustrates the tremendous staying power of the Chinese, who, even by accepting the invader, work toward ultimate victory. Readers who enjoy confronting in fiction the events of the recent past and who like to have the news thus fortified through the imaginative interpretation of background and characters will find just that in the present novel." Bradford Smith

+ — Books p11 O 12 '41 480w

New Repub 105:709 N 24 '41 60w

"Working from his love and understanding of a country and its people, and from the tolerance and candor of his search into individual character, this young writer has produced a realistic and dramatically interesting first novel which is very much more than 'promising.'" Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p6 O 12 '41 1000w

"Mr. Hanna is an ardent partisan of China, yet there is something oddly unimpassioned and remote about the novel and it carries less conviction than it ought."

New Yorker 17:102 O 11 '41 100w

Reviewed by N. W. Snow

Sat R of Lit 24:6 N 29 '41 360w

HANNUM, MRS ALBERTA (PIERSON). The gods and one. 272p $2.50 Duell

41-51662

Character study of a gentle Southern mountain girl, whose inherent decency carries her thru a disillusioning love affair, and on thru a period of protection by the local "squire," to the day when she decided that her son must have a better chance in life than she herself had experienced.

Booklist 37:387 Ap 15 '41

"The pretentious note of the title is not suited to this simple and pleasant story, which has its own freshness and richness to recommend it." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p10 Mr 23 '41 850w

HANNUM, ALBERTA—Continued

"This novel of the North Carolina mountaineer folk is one of poignant beauty. The story is told in dialect and the characterization is excellent. It will appeal not only to readers who have enjoyed Mary Webb's books, but because of its vivid picture of the mountaineer folk will appeal to countless other adult readers. Recommended for purchase." M. E. Clark

+ Library J 66:265 Mr 15 '41 40w

"'The Gods and One' is a tender and poignant tale, rooted in beauty and informed with a profound sympathy for humanity. To call it a regional novel is dwarfing its stature; while it is the mountains of the South that give Darby and the Squire their special color and quality, both hold the reader with an appeal that goes beyond geographical location." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 23 '41 1050w

"Rather charming, with a kind of innocent simplicity."

+ New Yorker 17:85 Mr 22 '41 30w

HANSEN, ALVIN HARVEY. Fiscal policy and business cycles. 462p $3.75 Norton

330.1 Finance. Business cycles. Economics 41-7723

"Professor Hansen attempts to analyze the character and significance of the problems which the depression, the partial recovery, and now the war have presented as they relate to American fiscal policy and the business cycle. In discussing the changing role of fiscal policy under the impact of the growing problem of unemployment, the book explores the major shifts in government expenditure and in the federal tax structure, new developments in budgetary theory and practice, and the role of public debt in the modern economy. . . . Here also is an analysis of price policy and its functioning in relation to investment and consumption. Investment incentives, past and present, are explored as well as the implications for investment outlets and investment stabilization of a dual economy, in which public utilities are governmental projects, while trade, manufacture and agriculture are operated by private enterprise." (Publisher's note) Index.

Reviewed by S. S. Kuznets

Ann Am Acad 217:214 S '41 750w

Booklist 38:46 O 15 '41

"This book I think the maturest analysis of the theory of a mature economy published so far. It appears at a time when our economic system is experiencing the severest strains in its history, which we view with clearer vision as a result of reading this book. From now on teachers of the subject and authors of economics texts will be obliged to take into account the insights and reasoning of the school of thought so authoritatively and definitively formulated in this book." Martin Wolfson

+ Commonweal 34:378 Ag 8 '41 500w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:375 Ja '42 30w

"No American has contributed more to this rebirth of scientific economics than Professor Alvin H. Hansen; his latest, and in many ways his most important, book deserves therefore the utmost attention of every student of world affairs. 'Fiscal Policy and Business Cycles,' is not an integrated treatise, nor is it for the most part written exclusively for the economic specialist. It is rather a series of related but nevertheless independent essays covering a wide range of topics, sometimes impressionistically, occasionally with all the paraphernalia of formal theory, but always originally and suggestively. The essential independence of the parts enforces a considerable amount of repetition of important principles, which, however, is in no sense to be accounted a weakness. The style throughout is straightforward and unpretentious; what is lacking in grace is made up in intelligibility and compactness." P. M. Sweezy

+ Nation 153:284 S 27 '41 1250w

Reviewed by J. R. Walsh

New Repub 105:516 O 20 '41 800w

"Professor Hansen's work is the best exposition of the compensated economy idea that has yet been produced, so far as this reviewer is aware. For so difficult a subject it is admirably clear, well written and relieved of unnecessary technical jargon. Even the fact that it is somewhat repetitious is an advantage, for the result is to provide a recurrent summarizing of what has gone before as each new phase of the argument is advanced." E. V. Bell

+ N Y Times p9 Jl 27 '41 1500w

Reviewed by E. E. Lewis

Pol Sci Q 56:621 D '41 500w

"Professor Hansen has given us a truly objective, scholarly and, at the same time, practical treatment of the overwhelming economic problems which we face today. Here is an admirable synthesis of the short-range and long-range points of view, with none of the ineffectual hesitancy of waiting until the data are all in before offering concrete suggestions." R. T. Ely

+ Sat R of Lit 24:14 Jl 12 '41 1000w

HANSEN, MARCUS LEE. The immigrant in American history; ed. by Arthur Meier Schlesinger. 230p $2.50 Harvard univ. press 325.73 U.S.—Emigration and immigration. Emigration and immigration. U.S.—Foreign population 40-35768

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"This collection of essays is Hansen at his mature best. The essays are the mellow fruit of years of study and reflection. They are written in a charming style, warmed with deep understanding of the hopes and aspirations, successes and failures, of the people from many lands who helped to build America and whose lives Hansen knew from firsthand observation and experience." Carl Wittke

+ Am Hist R 47:161 O '41 500w

"Despite many quantitative generalizations, Hansen apparently made little use of statistical sources or methods. His interpretations are woven into an engrossing tale that should stimulate further investigation by all the techniques available to the social scientist." H. S. Shryock, Jr.

+ Am Soc R 6:583 Ag '41 240w

"Vivid essays." E. A. J. Johnson

+ Ann Am Acad 214:236 Mr '41 450w

Reviewed by V. C. Finch

Geog R 31:688 O '41 70w

"The book is readable and suggestive."

+ Nation 153:40 Jl 12 '41 60w

"Professor Hansen's The Immigrant in American History, is made up of a series of brilliant essays in which he interprets and seeks a meaning in the Atlantic migration. Some of the chapters are reprinted from historical journals but others (a confusing statement in the editorial foreword makes it difficult to determine which) are published for the first time. All are sufficiently important to deserve the handsome new form that Professor Schlesinger and the Harvard University Press have given them." R. A. Billington

+ New Eng Q 14:181 Mr '41 750w

New Repub 104:382 Mr 17 '41 60w

Reviewed by C. C. Qualey

Pol Sci Q 56:619 D '41 650w

Pratt p21 autumn '41

"Apart from the interest of the content with which one need not entirely agree, this book is a good model of historical interpretation."

+ Social Studies 32:138 Mr '41 220w

Reviewed by Frank Lorimer

Survey 77:196 Je '41 600w

Wis Lib Bul 37:29 F '41

HANSON, EARL PARKER. Chile, land of progress. 201p il $1.75 Reynal
918.3 Chile (W) 41-9737

In successive chapters the author considers the geography of Chile, its history, government, culture, its agriculture, mining and manufacturing, education and social legislation. In a final chapter he gives advice and suggestions to the tourist from North America. As a young mechanical engineer the author spent several years in Chile in the early 1920s. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:544 Jl 15 '41

"Mr. Hanson has written out of knowledge and affection. He is no casual tripper or hurried correspondent. His affection is obvious. He likes Chileans, their scenery, food, drink. So do all outsiders who tarry long enough under the shadow of the Chilean cordillera. Mr. Hanson is at his best when dealing with the Chile which he knows the most completely—the mines and nitrate fields of the northern Atacama Desert. His appraisal of the agricultural situation is somewhat less satisfactory. . . He does not give adequate recognition to the seriousness of the struggle between economic classes." Hubert Herring

+ Books p2 Je 29 '41 550w

"A readable, well-informed, friendly description of the Chilean people, their country and their achievements." R. G. Woolbert

+ Foreign Affairs 20:207 O '41 10w

"The liveliness of the author's admiration for Chile has caused him to write a very readable little book which with no serious pretensions is none the less useful as introduction to its subject. One fears that the author's respect for Chilean liberalism is a little too exuberant. And one would have liked a little less landscape and fiesta and rather more sober evaluation of economic and political difficulties." Ralph Bates

Nation 153:121 Ag 9 '41 70w

Reviewed by F. R. Grant
N Y Times p3 Je 29 '41 650w

"Enthusiastic, well-informed little book. . . Attractive photographs."

+ New Yorker 17:80 Je 21 '41 30w

Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 18 '41 850w

Reviewed by Emile Bruguiere
Survey G 30:483 S '41 110w
Wis Lib Bul 37:137 Jl '41

HANSON, EARL PARKER, ed. Highroad to adventure; an anthology. 591p map $3 McBride

910.822 Adventure and adventurers. Voyages and travels (W) 41-6253

Anthology of true adventure stories. Contents: Escape from the Boers, by Winston Churchill; The lion, by Cherry Kearton; "Lost" in the Arctic, by Vilhjalmur Stefansson; Attempts on the Eigerwand, by C. F. Meade; To Roraima, by Desmond Holdridge; Alone on the Greenland ice cap, by August Courtauld; First over Everest, by P. F. M. Fellowes; The first landings on Arctic ice, by Sir Hubert Wilkins; On the bottom, by Edward Ellsberg; The long march, by Edgar Snow; Our first foreign construction job, by E. P. Hanson; The virgins of Yau-tepec, by H. H. Dunn; Guerrillas in the desert, by T. E. Lawrence; Alone over the Tasman sea, by F. C. Chichester; Open boat across Antarctic seas, by Sir Ernest Shackleton; Prisoners in the jungle, by W. N. Merryman; Escape from Devil's island, by René Belbenoit; A leap in the dark, by Colonel C. A. Lindbergh; Flight from Siberia, by Vladimir Zenzinov; The Rif again, by Vincent Sheean; Around the Horn, by R. H. Dana; Whalers marooned; The conquest of Peru, by W. H. Prescott.

Booklist 37:436 My 15 '41

Reviewed by Frederick Reinstein
Boston Transcript p1 Mr 22 '41 350w

Reviewed by Otis Ferguson

New Repub 104:348 Mr 10 '41 600w
New Yorker 17:76 Mr 8 '41 50w

"Mr. Hanson says he expects 'a dozen brickbats for having included so-and-so and omitted somebody else' from Highroad to Adventure." I, for one, am tossing Mr. Hanson a bouquet—and I think you will, too, after traveling the Highroad to Adventure with him." Linton Wells

+ Sat R of Lit 23:28 Ap 5 '41 320w

Springf'd Republican p14 My 9 '41 450w
Wis Lib Bul 37:74 Ap '41

HARBAGE, ALFRED BENNETT. Annals of English drama, 975-1700 [pub in cooperation with the Modern lang. assn. of America]. 264p $3 Univ. of Pa. press [14s Oxford]

016.82 English drama—Bibliography. Theater—England 40-29894

"Mr. Harbage's book is a list of all dramatic, 'or quasi-dramatic,' pieces devised in England or by Englishmen abroad, extant or lost, acted or unacted, printed or not printed, from Aethelwold's Quern Quæritus of c. 975 to the plays of 1700, the year in which Dryden died. There are seven columns in each opening; the author; the title; the date; the type of drama; the 'auspices,' meaning particulars of first production; the date of first edition or statement that the play is in manuscript; and the date of the latest modern edition. The arrangement is chronological. . . Supplementary lists give extant and lost plays of too uncertain date and nature for inclusion in the main body. There are indexes of English dramatists, of English plays, of foreign dramatists and foreign plays translated or adapted, and of dramatic companies, a list of theatres, and an appendix of extant manuscripts of plays, with place and catalogue number." Times [London] Lit Sup

"This work will be of value whenever ready information is desired on early English plays. Dr. Harbage, the University of Pennsylvania Press, and the American Council of Learned Societies, which from a fund provided by the Carnegie Corporation helped the publication of it, are to be congratulated on their share in the making of this valuable reference work. The accuracy of the volume is high and the author further has promised to bring together in the 'Comment and criticism' section of the PMLA all errors and omissions of which he hears." E. E. Willoughby

+ Library Q 11:236 Ap '41 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p303 Je 21 '41 280w

HARBISON, ELMORE HARRIS. Rival ambassadors at the court of Queen Mary. 380p il $4 Princeton univ. press

942.054 Great Britain—History—Tudors, 1485-1603. Mary I, queen of England. Renard, Simon, Noailles, Antoine de 41-3572

History of the reign of Queen Mary of England, stressing the effects of the rivalry between Antoine de Noailles, ambassador of Henry II of France, and Simon Renard, ambassador of Charles V of Spain, at the English court. England was not yet an empire, but was an important factor in the game between France and Spain, for first place in Europe. Bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Harbison has gone straight to the sources. . . Neither mass of documents has been thoroughly worked before, and examination of them has been rewarded with fresh insights and illuminating illustration. These painstaking researches have been buttressed by a comprehensive and acutely critical survey of the pertinent printed literature, and the whole worked into a balanced and absorbing narrative." Garrett Mattingly

+ Am Hist R 47:107 O '41 700w

Manchester Guardian p3 N 21 '41 500w

HARBISON, E. H.—Continued

"A clear, intelligent, and most readable account which promises to remain for a long time the best history of the 'Spanish marriage' of Mary the Catholic and its immediate consequences. This is a most encouraging book, for it shows that an American scholar, rigorously trained in the professional discipline of history, and possessing the much-attacked Ph.D., can maintain the standards of his profession, and yet write a monograph which, if not 'popular' in the simpler senses of the word, is yet unmistakably a part of history as literature." Crane Brinton

+ Sat R of Lit 23:11 Ja 18 '41 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p9 Ja 3 '42 700w

HARBOUR, JOHN. Our flag; pictures by Albert Carman. 45p map $1.50 Lothrop 929.9 Flags—U.S. 41-1217

Brief introductory history of the American flag for children. Its main developments from pre-Revolutionary days are traced and some of the most memorable occasions on which it was raised are described. Illustrations are in color.

"Brief, sensible and stimulating. . . The pictures are strong, plain designs in flag colors. . . The little book's influence will be good." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 F 23 '41 150w

"It is not so inclusive as Colonel William H. Waldron's excellent little manual, 'Flags of America,' published a few years ago, but its pleasant narrative form makes this a readable and interesting introduction for children to a subject on which any American can afford to know more." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 My 25 '41 160w

HARDING, MRS BERTITA (LEONARZ). Amazon throne. 353p il $3.50 Bobbs

923.1 Braganza, House of. Brazil—History. Brazil—Kings and rulers (W) 41-9098

History of the Braganza monarchs of Brazil, told in the form of biographical studies of the three: Dom João VI, Dom Pedro I, and Dom Pedro II. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:513 Jl 1 '41

"In its subject matter 'Amazon Throne' is superlatively, almost incredibly, eventful. And in Bertita Harding's hands the story is given its full dramatic value. She possesses the gift of capturing and holding the reader's absorbed attention, from the first page to the last. For she is a born story-teller, writing in swift-moving, frank, breezy, style. Refreshingly, she has no case to prove, but is animated solely by her own interest in the tale she has to tell." Blair Niles

+ Books p4 Je 1 '41 750w

"The balance of this volume seems too much weighted against the history of the great Empire of Brazil and against the forces of history which were shaping the story of the Braganzas during the nineteenth century. . . [The author] tells very adequately how Pedro managed to keep up two households during the undisciplined days of his youth, and she imagines convincingly the emotions of good wives betrayed. But . . . we never do learn their constitutional position, their relation to the cabinets and chambers, the political, economic or social balance of their tremendous realm. . . Bertita Harding, of course, is a rather expert royal biographer, and she does in fact have the strength to keep from being altogether overcome by scandal." Philip Burnham

+ Commonweal 34:281 Jl 11 '41 850w

"[Mrs] Harding had available a wealth of romantic material in writing the history of the Braganza dynasty, Emperors of Brazil during most of the nineteenth century. The book, however, would be of more serious interest if she had devoted less space to their personal intrigues and more to their place in Brazilian history. . . The story which has yet to be written, and which [Mrs] Harding has not touched upon, is the effects lasting into contemporary Brazil, of the Braganza rule in comparison with the republican-cum-revolutionary régimes of other Latin-American countries during the same period." M. McF

Living Age 360:498 Jl '41 170w

"It is as a series of full-length portraits of people . . . that [the] book has, by far, its greatest value. And here it may be said immediately the value is great. [Mrs] Harding has a neat, flowing, somewhat flippant style that gives edge and color to her portraits and the result is almost the same as one would expect in a novel—the figures stand out and stand up and walk about on their own feet. They are not propped up." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p3 Je 1 '41 1750w

"Of its kind it is first rate. Its anecdotes, picturesque, titillating, or ridiculous are shrewdly chosen and set down in a tripping prose as easy to read as a daily gossip column. It is meant to be scanned not by scholars in a library but by matrons in comfortable deck chairs while the great white cruise ship goes rolling down to Rio." Garrett Mattingly

+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 Je 28 '41 600w

Spring'd Republican p12 Jl 3 '41 500w

HARDING, JACK ELLISON DE. I like Brazil; a close-up of a good neighbor; il. with phot. by the author. 335p $3 Bobbs

918.1 Brazil—Description and travel. Brazil—Social life and customs (W) 41-6354

Personal narrative of the author's visit to Brazil in 1940 combined with a little history, some political observations and many comments on the ways of life in the Portuguese South American republic.

Books p16 Je 1 '41 160w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:387 Ja '42 10w

"Brazil is a friend to the United States, Jack Harding reports, and one to be proud of. But the country's riches may also be a prize for 'covetous have-nots.' And 'the dread Fifth Column exists,' undoubtedly. This American business man has his own brisk recipe: 'Let's stop prating about Fifth Columnists at work in Brazil, and tie her so closely to our own axis that she won't even be tempted to break away.' But the journey which reaches these conclusions is studded with pleasant and amusing incidents of travel, and this is to be read primarily as a travel book."

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 20 '41 450w

Wis Lib Bul 37:137 Jl '41

HARDY, GODFREY HAROLD. Mathematician's apology. 93p $1 Macmillan [3s 6d Cambridge]

510 Mathematics [41-8889]

"One of the foremost living English mathematicians gives us a brief, well-written justification of his subject and his life. It defines with classic sobriety the beauty, the seriousness, and the higher 'utility' of a great creative art." New Yorker

Reviewed by S. B. Littauer

Books p26 N 30 '41 270w

Nature 147:3 Ja 4 '41 2700w

"This quiet, slim volume, reflects on every page the dignity and integrity of traditional Cambridge academic life." Arthur Waley

New Statesman & Nation 21:169 F 15 '41 490w

New Yorker 17:92 My 10 '41 30w

"[A] moving, exciting, beautifully written essay. There is nothing here which the layman cannot understand—except possibly one theorem, and I know no writing—except perhaps Henry James's introductory essays—which conveys so clearly and with such an absence of fuss the excitement of the creative artist." Graham Greene

+ Spec 165:682 D 20 '40 850w

"Mathematics is a quest for both beauty and truth, two of the three absolutes of philosophy, and as such needs no other defence. Yet it may be further noted to its credit that it has equipped Professor Hardy to expound his faith in graceful and limpid English, such as many professors of more literary subjects might envy."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p33 Ja 18 '41 650w

HARING, DOUGLAS GILBERT, and JOHN-SON, MARY E. Order and possibility in social life. 772p $4 Smith, Richard R.

301 Sociology. Ethnology 40-12343

"In large measure, this book is a compendium of materials pertaining to man and, particularly in the latter sections, to man in his social relationships. . . . Book I consists of brief ethnographic descriptions gleaned from the accounts of Bogoras, Boas, Rivers, Kroeber, Hayt, Herskovits, and Means. . . . Book II is devoted to a summary of evidence from the biological sciences about the 'nature of man,' drawing heavily upon Darwin, Morgan, Child, Hogben, and Hooton. The third book continues with an account of the dynamics of behavior and development of the individual. . . . Book IV is devoted to what Giddings called the study of pluralistic behavior and is largely derivative from his writings. . . . Book V is a conglomerated account of cultural accumulation, 'certain facts of population' and patterns of 'societal organization.' The final book deals with methods in the study of social facts and with the limits of social planning and reconstruction set by the constraints of the organism and social structure." Ann Am Acad

"The volume is the product of a long and rather penetrating study of social life. Its examination should be profitable for professional sociologists and for advanced university students; but it seems doubtful that it would be very intelligible or interesting to the beginning student." Seba Eldridge & Marston McCluggage

Am Econ R 6:454 Je '41 250w

"This book is solid and heavy; though the language flows easily, the meanings are often hard to grasp. It fights some rather old battles; it is shy of recent research materials in the fields of mental measurements, experimental and social psychology; and it relies altogether too much on direct quotation. It does, however, revive a number of very useful concepts developed by Giddings, such as like response, like mindedness, concerted volition, etc. It is heavy sledding for beginners, but any student who can and will digest it will derive from it a fairly sound understanding of the order and possibilities in social life." F. H. Hankins

+ Am J Soc 47:241 S '41 330w

"This volume may well serve as an auxiliary text for those who conceive of sociology as an encyclopedic discipline." R. K. Merton

Ann Am Acad 214:245 Mr '41 360w

"On the whole, the book is written with fine balance and sincerity, and even with the faults of the chapter to which allusion has been made, is well worth a place on the shelves of all students of society. The advanced as well as the beginning student will find it a rich source for reference." L. C. Elseley

+ Social Educ 5:70 Ja '41 330w

HARKNESS, NORRIS, and DRAPER, ERNEST E. Table top photography. 180p il $2.95 Harcourt

778 Photography, Artistic (W) 40-27804

Directions for taking close-up photographs of miniature objects against a suitable background, so that they produce the illusion of reality. Several pictures are analyzed for materials, planning, and camera data.

Booklist 37:149 D 15 '40

Pratt p19 spring '41

Wis Lib Bul 37:31 F '41

HARLEY, JOHN EUGENE. World-wide influences of the cinema. 320p $2 Univ. of southern Calif.

791.4 Moving pictures. Moving pictures—Censorship 41-1159

"A study of official censorship and the international cultural aspects of motion pictures." (Subtitle) Selected bibliography, p269-f7. Selected list of cultural, documentary, and educational films and film sources, p279-91. Index.

Reviewed by William Beard

Am Pol Sci R 35:594 Je '41 300w

"Anyone planning to write on the repercussions of the cinema, particularly the important study of American films abroad, may safely continue, since this book does not fill the serious lacuna, or even justify its grandiose title. . . . Although suggestive information is brought together, the volume is not satisfactory as a reference tool. For example, the chapter on censorship abroad devotes three paragraphs to Russia and four pages to the Straits Settlements, largely a list of objectionable films with explanations so slight as to be useless. The literature and sources for cinema history may be haphazard, but serious research can go farther than this. . . . This characterizes the amount of construction in the book. Other pages are devoted to official and unofficial censorship in the United States, organizations concerned with the cinema, documentary films, an inadequate bibliography, and a variety of appendices." R. H. Heindel

— Ann Am Acad 215:237 My '41 270w

Booklist 37:321 Mr 15 '41

"The chief value of the work is that it places between the covers of a single volume the information concerning the way various national governments have dealt with the problem of censorship. Yet even this value is academic, for American interest in censorship is practically nil. There has been no serious attempt here to inflict a federal censorship upon motion pictures." Fred Eastman

+ Christian Century 58:462 Ap 2 '41 500w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:873 Jl '41 10w

School & Society 53:192 F 8 '41 10w

HARLOW, ALVIN FAY. Joel Chandler Harris (Uncle Remus) plantation storyteller; il. by W. C. Nims. 278p $2.50 Messner

B or 92 Harris, Joel Chandler (W) 41-7560

Biography of the author of the famous Uncle Remus stories—Joel Chandler Harris. The larger part of the book is devoted to his younger years. For upper grades and junior high school age.

Booklist 37:516 Jl 1 '41

"Pleasant to read, good to remember, this is as useful a biography for young folks as the season—well provided along this line—has produced. . . . It is a gentle memory that the book preserves, one for which a school library has a welcome." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 Je 22 '41 400w

"This new contribution to the lives of the famous proves surprisingly better than usual. Upper elementary and junior high school grades have a need for just this story." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 66:465 My 15 '41 100w

"Not only young people but adults also will enjoy Mr. Harlow's book. He has performed a real service in presenting in such a readable and sympathetic form the creator of an immortal character in literature. The illustrations have the gayety of Harris's stories and give authentic glimpses of the period. The book would be improved by an index and a bibliography." A. T. Eaton

HARLOW, ALVIN FAY—Continued

+ N Y Times p9 S 7 '41 1050w

HARMON, GEORGE DEWEY. Sixty years of Indian affairs. 428p $5 Univ. of N.C. press
970.5, Indians of North America—Government relations 41-6871

History of the political, economic, and diplomatic aspects of our federal Indian policy from the time of the Revolution to 1850. The author is a North Carolinian and teaches history at Lehigh university. Bibliography. Index.

"The book is well documented, splendidly supported by brief quotations and footnotes, and throughout is written in scholarly fashion." B. L. French

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1008 O '41 340w

"This volume attempts to give a thorough treatment of Federal Indian administration from 1789 to 1850. Probably it attempts too much. It might have been possible to present the broad outlines of this policy with an interpretation of the forces that called it into being and an evaluation of its results, but a detailed treatment of the intricate relations with each tribe is too much for one man's lifetime. As a result, many chapters of this 'political, economic, and diplomatic' history—the author's characterization—are nothing more than a dreary listing of treaty provisions." Angie Debo

Ann Am Acad 218:246 N '41 500w

"Dr. Harmon's book is too meticulous, too detailed, and too formidable with documentation to appeal to the average reader, but scholars will find it an authoritative and exhaustive source book for the period covered." K. C. K.

+ Christian Science Monitor p24 O 9 '41 550w

"This is an excellent history and reference book. . . It is clearly and smoothly written and backed with an unusual richness of source material. It is an important contribution to the early history of the United States as well as of the Indian." O. La F.

+ Sat R of Lit 24:17 J1 5 '41 50w

HARPER, WILHELMINA, comp. Brownie of the circus, and other stories of today; pictured by Vera Neville. 108p $2 McKay

(W) 41-19720

Collection of thirteen stories for third graders. Most of the stories are by well-known present-day authors. Contents: The sleigh ride, by H. F. Orton; The little boy with the big apples, by Elsa Moeschlin; Brownie of the circus, by Elizabeth Coatsworth; Mee-Mee's lost mother, by Gerald Chan Sieg; Araminta's goat, by E. K. Evans; Zebedee, fisherman, by Alice Dalglish; The Christmas tops, by Maud Lindsay; Little boy pie, by Eleanor Farjeon; The adventure in the cave, by Grace Moon; How Kassia helped, by E. G. Baker; The Hollyberrys at the seashore, by Alice Dalglish; Ameliaranne at the zoo, by K. L. Thompson; Peter Pocket's Christmas, by May Justus.

Reviewed by Warren Chappell

Horn BK M 17:455 N '41 40w

"The stories are all simple enough for third-grade children to read for themselves; teachers and parents can well use them with preschool and kindergarten children; and storytellers will find several good suggestions. . . Good illustrations. Recommended." J. E. Stromdahl

+ Library J 66:1000 N 15 '41 130w

HARPER, WILHELMINA, ed. Wings of courage, and other stories for Girl scouts; ill. by Dorothy Bayley. 308p $2.50 Appleton-Century

41-22364

Twenty-one short stories for girls of scout age, grouped under ten headings, illustrating the points of the scout law.

Booklist 38:161 Ja 1 '42

Reviewed by Gertrude Andrus

Library J 66:1049 D 1 '41 50w

"Well selected." G. G. Bates

+ Sat R of Lit 24:11 N 8 '41 20w

School & Society 54:395 N 1 '41 10w

HARRIMAN, MRS FLORENCE JAFFRAY (HURST). Mission to the north. 331p ill map $3.50 Lippincott

B or 92 Diplomatic memoirs. World war, 1939—Norway. Norway—Description and travel (W) 41-51805

Mrs Harriman was United States minister to Norway from 1937 to 1940. The first half of her new book tells the story of her first years in Norway; the latter half deals with the invasion of Norway by Germany and her own escape to Sweden and north to Petsamo and thence home. Index.

Booklist 37:489 Je 15 '41

"Indefatigable, indomitable, imperturbable Daisy Harriman makes out a good case for the non-career diplomat. Intelligence, quick sympathy and alert interest are a pretty fair substitute for the routine apprenticeship of the foreign service. . . It is too bad that an excellent book should be marred by execrable copyreading and proofreading." Ted Olson

+ — Books p3 Je 1 '41 1250w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 21 '41 500w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:196 O '41 40w

Reviewed by Lena Ruppert

Library J 66:462 My 15 '41 100w

Manchester Guardian p3 D 16 '41 150w

Reviewed by Bjarne Braatoy

Nation 153:18 J1 5 '41 700w

"This book has three distinct factors of interest, any one of which would make it well worth reading. It is, first, the unique chronicle of an American diplomat's life and work during the early months of the war. . . It brings us in contact, second, with a vital and unusual personality. . . But especially is 'Mission to the North' arresting and valuable because it is the faithful record of an observant, thoughtful awareness, in peace and war, of the Norwegian people. Some of it she was, and that is good and admirable reading; but all of it she saw, and that is enlightening and important." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p1 Je 1 '41 1200w

"In 'Mission to the North,' Mrs. Harriman describes, with many charming and amusing details, various aspects of her three years in Norway and discusses the two outstanding events of her official life—the City of Flint case and the Nazi invasion. While her narrative adds little to the published records of these wartime developments, it gives a concise and coherent account of the many difficulties which arose over Norwegian neutrality." J. F. Green

+ Sat R of Lit 24:13 Je 7 '41 500w

Time 37:88 Je 2 '41 30w

Times [London] Lit Sup p638 D 20 '41 650w

Wis Lib Bul 37:138 J1 '41

HARRIMAN, JOHN. Career of Philip Hazen.
354p $2.50 Howell, Soskin

41-22356

"Philip Hazen is head of one of the oldest and biggest stock-broking houses in the Street. He is married to one of the wealthiest and most beautiful women in America, is the center of a close band of intimate friends, and possessed of an option on a new type of engine which promises to revolutionize aviation. At the end of the story he has been stripped of everything—his Fascist-minded antagonist has taken over his wife, his business and his airplane scheme. Yet Philip Hazen at the end is a finer man, more capable of achieving something worth-while in life than was the earlier favorite of fortune." Springf'd Republican

Booklist 38:189 F 1 '42

"The Career of Philip Hazen' is a fine story on many counts, for its portrayal of the changing world of Wall Street and the social world of Newport; for its sensitive delineation of a man fighting with the weapons of his tradition and of one who wanted tradition only as a frill for his abilities, and for its integration of the emotional conflicts in the lives of the two men." Rose Feld

+ Books p10 N 9 '41 500w

Reviewed by Drake de Kay

N Y Times p7 N 9 '41 700w

New Yorker 17:90 N 1 '41 100w

"The fact that the book contains a definite philosophy does not mean that we deal with doctrines rather than with people. On the contrary, we observe, in a close-up, The Rich, neither distorted, as in novels of a certain school where they represent the evils of Capitalism, nor glamorized, as in other popular productions where their lives appear as a summary of one year's society news. The Hazens are as real as Dickens's more humble people, but their struggles for survival are on a larger scale and are more terrifying to watch. In one respect, I think, the author's instinct suddenly flags, Philip's fight for his name, his firm, and his reputation against his antagonist, Swade, has enough substance for a fascinating plot. It was not necessary to have Swade steal his wife as well." R. R. Plant

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 N 22 '41 450w

"The story may seem platitudinous and trite. But this Mr. Harriman's novel never is. This writer's ability to see below the surface of things—in business, in society, in the motives of men and women, is impressive in its sureness and subtlety." R. J. Conklin

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 26 '41 420w

HARRIS, MRS BERNICE (KELLY). Portulaca.
335p $2.50 Doubleday

41-51745

Middle-class life in a Southern, non-industrial town, as seen thru the eyes of a young wife, who does not fit in too well with her husband's family. Nancy is determined not to be bogged down by the pettiness and meanness of the town and its inhabitants, and her efforts bring her much trouble before she learns the real worth of the little town.

Booklist 37:439 My 15 '41

"The plot of 'Portulaca' is a familiar one. . . But Mrs. Harris has a pleasingly fresh approach, and a saving 'light touch' in describing this segment of Southern life. Bonwell is distinctively Southern, but not exclusively so. It has a certain universality. 'Portulaca' depicts a significant section of American life, authentically and honestly. In this lies its appeal." Barbara Woolcott

+ Books p2 My 4 '41 800w

"Good character portrayal brought out through typical small-town gatherings. The style is a little forced and confusing at times. Will not be widely read." Margaret Winning

+ Library J 66:400 My 1 '41 90w

"Because her portrait of Southern small-town life is so uncompromisingly honest, it is hard to see why Mrs. Harris lets her heroine compromise at the end of this novel. . . Mrs. Harris writes with a sprightly pen. Her publishers say that her book is 'unstained' by bitterness. A dash more of bitterness might have improved it."

+ Nation 152:648 My 31 '41 110w

New Repub 104:738 My 26 '41 50w

"'Portulaca,' because it is more self-consciously literary in its main device, seems to me a less successful and appealing novel on the whole than 'Purslane' [Book Review Digest, 1939] but it remains the work of a fresh and vital talent, from which a great deal may be expected in the future." Herschel Brickell

+ N Y Times p7 My 4 '41 900w

"Sometimes Mrs. Harris's style is annoyingly obscure and sometimes she lets her plot get away from her, but there is much sound observation of character, some humor, and on the whole a revealing projection of small-town life."

+ New Yorker 17:86 My 3 '41 100w

HARRIS, CYRIL. Richard Pryne; a novel of the American revolution. 414p $2.50 Scribner

(W) 41-3119

Historical novel of the time of the American revolution. It is the story of a civilian spy, a friend of one of Washington's officers. Richard Pryne was a young man of twenty-five with an idea for his own future glory when he took the name of Samuel Culper, Junior, to cover his spying activities; he was a disillusioned man with the deaths of two loved ones on his conscience, when his part in the final victory had been accomplished.

Booklist 37:359 Ap 1 '41

Bookmark 2:14 My '41

"Mr. Harris does an excellent job of re-creating the background against which his characters move. This indeed is the best part of his book. But just as Richard Pryne's work is carried on under cover of prosaic warehouse duties, so does the book suffer from prosaic overtones which hobble the dramatic pace of the novel. One gets the impression that the emotional facets of the events he portrays have less interest for Mr. Harris than the factual and intellectual." Rose Feld

+ Books p8 F 23 '41 550w

"The book has the suspense that is part of every secret service narrative and is a stirring, romantic and interesting tale as well." F. S. Ambrose

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 8 '41 240w

"Good story-telling and credible characters nicely related to a period background that's authentic, satisfying and unostentatious."

+ New Repub 104:510 Ap 14 '41 30w

"Any reader who decides that he has read 'Oliver Wiswell' and can afford to skip 'Richard Pryne' is making a mistake. And he is cheating himself of as pleasant and absorbing a novel as the present season is likely to offer." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p7 F 23 '41 750w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 30 '41 700w

Wis Lib Bul 37:93 My '41

HARRIS, EDWARD NORMAN. 'Way away tales from Away-off-from-anywhere land; tr. and adapted [il. by Charles H. Steinbacher from sketches by the author]. 142p $2 Am. Bapt.

398.2 Folklore—Burma. Tales, Burmese

40-29657

Folk tales from Burma "translated and arranged" by a man who was born there in 1860 and spent more than thirty years in Burma as a missionary among the Karens. For young readers.

HARRIS, E. N.—Continued

"Good stories, well told, cleverly illustrated, and made into an unusually attractive book."
+ Christian Century 57:1617 D 25 '40 70w

"To write this notice is a pleasure not a chore. I thoroughly enjoyed reading the book, and intend to reread it frequently. The natural and whimsical way in which Dr. Harris retells these old folk tales of the Karens, among whom he worked for thirty-eight years, quite won me." M. S. Enslin
+ Crozer Q 18:182 Ap '41 90w

HARRIS, ERDMAN. Introduction to youth.
221p $1.75 Macmillan

170 Youth. Character education 40-29560
Advice for parents, teachers, and leaders of young people's activities, based on the author's experiences at the Lawrenceville school for boys, and at Union Theological seminary. It shows how youth can be helped, and the relationship between youth and the older generations improved. Has many examples. Suggestions about other books.

Booklist 37:285 Mr 1 '41

Reviewed by M. H. Bro
Christian Century 58:862 Jl 2 '41 650w

"Those who read the author's Twenty-One will not be surprised to learn that this is an exceedingly good book. As its title indicates, it does not pretend to be an exhaustive treatise on adolescence. But Dr. Harris' sympathy for youth and his thorough understanding of its problems, the vitality of his presentation and the relationship to present day living, make it a most useful and practical tool for those who deal with the young." J. H. Titus
+ Churchman 155:19 Mr 15 '41 60w

"Whatever merit this particular book may have is outweighed in the eyes of this prejudiced reviewer by the demerits of its type. The remoteness of highly abstract principles from concrete events undoubtedly sets something of a premium upon practical wisdom such as Mr. Harris so engagingly tries to give." L. M. Pape

Ethics 51:373 Ap '41 100w

Reviewed by E. J. Chane
J Religion 21:332 Jl '41 60w

"The text as a whole is a curious blending of some currently accepted psychological principles, techniques of speaking, interviewing and guidance, seasoned heavily with old time religion." E. W. Burhoe
Survey 77:197 Je '41 300w

HARRIS, MRS FLORENCE LA GANKE, and HUSTON, HAZEL HANNA. The new home economics omnibus. 666p il $1.76 Little

640 Home economics (W) 41-6915
"This revision for the most part follows the original plan, though some of the material has been slightly shifted and rewritten to bring it into line with newer knowledge and teaching methods. The discussion still centers about the life of the high school student. The units are arranged so that their order may be shifted to suit the convenience of the individual class; there are suggestions for laboratory practice to accompany each." (J Home Econ)
For earlier edition see Book Review Digest, 1935. Index.

Booklist 38:56 O 15 '41

"Presented in an informal, readable style."
+ J Home Econ 33:603 O '41 80w

HARRIS, ROBERT JENNINGS. Judicial power of the United States. 238p $2.50 La. state univ. press

347.98 U.S. Supreme court. Courts—U.S. Jurisdiction. U.S.—Constitutional law. U.S. Congress—Powers and duties 40-28304

"Professor Harris' book is a detailed case study of the judicial powers of the United States with its inevitable concomitant, jurisdiction of the federal courts. . . . The subject-matter of the book is divided into four major divisions: (1) 'External Limits of Judicial Power'; (2) 'Power to Regulate Jurisdiction'; (3) 'Incidental or Implied Powers of Federal Courts'; and (4) 'Legislative Courts.' The book is well footnoted with case citations, books, monographs, articles from law reviews and political science quarterlies. It has the earmarks of a scientific and exhaustive piece of work." Am Pol Sci R

Reviewed by C. P. Patterson
+ Am Pol Sci R 34:1007 O '40 1000w

Reviewed by E. S. Corwin
Ann Am Acad 217:202 S '41 1400w

"This book is the kind of unassuming masterpiece which one speaks of as an 'able' work, with all the connotations of command of subject matter, good writing, and clear presentation which that modest word carries. In treating of perhaps the most esoteric corner of American constitutional law, the limits of the federal judicial power, the author has managed a well-integrated and enlightening exposition of the present state of the law and its backgrounds together with lucid critical insights of his own." Max Goldman

+ Columbia Law R 41:374 F '41 1900w

Reviewed by F. R. Black
Pol Sci Q 56:630 D '41 500w

HARRIS, SEYMOUR EDWIN. Economics of American defense. 350p $3.50 Norton

330.973 U.S.—Economic conditions. World war, 1939—Economic aspects—U.S. U.S.—Defenses 41-20793

This volume is an attempt "to apply the principles of economics to the problem of war and defense. It is both a tract on public policy and an exercise in economic principles." (Pref) The author is associate professor of economics, Harvard University. Index.

Booklist 38:90 N 15 '41

"Unfortunately the average intelligent reader, running to Professor Harris' book for enlightenment, will probably find himself badly bogged. For Professor Harris has written for his fellow economists, and his closely reasoned, heavily documented chapters make heavy going for those unversed in Keynesian employment theory. . . . One cannot, however, blame Professor Harris for not having written a popular work when such was obviously not his intention. To those equipped to grasp its argument, his book is a magnificent achievement in the clarification of a vast, obscure, and exceedingly important problem." H. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Ja 13 '42 450w

"Although Dr. Harris covers a wide and interesting field, from the pre-war background of our defense effort to post-war problems, he has not succeeded in actually finding out what has been going on. As a result, his treatment is discursive, while the central issues of increased production and integrated planning are scarcely touched upon. The real story of the economics of American defense will be written after the war is over by economists who stood near the center of the Washington vortex."

Nation 153:678 D 27 '41 120w

"In spite of its great qualities the book is not the definitive text on defense economics for which we have been waiting. Though the greatest single advance toward a satisfactory study, Professor Harris' work is still a long way off from the goal. And unfortunately, the defects of the book will be more evident to the casual reader than its great qualities. Least important of these shortcomings is the optimism which made Mr. Harris grossly underestimate the magnitude of the job we have to do. . . . More important is Professor Harris' intentional and consistent refusal to consider the political and social implications of a defense economy. . . . The greatest weakness of the work, however, lies in its presentation. Professor Harris has actually written two good books; by merging them into one he has greatly impaired the usefulness of both." P. F. Drucker

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:14 D 13 '41 700w

"Prof Harris has not written a popular book for the layman. For the most part it is filled with too much analysis and detail, due in part to the necessity of speedy writing in order to present a timely analysis, and in part to the extremely complex nature of the problem. It is still useful reading for the economist, for the conclusions are sound, although the path to them is often tortuous and winding." P. L. Gamble

Springf'd Republican p7e D 7 '41 400w

HARRISON, GEORGE BAGSHAW. Jacobean journal. 406p $4.50 Macmillan [16s 6d Routledge]

942.06 Great Britain—History—James I, 1603-1625. Great Britain—Social life and customs. Great Britain—Intellectual life

[A41-1736]

Following the form of the author's Elizabethan Journals (Book Review Digest, 1939) this book records in diary form the events most talked of in England during the years 1603 thru 1606. They include the journey of King James I to London, the great plague of 1603, the trial of Raleigh, the coronation of James, the foundation of Virginia, the translation of the Bible, and much of the manners and customs, literature, scandals, and plays of the day. Index.

"The record is both entertaining and instructive. In idle moments a reader will find pleasure in dipping into it here or there, for it need not be read consecutively. The more serious student will find in it invaluable material for the background against which must be set Shakespeare's great tragedies and an impressive number of other memorable works of literature." S. C. Chew

+ Books p39 N 2 '41 550w

"Dr. G. B. Harrison's 'A Jacobean Journal' is a fascinating continuation of his previous Elizabethan journals. It covers the opening years of the reign of James I, and is built up out of contemporary letters, diaries, and other forms of gossip. It throws vivid sidelights upon all manner of political and literary activities." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Ap 12 '41 250w

Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 11 '41 440w

"Dr. Harrison's learned, inquisitive, and remarkably well-informed Elizabethan diarist continues his felicitous way into the reign of James I. His interests are as versatile as ever; he turns his bland, intelligent eye and urbane anecdotal pen on to court events, theology, literature and drama, parliament, the laws, entertainments, crime, executions, plots, sorcerers, witches, affectations of speech, voyages and explorations, pageants, clothes (for which he has a truly milliner's eye), lion-baiting, shocking doings abroad, everything. . . Perhaps it is best to read this extremely readable book through without troubling ourselves about the apportioning of sources or the separating of authors." Rose Macaulay

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:336 Mr 29 '41 110w

"The compiler of this journal, the author of many good books on Shakespeare and his period, has a scholar's curiosity and patience. He also has historical taste and humor. The Puritans and the recusants; the felons of the countryside and the surfeit of gallants, lousy knights, queans and gulls in the capital; Shakespeare, Ben Jonson, Sir Francis Bacon, Sir Edward Coke, Sir Walter Raleigh, Inigo Jones, Captain John Smith, Arabella Stuart, Lady Penelope Rich, Guy Fawkes—all these and many more are greatly talked of." Henry Grattan

+ N Y Times p3 S 28 '41 700w

"Dr. Harrison ransacks the contemporary authorities for accounts of interesting and odd events that happened, and serves them up as a 'record of those things most talked of at the time.' The proof of the pudding is in the eating, and it must be allowed that he has concocted a rich and capacious dish with a good many plums in it, if here and there one comes across a morsel of suet. In this volume there are no quotations from manuscript authorities, but that does not impair the book as giving a very just and representative picture of the time. Above all, it is entertaining and holds the attention, which is the chief justification for such a book." A. L. Rowse

+ Spec 166:208 F 21 '41 850w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 16 '41 480w

(Reprinted from The Times [London] Literary Supplement)

"Dr. Harrison always takes care to mingle the grave and the gay, the great and the small, the personal and the national, in order to make his picture of the age representative."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p68 F 8 '41 1200w

HARRISON, GEORGE RUSSELL. Atoms in action; the world of creative physics, rev ed 401p il $3.50 Morrow [12s 6d Allen, G]

530 Atoms, Physics 41-20860

In this new edition "the Director of the Research Laboratory of Experimental Physics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology presents the world of creative physics as a vital part of everyday life, literally revolutionizing affairs of man by its application to all manner of activities. An entirely new chapter dealing with 'Science in War and After' is of such importance as to justify this brief notice." (Scientific Bk Club R) For earlier edition see Book Review Digest, 1939, Index.

Booklist 38:98 N 15 '41

"'Atoms in Action' [is not] just another addition to the number of books which attempt to convey to a bewildered, and by now rather blasé, public the latest inside information about the structure of the atom. . . Energy, its control, distribution, and utilization in modern times is the theme of the book, and a very stimulating theme it is." J. A. Crowther

+ Nature 146:760 D 14 '40 800w (Review of earlier edition)

"Especially noteworthy are the clarity with which the social implications of modern science are set forth and the opinions of the author concerning the consequences of shrinking the world and expanding the universe."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:4 N '41 120w

HARRISON, GEORGE RUSSELL. How things work; science for young Americans; il. by James MacDonald. 301p $2.75 Morrow

530 Physics—Juvenile literature. Technology —Juvenile literature (W) 41-20858

An introduction to creative physics, suitable for grades seven to nine. Partial contents: Light to keep the world alive; The value of glass; Storing sights to remember; Peering into atoms; How energy makes things go; The world of electricity; Talking over wires; Finding what things are made of; New tricks for tomorrow. The author is director of the research laboratory of experimental physics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Index.

Booklist 38:116 D 1 '41

"Mr. Harrison has written a fascinating book on important discoveries and inventions in the field of physics. While the information given is thoroughly scientific, the language is not too technical to be grasped by a layman, untrained in the field of physics, yet eager to understand more about the wonders of the modern world. Such persons would like to know how energy makes things go, how an airplane is balanced and how the telephone and radio can be explained, things made clear with other marvels, in this exciting book." A. M. Jordan

HARRISON, G. R.—Continued

+ Horn Bk M 18:35 Ja '42 110w

"The material is excellent and has been well indexed, but could have been better organized. There are illustrations, and clever pen sketches by James MacDonald, as well as good, clear photographs. Should prove useful to young people from twelve years on." J. E. Stromdahl

+ Library J 66:1001 N 15 '41 100w

Reviewed by Jessie Stanton & E. W. Steele
New Repub 105:338 D 15 '41 30w

HARRISON, SIDNEY. Musical box; il. by David Burley. 327p $2.50 Macmillan [8s 6d Joseph, M]

780.88 Music—Addresses, essays, lectures [41-4006]

Essays on musical subjects by an English critic. Contents: Composed by 'Anon'; Everybody's songs; People in the songs; Seven stories; Did it matter? Music as a profession; Music as an industry; How music is arranged; Poems about music; Great musical cities of the world; Tunes according to your trade; Street songs and sea shanties; Monarchs and their minstrels; Poems that have been set to music; Which poems inspire a composer?; Musical images; Symphonic mottoes; On with the dance; Slogan songs.

"The entertainment value of a good-sized musical library is preserved in this urbane compendium."

+ Books p18 S 28 '41 170w

"Mr. Sidney Harrison has provided a group of essays that twinkle with humor and prove at the same time to be as useful as they are entertaining." G. A. H.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 7 '41 210w

Reviewed by Howard Taubman
N Y Times p31 O 5 '41 480w

"The true purpose of the book could only have been achieved if it had all been done in rather better style. Even the music type is difficult to read, the pianoforte arrangements, whose authorship is not stated, do not satisfy a fastidious ear, the engravings are uneven in quality, and Mr. Harrison's jaunty writing is out of keeping with his excellent intention, namely, the provision of a miscellany of good things. It is, however, undeniable that Mr. Harrison carries his learning lightly and has managed to pack a number of interesting and pleasant morsels of poetry, prose and music into an unusual kind of anthology."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p632 D 14 '40 220w

HARSCH, JOSEPH CLOSE. Pattern of conquest. 309p $2.50 Doubleday

940.5343 World war, 1939—Germany. Germany—Politics and government (W) 41-14858

The Berlin correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor discusses his discoveries and experiences during the first eighteen months of the war. When censorship became intolerable he returned to this country, and continued his story in the columns of his paper. The book, based on these data, describes the methods, aims, strength and weakness of the Nazi regime.

"Mr. Harsch is a careful and thoughtful observer. His narrative is notably free from exaggerations both of optimism and of pessimism about the course of the war." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic O '41 210w

Booklist 38:49 O 15 '41

Reviewed by Joseph Barnes
Books p3 Ag 31 '41 700w

"One of the most penetrating [analyses] to which National Socialism has yet been subjected. It is at once a protest and a confession. It is a protest against the complacency of the democracies—their failure adequately to understand the forces that were let loose in Germany and their failure to cope with them. It is a confession of faith in those very values which Nazism would destroy—values which will ultimately enable free men to overthrow the 'arbitrary oligarchy' that rules in Berlin."

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Ag 21 '41 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '41

Reviewed by Margaret Stern
Commonweal 34:522 S 19 '41 420w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:377 Ja '42 70w

"A well-written and timely book. Recommended." J. A. Sohon

+ Library J 66:668 Ag '41 70w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchinson
Nation 153:347 O 11 '41 750w

New Repub 105:446 O 6 '41 30w

"As a straightforward account of Germany at war, of the methods practiced in occupied countries and of the author's own views of German schemes of world domination and the means which should be taken to meet this threat the book is excellent, sober, factual and well informed." W. H. Chamberlin

+ N Y Times p1 S 7 '41 1150w

"Intelligent and capably written."

+ New Yorker 17:56 Ag 30 '41 30w

Pratt p23 D '41

"'Pattern of Conquest' gives a complete picture of life in Berlin today. It makes worthwhile reading. In fact, anybody who is interested in finding out the truth about Germany at war will find it here. I recommend it warmly." H. B. Kranz

+ Sat R of Lit 24:10 Ag 30 '41 950w

"One of the first-rate volumes on Germany at war... Mr. Harsch shows himself to be highly perceptive, fair-minded and able to see the forest as well as the trees. Wisely, he leaves to others the pleas for action; his job is to describe the Reich, ours to decide what we want to do about it."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 23 '41 1200w

Reviewed by B. P. Adams
Survey G 30:705 D '41 300w

Reviewed by Barnett Nover
Yale R n s 31:379 winter '42 390w

HART, ARCHIBALD, and LEJEUNE, F. ARNOLD. The growing vocabulary; fun and adventure with words; with an introd. by Oscar H. McPherson. 156p $1.50; educ ed $1 Dutton

428.3 Vocabulary. English language—Etymology. English language—Idioms (W) 40-35731

This book is designed for young people but might prove of interest and value to adults as well. It contains one hundred comparatively brief exercises in improving and enlarging the vocabulary. Some of these take the form of "true or false" quizzes, others are devoted to word families, still others to selections from well-known children's classics which contain possibly unfamiliar words, etc.

School & Society 52:504 N 16 '40 30w

"'The Growing Vocabulary' is well adapted to the needs of the average reader. Whether used as a refresher or a beginner's textbook, it supplies pleasant and profitable reading."

+ Springf'd Republican p10 F 14 '41 180w

Wis Lib Bul 37:51 Mr '41

HART, HORNELL NORRIS. Chart for happiness. 198p $2 Macmillan

171.4 Happiness. Psychology, Applied 40-36193

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"It seems to me that Professor Hart has published his findings prematurely. He might well have approached the complex problem of measuring a state of mind by means of other methods as well as that which he has chosen: by a more thorough analysis of the subjective aspect, for instance, by more intensive case studies, and by a larger number of them. This procedure might have avoided the suspicion of surface research and surface therapy." J. L. Moreno

Am J Soc 47:652 Ja '42 150w

"Rarely is a reviewer confronted with such a strange book, or more accurately, a mixture of two books. . . . There is danger, of course, of being unfair to both books, just as one might be unfair to both beefsteak and ice cream if they were stirred up together. The book for the layman is a vigorous, well-written, practical sociological pep-talk, doubtless helpful for those it can help. Many sensible things are said concerning adjustment to work, play, love, and home, with comments on health, success, social attitudes, and the thrilling potentialities of happy living thrown in for good measure. The argument is backed by scraps of evidence from a program of happiness measurement. Certainly one must respect the boldness of Hart's attack in the more scientific book upon a significant, yet correspondingly difficult, scientific problem. Yet the Long-Run Euphorimeter seems over-simple for the measurement of hedonic subtleties." Clifford Kirkpatrick

+ Am Soc R 6:288 Ap '41 900w

"This book on happiness has made me very unhappy. It seems almost horrible that one should work out a questionnaire for persons to test their altruism to see if they have enough of it to be happy. It is even worse to suggest that religion is something one can make use of in order to attain happiness; if your score is unsatisfactory, 'religion has great potential services to render you.'" Gordon Poterat

— Crozer Q 18:183 Ap '41 150w

Reviewed by Marjorie Grene

Ethics 51:246 Ja '41 400w

Reviewed by E. E. Emme

J Religion 21:332 Jl '41 250w

HART, HORNE LL NORRIS. New gateways to creative living. 197p $1.75 Abingdon-Cokesbury

170 Conduct of life 41-17439

"How can one be happy in a dark and tragic world? The author of this book gives an answer to this question in terms of a psychological laboratory technician. . . . He gives three negative and three positive operations in social relations, the negative ones being the avoidance of coercion, avoid falseness, avoid asserting our superiority. The positive operations are to try to understand others, learn to be stimulating and to work toward a creative fellowship of mankind." (Churchman) Index.

"Youth and age, believer and skeptic, will enjoy these lectures." E. W. Blakeman

+ Christian Century 58:1375 N 5 '41 300w

"There is some value in it all as the result of one professor's laboratory studies of happiness. As a practical guide to happiness it is like teaching golf by dissecting the muscles which are used in making a drive off the tee." H. J. Simpson

Churchman 155:22 O 1 '41 150w

"It is a clever and thought-provoking volume, but cast in a popular mould. Its content is within the range of the thoughtful laity. The minister will catalogue the book under 'religion and health'—and will commend it to his friends." W. R. McNutt

+ Crozer Q 19:84 Ja '42 150w

"The process seems oversimplified, but the book has true religious feeling and should be helpful to many readers." G. O. Kelley

Library J 66:730 S 1 '41 140w

HART, JAMES DAVID. The Oxford companion to American literature. 888p $5 Oxford

810.2 American literature—Dictionaries, indexes, etc. (W) 41-12647

"In alphabetic arrangement, the work includes short biographies and bibliographies of American authors; summaries and descriptions of the important American novels, stories, essays, poems, and plays; information on literary societies, magazines, anthologies, co-operative publications, and other matters related to writing in America." (Pref) Contains a chronological index, a year-by-year outline, giving in parallel columns literary and social events.

Booklist 38:6 S '41

"It is that unusual combination, a reference guide condensed as far as condensation will go without desiccation, and also a book one interested in the general subject of literature can read straight ahead for pleasure."

+ Books p17 S 14 '41 240w

Reviewed by James van Zant

Churchman 156:16 Ja 1 '42 200w

"An invaluable reference book. . . . There must be omissions—there could not help but be—yet if there are, they in no way make the book less good, for there is so much here that many an omission could be forgiven. Certainly Catholic authors have been treated fairly."

+ Commonweal 34:476 S 5 '41 100w

Reviewed by Margaret Marshall

Nation 153:343 O 11 '41 80w

"[The author] has given himself a very large order, which he has worked with great patience, and a reasonable approach to success, to fill. . . . In his summaries of works of fiction he is less successful, producing in some cases résumés which are at once too long and insufficiently enlightening. Some questions as to why so-and-so or such-and-such has been included are of course inevitable. An excellent feature of this reading 'companion' is the Chronological Index."

+ — N Y Times p4 S 14 '41 310w

"Opening this bulky volume at random, I have frequently found my curiosity satisfied, and in leafing over its pages I have run across a good deal of stray information that is curious and may be valuable. But I have also failed to discover information that I expected to find, and I am puzzled to know what principle of exclusion has been followed. . . . The 'Oxford Companion to American Literature' will, I suspect, be more useful to the schools and the libraries than to the scholar, though to him it may be useful as a volume of first reference. One mild concluding squawk. I read that Archibald MacLeish has been director of the Harvard School of Journalism. Harvard has no School of Journalism, and never has had one." H. M. Jones

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:7 S 13 '41 850w

HART, MOSS. The lady in the dark. 182p $2 Random house

812

(W) 41-9124

"The story [of this play] is simple. The woman editor of a fashion magazine goes to a psychoanalyst for a cure for her growing restlessness. This provides the opportunity for a series of flashbacks both of real happenings in the editor's life and also of dreams she has dreamed. At the end she is cured by realizing that she is in love with a man in her office she always thought she had disliked." Commonweal

Booklist 37:512 Jl 1 '41

"The printed text will give you little or no idea either of its theatrical excitement or its spectacular appeal. In cold type the lyrics are mostly banal and graceless, and the play interludes are brief and unresolved. Only in the theater is this work realized." W. P. Eaton

Books p28 O 5 '41 90w

HART, MOSS—Continued

Dramatic criticism by Grenville Vernon
Commonweal 33:401 F 7 '41 600w

"The play is less than startling, and is unlikely to be produced by amateurs because of technical difficulties. Doubtless there will be a demand from the reading public for the play. Recommended for purchase of single copies."
George Freedley

Library J 66:355 Ap 15 '41 90w

Dramatic criticism by J. W. Krutch
Nation 152:164 F 8 '41 1250w

Dramatic criticism by Stark Young
New Repub 104:179 F 10 '41 300w

HART, MOSS, and KAUFMAN, GEORGE S.
George Washington slept here; a comedy in three acts. 168p il $2 Random house

812 (W) 41-1505

Play about the man who wanted a little place in the country and got it, but with many complications. Illustrated with photographs of the New York production of the play.

Booklist 37:267 F 15 '41

"'George Washington Slept Here' is a pretty blatant and obvious farce of the wise-cracking school, kept on its feet by many devices which in reality have little to do with the rehabilitation of an old house, and it is entirely lacking in any human warmth and sympathy. We rather suspect that too many people have secretly nourished the dream of owning such an old house, to view with untempered mirth the goings on in this play. The story might have been warm and charming and real, as well as funny. But it isn't. As a result, it isn't even half as funny as the authors doubtless hoped it would be." W. P. Eaton

Books p12 F 9 '41 150w

"This farce about buying a farm in the country would probably seem funnier if written by lesser authors. As a matter of fact, we believe that Messrs. Kaufman and Hart wrote it from the standpoint of men who really are satisfied with their nice expensive New York apartments, and their humor about trees and fertilizers and insects has the mechanical lilt that they lose when they sing the virile vibrations of Manhattan." E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 152:335 D '40 320w (Dramatic criticism)

HARTLEY, MARSDEN. Androscoggin. 52p $2 Falmouth

811 40-29754

"Maine, it would appear, is a fruitful place for artists to go to and to come from. Marsden Hartley was born in the Androscoggin Valley, and he is both a poet and a painter. His poetry is definitely graphic. To read Mr. Hartley's poetry is to receive a series of pictures of Maine terrain and Maine characters. The landscape is large with trees and sea and sky." Christian Science Monitor

"Hartley is one of the most original of living American artists. He regularly has fresh visual experience to impart, and there is a peculiar elegance, an unusual quality of tastefulness and refinement to all his work. His relatively little-known prose and poetry possesses it to no less a degree than his more familiar painting." Paul Rosenfeld

+ Books p20 Ap 13 '41 480w

"It is impossible to read Mr. Hartley's poems without feeling you know Maine, and, if you already know it, it is pleasant to renew your acquaintance through the eyes of a unique observer. 'Poets,' Merrill Moore once wrote, 'look at things in a special way and make us see what they see.' Mr. Hartley does that, and his is a vigorous and refreshing view." J. R. + Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 18 '41 120w

Reviewed by Kathleen Campbell
Poetry 59:168 D '41 360w

HARTMAN, GERTRUDE. The making of a democracy. rev and enl ed 302p il $1.96 Day 973 U.S.—History. Democracy. U.S.—
Politics and government 41-51908

Enlarged edition of a text first published in 1940 (Book Review Digest, 1940). "In this edition a whole new section is added which discusses fully and in detail the rights guaranteed to every American citizen by the Bill of Rights and contrasts these rights with the lack of them in totalitarian nations." (Publisher's pref) Index.

Booklist 38:84 N 1 '41

School & Society 54:144 Ag 30 '41 60w

"Students will long remember the vivid narrative treatment of such significant episodes as the march of the peasants on London, the beginnings of representative government in England, the struggles between King and Parliament, Bacon's Rebellion, and the Boston Tea Party. Apt quotations from original sources make both the matter considered, and the people involved, alive and real." G. W. Moon

+ Social Educ 5:624 D '41 650w

Social Studies 32:379 D '41 20w

HARTMANN, GEORGE WILFRIED. Educational psychology. 552p $2.75 Am. bk.

370.15 Educational psychology 41-11290

"Those who have read Hartmann's Gestalt Psychology [Book Review Digest, 1935] will, of course, expect his Educational Psychology to be written from the Gestalt point of view and in the Gestalt style. . . The book has three parts. Part One is on the psychological approach to educational problems. . . It emphasizes the ideas that education should be the fulfillment of pupil needs and that the body has primary importance. . . Part Two is on the improvement of the organism and its functions. . . Part Three is on the adaptation of instruction to developmental levels. It contains 84 pages and has four chapters, one on each of the following planes of education: elementary, secondary, college and adult." (School & Society) Supplementary bibliography. Glossary. Index.

"Hartmann has written a good book. Even though it is not a textbook of educational psychology, he writes about the field in an easy and stimulating way. He has a likable flair for concrete instances of practice and method. The teacher who can read between the lines will find the book full of suggestions. If it is to be called a 'first' book, the word 'first' ought to mean that, after having read the book and secured broad frames of reference, the student would then be prepared to tackle the more detailed data of educational psychology without getting lost among them." C. R. Griffith

+ — El School J 42:308 D '41 1250w

"Scantiness of experimental data (except those from the author's own previously published investigations) is probably the chief fault of this book, but others are the wordiness of Part One and the brevity of Part Three. . . Among the merits of the book are the merits of that part of Gestalt theory relating to educational processes. The importance of insight, meaning, maturation, motivation and the total personality should always be stressed. Hartmann has done a good job in pointing out their value to the teacher, but he has overlooked most of the facts relating to practice, and consequently gives the reader a decidedly one-sided view of the learning process. . . As an instrument of instruction, the book appears best suited to college seniors or graduate students who have a good factual background in psychology and who are interested primarily in principles." H. B. Reed

+ — School & Society 54:620 D 27 '41 2000w

HARTSHORNE, CHARLES. Man's vision of God and the logic of theism. 360p $3 Willett
211 Theism. God 41-51847

"This is a closely-reasoned examination of theism, not easy reading for those unaccustomed to metaphysical thinking but highly rewarding to those prepared for intensive philosophical study... The author outlines a logically complete classification of all possible ideas about God and by a process of elimination arrives at what he calls a "new theism." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 37:539 J1 15 '41

"The development of the argument is necessarily technical and complex, but there is an originality here which is deserving of careful consideration." R. C. Miller

+ Churchman 155:18 J1 1 '41 160w

"Hartshorne has provided us with a powerful mental catalytic agent which may precipitate a really new situation in the theological and philosophical world." W. M. Horton

+ Crozer Q 18:342 O '41 700w

Reviewed by E. S. Brightman

J Religion 22:96 Ja '42 1800w

HARTWELL, HENRY; BLAIR, JAMES, and CHILTON, EDWARD. Present state [1697] of Virginia, and the college; ed. with an introd. by Hunter Dickinson Farish [pub. under the auspices of the Dept. of research and record of Colonial Williamsburg, incorporated]. (Williamsburg restoration hist. studies no 1) 105p pl $2.75 for sale by Princeston univ. press 975.5 Virginia—Politics and government.

William and Mary college, Williamsburg,
Virginia 40-11633

"This book is the first volume of the Williamsburg Restoration Historical Studies, published under the auspices of the Department of Research and Record of Colonial Williamsburg, Incorporated. The series is designed to cover the history of Williamsburg, Virginia, in the eighteenth century, and the origin, development, and expansion of the civilization of which this city was the center. For this reason... it has seemed appropriate that this history of Virginia, just at the period when Williamsburg superseded Jamestown as the social, political, and economic capital of the colony, should be reprinted to inaugurate the series." (Editor's pref) The original Account of the Present State and Government of Virginia was presented to the board of trade in 1697. It is now for the first time reprinted in its entirety. Introductory essays present pertinent historical, biographical, and bibliographical data. Index.

"In making this important document more readily accessible to students Dr. Farish and his colleagues have rendered a valuable service to all those whose interests include early America." W. F. Craven

+ Am Hist R 46:724 Ap '41 260w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 2 '40 300w

HASKELL, EDWARD F. Lance. 359p $2.50
Day 41-12247

A socio-political novel. The hero is Lancelot Tenorton, brought up in Germany but really the son of English parents. He has been influenced by other nationalities as well and is pictured as one of the multicultural men whose sympathies hold the potentiality of being world-wide. This novel deals chiefly with his adventures during the last months of the first World war when he is a prisoner in Bulgaria.

"This long and exciting adventure story, which is also a modern tract, must surely be one of the oddest novels to appear since M. P. Shiel published his last one. In fact in its peculiar mixture of sincerity and melodrama, its rather highfalutin' elements and its warm humanity, and its passionate address to the reader, Mr. Haskell's book much resembles the remarkable work of Shiel... Even apart from his capacity to tell a good story well, and his unusual breadth of interests and learning, Mr. Haskell is to be warmly congratulated on what appears to be his first novel. His book is all the better because he knows what he is writing about." Iris Barry

+ Books p3 J1 27 '41 800w

Reviewed by E. P. Potter

Library J 66:615 J1 '41 60w

"At a moment when the German juggernaut menaces the continuation of culture and civilization, no problem novel could be more engrossing than one which, like Mr. Haskell's, presents a social scientist's reflections and speculations on the theme of social conflict. Here, in fiction form, is an attempt to come to grips with the forces that rock our modern world, to show how and why the Germans are an aggressor people, and the Balkans are in almost continuous eruption. For America, on the verge of war, this book, written by the son of American missionaries and educators, whose childhood environment included several continental countries of diverse languages and cultural tradition, has a peculiar timeliness." Drake De Kay

+ N Y Times p7 J1 27 '41 1200w

"A weirdly inept and serious-minded tractarian novel... Now and then Mr. Haskell argues his points persuasively, but in general the theme is too obtrusive and his characters are preposterous."

+ New Yorker 17:58 Ag 9 '41 60w

"It is, of course, a precarious affair to write a novel just for its philosophical implications which, despite the author's practical studies, are still of a rather abstract nature. Often it turns out to be neither philosophy nor novel. Mr. Haskell, however, has succeeded to an almost satisfactory degree. He has presented his problem wrapped in the fitting dress of an exciting novel which anybody will read with profit, once he has overcome the horror of the book's jacket design." Klaus Lambrecht

+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 Ag 2 '41 550w

HATCH, ERIC. Unexpected uncle. 274p $2
Farrar 41-3331

Seton Mansley, wandering down a Palm Beach street, happened to see a beautiful girl in a shop weeping into a rack of expensive polo coats. Beauty in distress always appealed to Mansley, so shortly he found himself playing unexpected uncle to the beautiful Kathleen, and straightening out her romance with a wealthy playboy.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p23 Mr 2 '41 280w

"The whole mélange of amusing and frivolous romancing is thoroughly entertaining and inconsequential." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p21 F 23 '41 440w

HATCHER, WILLIAM BASS. Edward Livingston, Jeffersonian Republican and Jacksonian Democrat. (Southern biography ser) 518p il map $3.50 La. state univ. press

B or 92 Livingston, Edward 40-34088

"Member of Congress from New York, Mayor of New York City, exile in New Orleans; then Louisiana legislator, codifier of its laws, Louisiana Congressman and Senator; finally Secretary of State and Minister to France under Andrew Jackson—Edward Livingston is outstanding in versatility and lasting achievement among American statesmen of the second rank." (Nation) Essay on authorities. Index.

"The chief weakness of Mr. Hatcher's book lies in the failure to recognize fully the extent to which Livingston's public services contributed to the development of his character..."

HATCHER, W. B.—Continued

That is not to say that the author has not written a good book. One looks in vain, however, for that insight into public affairs which a biographer like the late Senator Beveridge bestowed upon his subjects. But there are few scholars in politics who are qualified to write political biographies. Such books are better written by scholars who are not politicians than by politicians who are not scholars. Mr. Hatcher has done a sound piece of scholarship, and his book is a credit to the series in which it appears." W. S. Carpenter

+ — Am Hist R 47:142 O '41 650w

"This volume is a carefully documented work based on an exhaustive exploration of available manuscript and printed sources. Particularly good use was made of public records... The author has contented himself with telling the story without any striving for literary effect. He has painstakingly organized all the material he could find on Livingston and presented it with clarity and dispassionate objectivity." S. I. Pomerantz

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:396 Ap '41 450w

"This scholarly, detailed biography, a valuable though slightly pedestrian contribution to American historical studies, places [Livingston] in true perspective as an important figure in two transitional periods."

+ Nation 153:289 S 27 '41 90w

HATHAWAY, CYNTHIA. Two Bridgets; il. by Pelagie Doane. [32p] $1 Doubleday

41-17580

The story of two Bridgets, one a modern little girl who did not like her plain, old-fashioned name, and the other her great-grandmother, a brave little pioneer. After hearing the story of the first Bridget, and reading some of her letters, the second Bridget was proud to bear her name.

"Without preaching, the little story gives a child something to think about." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 S 14 '41 200w

"Eight and nine-year-old girls will enjoy the quaintly flowered cover and colorful illustrations." Miriam Snow

+ Library J 66:908 O 15 '41 60w

"A friendly little story that successfully combines the life of a little girl of today with that of a little girl of long ago. Pelagie Doane has provided gay and attractive pictures in color." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 N 16 '41 200w

HAUSER, ERNEST OTTO. Honorable enemy. 268p $2.50 Duell

915.2 Japan—Civilization. National characteristics, Japanese 41-9237

An attempt to analyse the national characteristics of the Japanese people thru a survey of their historical background and observation of their ways and habits of thought and living. The common people of Japan and their psychology are typified in the figure of Mr Sato-san (Mr Smith) a bank clerk who becomes a soldier. Index.

"Mr. Hauser, who knows Japan both from study and from firsthand observation, contrives to convey a very considerable amount of information about Japanese tastes and habits in living, loving, eating, drinking, fighting, and all the other familiar activities of man. He possesses a knack for selecting the subjects best calculated to appeal to the American reader." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic JI '41 210w

Booklist 37:545 JI 15 '41

"This is not a mere travel book. It is a personal narrative, a political essay and a novel, all rolled into one, and the most effective portion is, without doubt, the story of Sato-San, the typical Japanese who goes to war in China. . . The larger part of the book is written in a breezy manner, too often at the cost of accuracy." Wilfrid Fleisher

Books p6 Je 8 '41 750w

"At a time when Japan is looming large on America's political horizon Mr. Hauser has performed a valuable service in conveying through this agreeable medium, a compendium of the information which could be found at greater length and in more detail in the more serious books which people usually do not read. . . The author is notably free from bias and no one will read his book without obtaining a clearer idea both of the Japanese as human beings and of Japan as a nation." W. H. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 14 '41 550w

"I was delighted with this pithy, informed and not unsympathetic study of Japan and her peoples. Mr. Hauser, who knows the Orient thoroughly and who has lived in Japan for long periods, makes one wonder whether Gilbert and Sullivan were satirists or complete literalists. The picture he draws of Japan, her traditions, taboos and curious thought patterns, her ambitions, struggles and reasoning, could only have been drawn by one who knew and felt for the enigmatic little men so long secluded on their little island and now reaching out for an empire in bewildered but remarkably efficient fashion." W. M. Callahan

+ Commonweal 34:379 Ag 8 '41 450w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:386 Ja '42 10w

"Of all recent books on Japan, Ernest Hauser's is probably the most satisfactory for the ordinary reader. It is a vividly written, yet thoughtful interpretation. It is enough of an exposé to satisfy the sensation seeker, yet it goes a long way toward explaining why the Japanese are what they are." M. S. Stewart

+ Nation 152:701 Je 14 '41 140w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

N Y Times p9 Je 15 '41 1400w

"Ingratiating and authoritative discussion of present-day Japan and the Japanese."

+ New Yorker 17:79 Je 7 '41 60w

"'Honorable Enemy,' written by a man with an eye as sharp and as fast as a 1.9 lens, gives us some idea of the people who are fighting so tenaciously in Asia. Some of the impressions he presents are unique, particularly the picture of the Emperor, descendant of the Sun Goddess, and that of Prince Konoye, the divine premier who rules but does not boss. Even a superficial knowledge of Japan would challenge some of the statements made by Mr. Hauser. Generalizations are made without any evidence and exaggerations are pressed one on top of the other." Malcolm Rosholt

+ Sat R of Lit 24:19 Je 7 '41 550w

"The chief value of the book is not even the service that it renders in shedding more light where light is needed, but in its extremely friendly readability. It is good fun from beginning to end and the information that it conveys will be absorbed by the reader with a maximum of pleasure and a minimum of effort." R. A. Smith

+ Survey G 30:533 O '41 300w

Time 37:102 My 26 '41 300w

HAUSER, ERNST ALFRED, and LYNN, JOHN EDWARD. Experiments in colloid chemistry. 178p il $2 McGraw

541.3452 Colloids

40-33767

Experiments in colloid chemistry, to the number of 214 with fourteen explanatory chapters. It is the contention of the authors that experiments in this branch of chemistry are not too complicated nor too expensive for the average educational institution. Indexes.

"These experiments are so interesting and many of them are so easy to perform that anyone with a spark of scientific curiosity will itch to try them. Moreover, the style is so simple and direct that the book makes interesting and entertaining reading even if one cannot undertake the experiments. It should enjoy a wide use both for systematic instruction in colloid chemistry and by the casual reader and experimenter." A. B. Lamb

+ Am Chem Soc J 63:317 Ja '41 100w

"Directions are clear and simple; most apparatus and materials will be available in the average college laboratory. Headings and sequence of the chapters conform with modern textbooks, in fact, the book could conceivably be used both in the classroom and the laboratory because all experiments are preceded with well-written material of a fundamental nature."

+ Chem & Met Eng 47:727 O '40 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:5 Ja '41

HAVIGHURST, WALTER. No homeward course. 295p $2 Doubleday

(W) 41-3905

The time is the immediate present; the scene a German sea raider. As prisoners on the Westphalia are the passengers and crews of the ships sunk by this successful raider. On the seventh ship sunk there is a case of cholera and that brings things to a climax.

Booklist 37:387 Ap 15 '41

"'No Homeward Course' is a grim and graphic account of the fate that overtook the swift raider, a story of desperate action not without its moments of chivalry and romance." George Conrad

+ Books p12 Mr 23 '41 360w

"The book has all the elements of a thriller. But it has something more, for Mr. Havighurst knows ships and the sea. No reader can fail to be impressed by his descriptions of them. . . The publishers announce the book as a story of 'three men and a woman cut off from the world by the fortunes of war.' In so doing they hit its weakest point, for the characterization of the woman is thoroughly amateurish. That of the men, at least in relation to her, is no more convincing. It might better have been publicized for its competent demonstration of Nazi ideology. Or better still, for its fine understanding of the sea." V. C. Perkins

+ — Boston Transcript p7 Ap 12 '41 160w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 J1 11 '41 350w

"Written with haste and little heed for accuracy, according to a formula the author has apparently forgotten."

— New Repub 104:610 Ap 28 '41 50w

"Mr. Havighurst has packed away a first rate story of today in his latest novel, a dramatic novel of individuals caught in a dramatic situation. . . It is a swiftly paced story, well plotted, of almost continuous action broken only by conversations in which the diverse temperaments and traditions of the people are revealed, if without any attempt at profundity, yet by a skillful hand." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 16 '41 500w

"A vigorously told, romantic sea story."

+ New Yorker 17:86 Mr 15 '41 30w

Sat R of Lit 24:16 J1 5 '41 230w

"The author is at his best when he sticks to ships and seamen. His American heiress, English diplomat, and the various other land creatures, are all too simplified and too large for us to believe in them, and the whole story is too over-loaded by horror being piled on horror." John Hampson

— + Spec 167:68 J1 18 '41 60w

"Some of the details of the raider's methods are ingeniously imagined. The rest is vapid and lush and hard to put up with. Mr. Havighurst has odd notions of the geography of this country and of London in particular."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p333 J1 12 '41 380w

HAVRON, LAURIE (MRS E. L. HARRISON). Hurricane hush. 312p $2.50 Greystone

41-19718

The turpentine woods of Florida form the background of the novel. Farrell Lull, granddaughter of "Boss" Lull, a descendant of an old Florida family, imagined herself in love with a handsome, cruel young turpentine chipper. All thru one long summer the affair flourished, until the night of the hurricane, when Farrell understood at last the force of her own feelings.

"Once in a while—a long while—one comes upon a first novel that seems to owe nothing to current models, but to be written out of an ardent mind and full heart, like a poem. Hurricane Hush is that sort of rare and lovable thing." R. M. Gay

+ Atlantic D '41 150w

"So cloudy are Miss Havron's characters that there is considerable doubt in the reader's mind as to just what goes on between them. . . It is a curious fact that the only characters in the book which come alive are the poor trash. . . The Lulls themselves are of no substance." Robert Wilder

Books p12 N 9 '41 600w

"Miss Havron writes with an ardent lyricism which occasionally runs to lushness. But however much she is concerned with the spiritual conflicts of her heroine, it is in her portrayal of the second woman, the slut and the trull, that Miss Havron is at her best. . . Miss Havron's description of this woman holds no reticences and there are places indeed, especially an incident concerned with Pearlie's candy-starved 12-year-old sister, which is completely revolting. One wonders to what extent Miss Havron has consciously been influenced by William Faulkner. . . The description of the hurricane itself is excellent, as indeed are the descriptions of other scenes in the book, and emphasizes the fact that Miss Havron's feeling for words is real." Rose Feld

+ — N Y Times p7 O 12 '41 600w

"'Hurricane Hush' is one of the too infrequent books whose characters are remembered long after reading. The girl Farrell and her kingbird seem indelible; may they be forerunners of other Havron characters to come."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 12 '41 240w

HAWGOOD, JOHN ARKAS. The tragedy of German-America. 334p $3 Putnam

325.243 Germans in the U.S. 40-35196

Study of "the Germans in the United States of America during the nineteenth century—and after." (Subtitle) Contents: The German as a settler in the United States; New Germanies on American soil; The significance of the hyphen in German-American history. Bibliographical notes. Index.

Reviewed by C. O. Cleveland

— Commonweal 33:332 Ja 17 '41 650w

"Professor Hawgood has put an enormous amount of research and labor into this book, and yet it is a disappointing one. In the first place, his study of the German immigrant in the United States is limited to the nineteenth century and after, and therefore a most important chapter is omitted. Again, he is particularly interested in the efforts to establish new Germanys on American soil and studies these experiments with considerable detail. . . Professor Hawgood has assembled many valuable facts about the development of the German immigration and the extent of its various tendencies, and has also portrayed well the reaction among German-Americans to the rise of the Bismarckian Germany. But one cannot see the whole forest because he focuses our attention upon so many trees." O. G. Villard

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:13 F 22 '41 750w

HAWKINS, DEAN. Skull mountain. 275p $2 Doubleday

41-13936

Detective story.

"There is plenty of mystery in this tale. To be sure, most of it is far-fetched, but not all readers are critical about such things." Isaac Anderson

HAWKINS, DEAN—Continued

N Y Times p14 Ag 17 '41 260w

"Once it gets under way, and matters start popping on mountain tops and deep under ground, yarn moves at thrilling pace. Grade B."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 Ag 23 '41 40w

HAWKINS, DESMOND. Lighter than day. 305p $2.50 Knopf [7s 6d Longmans]

41-2206

An English story concerned with the character development of two brothers, moved by restlessness that affects their generation, and their love for the same girl, a charming visitor to the village.

"Desmond Hawkins writes with the precision and subtlety of a poet, to whom the slightest gesture, the shortest phrase of conversation, have undertones worth paragraphs of explanation. And Mr. Hawkins gives the explanations, which are profound and exact, even though his characters must wait, like puppets dangling on a string, until he puts them back into action." Milton Lehman

+ Books p10 F 23 '41 400w

"'Lighter Than Day' is not a book that can be read casually in odd moments and forgotten. It will continue to haunt and entertain the mind. The reader who seeks substantial food for thought, lightened by graceful humor and heightened by flights of lyrical prose, cannot do much better than this novel by Desmond Hawkins." William Mitchell, Jr.

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 8 '41 320w

"Desmond Hawkins is a young English literary critic and, as might be expected, his style is very well worth studying, clear, and admirably written, but there is little or no plot and the analytical conversations are rather tiresome. American readers will find it slow reading except for the descriptions of the English countryside and garden, but for those few readers fond of psychological studies and character development, it will be an interesting study." I. M. Turner

Library J 66:139 F 1 '41 120w

"Mr. Hawkins's vivid and vivacious pen, with its certainty of touch, and his acutely analytical comprehension of the qualities of his personages are a constant delight." Wilfrid Gibson

+ Manchester Guardian p7 O 25 '40 80w

"Mr. Hawkins is a patient, scrupulous writer of notable seriousness: I have read nothing for some time in which the author has permitted himself fewer facile moments, irrelevancies, or frivolities. Yet there are times when I ask myself if this very concentration, this unwinking gravity does not bring its disadvantages. It is like a man looking constantly through a pair of binoculars; the field of view is magnified, but constrained." Brian Howard

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:472 N 9 '40 550w

"The thorough, carefully drawn character studies keep keen perception and a sure, relentless appraisal of the frailties 'just under the skin' that elude the careless psychologist. . . Mr. Hawkins's real achievement in 'Lighter Than Day' is the splendidly built up character of Uncle Willie, the slightly suspect proprietor of the Stannersgate Hotel, where many of the scenes are laid. The ageless, fulling old fellow with his 'pork-pie hat, invertebrate figure and herbaceous buttonhole' is an excellent piece of work." Frances McKee

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 9 '41 500w

"Mr. Hawkins's creatures are mouthpieces, not living individuals. Their talk is too literary, too analytical. Actions seldom speak louder than words, and nothing is simply motivated or simply treated except by the dull. . . If Mr. Hawkins ever has a story worth his style or characters as vitally presented as his own thoughts, we shall have an unbeatable book. Even this one ought not be overlooked by anyone who is interested in good prose and in shrewd comment on England." Bess Jones

+ Sat R of Lit 23:13 Mr 29 '41 700w

"Mr. Hawkins has a very personal talent of the kind that lands up very often in portentousness, in bogusness. But he has talent, and he is very painfully persuasive in certain of the later passages in this book. . . Mr. Hawkins does minor characters well, and thereby reveals a power of bitter naturalism which will serve him better in the long run, I believe, than will the preciosity with which he works on his central subject here." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 165:452 N 1 '40 100w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 4 '41 380w

"Mr. Hawkins is quick-witted, fair-minded and almost desperately in earnest, and can express himself with a finely laboured urgency. That everyone of the quartet speaks alike, not in character but in an unvaried idiom of lightly intellectualized egotism, is only to be expected in fiction of this self-conscious type; that all, in their respective ways, are apt to do a bit of callow preaching when they are baring not very profound souls is similarly characteristic of the type."

Times [London] Lit Sup p529 O 19 '40 800w

HAWKINS, EVERETT DAY. Dismissal compensation. 390p $4 Princeton univ. press

331.133 Wages—Dismissal wage. Labor laws and legislation 40-35893

"Voluntary and compulsory plans used in the United States and abroad." (Subtitle) "Part 1 is devoted to company plans in the United States. Over 500 American firms have paid dismissal compensation on their own initiative at some period prior to January 1, 1940. Details are given about the plans of 329 concerns, employing some two and a half million persons. Summary treatment is devoted to such topics as reasons for adoption, types of plans, amount of compensation, eligibility requirements, administrative problems, method of payment, and effects of the recent social security legislation. . . Part 2 treats largely of trade-union activity in the United States and in foreign countries to secure dismissal compensation for members through voluntary joint agreement. . . Part 3 is headed 'Compulsory plans.' Here may be found a summary of foreign legislation in the field of dismissal compensation. Such laws in numerous countries play the major part which in the United States is taken by voluntary plans. At least 40 countries have passed laws, mainly since World War I, providing notice or compensation for workers." (Am Econ R) Selected Bibliography. Index.

"The book possesses high merit as a careful research report analyzing an extensive body of basic original data." J. M. O'Leary

+ Am Econ R 31:172 Mr '41 350w

"Mr. Hawkins has been studying dismissal compensation schemes intensively for a number of years. This book, which is the result of his painstaking research and travels, is the most comprehensive publication so far issued on the subject. . . Of special interest, in view of the probable postwar depression, is the section in which Mr. Hawkins discusses the value of a dismissal compensation program when employment recedes from a wartime peak." F. B. Brower

+ Ann Am Acad 215:223 My '41 500w

HAWKINS, QUAIL, comp. Prayers and graces for little children; il. by Marguerite de Angeli. [32p] 50c Grosset

264.1 Children's prayers (W) 41-11077

"There are seventeen prayers, five graces and two brief devotional poems in [this book]; each can easily be committed to memory, which is the main thing. Most of these have been familiar to grown-ups and should be to their children." Books

Booklist 38:99 N 15 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p8 S 21 '41 40w

Wis Lib Bul 37:158 O '41

HAWTHORNE, HILDEGARDE (MRS J. M. OSKISON). Williamsburg, old and new; il. by E. H. Suydam. 284p $4 Appleton-Century 975.5425 Williamsburg, Virginia.

(W) 41-7290

Partly history, partly guidebook, this volume tells the story first of Jamestown, Williamsburg's predecessor, then proceeds to the account of colonial Williamsburg, to the days of its glory and the days of its decay, and finally comes to the story of its restoration in the twentieth century. Index.

Booklist 37:489 Je 15 '41

"Despite a certain awkwardness of style, 'Williamsburg Old and New' is a straightforward and entertaining account of the struggles and upheavals that brought to birth the colony at Virginia and the significance of Williamsburg to the American scene. Miss Hawthorne has spent enough time at the old Capital to absorb much of its atmosphere and spirit and her book is crowded with tales of high adventure, spiced here and there with pleasant humor and a dash of early scandal." R. Y. Williams

+ Books p9 Je 1 '41 480w

"Miss Hawthorne, granddaughter of Nathaniel Hawthorne, needs no introduction to her readers, either at home or abroad. She has written charmingly for both grown-ups and children, but never more delightfully, it is certain, than in this story of Old Williamsburg and the Williamsburg so faithfully restored. But the historical and descriptive text is glorified, as it were, by the pen pictures drawn by E. H. Suydam. It is the pictures that recall to one who has seen Williamsburg since the work of restoration has been completed the thrill of what, to every individual, is that of discovery." F. L. P.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 J1 5 '41 380w

"If there were no text in this book, but only the many exquisite drawings by the late distinguished artist, E. H. Suydam, it would deserve a place in every library, so perfectly has he caught the magic 'atmosphere' of Williamsburg through the difficult medium of the pencil. Yet Miss Hawthorne has presented a story which is both stirring and illuminating." J. V. Z.

+ Churchman 155:21 S 1 '41 170w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '41

"Miss Hawthorne likes restored Williamsburg—and the feeling it conveys of old Williamsburg. And she says so with enthusiasm—describes a deal that is in the guide books and gives freshness to the description. It must be added, however, that there are evidences of a task—even though it is a labor of love—done in some haste." H. I. Brock

+ N Y Times p5 Je 15 '41 500w

Pratt p13 D '41

"This book is an interesting account of early times in aristocratic America before there were Tories or Rebels, and it can serve as an admirable guide book."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:21 My 17 '41 140w

Wis Lib Bul 37:114 Je '41

HAWTHORNE, NATHANIEL. Hawthorne as editor; selections from his writings in the American magazine of useful and entertaining knowledge; comp. by Arlin Turner. 290p $2.75 La. state univ. press

814

41-52534

"For six months, in 1836, Nathaniel Hawthorne, then 32 years old, attempted to reconcile his literary tastes and the desires of his kinsmen that he do something useful by being editor of the American Magazine of Useful and Entertaining Knowledge. . . Among the chaff of filler, quotations, summaries of articles published elsewhere, and the descriptive matter that he was obliged to put together for the illustrations which the publishers considered the most important feature of the magazine, there was occasionally a bit of good wheat in the form of original essays or accounts of his own experiences. Selections from Hawthorne's work for the magazine during the six months of his editorship have been assembled by Arlin Turner. . . Only five of these have ever been reprinted before." Christian Science Monitor

Reviewed by H. S. Commager

Am Hist R 47:358 Ja '42 700w

"A few pieces can stand on their own merits. . . [Also] the selections throw some added light on what Hawthorne was reading, what kind of subjects interested him, and how thoroughly he was set, at 32, in the characteristics of thought that marked the years of his greater writing."

Christian Science Monitor p10 My 31 '41 480w

Reviewed by N. H. Pearson

Sat R of Lit 24:18 J1 26 '41 360w

HAY, THOMAS ROBSON, and WERNER, MORRIS ROBERT. The admirable trumpeter; a biography of General James Wilkinson. 383p map $3 Doubleday

B or 92 Wilkinson, James

41-7141

"General Wilkinson's active service as a soldier in the armies of the United States began in 1775 and ended forty years later with the close of the War of 1812. In this period there was an interval of about eight years following the close of the Revolutionary War, during which Wilkinson was a trader, land speculator and political leader in the pioneer communities of Kentucky. . . This book is an attempt to discover the truth about James Wilkinson by means of an unbiased examination of the facts of his career as well as of the partisan accusations against him and his own flamboyant attempts to justify himself. The narrative is based on contemporary documentary material, personal letters and newspapers. Thomas Robson Hay is responsible for the research and the points of view based on his many years of research devoted to the subject. . . M. R. Werner is responsible for the organization of the material and for its presentation." (Introd) Index.

"Mr. Hay and Mr. Werner have told this fantastic tale with skill and impartiality. They have presented the admirable trumpeter as he emerges from the historical record without attempting to explain or interpret. They have, however, added nothing to the presentation of Maj. Jacobs, while on the score of thoroughness, of style, and of documentation that earlier biography is the more valuable." H. S. Commager

+ Books p4 My 25 '41 650w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 28 '41 500w

"General James Wilkinson is one of the most fascinating characters in American history, though rather because of his faults than his virtues. No one with a drop of biographical blood in his veins could read of him without wanting to write of him. . . Two modern biographers, Royal O. Shreve in 1933, and Major James R. Jacobs, in 1938, have dealt with him in high disapproval. The present authors have endeavored, as they say, 'to base this account on the record, intruding personal opinion and speculation only in so far as they may help to give the narrative a balance and a perspective that will enable the reader to form his own conclusions.' The result is not all that could be hoped for." R. L. Duffus

N Y Times p14 My 25 '41 1050w

"Good reading and substantial Americana."

+ New Yorker 17:78 Je 7 '41 70w

Springf'd Republican p7e J1 13 '41 600w

HAYAKAWA, SAMUEL ICHIYE. Language in action. 345p il $2; school ed $1.25 Harcourt 422 English language—Semantics
(W) 41-8690

An introduction to semantics by an American-born Japanese, who is assistant professor of English at the Illinois Institute of Technology. Partial contents: The importance of language; Symbols; Words that don't inform; Directive language; How we know what we know; Classifications; The two-valued orientation; Affective communication; Intensional orientation; Extensional orientation; Readings; Acknowledgments and bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:192 F 1 '42

"The book is written with delightful simplicity and unobstructive humor. I note this 'general principle': 'the prevention of silence is itself an important function of speech': a remark so ingenious that it borders on the profound." Albert Guerard

+ Books p3 D 21 '41 1500w

"Language in Action is a masterpiece of exposition, so simply and incisively written as to be nothing less than brilliant, and it's more-over enlivened by a constantly flashing humor and pithy common sense. It could be taught even in the third and fourth years of high school—provided the book could first be got into the heads of the teachers as it ought to be in any case for their own sake as well as to improve our truly deplorable system of education." Alvin Adey

+ Current Hist 1:371 D '41 800w

J Philos 38:720 D 18 '41 480w

"This book . . . reads like a popularization of Stuart Chase's 'The Tyranny of Words.' Were it presented as a textbook in rhetoric on the high-school level, its naive and crude approach to the problems of language might be held excusable on pedagogical grounds. But it is offered to all and sundry as the wisdom of the twentieth century's newest science, semantics, as an indispensable safeguard against superstition, propaganda, and inaccurate thinking. And like everything else on the market today, stress is placed on its important but rather vague implications for democracy. There is reason to believe that the claims of the author and publisher will find wide acceptance among the fad-hungry reading public." Sidney Hook

Nation 154:16 Ja 3 '42 1100w

"S. I. Hayakawa's book is a primer on the subject, at times painfully so in the parts of those veteran actors, Mr. Jones and Mr. Smith. But he speaks with patience and a ready intelligence of the function of language, its use and misuse, the laws of double-intention and result by which it may be and should be analyzed. He invites us, as a sort of freshman class in the subject as such, to limber up our perceptions with the provided exercises and even 'readings.' Good enough. With as little recourse as possible to such necessary but essentially meaningless phrases as 'the multi-valued orientation,' he brings the obscure and ancient wisdom of this new field down to the level of the straight talk a lay intelligence can tolerate and possibly profit by." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub 105:741 D 1 '41 1400w

"It is precisely what a popularization should be. It is very smoothly and lucidly written; it is compact; it is lively; it is logical and informative, and it reveals unusual intellectual acuteness. It makes no claims to basic originality." Henry Hazlitt

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 18 '42 900w

"A beautifully simple and illuminating introduction to semantics."

+ New Yorker 17:111 N 22 '41 50w

Reviewed by F. C. Kelly

Sat R of Lit 24:11 N 22 '41 3150w

"A book that is attractive both in format and in style. Technical terms, though abundant, are carefully explained. Familiar instances—colloquial, homespun—clinch general ideas.

Throughout, the style is clear, witty, trenchant." M. H. Goldberg
+ Spring'd Republican p7e N 30 '41 800w

HAYCOX, ERNEST. Rim of the desert. 305p $2 Little 40-33713

Western story.

Booklist 37:271 F 15 '41

"Western fans mustn't miss this new story by one of the topnotchers in his field. It's a smooth, sensible and hearty tale of love and shooting out around Prairie City, Cloud Valley and Lost Man Ridge, a good cut above most cowboy yarns in all departments." Will Cuppy

+ Books p16 F 16 '41 80w

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 15 '41 60w

"A swift, rushing, rousing tale of the Old West, expertly written in Ernest Haycox's best style." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p23 Ag 24 '41 210w

"Mr. Ernest Haycox's tale gallops forward in true Western style, the characters alive, the action swift, and the background full of colour."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p217 My 3 '41 100w

HAYCOX, ERNEST. Trail town. 298p $2 Little 41-12690

Western story.

Booklist 38:36 O 1 '41

"It's a meaty and active yarn of 'a brave, just man caught in a crossfire of violence' by the increasingly popular author of 'The Border Trumpet,' 'Saddle and Ride' and 'Rim of the Desert.'" Will Cuppy

+ Books p18 S 14 '41 50w

"An excellent Western novel, perhaps the best Ernest Haycox has yet written." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p17 S 14 '41 210w

HAYCRAFT, HOWARD. Murder for pleasure; the life and times of the detective story. 409p $3 Appleton-Century

809.3 Fiction—History and criticism. Detective stories (books about) (W) 41-16907

"An account of the milestones in detective writing, from the invention of the form by Edgar Allan Poe to the present day. There are chapters on technique; the market for the detective story; an extensive bibliography; a selected list of the most significant authors and their works; a set of detective story quiz questions; and a Who's Who in Detection, a list of over one thousand fictional detectives." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 38:32 O 1 '41

"Here is a volume chock full of pleasure and profit for anybody whose orbit connects with Mr. Haycraft's subject in any way, shape, manner or form, from Mr. and Mrs. Fan to the toilers in archives who have to answer urgent inquiries from same, and on to those whose lifework it is to write about current mystery, whether they be regular, supercilious or pontifical. From these last Mr. Haycraft surely has nothing to fear. The pontifical fellows will be cowed by his obviously superior equipment, and the supercilious will be too busy learning new things about their business to behave in their characteristically fiendish way, even those whose eyebrows have acquired a chronic upswing from the really astonishing tosh with which they are called upon to cope from time to time. Fortunately for all concerned, Mr. Haycraft has more than achieved his aims in this volume." Will Cuppy

+ Books p10 S 14 '41 750w

"If you take pleasure in crime stories 'Murder for Pleasure' is the kind of book that sets you thinking much further back than a month. . . It also incites thought upon the flood of mystery books we get, and the reputations and successes that float on the surface of it." Mort. Post

+ New Repub 105:598 N 3 '41 170w

"I confess myself incompetent to review 'Murder for Pleasure.' I can only report that it is bold and entertaining, and appears to be authoritative. Mr. Haycraft writes as an amateur and a connoisseur, and also as a technician, celebrating the centenary of the detective story. . . But 'Murder for Pleasure' is assuredly a book which every erudite mystery fan will want to own, whether to praise or to denounce." Lewis Gannett

+ N Y Herald Tribune p25 S 10 '41 330w

"With chastened mien and respectful attention I have just been reading a scholarly volume called 'Murder for Pleasure.' . . [The] book is a solid and sympathetic piece of work, and doubtless exactly what hundreds of [devotees] have been waiting and looking for. . . Those who get pleasure from reading about murder will surely get pleasure from reading 'Murder for Pleasure.'" M. C. Otto

+ N Y Times p21 S 9 '41 500w

"'Murder for Pleasure' makes an encyclopedic appeal to real students of this genre; and that not merely in the comprehensiveness of its main historical text, but also in its bibliography and lists of authors and characters, in its detective story quiz, and in its chapters on the rules and the democratic alliances of detective fiction. But the general excellence of Howard Haycraft's work rests upon an even broader basis—he understands the detective story and presents it with fairness and balance, and his writing has the lively intellectual interest of a good detective story itself." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p4 S 14 '41 1300w

"If you feel as I do, that anything immaterial is welcome, you'll look forward to this intelligent work on cheerful murders. . . Mr. Haycraft has a patient, scholarly attitude toward his hobby, but he refuses to get heavy. . . The scope of this book is really remarkable." Harry Hansen

+ N Y World Telegram p19 S 19 '41 800w

"Mr. Haycraft treats his subject with the exactness and clarity of an old-fashioned literary historian. . . The detective story still awaits its classic critic, who will perform for it the same service that, let us say, George Meredith rendered to comedy. In the absence of such an Aristotle, 'Murder for Pleasure' will do quite nicely. It is diverting and patently authoritative, its only salient defect, to my mind, being a certain generosity of judgment. Mr. Haycraft cannot bring himself to the point of saying that any detective-story writer is really bad." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:73 S 6 '41 750w

Pratt p16 D '41

Reviewed by George Stevens

Sat R of Lit 24:6 O 18 '41 3000w

"To find a literary history of the detective story, exemplifying all the pains of the scholar, is a delightful surprise. . . We recommend this Life and Times of the art—for its history of the form, the rules of the game, even the chapter on why such stories flourish in the democracies; in them laws and the legal pursuit of the criminal prepare the reader to enlist with the CID. The Gestapo is something else. Best of all, the book lists tales and detectives that will tempt us to new adventures after refreshing thrills." Leon Whipple

+ Survey G 30:701 D '41 190w

Wis Lib Bul 37:175 N '41

HAYDON, ALBERT EUSTACE. Biography of the gods. 352p $2.50 Macmillan 290 Gods. Religions (W) 41-5391

"This book is a serious attempt to sketch the personal histories of the few, great, living gods, with a backward glance at some, once great, who were left behind in the march to the modern world." (Pref) Partial contents: Ahura Mazda; The gods of India;

Buddhas and Bodhisattvas; The gods of China; Amaterasu-Omikami; Yahweh; The Christian God; Allah. Index.

Reviewed by J. M. Mecklin

Am Soc R 6:909 D '41 260w

Reviewed by J. H. Holmes

Books p30 N 30 '41 800w

"Those of us who read scholarly books to enlarge our understanding of life know how deadening some scholarship can be. Often we want to cry out, Let me have words about me that are fat. These words we read have a lean and hungry look. They think too much. Such words are dangerous if one hopes to enter into the experience they pretend to portray. Dr. Haydon's words are properly nourished. He is proof that a scholar need not murder life. A clearer example of scholarship than his latest book would be hard to find." M. C. Otto

+ Christian Century 58:754 Je 4 '41 1500w

"It is a compelling, beautiful, and sad story, for the gods have, on the whole, failed in their efforts to bring about the realization of social values." R. C. Miller

+ Churchman 155:17 Ap 1 '41 90w

Reviewed by G. W. Davis

Crozer Q 18:260 Jl '41 900w

"This is an exceedingly important book on comparative theology (in the strict sense of that term). . . The emphasis upon objectivity (rather than subjectivity) makes this book rather strong reading." Vergilius Ferm

+ Ethics 51:496 Jl '41 280w

"This is a delightfully written popular account of the origin of human beliefs in gods and of the rise and decline of the more important deities in the historical religions. It reports the results of recent research and corrects some of the mistakes of earlier authorities. It is a valuable contribution." W. K. Wright

+ J Religion 21:315 Jl '41 650w

"A fascinating study which is, like the divine figures which are its subject, rooted in man's age-long aspirations and social needs. It is not a book for either pietistic or superficial reading, of course, but it will hold a compelling interest for the mind which, between those two extremes, cares to give a humanist's attention to the spiritual demands and developments of human history. For such readers, 'fascinating' is indeed the word to describe this story."

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 16 '41 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p320 Jl 5 '41 420w

HAYDON, FREDERICK STANSBURY. Aeronautics in the Union and Confederate armies; with a survey of military aeronautics prior to 1861. v.1 421p il $4 Johns Hopkins press

973.74 U.S.—History—Civil war—Aerial operations. Aeronautics, Military. Balloons (41-3724)

"[This volume] covers the first year of [the Civil] war and contains a very complete account of the attempts in the U.S.A. to use balloons for military purposes and of the personalities concerned. . . A full account of the balloons and their equipment is given with a number of photographs both of these and of the balloonists and the generals under whom they served." Times [London] Lit Sup

"Despite the author's care and attention to detail, some minor corrective suggestions are in order. To begin with, it is a slight exaggeration to say (p. xvi) that 'little or nothing appears to be known of the inception of American military aeronautics'. Although Haydon's is the first book upon the subject, it has been discussed in many monographs. . . There are misspellings in footnotes on pages 19 and 339. These, let it be repeated, are slight blemishes on the face of so excellent a work. Haydon has supplied an enormous amount of information, has clarified many an obscure point, and has presented the opening chapters of the story of American military aeronautics in a lucid and interesting fashion. He well deserves the award of the Mrs. Simon Baruch University Prize for 1940, offered by the United Daughters of the Confederacy. His forthcoming second volume will be awaited with anticipation." J. D. Squires

HAYDON, F. S.—Continued

+ Am Hist R 47:373 Ja '42 700w

"A definitive, scholarly volume in an unexploited field."

+ Social Studies 32:192 Ap '41 10w

Reviewed by J. D. Squires

Social Studies 32:282 O '41 600w

"Students of the Civil War of 1861-65, of aeronautics, and of the attitude of soldiers towards innovations will find this volume of interest."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p247 My 24 '41 440w

HAYES, CARLTON JOSEPH HUNTLEY. Generation of materialism, 1871-1900 [with 62 ill. drawn from unusual sources and specially chosen by the author]. (Rise of modern Europe) 390p maps $3.75 Harper

940.28 Europe—History. Europe—Politics (W) 41-22911

"The thirty years of European history which Professor Hayes treats, in this volume of the collaborative history of modern Europe edited by Professor W. L. Langer, are crowded and important years. . . Professor Hayes has rightly judged that the history of Europe is in some senses in this period a history of the world, and he has therefore made the necessary excursions into America, the Far East, Africa—wherever an expanding Europe touched. Political history alone would tax the historian's powers of synthesis; but in accordance with the aim of the series and with his own conception of history, Professor Hayes has neglected no important phase of men's activities, has written social, economic, intellectual, cultural history." (Sat R of Lit) Bibliographical essay. Index.

Booklist 38:156 Ja 1 '42

Reviewed by Albert Guerard

Books p3 Ja 18 '42 1100w

"Professor Carlton Hayes is the inspirer of a school of history at Columbia which has made a great name for itself in recent years through its contributions to the study of nationalism in our modern civilization. And he has here produced the most notable volume of a notable series." F. H. Underhill

+ Canadian Forum 21:314 Ja '42 750w

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley

Cath World 154:362 D '41 550w

"This is probably the most brilliant volume in Professor Langer's lively and instructive series, 'The Rise of Modern Europe.' . . A splendid bibliographic essay, maps, and many illustrations add to the usefulness of the volume. Highly recommended for public and college libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 66:902 O 15 '41 130w

Reviewed by John Chamberlain

N Y Times p3 Ja 18 '42 1150w

"The impartiality and fair-mindedness which the historian must set as his goal are severely tested in writing about a period so near to us as this. Professor Hayes passes the test admirably. He has, of course, feelings that are engaged, and these he very straightforwardly makes clear in his preface. . . Professor Hayes does not often let his feelings about the 'Generation of Materialism' lead to unfairness and over-simplification. And he has packed into a single volume an immense amount of information and good sense." Crane Brinton

+ Sat R of Lit 24:12 D 13 '41 700w

"A brilliant, illuminating account of an epoch which is considered as a climax of enlightenment and a source of disillusionment. A reappraisal that must be read."

+ Social Studies 33:48 Ja '42 30w

"The faults of this volume are perhaps inescapable in a synthesis of any period in which so much was happening in so many fields of endeavor. Like other works in the same series, it occupies a vague place midway between outright, unashamed scholarship and the popular presentation of historical facts. Readers with a serious interest in, and some understanding of, history will find the book a profitable if not final summary of the main events and issues of the years 1871-1900." Donald Derby

+ Springfld Republican p8 D 9 '41 650w

HAYES, DORSHA. The American primer. 133p $1.50 Alliance bk.

309.173 Democracy. U.S.—Civilization. U.S.—Social conditions (W) 41-51664

Tired of hearing about what is wrong with America, the author has written a short straightforward account of the other side of the picture. She takes up the question: What have we Americans got to be thankful for, and gives her answers.

Booklist 37:382 Ap 15 '41

Bookmark 2:4 My '41

"Dorsha Hayes asks her questions and gives her answers in language that a child can understand for simplicity and an adult respect for its rhythmic directness. Some of it scans the way Walt Whitman's poetry scans and carries the same message of democracy triumphant. . . She is no sentimentalist, she is no theoretical dreamer; she drives her facts home to the reader with a strong staccato beat that slowly builds up to a powerful emotion of personal responsibility and pride and love." Rose Feld

+ Books p10 Ap 20 '41 650w

"The author has been on relief and knows that all is not as it should be. She is not unrealistic. Indeed she is perhaps more realistic than those critics who cannot see the face of America for preoccupation with the wars. This is not a profound book. Its data are scrappy and its style is popular. But its heart is sound and its insights are clear. It is courageous and optimistic."

+ Christian Century 58:328 Mr 5 '41 40w

Reviewed by J. B. Parrish

Churchman 155:19 My 1 '41 100w

"Despite her erstwhile poverty, her actual knowledge of suffering, the psychological effects of being declassed, Miss Hayes retains an abiding belief in Americanism and the brotherhood of man. Any serious criticism of her book, then, is impertinent since this is an essay in faith." Francis Downing

Commonweal 33:603 Ap 4 '41 240w

"The world's prolonged period of crisis has already brought forth a good many books on America and Americanism, and will bring forth a good many more. Few can be more clear-eyed, forthright and useful than this unpretentious 'American Primer,' whose author has known the hardship as well as the prosperity of life in America, and who writes not boastfully but with vigorous hope and grave certitude. . . The importance of this little book is in its freshness and honesty, its brave balance of mind and forceful, ardent clarity of expression."

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 6 '41 500w

"Good as is much of the content of her book on the democratic system, I feel that Miss Hayes' style has got in her way to some extent. Even young people will dislike the breezy question and answer, the forced colloquialism, the general manner of writing which these same young people are apt to term smart-alecky. And the book is too long. Most high-school readers would bog down in it; a primer should be short."

+ New Yorker 17:86 My 24 '41 130w

School & Society 54:16 Jl 5 '41 20w

Reviewed by R. T. Solis-Cohen
Social Studies 32:237 My '41 130w
 Reviewed by N. H. Dearborn
Survey G 30:405 Jl '41 700w
Wis Lib Bul 37:112 Je '41

HAYES, MARJORIE. The young patriots; il.
 by Marie A. Lawson. 292p $2 Lippincott 41-8539

A twelve-year-old American girl on her way to England in 1774, is captured by pirates. During the night she and her little Negro servant escape and row to Block Island. There among the sturdy American patriots the girl grows up and takes her part in the Revolution. For ages ten to fourteen. Bibliography.

"This moves briskly; the background is well indicated. There is less attention to historic characters than to the everyday folks, the non-combatant sympathizers, of these stirring years." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Je 1 '41 290w

"The author has blended excellent historical background with all the necessary elements for a good story. The illustrations by Marie A. Lawson are most amusing." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 66:465 My 15 '41 140w

HAYWOOD, CAROLYN. Betsy and Billy; il. by [the author]. 156p $2 Harcourt
 (W) 41-51926

The little heroine of B is For Betsy (Book Review Digest, 1939), and her friend Billy are now in second grade. This chapter in their lives is full of school affairs, small tragedies like the loss of a pet, home life, and budding friendships. For second and third grades.

Booklist 38:83 N 1 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p7 O 26 '41 280w

"This easily read, simply told story mirrors the delights of second grade, pretty teachers, and school-day friendships." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 66:678 Ag '41 130w

"To write a story of a child's everyday life simple enough for beginners in reading, gay and spontaneous and dramatic on a little child's level, but never overdrawn nor overcolored, is a real achievement. 'Betsy and Billy' fills a need for boys and girls from 7 to 9." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p12 S 28 '41 200w

Spring'd Republican p7e O 5 '41 90w

HEADSTROM, BIRGER RICHARD. Adventures with a microscope. 232p il $2 Stokes 578 Microscope and microscopy
 (W) 41-16037

A series of projects prepared by a scientist for girls and boys just beginning to use the microscope. It starts with a brief history of the instrument, and then describes fifty-nine "adventures," showing how to prepare slides and suggesting suitable subjects for examination. The author is a member of the staff of the New England Museum of Natural history. No index.

Booklist 38:84 N 1 '41

"The plain directions will be valuable to young people, in spite of a style occasionally patronizing and conventional." A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 17:372 S '41 90w

"Richard Headstrom, now of the New England Museum of Natural History, is an experienced teacher who has written other books on natural science for young people. He has made this book clear enough for young students to use at school or at home." A. E. Brown

Library J 66:679 Ag '41 150w

"This is valuable to anyone starting out in the field of microscopic investigation and will serve as a guide to trips of expropration. Helpful suggestions are made on collecting and studying material. Illustrated with good line drawings." Jessie Stanton & E. W. Steele
 + New Repub 105:838 D 15 '41 30w

HEALY, WILLIAM, and ALPER, BENEDICT SOLOMON. Criminal youth and the Borstal system. 251p $1.50 Commonwealth fund
 364 Juvenile delinquency—U.S. Reformatories—Great Britain 41-7789

The first part of this study deals with the problems of the criminal adolescent and his treatment in the United States. Parts two and three describe and evaluate the Borstal system, the English method of dealing with youthful offenders. Selected bibliography. Index.

"The reader will find this an able and comprehensive study of the famous English system for dealing with youthful offenders." E. D. Monachesi

+ Am J Soc 47:515 N '41 160w

"This is a 'must' book for both students and administrators of correctional institutions. It makes it possible for Americans to profit from the challenging principles and practices developed in England during forty years of experience with Borstal Institutions." N. S. Hayner

+ Ann Am Acad 217:167 S '41 450w

Booklist 37:509 Jl 1 '41

Reviewed by W. B. Sanders
Social Forces 20:122 O '41 1050w

Reviewed by L. J. Carr
Survey 77:310 O '41 600w

HEARD, GERALD. The code of Christ. 168p
 $1.50 Harper

226.2 Beatitudes. Jesus Christ—Teaching.
 41-6078

Collection of addresses on the subject of the Beatitudes. "The purpose is to show the biological rightness of the teaching given in the Beatitudes and to show how accurately they express the deep insight Jesus had into human nature and its workings. It is a book to study if one has any question as to the practical value of the Master's teachings, and especially of these paradoxical sayings." (Churchman)

Reviewed by Graham Hunter
Christian Century 58:622 My 7 '41 950w

"This is a carefully and thoroughly thought through study. It is closely written and shows the author to be a man with a well stocked mind." H. J. S.

+ Churchman 155:34 Ap 15 '41 70w

Reviewed by Gordon Poteat
Crozer Q 18:350 O '41 300w

Reviewed by E. M. Poteat
J Religion 21:329 Jl '41 290w

HEARD, GERALD. A taste for honey. 234p
 $2 Vanguard

41-17250

Detective story.

"If you want a deftly written tale, hot too talky once it gets started, or if you wish to feel for a couple of hours as if you were crawling with insects, this is decidedly your book. Our only complaint is that Mr. Heard didn't tell it in the third person, thus holding out a hope that Sydney Silchester would get his." Will Cuppy

+ — Books p10 Ag 31 '41 280w

New Yorker 17:80 S 6 '41 50w

"Slow-moving, whimsical, somewhat weightily allusive, this tale is definitely caviar to the general; in a sense, it may be called a bookman's book. But although it is undoubtedly clever, it seems, even as a bookman's book, not quite to hit the bullseye. The surprise which so delights Christopher Morley seems to this reviewer to be obvious, and even laborious, although it is not without its piquant interest. The most effective feature of the story-telling is the sly disclosure of Mr. Silchester's own character type."

HEARD, GERALD—Continued

+ — N Y Times p20 S 14 '41 170w

"Highly satisfactory and original blood-chiller made even more delightful when a Great Light begins to Dawn on wondering reader. Ambrosial."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 S 20 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 7 '41 120w

HEARD, HENRY FITZGERALD. See Heard, G.

HEARNshaw, FOSSEY JOHN COBB. Germany the aggressor throughout the ages; with foreword by Thomas H. Holland. 288p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d Chambers]

943 Germany—History. Germany—History, Military. National characteristics, German.

[41-12307]

A short historical sketch of the Germanic peoples from before the Christian era to the invasion of Poland in 1939. The author's thesis is: "Hitlerism is merely the revised, enlarged, and more blatant version of the Imperialism of William II, the Nationalism of Bismarck, and the Banditry of Frederick the Great. It is, indeed, merely Prussianism in excelsis. And Prussianism—the supreme embodiment of the 'mark' mentality—is only the essence of that unscrupulous aggressiveness which has characterised the Teutonic denizens of Central Europe from time immemorial." Index.

Foreign Affairs 19:470 Ja '41 20w

"England's bitterness in this struggle for life and death—which it tried to avoid almost at the price of its honor—appears in this little book from the fact that its author, the venerable seventy-two-year-old Professor of History of the University of London and author of many authoritative books . . . was unable to suppress his emotion and indignation and repeatedly uses such expressions as 'dastardly,' 'bottomless fraud,' etc." S. N.

Living Age 360:598 Ag '41 250w

"Like the psychopathologist who knows the special logic of mental disease, its laws and hazards, the historian must be aware of the great diversity of problems inherent in the logic of history. Simplification is the death of truth, and the historian who succumbs to it in the interest of contemporary needs is no longer a historian but a pamphleteer. A classic instance of such misuse of the historical approach is 'Germany the Aggressor.' . . . The book is written with humor and intelligence, and some of its theses are quite defensible." Golo Mann

+ — Nation 153:314 O 4 '41 800w

Reviewed by R. H. S. Crossman

New Statesman & Nation 19:728 Je 8 '40 260w

"A fascinating study this, well worth reading." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p8 Ag 24 '41 550w

New Yorker 17:59 Ag 9 '41 30w

"Professor Hearnshaw's book could be so much better done. It is just a short textbook of German history on the foreign side, particularly of German expansion, in which dear old Baring-Gould is quoted as an authority! But though it is not well done, it is perhaps better than that it should not be done at all." A. L. Rowse

Spec 164:598 Ap 26 '40 70w

Times [London] Lit Sup p142 Mr 23 '40 550w

HEARTMAN, CHARLES FREDERICK, and CANNY, JAMES R., comps. A bibliography of first printings of the writings of Edgar Allan Poe. 264p $6.75 Book farm, Hattiesburg, Miss.

012 Poe, Edgar Allan—Bibliography 40-35560

"[This] bibliography is divided into entries of the separately printed first editions of the works of Poe followed by a section in which a large number of newspapers and periodicals are analyzed for Poe contributions. Following this section comes a list of annuals with poems or essays by Poe, and after that, by way of conclusion, a most valuable chapter on the spurious writings. A particularly helpful feature of the book is its locating of copies of the first printings in American libraries." Books

"Nothing can be more dangerous than for a layman undefended by the armor of special knowledge to stroll into the field of the Poe authorities. I have no intention, therefore, of risking annihilation by affirming that this is the definitive bibliography of Poe first editions. Perhaps I may go so far, however, as to say that if any important additions are ever made to the subject they will be made by Mr. Heartman himself in a future edition of the present work. It would not be a bad idea, indeed, if the scope of the work might be enlarged in that future edition." L. C. Wroth

+ Books p18 Ja 12 '41 500w

"On its impersonal side the book violates the two primary requisites of a bibliography—that it be accurate and usable. The faults are not so much the result of deficient observation as of rash conjecture or dogmatism. The arrangement is not intelligible and the failure to provide running-heads, or at least a table of contents, betrays ignorance or a disregard of the rules of the game. . . . Its redeeming virtues consist in the extent of its coverage and the historical background that has been worked into the sketches of the important editions." Philip Brooks

+ N Y Times p17 F 2 '41 1300w

"Clearly a great deal of labour has gone to the making of this bibliography, and the application of the bookseller mentality to estimates of rarity and value is an unusually useful feature of a valuable piece of work."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p268 My 31 '41 160w

HEATON, KENNETH LEWIS; CAMP, WILLIAM GORDON, and DIEDERICH, PAUL BERNARD. Professional education for experienced teachers; the program of the summer workshop. 142p il $1.25 Univ. of Chicago press [7s 6d Cambridge]

370.72 Summer schools. Teachers, Training of 41-3281

"The workshop is a new pattern come recently on the horizon of education. [This book] is a timely volume which does much to clarify the meaning of the term and which should give substantial aid to those persons honestly seeking new directions in teacher education. The workshops under discussion are those which have been developed over a period of five years by the Committee on Workshops of the Progressive Education Association. While a particular pattern is treated in the book, the writers disclaim any wish to set a style or to crystallize a pattern. They are concerned, on the contrary, with clarifying a point of view and with establishing a set of principles." El School J

"The book should reach many readers. It can serve administrator and supervisor in local school systems, as well as the program-builder in teacher-educating institutions. Classroom teachers will find in it much to challenge their thinking and to guide their practices in improving educational programs for children." E. M. Bader

+ El School J 41:552 Mr '41 750w

"This little volume tells the story of work-shops concisely and effectively. After reading it, nobody could doubt that here is a new and a going concern, important to all teachers. The book is very just in its presentation; it avoids great claims while presenting large ideas and concrete illustrations. It is also free from the expository pomposity which mars some educational literature." H. H. Giles
+ School R 49:309 Ap '41 700w

"All in all the book constitutes a useful handbook on a subject about which we may have many scattered articles but no comprehensive data. For the new staff member and the new participant in the summer work-shop, it will answer the obvious questions which arise." A. B. Peck
+ Social Educ 5:398 My '41 550w

HEBERDEN, MARY VIOLET. Aces, eights and murder. 277p $2 Doubleday 41-15442
Detective story.

"Don't be surprised if you see this story in the movies. There are some scenes in it that are spectacular enough to suit any hero of the silver screen. Better still, from the viewpoint of the cinema trade, is the maudlin sentiment that centers about the murderer in the closing moments." Kay Irvin
N Y Times p24 S 21 '41 130w

"Muddled affairs of particularly obnoxious set of drunken and amoral society folk get thorough and thrilling ventilation. Speedy."
Sat R of Lit 24:18 S 20 '41 40w

HEBERDEN, MARY VIOLET. The lobster pick murder. 273p $2 Doubleday 41-3120
Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p25 Mr 2 '41 120w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Mr 8 '41 20w

"'The Lobster Pick Murder' is a workmanlike story with some amusing—if not always exactly delicate—quips of character and conversation, and real originality in the range of its plot." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p24 Mr 23 '41 190w

"Cunning cryptogram conceals records of plastic surgeon's work. Solving that Shannon has relatively easy job. Breezy and outspoken opus. Average."
Sat R of Lit 23:18 Mr 8 '41 40w

HECHT, BEN. 1001 afternoons in New York; with il. by George Grosz. 370p $3 Viking 818 41-21739

Collection of articles, mainly about New York, its inhabitants of high and low degree, and their peculiarities. Reminiscent of the author's 1001 Afternoons in Chicago (Book Review Digest, 1922).

Booklist 38:175 Ja 15 '42

"There are a lot of mighty pretty words here. Ben Hecht, as usual, is the master of the iridescent phrase, the startling image, the grotesque turn of thought. He is, without doubt, one of our most facile word painters, but the trouble here is that he really has very little to say. . . There is some straight reporting here of a sound order, but not much of it. Mr. Hecht, whose legs are probably not what they once were, is said to have had an aversion to tramping around the streets of New York, a job which he very sensibly delegated to a leg man. This method saves wear and tear on the feet, and it keeps an author from meeting a great many bores, but the trouble is that it often results in a slightly unreal or second-hand product." Stanley Walker

+ Books p6 O 26 '41 700w

"This is a collection of pieces from PM, and in his work for that paper Ben Hecht establishes himself as the union man's O. O. McIntyre. He has a handy way with morgue assistants and desk sergeants, and he still has the reporter's brass and legs to run down a story. He has indignation and compassion for the underdog (sometimes they seem to be freely on tap); he has a veteran's knowledge of why a story will be old stuff and how to kid it as he writes it; and he writes with color and a fine range of allusion, quite often with a bang. . . No man who has to whip up stuff for a daily should be judged by the standards of the leisurely book-writing man; but perhaps he shouldn't have tried covers on it in the first place. Ben Hecht's reporting is more roving and fanciful and literary than standard newspaper stuff." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub 105:626 N 10 '41 360w

Reviewed by Robert Van Gelder
N Y Times p6 D 14 '41 440w

"As discourses reflecting the varying moods of a talented writer in a great city, they deserve the permanence of book-binding. While the rest of us merely push into print the short-lived anecdotes and news-events of each day, Ben Hecht stamps his output with timelessness and with that strange rhythm of words which he alone beats out. We write for the day. He writes for the years. But as a portrait of New York, there is one—perhaps quibbling, perhaps minor—omission. In his inaugural PM column, Hecht declared that he would not include the night clubs in his coverage of New York. . . I register Exception. For no zealous historian can afford to turn his eyes from so rich a source of exploration." Leonard Lyons

+ Sat R of Lit 24:8 N 22 '41 750w

Springf'd Republican p14 D 12 '41 390w

HEDRICK, MRS HELEN. The blood remembers. 288p $2.50 Knopf 41-24627

A story of the last American frontier, of the men and women, white, Indian, and half-breeds, who live in a small settlement on the Klamath river on the California-Oregon border.

"The story holds one's interest. There is a kind of fascination for most of us in learning more about our background. No lack of action, plenty of atmosphere, an authentic treatment of folklore and pioneer history and we have good ingredients for a tale." E. L. Walton
+ Books p12 N 16 '41 480w

New Repub 106:30 Ja 5 '42 40w

"I suppose that the aim of good story-telling, as of all art, is to strike that profound note critics call universality. This I do not think Mrs. Hedrick has achieved. But her book is an intelligent and highly literate thriller." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p22 D 7 '41 800w

"An unusual first novel. . . It is a story of violence, passion, tragedy, tenseness, told with a sure touch. Miss Hedrick's sympathy with the Indians in their way of life, and her sorrow over the injustice done to them by the whites, are strong and sincere; but she does not make propaganda of it. She herself has lived long in this country, made friends with the Indians, and has gathered authentic material from them about their legends and ceremonies." M. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 9 '41 550w

HEIDE, DIRK VAN DER, pseud. My sister and I; the diary of a Dutch boy refugee; tr. by Mrs Antoon Deventer. 95p $1 Harcourt 940.5481492 World war, 1939—Personal narratives. Children as authors

(W) 41-51553

Diary of a twelve-year-old Dutch boy from the suburbs of Rotterdam, who lived thru the five-day blitzkrieg in Holland, escaped with his sister to England and came with other refugee children to America. The diary runs from May 7th to September 28, 1940.

"Whether you take it with or without salt, the horror in this must be true." Edward Weeks
Atlantic Mr '41 70w

Booklist 37:267 F 15 '41

Bookmark 2:8 Mr '41

"He has given us one of the most balanced, sensible and enlightening reports to come out of chaos. His name is changed, marks of identification have been removed, but an honest child speaks." M. L. Becker

+ Books p4 Ja 26 '41 440w

"This small diary will take you about an hour to read, and about a lifetime to forget. . . It is the most moving document that has yet come out of the war." Olga Owens

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ja 25 '41 400w

"An authentic document which brings the experience of European refugee children vividly before the mind of the American reader. Dirk's . . . narrative is all the more moving because its pathos is repressed. He tells a straight story in a boyish and manly way."

+ Christian Century 58:154 Ja 29 '41 50w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '41

"This boy of 12 tells only what he saw and what he heard but it makes an unforgettable picture and a powerful anti-war document."

+ Commonweal 33:405 F 7 '41 80w

"The English captain on the boat which brought Dirk to America could read Dutch and persuaded the boy to expand his jottings into a little book. The result, because of its innocence and freedom from self-consciousness, is one of the most powerful indictments of the Nazis yet to come out of this shocking total war." Eleanor Van Alen

+ Current Hist & Forum 52:64 Mr '41 480w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:196 O '41 10w

"The book is not merely touching. It is important for bringing home to our young people significant facts about the fruits of the two conflicting ideas dominant in the world today." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:105 Mr '41 170w

Manchester Guardian p3 J1 8 '41 180w

"A document you will never forget. It lays directly before the reader the simple details of tragedy and endurance as they were burned into an intelligent child's memory. The basic facts of the experiences recorded here have been known before, but they have never been presented with such lack of self-consciousness, directness, and simplicity. It is a book of both human and historical significance."

+ Nation 152:136 F 1 '41 80w

New Repub 104:125 Ja 27 '41 40w

"There are flashes of sweet unconscious humor here and there in the little boy's story, as there is constant gallantry throughout this remarkable book."

+ N Y Times p8 Ja 26 '41 700w

"Simple and deeply affecting."

+ New Yorker 16:71 Ja 25 '41 50w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

Sat R of Lit 23:7 Ja 25 '41 490w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 2 '41 850w

"It is a slight but interesting document, an unconscious statement of modern warfare as seen through the eyes of a child."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p315 Je 28 '41 170w

Wis Lib Bul 37:34 F '41

HEINDEL, RICHARD HEATHCOTE. The American impact on Great Britain, 1898-1914; a study of the United States in world history. 439p $4 Univ. of Pa. press [18s Oxford]

327.73 U.S.—Relations (general) with Great Britain. Great Britain—Relations (general) with the U.S. U.S.—Civilization. Great Britain—Civilization 40-31371

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"Dr. Heindel has produced a remarkable book, 'one of the first efforts on a broad scale to see how one nation gets its ideas about another, and what use one nation makes of another's experience'. He recognizes fully the fact of parallelism—that correspondence may 'be due to the same causes acting in both countries rather than to any direct influence'—a recognition that increases the value of his work as an objective study in what is very largely a new field of research." G. T. Hankin

+ Am Hist R 47:165 O '41 650w

"As a source of information the book is very valuable, but it is doubtful whether it will do much to help Americans to understand British reactions to American phenomena or the British to understand these phenomena. . . At times Professor Heindel seems unwilling to distinguish the tone in which remarks are made. . . There are wise and thoughtful paragraphs in the book. . . Undoubtedly no other people has affected, affects, or will affect the British as deeply as has the American, and it is important that we should understand the process without indulging in hypersensitivity, on the one hand, or sneers, on the other." H. F. Angus

+ — Am J Soc 47:214 S '41 550w

"The book is not an easy one to digest, because of the very wealth of information it contains, but no one can read it without being certain that we affect other peoples as powerfully, and as variously, as they influence us. It is offered as a pioneer study in international history, in the hope that there will later be 'similar works covering almost countless relationships.'" D. F. Fleming

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:392 Ap '41 210w

"Not the least valuable part of the volume is the information collected in the copious notes at the end of each chapter. They are a revelation of the range over which Mr. Heindel's reading has spread and of the range of reading which must be covered by any historian who wishes to deal adequately with the relations of two communities that touch one another at so many points as do Great Britain and the United States. Mr. Heindel's study serves to remind us once more of how narrowly political most of our research in Canadian history has been, and of how badly we need studies of this kind on the relations of Canada and Great Britain." F. H. Underhill

+ Canadian Hist R 22:77 Mr '41 850w

"The presentation is well-balanced and fair. The volume fills a gap which has existed in Anglo-American studies and suggests that the method of presenting America's portrait through a British lens—the seeing-us-as-others-see-us—could be applied to other sectors of America's international relations. The author's pleasant sense of humor makes the book not only instructive but also entertaining reading."

Eleanor Van Alen

+ Current Hist & Forum 52:63 My '41 150w

Reviewed by J. T. Adams

N Y Times p4 J1 20 '41 1300w

"At first the reader of this volume, attracted by its title may have a feeling of disappointment, for if he asks himself just what the impact was he may not be able to formulate a very clear statement of it. But to magnify this disappointment into a serious criticism would be unfair, for Dr. Heindel clearly shows that impact was not a series of sharply defined episodes or events which can be described in a few glib phrases. He has attempted with success to comprehend the impact as a whole and not to prove a thesis. . . It is a work that is almost encyclopedic in character. Some of our journalists would have written a whole series of books and articles on the substance of such information, and would have launched upon a nation-wide lecture tour." R. J. Bartlett

+ Social Studies 32:233 My '41 550w
Spring'd Republican p8 Mr 25 '41 250w

HEINMOT HIIHHI (NEZ PERCE INDIAN).

Yellow Wolf: his own story, by Lucullus Virgil McWhorter; ill. with original photographs. 324p map $3.50 Caxton printers

970.3 Nez Percés Indians—Wars, 1877
41-3261

The story of the Nez Percé war of 1877 told in the words of one of Chief Joseph's warriors. Bibliography. Glossary. Index.

"The old warrior died on the Colville Indian Reservation, Aug. 21, 1935, aged about eighty but with a memory very keen where it touched his earlier and impressionable years. Mr. McWhorter, deeply interested in Indian lore, played the part of a Boswell, and played it well, listening, noting, recording, questioning, never intruding himself, supplementing and verifying by government records. He gives us ample appendices. He went through acres of printed pages published and in manuscript. He corresponded with authorities, and he interviewed wisely; and, for good measure, added a valuable glossary of Indian terms and then made the job complete with a careful index." C. J. Finger

+ Books p10 Ja 19 '41 360w

"The story bears the stamp not only of authenticity but of truth. The compiler has edited it with obvious thoroughness and has kept himself in the background to a degree altogether remarkable." R. E. K. Pemberton

+ Canadian Forum 20:390 Mr '41 330w

"Yellow Wolf, who fought through the entire campaign, narrates his story to Mr. McWhorter with passion, honesty and skill. His description of the 'civilized' soldiers fighting the 'savage' Indians by massacring their noncombatant women and children cannot easily be forgotten, even in this day of mass slaughter." S. E. Hyman

+ New Repub 104:540 Ap 21 '41 600w

"A new and striking story of the Nez Percé war from the Indians' point of view, told for the most part in quaint and eager personal speech, and both impressive and moving."

+ N Y Times p15 F 2 '41 500w

HEISER, VICTOR GEORGE. Toughen up, America! (Whittlesey house publication) 228p $2 McGraw

613 Hygiene (W) 41-7120

As a part of American defense preparedness the author suggests that Americans need to get "tough" physically—to improve their eating, sleeping and exercising habits. Partial contents: Facts about foods; Outwitting the years; Our own worst enemy; Harden up and toughen up; Our daily upkeep; Habits: assets and liabilities; A world to free. Index.

Booklist 37:459 Je 1 '41

Bookmark 2:8 N '41

"Victor Heiser is a wise counselor. Though a doctor of medicine—he is much more. He has spent his life traveling up and down the world, studying and preventing disease. To do this he has had to have a body that would go where he sent it and take orders. He is no armchair thinker." Hugh Cabot, M.D.

+ Books p10 My 4 '41 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '41

J Home Econ 33:486 S '41 40w

Reviewed by R. T. Manlove

Library J 66:263 Mr 15 '41 140w

Living Age 360:397 Je '41 360w

New Repub 105:30 Jl 7 '41 90w

"That such a book as this is useful goes without saying. Readers of Dr. Heiser's earlier volumes need not be told that it is also interesting. His advice is pointed up by comment and reminiscence, and even in its concrete details it keeps close to its patriotic and democratic theme."

+ N Y Times p12 Je 29 '41 480w

Pratt p17 D '41

"A book that is informative and useful."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:21 My 17 '41 80w

Reviewed by Haven Emerson, M.D.

Survey G 30:485 S '41 300w

Wis Lib Bul 37:112 Je '41

HELLMAN, LILLIAN. Watch on the Rhine; a play in three acts. 170p il $2 Random house
812 (W) 41-51806

This play, by the author of The Little Foxes, is about a family living near Washington, and the refugees they harbored. First there is a Rumanian count and his American wife; next comes the daughter of the house, with her German husband, and their three children. The German is involved in an anti-Nazi organization, and the Count realizes this and attempts blackmail. The German takes the only way out which occurs to him.

Booklist 37:488 Je 15 '41

"It is an ancient formula in a new dress. The dress is so well cut from contemporary patterns and the formula so beautifully handled to carry suspense and rouse emotion, that it all seems mint new. Certainly it is effective." W. P. Eaton

+ — Books p28 O 5 '41 180w

"I found it a poorly constructed play, with much of the dialogue strained and unreal. Moreover many of the characters seemed equally unreal, and the author's knowledge of how American people of tradition act and speak seemed, to say the least, peculiar. . . My objection to the play is not one of message; it is simply that aside from the refugees themselves it is unreal in characterization, that the first two acts are a bore and that the true ending of the play occurs immediately after the murder, while the interminable farewell of Kurt Mueller which follows is theatrical and tiresome. In short, 'Watch on the Rhine' is a sad come-down after 'The Little Foxes.'" Grenville Vernon

— Commonweal 34:15 Ap 25 '41 750w
(Dramatic criticism)

"Highly readable, and the characters are readily understandable. After a humorous, if inconsequential, first act the play settles down to a serious consideration of an immediate problem for all of us. Recommended for general purchase in generous quantities." George Freedley

+ Library J 66:462 My 15 '41 130w

Pratt p16 D '41

"The play is more faulty in structure than such previous tightly knit dramas of Miss Hellman's as The Children's Hour and The Little Foxes. In Watch on the Rhine her exposition is slow, her sub-plot cumbersome. She does not come to grips with her subject till well on in the second act and she permits herself a number of lapses from the probable. It is surprising to find Miss Hellman, whose hallmark has been an almost brutal cynicism, who has excelled in delineating mean, ruthless and predatory types, indulging in a tenderness, an emotionalism that borders on the sentimental." Rosamond Gilder

+ Theatre Arts 25:409 Je '41 700w
(Dramatic criticism)

HELM, MACKINLEY. Modern Mexican painters. 205p il $5 Harper

759.972 Painting—Mexico. Painters, Mexican (W) 41-6671

This study of modern Mexican art is based to a large extent on acquaintance with the artists themselves gained during two years residence in Mexico. The author is an art connoisseur and a trustee of the Boston Institute of modern art. The book is illustrated with 80 full-page reproductions of the paintings in black and white, 10 line drawings of the artists, and two full-page reproductions in color. Index of names.

"MacKinley Helm adds one more to the rapidly growing shelf of works dealing with this stirring movement. In a field where there has been much interesting and some distinguished writing, it is a pleasure to be able to report that the shelf gets a more than worthy addition." B. D. Wolfe

+ Books p6 Jl 6 '41 700w

"[Mr Helm's] book is vivid, amusing, and admirably illustrated, but not penetrating." J. W. Lane

+ Cath World 154:115 O '41 450w

"Mr. Helm's enthusiasm for the artist as a human being is something most refreshing to encounter in a critic. But one might wish that he had organized his text, so rich in anecdotal material, in a more logical pattern, so as not to confuse the reader unfamiliar with the subject. The book itself is beautifully produced and contains excellent reproductions." Charmion von Wiegand

+ Living Age 360:395 Je '41 500w

New Yorker 17:88 Ap 26 '41 20w
Pratt p20 autumn '41

Reviewed by Oliver Larkin

Sat R of Lit 24:18 Je 21 '41 500w

HENDERSON, LE GRAND (LE GRAND, pseud). Augustus and the mountains. 136p il $1.75 Bobbs

(W) 41-17949

Augustus, who has figured in two other books by this author, and his happy-go-lucky family swop the family houseboat for a battered car and go to visit Ma's family in the Kentucky mountains. Augustus gets mixed up with some Indians from a near-by reservation, with good results all around.

Booklist 38:116 D 1 '41

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:377 D '41 140w

"Breezy and not impossible. Readers will delight in Augustus' part in proving the Indians innocent and discovering the real culprit. Same type of humorous illustrations as in the other 'Augustus' books, perfectly fitted to the text. Recommended." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 66:951 N 1 '41 60w

Reviewed by Jessie Stanton & E. W. Steele
New Repub 105:837 D 15 '41 30w

"It is just such an adventure as any small boy who ever heard of Indians dreams of for himself. Le Grand, who apparently knows boys as well as he knows the South, has told it with a humorous pithy style in prose and pictures which should find for these books a place on the shelf next to Phil Stong's stories of American boyhood." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p12 O 5 '41 260w

"There may be some purists who feel that Augustus and his family are a bit careless in their use of the king's English. But doubtless their speech does no real harm. Certainly their character could be copied by a good many masters of diction. Augustus is a grand lad. You'll like him."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 23 '41 240w

HENDERSON, LE GRAND (LE GRAND, pseud). Saturday for Samuel [written and il] by Le Grand. [44p] $1.25 Greystone

41-19420

Picture-story book describing the adventures of a family of Georgia Negroes on a Saturday in town. When Paw and the children spent all the grocery money for pink lemonade and other town food, Samuel earned more by dancing to the phonograph records in the ten-cent store.

"This happy-go-lucky colored family provide fun and amusement of the Epaminondas variety. While it is not an important picture book, some libraries will find it useful to meet the demand for stories of colored children. Pictures by the author reflect the humor of the story." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 66:951 N 1 '41 60w

"A breezy tale of a family of Georgia Negroes and their Saturday in town, so pleasantly full of irresponsible spending and eating."

+ New Yorker 17:140 D 6 '41 30w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 19 '41 130w

HENDRICKS, GEORGE DAVID. The bad man of the West; drawings by Frank Anthony Stanush. 310p $3.50 Naylor

978 Frontier and pioneer life—West. Crime and criminals—West. Outlaws 41-13021

"Mr. Hendricks, a Texas teacher, has taken 250 bad men, most of them well known, who had their brief glory back in the last half of the nineteenth century, and has attempted to show what they were like and how they got that way. All the famous hell-roarers are here—John Wesley Hardin, Henry Plummer, Jesse and Frank James, Billy the Kid, Clay Allison, Bill Longley, Ben Thompson and the rest." Books

"Here is a fascinating volume, a museum piece, which should not be ignored by fans, amateur and otherwise, of the old Western villains."

+ Books p12 S 7 '41 120w

School & Society 54:80 Ag 2 '41 20w

HENDRYX, JAMES BEARDSLEY. Gambler's chance. 269p $2 Random house

41-25426

A Corporal Downey tale of the far North, of the fur trade and the search for gold, of a missing fur trader and the search for the truth by a woman who believed in him.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p31 N 23 '41 40w

"How the lovers were reunited in the frozen North and how the villain met his just retribution do not make a particularly novel plot, but the deftness of its handling and the felicity of its writing do make it just about the finest novel Mr. Hendryx has yet published." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p40 D 7 '41 290w

HENIUS, FRANK. Latin American trade; how to get and hold it. 143p $2 Harper

382 U.S.—Commerce—Latin America. Latin America—Commerce—U.S. (W) 41-5601

"This book is designed to foster favorable action among North American producers and distributors in relation to Latin American trade but it would be no act of kindness to the businessmen of the United States either to oversimplify this problem or to minimize the genuine difficulties which have to be faced. The book naturally divides into two parts—a consideration of the general economic problems faced in effecting a two-way exchange within the hemisphere, and the presentation of a new plan of fostering imports from Latin America in sufficient volume to supply a basis for payment for North American exports." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 37:458 Je 1 '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:207 O '41 20w
N Y Times p11 S 28 '41 550w

HENKLE, HENRIETTA (MRS. P. J. STEPHENS) (HENRIETTA BUCKMASTER, pseud). Let my people go. 398p il map $3.50 Harper

326 Slavery in the U.S. Underground railroad 41-51598

"Social history of the struggle for Negro freedom in the United States, from Colonial times to the reconstruction period, written mainly around two dramatic themes: the Underground Railroad and the abolition movement." (New Yorker) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:322 Mr 15 '41

"I find 'Let My People Go' an exciting and illuminating book which everyone, American or not, who wishes to understand what this nation is and why it is what it is, should read. It is a rich book, full of vitality as well as scholarly research. I do not know whether Miss Buckmaster has written any other book but she organizes her material and writes like a veteran. It is a sound and comprehensive book with none of the stuffiness which frequently afflicts books which are sound and comprehensive." Louis Bromfield

+ Books p2 Mr 2 '41 950w

"Miss Buckmaster's book is always readable and sometimes exciting, and she has an obvious zest for her material. But 'Let My People Go' is by no means the last word on the abolition movement, and Miss Buckmaster's intense sympathy with the cause does not make up for her book's weaknesses as social history." George Smart

+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 8 '41 360w

"Miss Buckmaster deserves all gratitude for reviving so unforgettably a curiously unexplored and neglected period with its mine of adventure plots and rich traditions. We admire sincerely her fluent narrative, but we wonder if she has not reversed her own meaning in her use of the term 'slavocracy' to designate the Southern planters, as 'slavocracy' should surely mean the rule of the slaves instead of their masters? We strongly recommend this prose epic of a great movement." E. V. W.

+ Cath World 153:371 Je '41 750w

"'Let My People Go' endeavors to be a sympathetic treatment of the Negro problem, but it offers no constructive solution. It is merely a record, distorted in spots, but nevertheless gripping." M. W. B.

+ Christian Science Monitor p22 Mr 19 '41 550w

"Well worth reading."

+ Commonweal 33:628 Ap 11 '41 110w

"The story of the Underground Railroad is in itself a thrilling one. These terrible but inspiring chapters of American history are retold in this book with a clear starkness of style which is eloquent because of its very simplicity. The moral indignation of the writer shows itself only in the vivid prose, and the deeply etched details of the narrative." Ernestine Rose

+ Library J 66:138 F 1 '41 210w

Nation 153:20 J1 5 '41 120w

"Implicitly redolent of almost forgotten humanistic, truly Christian basic assumptions regarding human nature, 'Let My People Go' braces the reader with the tonic katharsis of true tragedy: it purges and purifies the emotions of pity and fear." E. A. Lanier

+ New Eng Q 14:588 S '41 650w

"Miss Buckmaster has accomplished a tremendous task successfully, supplementing in a large measure the work of such historians as Siebert. She has organized dramatic details into a sweeping picture of an unhappy period in our history. Her story is crowded with romantic episodes as well as with bloody incidents. . . . However, she yields to the temptation to bolster her arguments by overdocumentation of incidents, so that at times the reader gets lost in details only important to historians. She is not always as successful in interpreting events as she is in narrating them." Roi Ottley

+ N Y Times p9 Mr 16 '41 2500w

"A remarkable book, well documented, fervent, and vivid."

+ New Yorker 17:84 F 22 '41 40w

Wis Lib Bul 37:70 Ap '41

HENNEY, KEITH, ed. The radio engineering handbook; prepared by a staff of twenty-three specialists. 3d ed 945p $5 McGraw

621.384 Radio 41-9362

"A revised edition of a standard handbook. The chapters dealing with topics in which there has been notable progress since 1935 are rewritten." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1933.

Booklist 37:549 J1 15 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:46 J1 '41

HENRY, HARRIET. Sing all the summer. 291p $2 Dodd

41-17322

Myra had been married five years when her much respected husband was made a junior partner in a New York law firm. As work was brought home to be done, and dates had to be broken, party-loving Myra became restive, and looked to another man as an escort. Reno and another marriage proved unsatisfactory; the junior partner won out after all.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p15 S 14 '41 150w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p24 S 21 '41 170w

HENRY, OTTO HAZELTON, and CLAUSSEN, GERARD EDEN. Welding metallurgy. 359p $1.50 Am. welding soc, 33 W 39th st, N.Y. 671 Steel—Metallography. Welding. Steel alloys 41-8642

"The New York Section of the American Welding Society sponsored a series of lectures to familiarize members of the welding industry with the composition and structures of the metals commonly used, to show the effect of varied conditions of heat and stress in welding, to explain heat treatment, and to illustrate how the knowledge of metallurgy can be used to control the welding processes. These lectures are reproduced in this book." Chem & Chem Eng N

Chem & Chem Eng N 19:108 Ja 25 '41 200w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:14 Ja '41

HEPNER, HARRY WALKER. Effective advertising. 584p $4 McGraw

659.1 Advertising 41-15556

"A comprehensive textbook for the first year course in advertising, which recognizes the role of the consumer movement in the field and explains current survey methods of studying consumers and reading results. Attractive format; well illustrated with many examples and photo-

HERMS, WILLIAM BRODBECK, and GRAY, HAROLD FARNSWORTH. Mosquito control; practical methods for abatement of disease vectors and pests. 317p il map $3.50 Commonwealth fund [15s Oxford]

614.43 Mosquitoes

40-30586

"This book is intended to be a practical handbook on mosquito abatement, not a textbook on drainage engineering or a technical monograph on entomology. It endeavors to present the fundamental principles of mosquito control, emphasizing practical application, geographic variation, and ecological differences in sufficient detail to indicate the main methods of attack on the problem." (Pref) index.

"Although the authors draw mainly on their own experience on the Pacific Coast, they demonstrate a wide knowledge of the literature of methods employed elsewhere. The one important phase of mosquito control which the reviewer feels is not sufficiently emphasized is the use of concrete inverts in drainage ditches in order to increase their permanence and reduce the cost of maintenance. The usefulness of the book is increased by the inclusion of numerous tables, line-drawings and photographs. This book should be in the hands of everyone participating in malaria control work, and in the library of every institution where instruction in environmental sanitation is conducted." H. E. Melaney

+ Am J Pub Health 31:746 Jl '41 360w
Booklist 37:353 Ap 1 '41

HERRING, EDWARD PENDLETON. The impact of war; our American democracy under arms. 306p $2.50 Farrar

355.0973 U.S.—Defenses. U.S.—Politics and government 41-19543

A study of the impact of war on our democratic principles during the one hundred and fifty years of our national existence. Contents: The challenge to democratic institutions; The politics of military policy; The place of the army in national life; The war department; How Congress treats military affairs; The president as commander in chief; Industrial mobilization in the World war; The decades of divided purposes, 1919-1939; The present defense program; The influence of war on society; Traditional values and new imperatives. Bibliography. Indexes.

Booklist 38:172 Ja 15 '42

"If Pendleton Herring's book is a sign of the times, we are at last in process of confronting our national problems realistically. It should be said at once that it is one of the most significant analyses produced by the current emergency. Modestly and temperately written, and claiming too little rather than too much in its title, it seeks to think through, going both backward and forward, the whole role of the military in a democratic culture. Its history (except at one or two points, where it is merely sketchy) is sound; its political probing is brilliant and imaginative; its economics is bold yet realistic." Louis Hacker

+ Books p2 O 19 '41 1500w

Reviewed by E. R. Dupuy

Sat R of Lit 24:17 N 1 '41 1050w

HERRING, HARRIET LAURA. Southern industry and regional development; with a foreword by Howard W. Odum. 103p $1 Univ. of N.C. press

338.0975 South—Industries and resources. South—Economic conditions 41-5054

"A scholarly 100-page study of the means available to the South to achieve a more balanced economy, so desperately needed with cotton half-dethroned by war and prewar events. In terms of manufacturing the author proposes: '(a) the manufacture for the nation of those goods for which this region is peculiarly fitted by resources and skills; (b) the manufacture for its own use of those goods for which it has sufficient resources and skills; and (c) the development, at least for its own use, of those manufactures for which it could produce the materials, thus helping to vary its agriculture, and could develop its potential skills, thus affording more varied opportunities for its youth.'" (Springf'd Republican) index.

School & Society 53:320 Mr 8 '41 10w
Springf'd Republican p7e Je 15 '41 120w

HERRING, HUBERT CLINTON. Good neighbors. 381p maps $3 Yale univ. press

918 Latin America (W) 41-12329

Study of the South American countries, especially Argentina, Brazil, and Chile. Partial contents: The land and the people; The making of the Argentine nation; Germans, Italians, Japanese—a study in columns; Argentina and the United States; Brazil; If you would know Brazil; Race; Government; Undeveloped; Germans; The United States and Brazil; Chile; Land and people; Farm. The author has been for fifteen years director of the Committee on cultural relations with Latin America, and has contributed many articles on that country to periodicals and newspapers. Bibliography. Index.

"The author has buried deep facts in a lyrical, literary style which does as much to transmit the spirit of his subject as cold, hard statistics would have done. The statistics are there, to be sure, but they are not painfully there the way college professors generally prefer them. This is not a text-book. It is much more the 'best seller' type. . . A word of praise needs to be said for the unusual pen and ink maps which underpin the over-all picture so well. Since cultural relations is Mr. Herring's special province, it is not surprising that he should have sustained his fine reputation in this field." F. R. Fussell

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1022 O '41 230w

"All in all, this book is the most comprehensive, instructive, and stimulating book about our southern neighbors which has appeared in recent decades." W. S. Robertson

+ Ann Am Acad 218:214 N '41 550w

"Professor Herring's book should do much to promote the sound understanding that is the first condition of any intelligent Pan-American policy. Unlike some writers on Latin America, he is extremely well acquainted with the countries he describes. His knowledge is of the up-to-date variety, refreshed by frequent and recent visits, and his work is crammed with interesting information about the history, politics, habits, and social and economic conditions of the countries to the south of us, Argentina, Brazil, Chile, and Mexico being singled out for especially extensive treatment." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic O '41 250w

Booklist 38:9 S '41

"It is the simple and orderly arrangement of the sections of this book that makes it so useful. If you want to have a general idea of the principal interests of Argentina, for example, or of Brazil or Chile . . . you will find what you want to know under well subdivided heads. If you are curious about the German element in Latin America, and its strength and organization, you will find sections under each country which give you a clear picture. If you want to know just what the South Americans think of us, and why, this also can be found by easy reference." Nicholas Roosevelt

+ Books p1 Jl 27 '41 1500w

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley

Cath World 153:753 S '41 1600w

"This is the best single volume on the nations south of the Rio Grande." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 58:1054 Ag 27 '41 900w

Reviewed by A. L. Murray
Churchman 155:20 S 1 '41 350w
Cleveland Open Shelf p14 J1 '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:387 Ja '42 40w

Reviewed by Stephen Naft
Living Age 360:597 Ag '41 200w

"Mr. Herring's book is the work of a keen mind of considerable sophistication." Ralph Bates

+ Nation 153:121 Ag 9 '41 180w

"'Good Neighbors' is a splendid work, a wholesome contribution, by a capable student and craftsman, to the study of a subject about which so many millions of amateurish words are being spilled at the present time." Edward Tomlinson

+ N Y Times p3 J1 20 '41 2050w

"Helpful maps."

+ New Yorker 17:56 Ag 30 '41 20w

"The book deals only cursorily—perhaps too cursorily—with all but the ABC powers. It is written for the vague person known as the 'general reader,' rather than for scholars. Its distinctive merit lies in the mingled realism and sympathy of its approach to the Latin-American scene, in the practical good sense and clear-eyed awareness of future perils which the author repeatedly demonstrates." Dexter Perkins

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 J1 19 '41 650w

Scientific Bk Club R 12:2 Ag '41 420w

Wis Lib Bul 37:153 O '41

"It is indicative of Mr. Herring's skill that his style preserves its breezy charm even when he is itemizing in the 'first,' 'second,' 'third' tradition, as he does repeatedly. This is, of course, a book frankly intended for the general reader, and of greatest utility to the uninitiated. Since, however, Mr. Herring has generously incorporated the results of his own first-hand research into the everyday life of the ordinary South American—inquiring into such matters as wages and standard of living—even those familiar with the subject will find this volume well worth reading." J. I. B. McCulloch

+ Yale R n s 31:202 autumn '41 1100w

HERRMANN, LAZAR (LEO LANIA, pseud).
The darkest hour; adventures and escapes; with an introd. by Edgar Ansel Mowrer [tr. from the German by Ralph Marlowe]. 235p $2.75 Houghton

940.5344 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, Austrian. World war, 1939—France 41-51826

An Austrian newspaper man, living in France at the outbreak of the war, describes the panic of fear and the confusion which fell upon France in those days. Altho he had always fought for democracy, the author was seized, along with other men of German origin residing in France, and was imprisoned in two concentration camps in Brittany, before he was able to escape, join his wife and son in Marseilles, and finally sail for America.

Booklist 37:489 Je 15 '41

Bookmark 2:11 N '41

"Though the book is a personal record it is far more than that. Through Mr. Lania's cool reporting we get a more general picture of the French debacle than from most of the explanatory, self-justifying accounts which have been printed." Virgilia Sapieha

+ Books p4 My 18 '41 750w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 7 '41 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:377 Ja '42 60w
Living Age 360:498 J1 '41 210w

"A fine adventure story told with literary distinction. . . . The incredible personal hardships suffered by Lania make all the more remarkable the balanced tone in which his book is written. He does not step before the reader to point the moral of his story but lets each incident speak for itself." Milton Hindus
+ Nation 152:731 Je 21 '41 420w

"The days and nights spent in the concentration camps are vividly portrayed, but while the reader is spared little of the detail, the pictures are presented with the objective skill that only a highly competent journalist can bring to bear. The narrative interest of the book, however, will be recognized by most readers as chiefly a vehicle for carrying a warning against internal dissension." E. F. Allen

+ N Y Times p9 My 25 '41 650w

"His escapes and adventures make an exciting tale, one of the many truly anguished stories of our time, told with frankness and simplicity, yet without any bitter feeling against the very nation which treated him worse than a criminal. 'I believe in France,' Mr. Lania concludes his stirring account. My bitterest experiences can not destroy my love and sympathy for the French people.' As a document as well as an adventure story Leo Lania's book deserves the attention of many American readers." H. B. Kranz

+ Sat R of Lit 24:20 My 17 '41 700w

"The book is written with great simplicity, no melodrama, with honesty and sincerity. It is a straightforward account of Lania's experiences, with no hysteria and no bid for pity. But its very simplicity of narration holds the reader rapt to the end." M. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 18 '41 800w

HERSEY, MRS JEAN. I like gardening. 234p il $2 Hale

635.9 Gardening. Floriculture (W) 41-6199

Informal, gayly written chapters which include many a hint for making gardening not a serious business or a bore, but fun. Partial contents: Gardening for fun; Annuals—the quickest garden; Perennials; A garden pool; Tools for your garden; Herbs to grow; A garden of birds; Let them dig; Back-yard orchard; Roses; Indoor rock garden; Gardens in the snow.

"You'll enjoy 'I Like Gardening,' and get some good pointers from it." R. S. Lemmon
+ Books p9 Je 22 '41 120w

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 4 '41 340w

HERSKOVITS, MELVILLE JEAN. Myth of the Negro past. 374p $4 Harper

572.96 Negro race

42-447

"The book is the first report of a series of studies undertaken at the behest of the Carnegie Corporation of New York. The lifelong conviction of its author that 'the study of the negro in the United States requires also comparable study of the negro in Africa and in all parts of the Western Hemisphere has made possible this monograph, the first comprehensive analysis of the current beliefs concerning the extent and significance of traits of African origin persisting in the United States.' It attempts to show 'that present-day situations are more complex in their underlying causes than has been grasped, and that, whether in analyzing intellectual or practical problems, every consideration calls for insight into the influence of pre-American patterns.'" (Scientific Bk Club R) Bibliography. Index.

"Dr. Herskovits is uniquely qualified to speak about the historical background of Negroes in the New World. He has studied the Negro at first hand in West Africa, in Dutch Guiana, in Haiti, in the United States, and, just now, in Brazil. . . . [However] the author feels that all investigations of American Negro life and all

HERMS, WILLIAM BRODBECK, and GRAY, HAROLD FARNSWORTH. Mosquito control; practical methods for abatement of disease vectors and pests. 317p il map $3.50 Commonwealth fund [15s Oxford]

614.43 Mosquitoes

40-30586

"This book is intended to be a practical handbook on mosquito abatement, not a textbook on drainage engineering or a technical monograph on entomology. It endeavors to present the fundamental principles of mosquito control, emphasizing practical application, geographic variation, and ecological differences in sufficient detail to indicate the main methods of attack on the problem." (Pref) Index.

"Although the authors draw mainly on their own experience on the Pacific Coast, they demonstrate a wide knowledge of the literature of methods employed elsewhere. The one important phase of mosquito control which the reviewer feels is not sufficiently emphasized is the use of concrete inverts in drainage ditches in order to increase their permanence and reduce the cost of maintenance. The usefulness of the book is increased by the inclusion of numerous tables, line-drawings and photographs. This book should be in the hands of everyone participating in malaria control work, and in the library of every institution where instruction in environmental sanitation is conducted." H. E. Meleney

+ Am J Pub Health 31:746 Jl '41 360w
Booklist 37:353 Ap 1 '41

HERRING, EDWARD PENDLETON. The impact of war; our American democracy under arms. 306p $2.50 Farrar

355.0973 U.S.—Defenses. U.S.—Politics and government 41-19543

A study of the impact of war on our democratic principles during the one hundred and fifty years of our national existence. Contents: The challenge to democratic institutions; The politics of military policy; The place of the army in national life; The war department; How Congress treats military affairs; The president as commander in chief; Industrial mobilization in the World War; The decades of divided purposes, 1919-1939; The present defense program; The influence of war on society; Traditional values and new imperatives. Bibliography. Indexes.

Booklist 38:172 Ja 15 '42

"If Pendleton Herring's book is a sign of the times, we are at last in process of confronting our national problems realistically. It should be said at once that it is one of the most significant analyses produced by the current emergency. Modestly and temperately written, and claiming too little rather than too much in its title, it seeks to think through, going both backward and forward, the whole role of the military in a democratic culture. Its history (except at one or two points, where it is merely sketchy) is sound; its political probing is brilliant and imaginative; its economics is bold yet realistic." Louis Hacker

+ Books p2 O 19 '41 1500w

Reviewed by E. R. Dupuy

Sat R of Lit 24:17 N 1 '41 1050w

HERRING, HARRIET LAURA. Southern industry and regional development; with a foreword by Howard W. Odum. 103p $1 Univ. of N.C. press

338.0975 South—Industries and resources. South—Economic conditions 41-5054

"A scholarly 100-page study of the means available to the South to achieve a more balanced economy, so desperately needed with cotton half-dethroned by war and prewar events. In terms of manufacturing the author proposes: '(a) the manufacture for the nation of those goods for which this region is peculiarly fitted by resources and skills; (b) the manufacture for its own use of those goods for which it has sufficient resources and skills; and (c) the development, at least for its own use, of those manufactures for which it could produce the materials, thus helping to vary its agriculture, and could develop its potential skills, thus affording more varied opportunities for its youth.'" (Spring'd Republican) Index.

School & Society 53:320 Mr 8 '41 10w
Spring'd Republican p7e Je 15 '41 120w

HERRING, HUBERT CLINTON. Good neighbors. 381p maps $3 Yale univ. press

918 Latin America (W) 41-12329

Study of the South American countries, especially Argentina, Brazil, and Chile. Partial contents: The land and the people; The making of the Argentine nation; Germans, Italians, Japanese—a study in columns; Argentina and the United States; Brazil; If you would know Brazil; Race; Government; Undefined; Germans; The United States and Brazil; Chile; Land and people; Farm. The author has been for fifteen years director of the Committee on cultural relations with Latin America, and has contributed many articles on that country to periodicals and newspapers. Bibliography. Index.

"The author has buried deep facts in a lyrical, literary style which does as much to transmit the spirit of his subject as cold, hard statistics would have done. The statistics are there, to be sure, but they are not painfully there the way college professors generally prefer them. This is not a text-book. It is much more the 'best seller' type... A word of praise needs to be said for the unusual pen and ink maps which underpin the over-all picture so well. Since cultural relations is Mr. Herring's special province, it is not surprising that he should have sustained his fine reputation in this field." F. R. Fussell

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1022 O '41 230w

"All in all, this book is the most comprehensive, instructive, and stimulating book about our southern neighbors which has appeared in recent decades." W. S. Robertson

+ Ann Am Acad 218:214 N '41 550w

"Professor Herring's book should do much to promote the sound understanding that is the first condition of any intelligent Pan-American policy. Unlike some writers on Latin America, he is extremely well acquainted with the countries he describes. His knowledge is of the up-to-date variety, refreshed by frequent and recent visits, and his work is crammed with interesting information about the history, politics, habits, and social and economic conditions of the countries to the south of us, Argentina, Brazil, Chile, and Mexico being singled out for especially extensive treatment." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic O '41 250w

Booklist 38:9 S '41

"It is the simple and orderly arrangement of the sections of this book that makes it so useful. If you want to have a general idea of the principal interests of Argentina, for example, or of Brazil or Chile... you will find what you want to know under well subdivided heads. If you are curious about the German element in Latin America, and its strength and organization, you will find sections under each country which give you a clear picture. If you want to know just what the South Americans think of us, and why, this also can be found by easy reference." Nicholas Roosevelt

+ Books p1 Jl 27 '41 1500w

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley

Cath World 153:753 S '41 1600w

"This is the best single volume on the nations south of the Rio Grande." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 58:1054 Ag 27 '41 900w

Reviewed by A. L. Murray
Churchman 155:20 S 1 '41 350w
Cleveland Open Shelf p14 J1 '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:387 Ja '42 40w

Reviewed by Stephen Naft
Living Age 360:597 Ag '41 200w

"Mr. Herring's book is the work of a keen mind of considerable sophistication." Ralph Bates

+ Nation 153:121 Ag 9 '41 180w

"'Good Neighbors' is a splendid work, a wholesome contribution, by a capable student and craftsman, to the study of a subject about which so many millions of amateurish words are being spilled at the present time." Edward Tomlinson

+ N Y Times p3 J1 20 '41 2050w

"Helpful maps."

+ New Yorker 17:56 Ag 30 '41 20w

"The book deals only cursorily—perhaps too cursorily—with all but the ABC powers. It is written for the vague person known as the 'general reader,' rather than for scholars. Its distinctive merit lies in the mingled realism and sympathy of its approach to the Latin-American scene, in the practical good sense and clear-eyed awareness of future perils which the author repeatedly demonstrates." Dexter Perkins

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 J1 19 '41 650w

Scientific Bk Club R 12:2 Ag '41 420w

Wis Lib Bul 37:153 O '41

"It is indicative of Mr. Herring's skill that his style preserves its breezy charm even when he is itemizing in the 'first,' 'second,' 'third' tradition, as he does repeatedly. This is, of course, a book frankly intended for the general reader, and of greatest utility to the uninitiated. Since, however, Mr. Herring has generously incorporated the results of his own first-hand research into the everyday life of the ordinary South American—inquiring into such matters as wages and standard of living—even those familiar with the subject will find this volume well worth reading." J. I. B. McCulloch

+ Yale R n s 31:202 autumn '41 1100w

HERRMANN, LAZAR (LEO LANIA, pseud).
The darkest hour; adventures and escapes; with an introd. by Edgar Ansel Mowrer [tr. from the German by Ralph Marlowe]. 235p $2.75 Houghton

940.5344 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, Austrian. World war, 1939—France 41-51826

An Austrian newspaper man, living in France at the outbreak of the war, describes the panic of fear and the confusion which fell upon France in those days. Altho he had always fought for democracy, the author was seized, along with other men of German origin residing in France, and was imprisoned in two concentration camps in Brittany, before he was able to escape, join his wife and son in Marseilles, and finally sail for America.

Booklist 37:489 Je 15 '41

Bookmark 2:11 N '41

"Though the book is a personal record it is also far more than that. Through Mr. Lania's cool reporting we get a more general picture of the French debacle than from most of the explanatory, self-justifying accounts which have been printed." Virgilia Sapieha

+ Books p4 My 18 '41 750w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 7 '41 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:377 Ja '42 60w
Living Age 360:498 J1 '41 210w

"A fine adventure story told with literary distinction. . . . The incredible personal hardships suffered by Lania make all the more remarkable the balanced tone in which his book is written. He does not step before the reader to point the moral of his story but lets each incident speak for itself." Milton Hindus

+ Nation 152:731 Je 21 '41 420w

"The days and nights spent in the concentration camps are vividly portrayed, but while the reader is spared little of the detail, the pictures are presented with the objective skill that only a highly competent journalist can bring to bear. The narrative interest of the book, however, will be recognized by most readers as chiefly a vehicle for carrying a warning against internal dissension." E. F. Allen

+ N Y Times p9 My 25 '41 650w

"His escapes and adventures make an exciting tale, one of the many truly anguished stories of our time, told with frankness and simplicity, yet without any bitter feeling against the very nation which treated him worse than a criminal. 'I believe in France,' Mr. Lania concludes his stirring account. 'My bitterest experiences can not destroy my love and sympathy for the French people.' As a document as well as an adventure story Leo Lania's book deserves the attention of many American readers." H. B. Kranz

+ Sat R of Lit 24:20 My 17 '41 700w

"The book is written with great simplicity, no melodrama, with honesty and sincerity. It is a straightforward account of Lania's experiences, with no hysteria and no bid for pity. But its very simplicity of narration holds the reader rapt to the end." M. D.

+ Spring'd Republican p7e My 18 '41 800w

HERSEY, MRS JEAN. I like gardening. 234p il $2 Hale

635.9 Gardening. Floriculture (W) 41-6199

Informal, gayly written chapters which include many a hint for making gardening not a serious business or a bore, but fun. Partial contents: Gardening for fun; Annuals—the quickest garden; Perennials; A garden pool; Tools for your garden; Herbs to grow; A garden of birds; Let them dig; Back-yard orchard; Roses; Indoor rock garden; Gardens in the snow.

"You'll enjoy 'I Like Gardening,' and get some good pointers from it." R. S. Lemmon
+ Books p9 Je 22 '41 120w

Spring'd Republican p7e My 4 '41 340w

HERSKOVITS, MELVILLE JEAN. Myth of the Negro past. 374p $4 Harper

572.96 Negro race

42-447

"The book is the first report of a series of studies undertaken at the behest of the Carnegie Corporation of New York. The lifelong conviction of its author that 'the study of the negro in the United States requires also comparable study of the negro in Africa and in all parts of the Western Hemisphere has made possible this monograph, the first comprehensive analysis of the current beliefs concerning the extent and significance of traits of African origin persisting in the United States.' It attempts to show 'that present-day situations are more complex in their underlying causes than has been grasped, and that, whether in analyzing intellectual or practical problems, every consideration calls for insight into the influence of pre-American patterns.'" (Scientific Bk Club R) Bibliography. Index.

"Dr. Herskovits is uniquely qualified to speak about the historical background of Negroes in the New World. He has studied the Negro at first hand in West Africa, in Dutch Guiana, in Haiti, in the United States, and, just now, in Brazil. . . . [However] the author feels that all investigations of American Negro life and all programs for the betterment of interracial relations are hamstrung for want of an appreciation of the Negro's African heritage. Actually his present volume on historical perspectives seems rather a footnote to the valuable studies of American Negro communities that have been appearing in recent years, several of them under the aegis of the Youth Commission." Ruth Benedict

HERSKOVITS, M. J.—Continued

Books p16 Ja 18 '42 650w

"An impressive survey, though not too easy reading."

+ — New Yorker 17:60 D 27 '41 70w

Reviewed by Harold Courlander

Sat R of Lit 25:12 Ja 10 '42 550w

"All thinking people are increasingly aware of the strong current of racial prejudice flowing through various parts of our country. The oldest of our problems lies with the negro race. Professor Herskovits, noted anthropologist at Northwestern University, presents the results of painstaking research in a book that is not only fascinating as an academic achievement, but should, in all truth, help us all to understand the negro better and also help the negro to understand himself." A. H. Compton & others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:1 D '41 1000w

"Dr. Herskovits speaks clearly, concisely and authoritatively, intent that all points be well understood, and like many another professor-author, never leaves the classroom. But with all its often slow-going scientific thoroughness and its cold scrutiny of warm humanity, the cumulative effect of Dr Herskovits's book is like a light suddenly turned on in the darkness. Perhaps the scientists can do what the abolitionists could not—set the Negro free."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 4 '42 550w

HERVEY, HARRY CLAY. School for eternity. 340p $2.50 Putnam

(W) 41-13937

An eccentric count invites eight people to his castle on a West Indian island. An earthquake demolishes the castle and ends the party. The life story of each of the guests is traced in this novel. Besides the count there were an unfrocked priest, a disappointed actress, a school teacher, a young sailor, an old woman, and a pair of lovers.

Booklist 38:35 O 1 '41

"It is an ancient pattern, and it remains a perennial favorite. Mr. Hervey's expert use of it has resulted in a novel of eminent readability." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p4 Ag 31 '41 900w

"Plenty of color and drama here, though you may be rather less worked up over it all than the occasion demands."

New Repub 105:382 S 22 '41 50w

"This book which begins and ends with an earthquake offers the prime entertainment of a brilliantly contrived tale. You may or may not care to follow its involutions of serious meditation; you are not really very likely to take up the challenge of moral judgment suggested in the jacket blurb; but if you are looking for a dramatic and unusual story this is the place to come for an interesting time." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 31 '41 650w

"Not as skillful as 'The Bridge of San Luis Rey,' though clever and colorful."

+ — New Yorker 17:77 S 6 '41 60w

"Mr. Hervey tells a good story. He is entirely at ease, with all the mechanics of the art at his finger-tips: the colorful scene, the lively characters, the constant movement, the plunge of event. It is just too bad that in this case he has chosen a story that has already been thoroughly, and better, done. . . There is no objection to this repetition of Wilder's plot, except of course that the comparison is invited, by which Hervey suffers. A literary device is like any other art form; you have to believe in it while you are using it. In Wilder's book the idea was a force, a philosophy, whether or not you agreed with it. In Hervey's it is a good literary trick to tie up a lot of diverse stories." N. L. Rothman

— + Sat R of Lit 24:14 S 6 '41 400w

"A fresh vigorous pattern for a successful novel provides a great temptation to writers who would go and do likewise. Harry Hervey, author of 'School for Eternity' has yielded generously, for in his novel we find not merely a great indebtedness to 'The Bridge of San Luis Rey,' but to 'Lost Horizon' and 'South Wind.' If one is not mildly irritated by this emulation of others, he will find himself amused, fascinated and hypnotized by the color and content of this fat and juicy piece of writing."

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 31 '41 480w

HERZBERG, MAX JOHN, ed. Insults; a practical anthology of scathing remarks and acid portraits. 249p $2 Greystone

177 Invetive

A not-too-serious survey of the art of being insulting as it has been practised by high and low against all and sundry from the times of James I of England to our own day. Partial contents: Kings and presidents; Spite and wit among the great; Quarrels of the Victorians and Edwardians; Legal retorts; Military skirmishes; Actors and playwrights have to take it; Sarcasm by mail, wire, and cable; The vocabulary of insult—contingent insults. Index

"Here is a 'practical anthology of scathing remarks and acid portraits,' as Mr. Herzberg's subtitle puts it. And it is, in its way, an excellent collection. There is plenty of evidence here that the art of insulting people can be a very high one indeed. Kings and presidents, novelists and newspaper men, politicians and actors—all are included in this handy compendium. . . . The only two glaring omissions that come to mind are Mr. Richard S. Maney and Miss Lillian Hellman, both distinguished in this field and well and favorably known hereabouts as deft hands with the oral stiletto."

Books p16 Ja 25 '42 170w

"Comments from the many forms of modern and past life in a running text which often does not run. Incomplete, in that the author has read certain books and not read others. Good dip-reading, in that no reader knows all the old and current chestnuts and is happy to renew acquaintance with the known but almost forgotten. The field is inexhaustible and the book proves it."

+ — New Repub 106:29 Ja 5 '42 70w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 21 '41 210w

"Reading this 'practical anthology of scathing remarks' is somewhat like sampling a vial of concentrated formic acid: only professional scorpions or the very insensitive will care for more than small sips."

Time 38:51 D 29 '41 300w

HESS, MRS KATHARINE (PADDOCK). Textile fibers and their use (ed. by Benjamin R. Andrews). 3d ed rev 530p il $3 Lippincott

677 Textile industry. Textile fibers 41-8402

New edition of a textbook first published in 1931, second edition in 1936. "As in the case of the second edition, this third edition represents a thorough revision and a further expansion of subject matter in response to new developments in the field of textiles. Again, changes in synthetic fibers and finishes of fabrics have taken place with rapidity, necessitating marked revision to bring the subject matter up to date. The units dealing with selection and care of fabrics have been expanded." (Pref. to the 3d ed) Index.

J Home Econ 33:486 S '41 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:48 J1 '41 70w

HEVESY, PAUL DE. World wheat planning and economic planning in general. 912p $12 (38s) Oxford

338.1 Wheat. Wheat trade. Economic policy 40-11004

"In this study of the most important commodity in the economic life of man the author develops many themes of which there is no hint in the title of the volume. The principal discussion is directed to planning the details of an international agreement to balance the production and consumption of wheat and to prevent further slumps in wheat prices. . . The main features of the proposed agreement would be (a) the allotment of export quotas for import into European countries only; (b) the export quotas to be expressed in percentages of the total European demand; (c) the aggregate of the export quotas always to be kept equal to the total European demand; (d) entirely free export to non-European countries; (e) the obligation for all quantities exported to European countries to be covered by negotiable certificates issued by an International Wheat Board." Times [London] Lit Sup

"Without attempting to check the author's voluminous data, to scrutinize all his statements for possible errors of commission and omission, or to subject his plan to critical appraisal, the reviewer commends this careful, realistic work as deserving serious attention from economists and social engineers." J. S. Davis

+ — Am Econ R 30:858 D '40 1100w
Economist 138:336 F 24 '40 160w
Foreign Affairs 19:465 Ja '41 10w

"Whether one is a planner or not, whether one accepts or rejects Mr. de Hevesy's proposal, if one is interested in wheat, one can read the volume with profit. It is far more than the promotion of a plan. It contains a brief description of the measures of government in 47 countries in their attempts to influence the production and trade in wheat. Statistical tables are abundant and extensive. 'World Wheat Planning' is a kind of encyclopedia on world production and trade in wheat." Asher Hobson

+ Geog R 31:524 Jl '41 1350w

"Mr. de Hevesy, a Hungarian diplomat of thirty years' standing, has long been a student of the wheat problem and writes with full command over the literature of his subject. The book has a grace of style that in this respect takes it out of the class of ordinary studies." D. A. MacGibbon

+ J Pol Econ 49:117 F '41 1350w

"Mr. de Hevesy's book is a valuable contribution to the formulation of a reasoned judgement on this vast and complex problem."

+ Spec 164:698 My 17 '40 250w

"The author has studied every detail of the problem and the volume is a complete encyclopaedia of the wheat trade with every imaginable relevant fact and figure. There is a stimulating discussion on the probable future conditions of demand and supply in world agriculture, with particular reference to the extension of the production of industrial crops and of the industrial utilization of food crops. The book is one that may be recommended to all students of international affairs; its interest is in no way confined to students of agriculture or of economics."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p271 Je 1 '40 390w

HEWES, MRS AGNES DANFORTH. Spice ho! a story of discovery; drawings by Wilfred Jones. 198p $1.75 Knopf

910.9 Discoveries (in geography). Spices (W) 41-51955

Non-fictional account for young readers of the part played by the spice trade in history. The nations which risked the most to gain the precious cargoes of spice, which spelled wealth and influence for their controllers, were Venice Portugal, England, Holland, and finally America. The story of each of these countries, and their struggles to control the spice trade, is told for ages ten to twelve. No index.

Booklist 38:99 N 15 '41

"Mrs. Hewes writes fascinatingly of the development of trade over the face of the earth, of spicy isles in the Orient, of bitter rivalries between nations, and sadly, too, of greed and cruelty to natives and the vanquished. Here is color and romance and high adventure." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:470 N '41 80w

"A romantic tale told in a clear, simple, and delightful manner. Can be used in the study of discoverers and spices, though brief. Make-up excellent; good illustrations by Wilfred Jones." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 66:678 Ag '41 110w

"It is a story of high courage and great deeds and, unfortunately, also one of war and cruelty and avarice, and because it is told here by a wise and reflective woman the book is not only history itself but a stimulating account of some of the fundamental processes of history in terms which can readily be grasped by young people." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p12 S 21 '41 390w

HEWITT, ARTHUR WENTWORTH. God's back pasture. 144p $1.50 Willett

250 Country church 41-26256

A book on the rural parish by the author of Highland Shepherds (Book Review Digest, 1939). The book is in four parts: The rural parish and what is wrong with it; Tinkering the temporalities; The rural pastor as an educator; 'My heart's in the Highlands'. Index.

Booklist 38:171 Ja 15 '42

"In the vain hope that it will wither the conceit of city pastors, the professional inferiority complex of rural pastors and the incompetence of their denominational executives, this wise, charming little volume is heartily recommended." W. E. Hammond

+ Christian Century 59:16 Ja 7 '42 800w

"This little volume by the author of Highland Shepherds, is devoted to religion in the rural fields. It is wittily and facetiously phrased and has much in it that this reviewer, himself a 'rustic' among the parsons, has found to be true and indisputable." T. F. Opie

+ Churchman 156:18 Ja 15 '42 310w

"Dr. Hewitt is no novice in the field of rural work. This is his third volume dealing with its problems and opportunities, and these all reveal a life consecrated in thought, word, and deed to the interests of the far-flung and neglected rural population." Rittenhouse Neisser

+ Crozer Q 19:75 Ja '42 600w

HEWLETT, DOROTHY. Shocking bad hat; a Victorian novel. 348p $2.50 Bobbs

41-22357

A mystery story laid in London in the 1850s.

Booklist 38:177 Ja 15 '42

"This latest amende honorable to the '50s has two advantages: Dorothy Hewlett's uncanny knowledge of their ways, slang, furniture, clothes, songs, jokes and social attitudes, and her good sense in choosing a collaborator from this period. She has apparently given one of those whistles whose vibrations are too high for mortal ears and Wilkie Collins came running. People have never stopped reading his 'Moonstone' and 'Woman in White' but it is a long time since anybody wanted to write like that. It is a way with such charm, now that the fun of the '50s has been heightened by Miss Hewlett's own sense of humor, that though the book can be laid down at almost any point, it would be hard to find one that will be picked up again with a more comfortable feeling." M. L. Becker

+ Books p16 N 9 '41 480w

HEWLETT, DOROTHY—Continued

"Despite the apparent turmoil this is a restless, leisured book, whose villainy, affecting you only academically as story business, has no hurt in it. A book written round people who have never heard of Freudian complexes and whom one gets to know and, yes, decidedly, to like—or, not too violently to dislike—without benefit of psychology or introspection. To wander into the make-believe of such a story these days is to pass from storm into temporary peacefulness." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p30 N 23 '41 750w

"Some of the characters have a pretty rough time but the reader should enjoy every minute of it."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 16 '41 300w

HEXNER, ERVIN. Studies in legal terminology. 150p $1.50 Univ. of N.C. press

340 Law—Terms and phrases 41-6663

"This book centers its attention upon the concepts of legal rules, legal system, and legal security. The character of the investigation is illustrated by the questions raised. What is the relation of legal control to other social instruments for determining conduct? Is a legal system possible without a state? Contrariwise, is a state possible without a legal system? How are legal rules related to a legal system? What is the nature of a legal security? It is the author's conception of the elements of a legal system, however, which receives most attention and which determines the treatments given to the other questions and to the subsidiary questions on administrative law, precedent, judicial discretion." (J Philos) Index.

"It is a fair inference, although the language of controversy is studiously avoided, that the author is attempting a re-statement of what remains an essentially positivist position so as to lend as little aid and comfort to the dictators as possible. In doing this, he is not always, in the opinion of the reviewer, successful but the possibilities suggested are ingenious and worthy of serious consideration." K. C. Cole

+ — Am Pol Sci R 35:371 Ap '41 1100w

"The style is frequently awkward and the diction is commonly unidiomatic or obscure. The author's ideas will doubtless be more clearly presented when he has made further progress in overcoming his linguistic handicaps. His failure to give concrete illustrations of his meanings, his unfamiliarity with American legal terminology, and his lack of intuitive perception of the ways of case law, make his discussion seem remote and aloof from American legal problems. Studies in Legal Terminology is an interesting report of progress toward a reconciliation of positivism and idealism, but it would have been more valuable if publication had been deferred until the author had made further improvements in his own terminology." E. W. Patterson

— + Harvard Law R 54:1419 Je '41 750w

"Studies in Legal Terminology, though primarily an attempt at persuasion by definition, is interestingly written and brings to bear upon the problems under consideration a large proportion of the recent contributions to the subject." E. N. Garlan

+ J Philos 38:191 Mr 27 '41 1100w

HEYDON, J. K. God of reason. 156p $2 (5s) Sheed

211 God

"Mr. Heydon re-states the arguments (from Plato and Aristotle down to present-day thinkers) from which man has postulated the existence of God. Treating various scientific objections in a manner at once sympathetic and understanding, the author pursues his argument so lucidly that his book should be of value to all students." Times [London] Lit Sup

Cath World 153:125 Ap '41 300w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p723 D 9 '39 40w

HEYER, GEORGETTE (MRS G. R. ROUGIER). Beau Wyndham. 278p $2 Doubleday

41-4921

Diverting romance of Sir Richard Wyndham, a second Beau Brummell, and Penelope Creed, who escaped from a hated marriage by joining Sir Richard on his flight from the beautiful but dull young lady whom his family attempted to force upon him as a bride. The scene is early Georgian England.

Bookmark 2:16 N '41

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p18 Ap 20 '41 240w

"It is a gay tale of romantic costume comedy told in a sprightly and vivacious style for the amusement and entertainment of the readers. There is plenty of action, a lot of interesting people very well portrayed, and an engaging plot that holds your attention all the time. And of course the ending is all that it should be. If it never happened that is just too bad; it should have." F. S. Ambrose

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 26 '41 200w

"For the reader who likes the atmosphere of the Beau Brummell period, with Corinthians in laces and satins, ladies swooning, the postchaise held up by brigands just outside Bristol, and a brave lass for heroine, this story has high diversion value." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p22 Ap 13 '41 130w

HEYER, GEORGETTE (MRS G. R. ROUGIER). Envious Casca. 311p $2 Doubleday [8s 3d Hodder]

41-25257

Detective story.

"Sensible and effective detecting by Inspector Hemingway, love in sufficient quantities and all that quiet Heyer fun. Don't go elsewhere for Christmas murder." Will Cuppy

+ Books p36 D 7 '41 320w

"Georgette Heyer, most entertaining of the sophisticated mystery-mongers, is back from her amblings in costume romance with 'Envious Casca,' as tart and juicy as a new apple. One of those house-party affairs, but peopled with a fine aggregation of pungent characters in a perpetual squabble. Brisk and amusing, with no nonsense." Mort. Post

+ New Repub 106:126 Ja 26 '42 40w

"Rarely have we seen humor and mystery so perfectly blended as they are in this story. Some of the humorous episodes which seem least relevant actually contain the clues which lead Hemingway to the correct solution of a very difficult problem." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p11 D 21 '41 190w

"Sharp, clear, and witty in the British manner. Recommended for readers who like to smile wryly."

+ New Yorker 17:138 D 6 '41 60w

"Good stuff."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:20 D 13 '41 40w

Reviewed by John Fairfield

Spec 167:538 D 5 '41 60w

"The technic of Georgette Heyer is always intriguing but has never been so disarming as in 'Envious Casca.'"

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 21 '41 120w

Time 39:72 Ja 5 '42 50w

Times [London] Lit Sup p533 O 25 '41 120w

HEYLIGER, WILLIAM. You're on the air; II. by Neil O'Keefe. 262p $2 Appleton-Century (W) 41-4377

"Joe Carlin, eighteen, with high school dramatics as his only experience, obtains a position in a radio dramatic serial. His difficulties in reaching this point, his failure to keep the position after a few weeks, and the final relinquishment of his ambition and dreams, form the theme of the story." Library J

"If [the story] does something to shatter the dream of easy money on the air, a dream woven out of vanity and laziness, that is filling the heads of so many schoolboys today, it will have deserved well of the public. I am willing to trust Mr. Heyliger's facts, for he has a reputation for getting them straight." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Mr 16 '41 360w

"The author has written a readable tale, but his picture—not alone of Joe's failure, for that might be admissible, but of the discouragements of professional radio actors—is too depressing and disheartening to be of much help as a stimulating vocational story." Florence O'Gara

— + Library J 66:465 My 15 '41 120w

"There is plenty of room for vocational stories as sane and honest as this, which is also good fiction." E. L. Buell

N Y Times p9 J1 6 '41 370w

HEYMANN, HANS. Plan for permanent peace. 315p maps $3.50 Harper

330.9 Peace. World politics. Banks and banking 41-7734

The nucleus of the author's plan for permanent peace is the prospectus of a Bank of Nations first submitted by him to the world's statesmen at Geneva nearly twenty years ago. The author was during the twenties economic adviser to the German foreign office; he is now a professor at Rutgers university. Index.

Reviewed by M. A. Heilperin

Am Econ R 31:636 S '41 1500w

Reviewed by W. L. Godshall

Am Pol Sci R 35:1020 O '41 370w

"Idealists will find strong elements of hope among the proposals; realists may be skeptical. Some will wonder how the scheme could be made to work; others will question the special emphasis given to banking organizations. But most interested observers will find the volume a suggestive contribution to the mounting stock of books and pamphlets which undertake to chart a more peaceful and prosperous world economic structure." John Donaldson

+ — Ann Am Acad 218:216 N '41 300w

Booklist 38:2 S '41

"This is an extremely significant book." J. D. Squires

+ Christian Century 58:982 Ag 6 '41 850w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:194 O '41 10w

"Certainly the project outlined here by Professor Heymann . . . is monumental, and to the reader of current headlines its realization would seem remote in the extreme. But no one may regard this war without constant thought and hope for its end, and with that there must be consideration and concentration now on the shape and organization of the world after the conflict. Professor Heymann is much less vague, when he looks into the future, than the majority of his contemporaries, what he gives in effect is a blue-print of a new democratic world order, more grandiose in conception than the League of Nations, since the plan embodies a United States of the universe. Because of inclination and training, the author's stress is on the economic, and he makes no apology for tempering his occasional idealistic stipulations with materialistic recommendations."

+ Living Age 360:390 Je '41 1200w

"By its very nature 'A Plan for Permanent Peace' very often slides into the conjectural and the nebulous. Sometimes it seems needlessly obscure, perhaps because of the author's language difficulties, though as a whole the book is readable."

+ — Springfield Republican p6 My 31 '41 900w

Reviewed by Theodore Abel

Survey G 30:533 O '41 490w

Wis Lib Bul 37:151 O '41

HEYNEMAN, ANNE. Whosit book; pictures by [the author]. [45p] $1.50 Scribner

41-17950

Story of the strange little animals called Whosits, with a family resemblance to the bears, and hands like mittens. They could manage most of their work except sewing—that was a problem. Then one day a family of humans wandered into their midst, and that makes the story.

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:371 D '41 60w

"A nonsense tale, good for a child with too much ego. . . . Amusing details in the illustrations will please children accustomed to the 'funnies.' For the primary grades." J. E. Wooster

+ Library J 66:1097 D 15 '41 60w

"Its value is doubtful." Miriam Snow

Library J 66:1097 D 15 '41 60w

"Tucked between the lines of this book is an engaging lesson in tolerance, but children will love it first for its pictures which exhibit in minute detail a lively and ingenious fancy. The Whosits are among those creatures which youth has never seen but which it firmly believes, at picture book age, could and should exist, and in this case one agrees heartily." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 D 7 '41 240w

"Little folks who can read will find their journey about Whositville, or maybe its Whositland, made easy by big clear type. For those unable yet to read, the many-colored pictures, to be found at every turn of the pages, are sure to fix attention, each to be surrendered only to the lure of another."

+ Springfield Republican p7e S 28 '41 100w

HIBBEN, MRS SHEILA. Kitchen manual. 231p $2.50 Duell

641.5 Cookery 41-25096

These essays on the art of cookery do not constitute a cookbook, but make "a book of secrets, a homily on the hang of the thing." In it the author of the New Yorker's Markets and Menus department considers such items as: Soup making; Poultry and game; An introduction to meat cookery.

Booklist 38:153 Ja 1 '42

"Her book is one of the most intelligent, quietly witty and consummately sensible treatises on modern kitchen behavior written in the last hundred years. Paul Reboux's brain and Marion Harland's common sense and the maltrise of Escoffier skip deftly through its too-few pages, all bowing respectfully to Brillat-Savarin's ubiquitous ghost as they do so, and the result is as suave and authoritative as one of the 'Manual's' own recipes." M. F. K. Fisher

+ Books p6 D 14 '41 700w

"The utility of this brief but comprehensive volume is equal to its charm, but it is, naturally enough, indispensable only to those to whom eating is a delight instead of a habit."

+ New Yorker 17:112 N 22 '41 70w

HIBBERT, MRS ELOISE TALCOTT. Embroidered gauze. 332p pl $3 Dutton [12s 6d Lane]

920.7 Women in China. China—Court and courtiers [38-23712]

"Recreates the life stories of a group of famous Chinese women who as wives, concubines, courtesans or Empresses attained power and left the imprint of their personalities, whether for good or evil, upon their times; and in these lives and their backgrounds appears a pageant of 2,500 years of Chinese history." (N Y Times) Index.

Books p7 Ag 17 '41 250w

HIBBERT, E. T.—Continued

"These lives, as told by Mrs. Hibbert, are well documented, but beyond this she has brought them to life with charm and poignancy, with drama and poetic feeling. So carried away is she with the color and fascination of the China of the Empire that she cannot reconcile herself to its passing, and dismisses in a sentence all that has happened since the fall of the Manchus as 'chaos . . . the Republic with all its accompanying miseries.' That the most recent years of China's great history can have meant so little to her is hard to believe." Anita Moffett

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 17 '41 480w

"A beguiling review, done with insight, charm, and distinction."

+ New Yorker 17:59 Ag 9 '41 30w

HICHENS, ROBERT SMYTHE. The million. 301p $2.50 Doubleday [7s 6d Cassell]

41-3121

Story of an irrepressible Englishwoman who won a million in a French lottery and spent it with abandon on a gay season in Cairo, where her million was believed to be in pounds sterling, instead of francs.

"One of Mr. Hichens's lighter excursions, 'The Million' doesn't give off many calories of excitement, but it is agreeably diverting." Lisle Bell

Books p15 F 16 '41 240w

"The author of 'The Garden of Allah' in a light mood is a good companion for a rainy evening." O. O.

+ Boston Transcript p3 F 15 '41 200w

"Mr. Hichens is miles removed from the pompous passion of 'The Garden of Allah' in this gay trifle, and he tells his little story with animation. . . The ancient plot, sudden wealth for Cinderella, is developed with ingenuity. The twists are not merely circumstantial but are the direct results of traits in our admirable heroine." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p21 F 9 '41 320w

Sat R of Lit 23:19 Mr 22 '41 190w

Times [London] Lit Sup p505 O 5 '40 330w

HICKS, JAMES ERNEST. What the citizen should know about our arms and weapons; il. by André Jandôt. 252p il $2.50 Norton

623.4 U.S.—Army—Ordnance and ordnance stores. Firearms (W) 41-51944

"The book includes chapters on pistols, rifles, machine guns, grenades and mortars, artillery of all types, tanks and combat vehicles and artillery ammunition and aircraft bombs. Each chapter traces development of the different weapons, with numerous drawings of old and new. A final chapter gives a much-needed description of the organization and activities of the ordnance department of the army." (Springf'd Republican) Index.

Booklist 38:74 N 1 '41

"Major Hicks, of the Army Ordnance Department, has prepared the most technical and in some respects the most absorbing, essay in [this] series. His interest is in guns of every variety, and to a discussion and description of them he devotes almost his entire effort. The approach is historical, with emphasis upon the gradual development of arms from the most primitive explosive employing weapon down to the destruction dealing implements of today. While the result is somewhat restricted, it will prove of genuine interest to the general reader as well as to the specialist. . . His book is a complete, accurate and even detailed summary of ordnance design, manufacture and employment during the last five centuries." P. J. Searles

+ Books p2 Ja 25 '42 650w

"In telling the 'ordinary citizen' what he ought to know about his country's arms and weapons, Major Hicks of the Army's Ordnance Department must write technically. But if this is a book which requires some study, it offers the reward of keen interest, too."

+ N Y Times p39 N 23 '41 230w

"The author, Maj James E. Hicks of the ordnance department, does a first-class job of explaining in nontechnical language what the army is going to fight with if it has to fight." G. K. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p10 N 6 '41 180w

HICKS, JOHN DONALD. American nation; a history of the United States from 1865 to the present. 788p il maps $3.50 Houghton

973 U.S.—History

41-1888

"This volume covering American history from 1865 to the present, follows after The Federal Union [Book Review Digest, 1937] the two making a complete 2-volume history of the United States since its founding. The record picks up with The problems of the South, is carried on through chapters on Reconstruction, the Grant regime, A business cycle, American society during the depression [of 1865-80]; and so on down to The New deal in action, and Politics at home and abroad, in the present crisis. There is a bibliography of 51 pages and a comprehensive index." Wis Lib Bul

Reviewed by Preston Slosson

Am Hist R 47:162 O '41 250w

Booklist 37:489 Je 15 '41

"The book is based on the courses which Professor Hicks gave for eighteen years although it may not be designed as one of those textbooks, which he humorously says he has forced his students to buy and which 'he himself out of a distressing sense of duty felt obliged occasionally to read.' Never having been a teacher I do not know how well the work may be adapted for that purpose, even if so intended, but it is a well-rounded history of our country for any reader and is particularly valuable in coming down to within a few weeks almost of the present moment." J. T. Adams

+ Sat R of Lit 23:16 Mr 29 '41 320w

"The book is attractive in format and is well-supplied with illustrations and maps." D. L. McMurry

+ Social Educ 5:389 My '41 1000w

"The style of writing is always adequate and frequently excellent. The book reads easily, even when it is most factual. It deserves the wide sale which it undoubtedly will have." R. E. Riegel

+ Social Studies 32:184 Ap '41 550w

Wis Lib Bul 37:53 Mr '41

HICKY, DANIEL WHITEHEAD. Wild heron. 75p $2 Harper

811

40-35053

Fourth collection of lyrics by an American poet from Georgia. "From the Old World and the New and the coastal islands of his own state, Georgia, Daniel Whitehead Hicky has drawn themes for this new volume of verse, memorable for its sensitive observation and its deep lyricism." (Publisher's note)

"Mr. Hicky's lyric technique is still uneven; but the volume as a whole represents a distinct advance in variety and workmanship over his earlier poems."

+ Books p18 Mr 23 '41 120w

Cath World 153:374 Je '41 320w

"A new volume that will appeal to those poetry lovers who like traditional verse is 'Wild Heron.' . . Mr. Hicky is concerned for the most part with natural and romantic subjects. He seldom ventures beyond the established approach to poetic expression, but within those limits he contrives to be fresh and at times even moving." John Ritchey

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 N 23 '40 180w

"The general effect of 'Wild Heron' is better than any single effect. One has the impression throughout of a sensitive observer of nature by way of a cultured and informed mind. . . . In spots there are variants of Housman. But, in effect, the impression is of a fresh and personal insight into nature and the mind, and it is a pleasant one." P. M. Jack

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 23 '41 90w

Wis Lib Bul 37:73 Ap '41

HIGH, STANLEY, and others. See Faith for today

HILL, FRANK ERNEST, and WILLIAMS, WILLIAM EMRYS. Radio's listening groups; the United States and Great Britain. 270p $2.75 Columbia Univ. press

371.333 Radio in education. Education of adults. Group work 41-11928

Attempts to gather information about radio listening groups in the United States and abroad. Part one is on the methods used, the difficulties met, and discoveries about listeners in the United States. Part two is about group listening in Great Britain and other European countries. Index.

"This excellent book merits the attention of all who are seriously interested in the public-service aspects of broadcasting; not because the subject matter may have any direct bearing on their problems, but mainly by reason of the thoughts which it is certain to stimulate. Viewed as a piece of scholarly research, the book is above the ordinary." H. S. Hettinger

+ Ann Am Acad 218:239 N '41 600w

Booklist 38:46 O 15 '41

School & Society 54:48 Jl 19 '41 30w

HILL, MRS GRACE (LIVINGSTON). By way of the Silverthorns. 287p $2 Lippincott 41-3422

"The Silverthorn brother and sister were the quietest, most dignified and well-behaved young people at the wedding. . . . Though they were so devout . . . they were not immediately rewarded with earthly as well as heavenly joys. Link, the brother, had to deal with some unpleasant creatures who threatened to hurt his beloved sister. He reformed one of the odious girls to such an extent that she eventually became part of the family group, but the other was past help and faded out of the picture." N Y Times

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p18 F 23 '41 80w

"Threats of jail and blackmail are the most exciting events of this simple tale. It is mostly in a quaint and placid vein, with three happy romances." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p28 Mr 2 '41 200w

HILL, MRS GRACE (LIVINGSTON). In tune with wedding bells. 304p $2 Lippincott 41-9966

"It seems that Reuben Remington couldn't decide how to spend his vacation. Should he combine business with pleasure and visit some of the nation's great bridges and other engineering achievements? Or should he be lured to a house party as the guest of his boss's daughter? Then one of the girls in the office keeled over from undernourishment and Reuben's problem was solved. He promised to look after Gillian's five-year-old brother while she was in the hospital." Books

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p10 Jl 6 '41 90w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p22 Je 29 '41 250w

HILL, MABEL BETSY. A day with Mopsy. [63p] il $1 Stokes

41-18354

Short story for very young readers, about an exciting day in the country, when Sally and her little dog Mopsy, went to visit at grandfather's farm.

"It makes good practice for a beginner in reading." M. L. Becker

+ Books p9 D 14 '41 20w

"This small, pocket-size book with pictures on every page will appeal to the pre-school children, especially those who like dogs. It is not important, however, and is expensive." J. E. Stromdahl

Library J 66:678 Ag '41 60w

HILLIARD, ALEC ROWLEY. Justice be damned. 312p $2 Farrar

41-9496

Mystery story.

Booklist 38:36 O 1 '41

Bookmark 2:18 N '41

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p10 Je 22 '41 200w

"Less skillfully handled, the complications of this story might be burdensome. With this new author's clear narrative, shrewd observation and dry wit, 'Justice Be Damned' swings at once into the top rank of mystery novels, and its originality puts it in a special little niche of its own." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p17 Je 22 '41 270w

"This mystery is by no means a mere day-by-day account of a trial but a beautifully written novel, exciting and plausible."

+ New Yorker 17:80 Je 21 '41 60w

"Admirable."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:15 Jl 5 '41 40w

Time 38:72 Jl 7 '41 40w

HILLMAN, GORDON MALHERBE. Fortune's cup. 320p $2.50 Crowell

41-19309

The story of the development of callow, selfish youth into fine, responsible manhood. Larry Evans' son, Stan, was the apple of his eye and when Stan was expelled from college Larry got him a job on the newspaper on which he was the dramatic editor. It took some time and some rude jolts from fate before Stan came to appreciate the job and, more importantly, his own father.

"A warming and persuasive history. . . Mr. Hillman is at home in a newspaper office, and gives you a vivid account of how the wheels go round in a city room. The incidental figures—the girl on the staff who is popular with the reporters because she is always good for a loan, the editorial writer who never has the hangover he deserves, the office gossip—are colorfully sketched. The father-and-son relationship is the essence of the story, however, and it is presented with genuine feeling." Lisle Bell

+ Books p15 S 14 '41 320w

Christian Century 58:1146 S 17 '41 30w

"'Fortune's Cup' is an understanding study of the barriers which separate, always and stubbornly, one generation from the next. It has, in the reticent relationship between Larry Evans and Lee Starrett, a pleasant and believable romance. But it is in the picture of the rather cubbish and commonplace Stan that it approaches real distinction. No one has rendered a better picture than Mr. Hillman gives us here of what the American college does to a fair section of American collegiate youth, and with what difficulty the costly work is later undone." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p22 S 14 '41 490w

Spring'd Republican p7e O 5 '41 60w

Wis Lib Bul 37:201 D '41

HILTON, JAMES. Random harvest. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 327p $2.50 Little

(W) 41-51508

Charles Rainier, an upper-class English business man, and a member of Parliament, with a clever wife and large city and country homes, has, nevertheless, a shadow over his past. There are three years of his life which are perfectly blank—from the time when he was hit by a shell in the World war, until he waked up on a Liverpool park bench in 1919. The story of Rainier's ceaseless efforts to recapture those blank years is told partly by Rainier himself, partly by his secretary. The book closes in 1939, on the eve of the second war, with Rainier in possession of the complete story of his own life.

Booklist 37:241 F 1 '41

Bookmark 2:13 Mr '41

"'Random Harvest' is a genial story, written with suppleness and humor, yet with a curious detachment. It is closer in tone to Rose Macaulay's and H. G. Wells's novels of the last war than it is to Mr. Hilton's own 'Lost Horizon' and 'Good Bye, Mr. Chips.'" F. H. Bullock

+ Books p3 Ja 26 '41 750w

"'Random Harvest' has been written with the same imaginative art that made 'Good-bye, Mr. Chips' such a moving story. It has back of it all the beauty and creative energy that went into the building of Shangri-La and the writing of 'Lost Horizon.' Actually it falls between those two. It is, probably, greater than 'Lost Horizon' because it deals with events that are real; real not in the sense that they have actually happened, but that they could so easily have happened." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ja 25 '41 650w

Reviewed by L. A. MacKay

Canadian Forum 21:27 Ap '41 380w

"No wonder that this book, little more than a month old, has already climbed high on the list of best-sellers. It has just about everything needed to make a novel popular: charm, romance, reality and fascination."

+ Cath World 152:766 Mr '41 120w

Christian Century 58:327 Mr 5 '41 280w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 15 '41 550w

"Those who are interested in any one of a half dozen war problems, 'shell-shock', the changing social order, and a good love story will like this book immensely. Above all, it is a good story just for the joy of it." G. F. Taylor

+ Churchman 155:39 Mr '41 120w

Commonweal 33:476 F 28 '41 40w

Reviewed by A. L. Graham

Library J 66:32 Ja 1 '41 140w

"The story is full of people who are credible and alive, including Rainier's enigmatic butler, Sheldon, who has an intuitive understanding of both personalities, and it is told with sympathy and humour."

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 3 '41 320w

Reviewed by L. B. Salomon

Nation 152:219 F 22 '41 300w

"The whole thing is overlaid with the not unpleasant but faintly mauve sentimentalism of Mr. Hilton. But there are still many good moments. You get pretty excited over those three years, for instance, and the story moves right along, with never a dull page. The scenes of Rainier's life with the English music-hall troupe are excellent and involve some of the most likable characters in the book." Muriel Burns

+ New Repub 104:380 Mr 17 '41 390w

"'Random Harvest' is, as a whole, so good a book that one forgets its minor flaws. It is Rainier who makes the tale and he is completely real and convincing." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 26 '41 900w

"The yarn is full of clever things. . . Hilton the moralist (he is a moralist) interests me rather less than Hilton the plot-maker. There are certainly very few writers as sheerly ingenious as he is, or as able to cut out and put together the complex jigsaw-puzzle kind of story of which 'Random Harvest' is so good an example. His storytelling capacity shows no sign of diminution and, for me, that's enough." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 16:68 Ja 25 '41 410w

Pratt p11 autumn '41

"In criticism we must enter these demurrers: First, about half of Part Two, concerned with the Rainier family, seemed to us tedious because the family were dull parasites. When after this, the story finally got going it held us to the end. This reviewer's main objection, however, resides in the arguable matter of recognition of identity. . . Marriage is a very intimate matter. And all we will say is that, to us, credulity is stretched pretty far in this book." W. R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 23:6 Ja 25 '41 550w

"People who enjoy the technique of the detective novel may enjoy this search for three years that are missing from the life of a successful financier and Member of Parliament, &c., &c. But others will find Random Harvest a bore; the characters are mostly dim, or high-minded, the plot implausible and unimportant. Of course, in time Charles Rainier does fill in the blanks—the missing years are by far the most interesting pages of a dullish novel—and, of course, it is his own true wife, who, with the aid of the traditional butler, has guarded him all the time. Though why they should have gone to such extreme lengths is a problem that the reader must solve for himself."

+ Spec 167:366 O 10 '41 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p469 S 20 '41 1150w

Wis Lib Bul 37:55 Mr '41

"Random Harvest is better in the reading than in the remembering of it, for at the end, when the elaborately prepared trap is sprung, and one looks back at the clues one didn't see, one realizes one didn't see them because Mr. Hilton, in his effort to conceal them, committed such implausibilities that he must have been deceiving himself too as well as trying to deceive the reader." Robert Littell

+ Yale R n s 30:xii spring '41 130w

HINCHMAN, WALTER SWAIN. England; a short account of its life and culture. 410p il $3.50 Little

942 Great Britain—History. Great Britain—Civilization 41-20774

Short cultural history of the English people in which only enough political and economic history is included to form a background for the study of literature, the theater, science, architecture, customs, and amusements. Short bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:110 D 1 '41

"The author has chosen his material well and has written both vigorously and entertainingly." J. B. Fogg

+ Library J 66:730 S 1 '41 80w

"An excellent and readable compilation, though some of the judgments are rather conventional."

+ New Yorker 17:99 O 18 '41 50w

"To compress into 398 pages the long story of England from the ancient Britons until today is a remarkably ambitious undertaking; and whether or not the truth has been properly served in this book is a question which each reader must, eventually, decide for himself. Mr. Hinchman is a most agreeable writer, who examines his vast scene with the eye of a man of letters rather than of a professional historian, and who is moreover a conservative. His narrative, though it is an ordered and inclusive condensation, has somewhat the appearance of an anthology of events. The whole thing looks just a little too easy." George Dangerfield

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:23 N 8 '41 600w

Reviewed by Garrett Mattingly

Sat R of Lit 24:19 D 27 '41 270w

HINDUS, MAURICE GERSCHON. Hitler cannot conquer Russia. 299p $2 Doubleday

947.084 Russia. World war, 1939—Russia. Communism—Russia (W) 41-21021

When the Nazi-Bolshevik pact was signed in 1939, Maurice Hindus cabled from Russia to his American publisher for permission to write a book on the coming German-Russian war. His suggestion was not accepted. Now that the war is an accomplished fact he has written about its possible outcome. He argues that even if the Germans take all the main Russian cities, and disrupt the army, they will be unable to conquer the Russian peasant, with his fanatical love of his Matushka zemlin—little mother earth. He maintains that the Russians will carry on a kind of guerrilla warfare for years if necessary.

Booklist 38:93 N 15 '41

"The present book suffers to some extent from hasty organization. Nevertheless, it has the sinews of a strong argument. It takes account of the bloody political oppression, of the hardships and the unhappiness, which have been the lot of the Soviet citizen. But it also takes account of the new cohesion, the awakened sense of individual importance and dignity, and the crusading determination which has come out of those tribulations." J. B. Phillips

+ — Books p6 S 28 '41 950w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:384 Ja '42 40w

Reviewed by Joachim Joesten

Nation 154:98 Ja 24 '42 1000w

"While Mr. Hindus's book, like all his writing, is vivid and colorful and conveys some interesting close-ups on the thinking and the way of life of Russia's younger generation, it impresses this reviewer as a little too sweeping and dogmatic in giving the Soviet Union the best of all the many doubtful points that have been raised by the German invasion." W. H. Chamberlin

+ — N Y Times p9 O 12 '41 1800w

"One hardly knows what to say of Maurice Hindus' fervent 'Hitler Cannot Conquer Russia.' At this writing it appears one of the most ill-timed books in the annals of publishing, but perhaps in a year or two, or ten, it may seem a miracle of accurate prophecy. . . Mr. Hindus, of course, unlike the newspaper pundits, is writing not off the top of his head but out of intimate acquaintance with his subject. He may prove wrong, but his arguments are closely woven and not too obviously vitiated by wishful thinking." Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 17:86 O 4 '41 200w

"Many perhaps will think that in calling his book 'Hitler Cannot Conquer Russia,' Maurice Hindus has stuck his neck out. Perhaps he has. Time will tell. But in the meantime here in this book are marshalled most of the facts which explain the 'miracle' of the present Russian resistance and why a man as sincere and as expert on Russia as is Mr. Hindus believes that at long last Hitler has bitten more than he bargained for." W. L. Shirer

+ Sat R of Lit 24:8 O 4 '41 1300w

Spring'd Republican p6 O 11 '41 950w

Reviewed by Alexander Kaun

Survey G 30:707 D '41 300w

"Compounded of old facts and of new or recaptured emotions, Mr. Hindus's latest book is better calculated to strengthen emotions than to scatter enlightenment. Mr. Hindus is at his best when he paints, with his usual talent, pen-pictures of the Soviet village or of Soviet people. Much of what he says of the new type of Soviet intellectual, of the spirit and hopes of the workers, and of the newer generation of collectivized peasants, is both truthful and significant, and cannot be said often enough if it is to be understood outside Russia." P. E. Mosely

Yale R n s 31:394 winter '42 1050w

HINDUS, MAURICE GERSCHON. To sing with the angels. 586p $2.75 Doubleday

(W) 41-980

The scene of the story is a small village in the Czechoslovakia that was. To this happy, thriving little community, proud of its achievements in the brief years of the republic, come the invading Nazis with Jozhka, son of the town's one German family, as commissar. The tale of the nazification of Liptowitz, and the resulting tragedies in the lives of its inhabitants is told in moving detail.

"A fine novel, quiet and restrained, yet very dramatic." R. M. G.

+ Atlantic Ap '41 220w

Booklist 37:292 Mr 1 '41

Bookmark 2:14 My '41

"This is a long, plain, deeply human novel. . . The story maintains, for all the disruption and uprootedness of the era, an internal continuity, a balance between that which is passing, the ruthless violation and the senseless havoc, and that which is eternal. Liptowitz suffers the fate of all Czech towns; but as we watch it over the long months in this novel so rich in details, see it close up, follow every step of its degradation as the grip tightens and the relentless despoilers slowly strangle it to its knees, we see also that it is not being conquered, that a terrible increasing hatred is being stifled within, that the conquest is as superficial as it was unprovoked and violent." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p5 Ja 26 '41 1000w

"It does not really matter whether Maurice Hindus has written a good, bad, or indifferent story in 'To Sing with the Angels.' He is using the novel form merely as the best means of conveying a message. . . Mr. Hindus is pleading the case of Czecho-Slovakia with all the eloquence he can muster and with a special knowledge of Czech customs and temperament." Margaret Clark

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 25 '41 360w

"Bearing in mind that this is a propaganda novel, written for the purpose of presenting a particular point of view, and that the author does not hesitate to resort to a considerable amount of sensationalism to strengthen his case, it's still a remarkably fine story, calculated to stir up your loves, your hates and your prejudices and to hold your interest from the first to the last page." Kay Montague

+ Canadian Forum 21:60 My '41 300w

Cath World 153:121 Ap '41 290w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '41

"'To Sing With The Angels' is a book that must arouse strong contemporary interest. It is a book that might even have been great, if it had not been seriously marred by sensationalism and an imperfect understanding of Catholicism. But what it has to say about Hitlerism is apparently important." W. J. Grace

+ — Commonweal 33:499 Mr 7 '41 600w

"A most timely and intensely interesting tale, but at times it seems a little prolonged." Margaret Winning

+ — Library J 66:32 Ja 1 '41 150w

Reviewed by L. B. Bloch

Living Age 359:590 F '41 130w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 O 3 '41 110w

Nation 152:537 My 3 '41 120w

"Mr. Hindus is primarily a journalist, and his style is descriptive rather than dramatic. His dialogue is often dull and lengthy, and it seems to me that the book has been written much too fast and that some careful editing might have done it a great deal of good. In his love for the people he writes about and in his will to fight for them Mr. Hindus may have come to the conclusion that it is what you say that counts and not so much the way you say it. And so there are many ashes left by the burning fire of the author's good intentions. If they had been removed the fire would have been much brighter."

HINDUS, M. G.—Continued

Klaus Lambrecht

New Repub 104:541 Ap 21 '41 600w

"Here is a narrative that holds you breathless with its sheer power, with the unlagging intensity of its drama, with its sense of truth expressed simply and clearly." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 26 '41 1250w

"One of the few novels of contemporary Europe that seem more real than the daily paper."

+ New Yorker 16:70 Ja 25 '41 180w

Pratt p10 spring '41

"Its characters are sharply etched, they breathe the real air of the Czech hills. The suspense of the plot is sustained, and the language of the book is both beautiful and real. The world drama is part of the plot, enhancing rather than reducing its poignancy. The great reputation of Hindus as a political writer should not be held against him as a novelist. He is as good in his new field as he was in the other one. And he is a novelist, not merely a political writer in disguise." Emil Lengyel

+ Sat R of Lit 23:5 Ja 25 '41 700w

Reviewed by Kate O'Brien

Spec 167:388 O 17 '41 600w

Springf'd Republican p7e F 16 '41 700w

"Mr. Hindus's novel is about Czechoslovakia and its people since just before Munich. It is written, as we should expect, with knowledge and sympathy, but unfortunately with very little of the novelist's power. Despite all that he feels and has witnessed and has heard, what he has actually written is sentimental, improbable and—this, after all, is the worst—rather wearisome to read."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p493 O 4 '41 290w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 30:xiv spring '41 40w

HINMAN, CHAUNCEY WEED. Pressworking of metals. 443p il $4 McGraw

621.984 Dies (metal working). Pressing machinery. Sheet metal work 41-4107

"A reference book illustrating and describing practical applications of the principles used in the design of punches and dies." (Subtitle) "This book is a more comprehensive treatment of the information contained in a series of thirty articles that appeared in The American Machinist in 1938 and 1939. The number of illustrations and the length of the text have been doubled." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 37:354 Ap 1 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:46 Jl '41

Pratt p10 autumn '41

HISS, PHILIP HANSON. Bali; photographs by the author. 112p $4.50 Duell

919.2 Bali (island). Photographic books

41-52068

Account of Bali and its people, illustrated with large full page photographs. The author-photographer visited the island under the auspices of the Riverside Museum, and the government of the Netherlands Indies officially recognized him. Contents: The history of Bali; The government of Bali; The people of Bali; Religion and festivals; Music, dance, and drama; Art and architecture; The Balinese art of living.

Booklist 38:176 Ja 15 '42

"A captivating and authentic picture of just what Bali is and is not. . . . Mr. Hiss, a thoughtful writer and sensitive photographer, wonders that such a place as Bali, with its communal society, can exist. To have lived there, he says, is to have looked at life with other eyes. That man can live in peace and harmony with man is an inspiration. If it has been done once, he mildly opines, it can be done again." R. F. Crandell

+ Books p7 D 14 '41 700w

"Mr. Hiss is an expert, artistic photographer, and the many photographs show his ability to interpret the genius of the Balinese. Recommended." E. A. Olcott

+ Library J 66:1046 D 1 '41 100w

HITCH, CHARLES JOHNSTON. America's economic strength. 114p il map $1 (2s 6d) Oxford

330.973 U.S.—Economic conditions. U.S.—Industries and resources. World war, 1939—Economic aspects 41-8268

Description of the American economy from the point of view of its possible mobilization strength for war. Contents: Background; Natural resources; Manufacturing industry; War industries; Depression and new deal; War; America and the British empire. Index.

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:199 O '41 10w

Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 7 '41 50w

Springf'd Republican p12 S 12 '41 950w

"Mr. Hitch's task relatively, is of necessity a somewhat pedestrian one, but, save as its comments on the problems of American aid to Britain have been modified or put out of date by the passing of the Lease and Lend Bill, his book will enforce attention by its relevance to our present war needs and hopes, and within its narrower and drabber limits it is extremely well done, and has much more than immediate war interest."

Times [London] Lit Sup sup ix Ap 5 '41 220w

HITLER, ADOLF. My new order; ed. with commentary, by Raoul de Roussy de Sales; with an introd. by Raymond Gram Swing. 1008p $3 Reynal

943.085 Germany—Nazi movement. World war, 1939—Germany (W) 41-15818

"Such speeches and such fragments as will enable the reader to have a complete picture of Hitler's doctrine and to follow his rise to power and the expansion of his domination over Europe. . . Each chapter is preceded by an explanatory comment, and a running chronology of world events places each speech against its proper background. Most speeches are followed by comments from the world press." (Foreword) The speeches cover the time from his early Munich speeches of 1922, to his attempted justification of the breaking of his treaty with Russia, delivered on June 22, 1941. Indexes.

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

Atlantic N '41 200w

Booklist 38:33 O 1 '41

Bookmark 2:10 N '41

"This is more than just a collection of speeches by the World's Greatest Maniac. M. de Sales, with fine understanding, has explained the background of Hitler's spectacular rise and Europe's tragic fall as the story unfolds in Hitler's own torrid words. This background material is superbly presented and, moreover, is objective. It helps to put each Hitlerian utterance in its proper perspective, as does the running chronology of world events, with names, places and dates, which precedes each speech." W. L. Shirer

Books p1 Ag 24 '41 1350w

Cath World 154:126 O '41 130w

"This compilation of Hitler's speeches from 1922 to June 1941 is the natural and inevitable companion volume to Mein Kampf. Devotees of the St. John's College idea of getting education at first hand by reading the epoch-making books will not need exhortation to give attention to this as source material for the history of the past twenty years."

Christian Century 58:1177 S 24 '41 240w

"My New Order is a necessary companion piece to Mein Kampf. It is actually the record of Mein Kampf in action. The role that religion is to play in a Nazi civilization is abundantly explained," W. C. Kernan

Churchman 155:21 O 1 '41 420w

Reviewed by Liam O'Connor

Commonweal 35:76 N 7 '41 420w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:382 Ja '42 70w

"'My New Order' confesses nothing, states nothing candidly, and most of its prophecies are deliberate lies. . . [It] falls somewhere between these two audiences, the specialized and the general. Historians are already complaining that it fails to include many passages they regard as essential. For the public, however, it is much too long and repetitious. Few will struggle to the end of it, and those who do may find that they have lost more than they have learned." Malcolm Cowley

— New Repub 105:313 S 8 '41 1450w

"The reader will naturally find the speeches confusing and the commentary intelligible. Herr Hitler has insisted that the economy on which his 'new order' reposes is one in which 'capital' has been supplanted by 'work.' This declaration suggests, at any rate, a commentary on his style. In 'Mein Kampf' and the addresses every principle of the older European rhetoric has been discarded—clear statement of topics, lucid presentation of the substantiating evidence, resolute criticism of opposing views. For these things there have been substituted processes which transform instincts into convictions, passions into arguments, with a sort of somnambulistic dialectic which deceives no one and yet misleads nearly all. The reasons which compel us of the present to be concerned seriously with this prose are, unfortunately, reasons of life and death. Yet even if this were not so the study of Hitler's propagandistic method would be absorbing." G. N. Shuster

N Y Times p1 Ag 24 '41 800w

"I recommend it to the appeasers. I do not see how any intelligent citizen can read it carefully without seeing that Hitler's aim is world slavery, that he intends to use Europe and the British Isles merely as a base of operations from which to take off for the real prize, America. . . Taken at their face value, Hitler's speeches are an extraordinary amalgam of lies, bestiality, cunning, and occasional apocalyptic flashes of real social vision. They are formless, vulgar, repetitious, clamorous. They are more like cheer-leading than anything else, full of the same obsessed fanaticism and eliciting the same infantile response. But they are, nevertheless, the productions of the greatest misguider of men in the world's history, and they deserve the closest study." Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 17:65 Ag 23 '41 270w

Pratt p23 D '41

"It is a book which had to be done. It is not a book which one will read through in an hour or two like a murder story or a fascinating personal account. One will want to have it on his bookshelves for reference so that he can check Hitler's words against his deeds. In it are found hundreds of contradictions, broken promises, distortions, lies, mean vilifications—all weapons developed by a master of psychological warfare who deliberately deceived his people and his enemies." H. B. Kranz

Sat R of Lit 24:6 O 4 '41 550w

Spring'd Republican p7e Ag 31 '41 1150w

Time 38:68 S 8 '41 310w

Wis Lib Bul 37:176 N '41

Reviewed by Hartley Simpson

Yale R n s 31:414 winter '42 1000w

HOAG, C. LEONARD. Preface to preparedness; the Washington disarmament conference and public opinion. 205p $3; pa $2.50 Am. council on public affairs

341.1 Washington, D.C. Conference on the limitation of armament, 1921-1922. Disarmament

"A study of the disarmament conference of 1922 and the presuppositions upon which it was based, chief among which—and a fallacious assumption, in the author's view—was that the probability of war is in proportion to armaments." Christian Century

Christian Century 58:1380 N 5 '41 40w

"Prof Hoag has not attempted a history of the conference or an evaluation of it as a factor in international relations. His thesis, rather, is to study the variously expressed national will, and to trace the development of that will, of which the conference was the product. This is a task demanding great industry and research and Prof Hoag has discharged it with scholarly fidelity. It is also a task of large historical importance and significance."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e D 7 '41 900w

HOBBS, GLENN MOODY, and MCKINNEY, JAMES. Practical mathematics; rev. by J. Ralph Dalzell. 599p $2.40 Am. tech. soc. [15s Tech. press]

510 Mathematics (W) 40-31158

"Presenting the principles of arithmetic, equations, formulas, mensuration, graphs, and logarithms, by a simple step-by-step method, for vocational and home-study students, shop men, etc.' The publishers state that this textbook is extensively revised and enlarged by 145 pages." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1933.

Booklist 37:119 N 15 '40

N Y New Tech Bks 25:48 O '40

HOBBS, WILLIAM HERBERT. Explorers of the Antarctic. 334p il $3 House of Field

923.9 Explorers. Antarctic regions 42-1433

"[Presents] the most salient features of the lives of thirteen famous explorers of the Antarctic. Realizing that he could not include all who had ventured to the cold South, [the author] chose five Britishers, including two Australians, four Americans, and one from France, Germany, Norway, and Sweden. . . With the exception of the Americans, Palmer and Wilkes, with whose stories the book opens, all the names belong to the present generation, and, with the single exception of Scott, they have all been personally well known to the author. Shackleton, most intrepid of Antarctic leaders; David, the discoverer of the South Magnetic Pole; Priestly, veteran of Scott's northern party; and Amundsen, discoverer of the South Pole, are treated in sequence after the story of Scott, 'whose loss moved a world.' Then came the Swedish Nordenskjöld, explorer of Eastern Palmer Land; the German von Drygalski; Charcot, the gallant Frenchman of 'Pourquoi Pas?' fame about whom a book has recently been written, and Mawson the Australian explorer of Wilkes' band." Scientific Bk Club R

"A very readably informative book."

+ N Y Times p3 J1 6 '41 500w

"Professor Hobbs, himself a geologist and an Arctic explorer of note, is also well known for his ability to write crystal clear prose. . . In the present book he has done an admirable piece of work. . . Much research is behind these sketches, each a gem of lucid condensation and accuracy."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:4 Je '41 400w

HOBSON, MRS LAURA Z. A dog of his own; pictures by Jane Miller. [40p] $1 Viking

41-4811

Picture-story book about a little boy who wished for a dog of his own. Thanks to a very foolish aunt, he soon found himself the owner of not one, but ten. The ensuing complications required some manipulation.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p8 Mr 30 '41 200w

Reviewed by Gertrude Andrus

Library J 66:223 Mr 1 '41 50w

"There is nothing definitely objectionable about the story, but it seems to me the sort of second-rate book that any library can well afford to do without. . . Not recommended." E. S. Mullan

— Library J 66:223 Mr 1 '41 50w

New Yorker 17:86 My 24 '41 60w

Time 37:103 Ap 7 '41 190w

Wis Lib Bul 37:79 Ap '41

HOCKETT, HOMER CAREY. Political and social growth of the American people, 1492-1865. 3d ed 861p il maps $3.25 Macmillan 973 U.S.—History. U.S.—Politics and government (W) 40-32507

"Instead of stopping as formerly at 1852 this history has been extended to 1865; some early history has been condensed and much of the book is rewritten." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:119 N 15 '40

"This is the third and revised edition of what has become one of the most popular of college textbooks on American history. The new edition will certainly do nothing to detract from that reputation. . . The new edition maintains the clear flowing style that helped so much to build up the popularity of Professor Hockett's text. The new format and the addition of illustrations make it a volume which it is a pleasure to behold." William Diamond

+ Social Educ 5:152 F '41 300w

HODGE, WILLIAM VALLANCE DOUGLAS.

The theory and applications of harmonic integrals. 282p $4.50 Macmillan [21s Cambridge] 517.3 Integrals A41-2542

"Prof. Hodge's lectures and papers have already given some idea of the scope his work would have, as well as of the origin of the line of research of which this book is the first important monument. It is in effect an attempt to generalize in a very wide way that aspect of the study of functions (such as Abelian integrals) on a Riemann surface which consists in treating the real and imaginary parts separately, and adjoining to the integrability condition a second differential condition which ensures that the two functions considered are in fact the real and imaginary parts of an analytic function." Nature

Reviewed by Patrick Du Val

Nature 148:97 Jl 26 '41 950w

"For the mathematician interested in such things the book will probably be of great interest, but by most physicists it will be left to the mathematicians." W. V. Houston

R of Scientific Instruments 12:493 O '41 300w

HODGES, JOHN CUNYUS. Harbrace handbook of English. 424p $1.25 Harcourt

808 English language—Composition and exercises. English language—Grammar

41-9051

"This is a practical and efficient handbook of English. The number of rules and categories has been greatly reduced, and the categories themselves are placed in seven sections: grammar, mechanics, punctuation, spelling, diction, effectiveness in the sentence, and larger elements such as letters and term papers. An effort has been made to make any part of the handbook quickly available, and a complete Index and Table of Contents aid materially in this purpose. An average of six drill sentences are given for every rule, making a total of 1,132 drill sentences in all. The sentences themselves are taken from student themes, and the topics are designed to cover errors commonly made by college Freshmen." Library Q

"The type page is clear and the makeup of the book is likewise designed for efficient use. Diagrams are given in appropriate places, and the rules are concisely and clearly stated."

+ Library Q 11:531 O '41 100w

School & Society 53:584 My 3 '41 10w

HOFFMAN, CHARLES HAGUE. Somewhere I'll find you. 258p $2 Knopf

41-6655

The romantic adventures of two brothers, ace newspaper reporters, and the millionaire wife of one of them. Their trips to Ethiopia, Spain, China, and Berlin—wherever a war calls—are complicated further by a beautiful newspaper woman, whom both brothers have loved.

"Written in a style suited to its turbulent pattern—staccato in dialogue, sparing in introspection." Lisle Bell

+ Books p15 My 18 '41 280w

"Mr. Hoffman is too shrewd to harrow you except very briefly, keeping close to his line of hard-boiled love, labor and laughter. It will be interesting to see what he does next." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p10 Ag 17 '41 170w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 8 '41 120w

HOFFMAN, PAUL. Country Christmas; il. by Henry C. Pitz. 38p 50c Knopf

41-20887

Short story which records an unusual outdoor Christmas eve party, in a village near Wiscasset, Maine.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 D 14 '41 70w

"There's the tang of the winter woods in this community celebration held within the close circle of light where bonfires flamed, where a huge tree with candles glowed, and where friendliness re-created the beauty and spirit of Christmas. Of 'stocking' size, this book is a gift for varying ages (over 12) and one whose sincerity and simple prose make it good for reading aloud." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 D 11 '41 160w

Reviewed by Beatrice Sherman

N Y Times p25 D 14 '41 30w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 21 '41 60w

HOFFMAN, RUTH (MRS DOUGLAS C. M. BROOKS), and HOFFMAN, HELEN. Little Arab Ali; il. by the authors. 48p $1 Lippincott

41-16896

"Ali was a little Arabian boy who lived in a tent in the middle of the desert. Like all other boys he had ambitions to be a hero. His chance came one day on his customary trip to the pasture with the camel herd, when he managed to thwart the enemy bandits attempting to steal the tribe's camels." Library J

"A story well and truly told." M. L. Becker

+ Books p11 N 2 '41 160w

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:377 D '41 130w

"The book is well written and illustrated. . . Excellent to read aloud. Ages seven to nine." Elizabeth Babcock

+ Library J 66:846 O 1 '41 60w

"There is vigor and freshness in this tale of an Arab boy's adventure in the desert, and a kind of disarming comradeship which seems to say to youngsters that Bedouin ways are truly strange, but understandable and quite nice, once you know what they are about." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p33 N 2 '41 180w

HOFFMAN, WILLIAM GEORGE. Public speaking today. (Whittlesey house publication) 355p $2.75 McGraw

808.5 Public speaking (W) 40-33743

Practical textbook on the methods of preparing good speeches, which includes suggested topics and examples of modern speeches. Partial contents: Getting confidence; What is good speaking? The equipment of the speaker; What to talk about; Organizing the speech; On the platform; An inspirational speech; How to conduct a meeting; On the radio; How to improve your voice. Index.

Booklist 37:150 D 15 '40

"As complete as it is thorough, student and practitioner will find a wealth of instructive and informative data in this approach to the art of self expression." L. L. Martinson

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 8 '41 30w

HOFFMANN, MRS IRENE BOTSFORD. The book of herb cookery. 251p $2.50 Houghton

641.5 Cookery. Herbs (W) 40-35064

The president of the Berkshire garden center writes of herbs used in cookery, giving first an alphabetical list of fifty herbs, with their botanical names, and the uses made of each part of the plant. The recipes are for herb teas, punches, and wines, as well as for the use of herbs in cooking soups, fish, meat and poultry, entrées, vegetables, salads, etc. Index.

Booklist 37:213 Ja 15 '41

"Here is another good cookbook. It is comprehensive in scope and it will be of use to any one who wants to set a good table, is willing to take a little trouble to do so, and appreciates the need for good ingredients. Not the least interesting thing about the book is the quality of gracious living which is reflected throughout its pages and creeps into its recipes." H. T. Hilles

+ Books p13 Ja 19 '41 160w

Pratt p14 spring '41

Spring'd Republican p10 D 19 '40 260w

Wis Lib Bul 37:52 Mr '41

HOFFMEISTER, ADOLF. Animals are in cages; drawn by [the author]. 174p $2.50 Greenberg

891.867 Refugees, Political 41-27839

The adventures of a Czech writer and cartoonist, one Jan Prokop, on his tortuous way from his homeland thru Nazi dominated Europe, to America. The author is a celebrated Czech humorist and political cartoonist; a friend of Shaw, Wells, and Capek; who now resides in this country. The book is illustrated with cartoons.

"A refugee is one who runs from country to country with but one desire—to sit quietly at home." This is but one of many definitions of the term which refugees made up in a game they played while on the move. They were not without humor and not without grace, these fear-driven people. If one can say that a book founded in terror and built of privation sparkles with wit, that is what Hoffmeister's record of his own flight does." Rose Feld

+ Books p9 Ja 4 '42 800w

"Hoffmeister's real genius for penetrating but gentle humor is found in the satirical cartoons that are generously distributed throughout the book. His distinctive style brought him fame in Prague and other European capitals as a political cartoonist and should do the same for him in the United States."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e N 30 '41 320w

HOGAN, INEZ (MRS RANDOLPH BOWERS). Nicodemus laughs [il. by the author]. [43p] $1 Dutton

40-36108

Nicodemus, the little colored boy, who has appeared in others of this author-artist's books, has a happy, exciting day with his little sister, the hound dog, and a visit to his grandfather.

"Read aloud, this will set any small child laughing." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ja 19 '41 90w

"Fun for any age is Inez Hogan's newest Nicodemus book. Nicodemus has appeared in so many books we think you must have met him, but never has he been more lovable or amusing than in this tale." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Mr 31 '41 60w

New Yorker 17:86 My 24 '41 30w

Spring'd Republican p7e My 25 '41 80w

HOGAN, INEZ (MRS RANDOLPH BOWERS). Twin deer. [52p] il $1 Dutton

41-8960

Picture-story book about twin fauns, who wandered far afield despite parental warnings, and had to be rescued from a rampant tiger.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p5 Je 29 '41 210w

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:371 D '41 40w

"There is not so much comedy in this tale as in some of the earlier ones, but a satisfying measure of suspense. Aside from its own story value parents who love 'Bambi' will find no better preparation for that classic for their children than this." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Je 22 '41 190w

Spring'd Republican p7e Je 22 '41 70w

Wis Lib Bul 37:159 O '41

HOGARTH, GRACE ALLEN. A Bible ABC [il. by the author]. [55p] $1 Stokes

41-16358

Illustrated alphabet book for the very young, based on Biblical events and characters.

"[This] brilliantly colored alphabet is the best 'first book' for the Bible that I have seen. As soon as a child looks at a book at all these pictures attract him, and a three-year-old can understand the words as they are read aloud." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 S 14 '41 160w

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:373 D '41 40w

"This little volume comes in an 'imprimatur edition,' and is a good simple introduction to the Bible for very young folk; each letter has a Bible reference enabling the parent to supplement the brief text given." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 35:112 N 21 '41 30w

"There is a very appealing quality about this small book with its bright pictures. It has evidently grown out of experience in introducing the Bible to young children, for the subjects are well chosen to fit a little child's interest. It shows, too, a loving knowledge of the Bible itself." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:357 S '41 40w

HOGARTH, G. A.—Continued

"It is a tender, everyday sort of little picture book, around which the story-telling parent can weave the fuller magic of the great old stories as the child asks for them." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 66:678 Ag '41 120w

"A very simple religious book for the youngest children has long been needed. Here is a little volume that parents and all others who have to do with little children will heartily welcome for its lovely simplicity, its understanding and its childlike charm." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p39 N 2 '41 200w

HOGBOOM, AMY. Gay kilties of Cape Breton; il. by [the author]. 190p $2 Dutton Children in Cape Breton (W) 41-10978

Life on Cape Breton Island is described in this book for young readers. The Scottish families of Pleasant Bay are represented by Jill MacLean; the French Arcadians of Cheticamp by Gaston. The two become friends; Gaston goes to the Scottish games, and Jill goes fishing with Gaston and his father. Some tales of early explorers of the region are included and a chapter of historical notes.

"The atmosphere is faithfully maintained: the book introduces a corner of our hemisphere to many a young reader as a place where children rough it and enjoy it." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 J1 13 '41 310w

"Recommended for children from nine to eleven, for school and public libraries, although it is unfortunate that it must cost $2." J. L. Sauer

+ Library J 66:678 Ag '41 120w

"Written with a knowledge of children's interests and a genuine liking for the people and places she describes and illustrates with spirited, authentic drawings, Miss Hogeboom's book is a worth while addition to those stories of other countries and other ways which broaden a child's horizon. For boys and girls 9-12." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 17 '41 500w

Springf'd Republican p7e J1 20 '41 170w

HOGBOOM, AMY. Mysterious valley: adventures of Robert La Salle; il. by the author. 244p $2 Lothrop

41-15197

"The story of La Salle's explorations of the Mississippi valley is dramatically told for early teen-age boys and girls." Springf'd Republican

"The story itself is deathless, even if it is here conventionally presented. Interesting." Allan Nevins

Sat R of Lit 24:7 N 8 '41 20w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 5 '41 70w

Wis Lib Bul 37:206 D '41

HOGNER, DOROTHY CHILDS (MRS NILS HOGNER). Stormy, the first mustang; il. by Nils Hogner. 152p $2 Oxford

41-18355

An imaginative tale of the career of the first American born mustang, born of thoroughbreds left in the wilderness by De Soto's explorers. Stormy grows up in freedom, learns to know the dangers of the wild, and becomes the leader of his herd.

"This story's chief value is its sense of a new continent—our own. . . Its thrill of freedom that must be fought for at every turn, its excitement in vast spaces and complete beginning-over, are human emotions, and Stormy, though he does not talk, carries on too much human reasoning within his proud young mind for this to be truly a horse story. But his life is American enough to belong among children's chronicles of our beginnings." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 S 7 '41 230w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 35:111 N 21 '41 30w

"Recommended." J. E. Wooster

+ Library J 66:736 S 1 '41 80w

"This is the most substantial story Mrs. Hogner has written so far and one which any 7 to 12-year-old lover of horses shouldn't miss. It is not only exciting in its tale of hazards and victories but it catches the imagination with its wide-flung panorama of a country which Stormy knew before the white man did." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p12 O 5 '41 320w

HOKE, MRS HELEN L. Major and the kitten; pictures by Diana Thorne. 36p $2 Holt

(W) 41-17042

Picture-story book describing a dignified sad-eyed Newfoundland dog named Major, into whose sedate life the lively kitten, Mopsy, was introduced. Major stood all he could of Mopsy's raffish ways and then took her firmly to task, so that she reformed, and Major was left to grow old in peace.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p11 N 2 '41 160w

"This is just such a domestic little comedy as children love to watch and to remember. Perhaps its climax here falls just a little bit short for full narrative power, but it is written so easily, with such a convincing interplay of personalities that it all really seems to have happened, an effect which is enhanced by a satisfyingly generous number of pictures of a rollicking Mopsy and a disturbed Major, done in Diana Thorne's most entrancing manner." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p12 O 5 '41 280w

Wis Lib Bul 37:203 D '41

HOKE, MRS HELEN L., and TEICHNER, MIRIAM. Fuzzy kitten; pictures by Meg Wohlberg. [16p] $1 Messner

41-16072

Picture-story book about a kitten, vain of its soft coat, and what happened when she fell into a pan of water. The kitten's fur is simulated by a substance for small readers to stroke.

"Its appeal is by giving the kitten golden-yellow fuzz that looks as if it had been incorporated into the paper, inviting a child to stroke it. How it was done I can't imagine, but it is done well." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 D 21 '41 30w

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:371 D '41 40w

"To my mind a book is to be read and looked at, rather than stroked. Library books for little children collect enough grubby finger prints without thinking of encouragement. The binding is of paper and very fragile. An attempt to capitalize on the popularity of Pat the Bunny." Evelyn Turpin

Library J 66:798 S 15 '41 130w

HOKINSON, HELEN ELNA. My best girls. [80p] $2.50 Dutton

741 Humor, Pictorial. Caricatures and cartoons

41-51939

Collection of cartoons, many of which have appeared in the New Yorker, portraying with friendly satire the foibles of the American woman of forty plus, with more avoirdupois than she needs, and less gray matter.

Booklist 38:76 N 1 '41

"The only other woman who has treated such women in a way comparable with Helen Hokinson's, is of course Ruth Draper. The satire in these drawings, as in the Draper sketches, has something friendly, something curiously kind. After all, it isn't altogether funny to be fat and older than you think, in a world where youth, slim and scornful, is at the helm. These drawings do not leave the sour taste that comes from the enjoyment of vicarious superiority. The book can be read without tears, by the women who modeled for it, and heaven knows it will be." M. L. Becker

+ Books p2 O 19 '41 400w

New Yorker 17:100 O 18 '41 30w

"The matrons whom Miss Hokinson has observed with such accuracy and tenderness are all so well-meaning, so over-full of the milk of human kindness, and such befuddled darlings that even their portrayer must sketch them with satirical gentleness. . . Here's a book which might work wonders as required study in adult education courses. Home work of a unique and provocative sort."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 19 '41 180w

HOLBERG, MRS RUTH (LANGLAND), and HOLBERG, RICHARD A. Gloucester boy [il. by the authors]. [48p] $1 Doubleday

(W) 40-30564

Story of a young Portuguese boy living in Gloucester. Manuel's ambition was to become a fisherman, but his mother wanted him to stay on land and learn to be a postman. On his first trip to the Grand Banks, Manuel proved that fishing was to be his future destiny. For grades three to four.

"Details having no intrinsic connection with the story are inserted. Recommended for its informational content only. Many illustrations in sepia and blue; those of the sea are good." Alice Monroe

Library J 65:878 O 15 '40 80w

Wis Lib Bul 37:19 Ja '41

HOLBROOK, MARION. Suitable for framing. 266p $2 Dodd

41-19644

Detective story.

"If you must have the pick of the weekly mystery crop at the earliest possible moment, better make a beeline for this one. All about three murders in the Charles Century advertising agency, related in a thoroughly pleasing manner by Mimi Ellsworth, a copywriter with a talent for sleuthing and a knack with the king's English." Will Cuppy

+ Books p17 O 12 '41 240w

Reviewed by Mort. Post

+ New Repub 105:836 D 15 '41 90w

"It makes an exciting story with an advertising background that seems just about wacky enough to be authentic." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p18 O 26 '41 150w

"Moves briskly, with intrigue, gaiety and thrills to pretty well-concealed pay-off. Writing agreeable and business background veracious. Pleasant."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:36 O 18 '41 40w

HOLBROOK, STEWART HALL. Murder out yonder; an informal study of certain classic crimes in back-country America. 255p $2.50 Macmillan

364 Murder. Crime and criminals—U.S. 41-18849

Stories of ten murders committed in rural districts in various sections of the United States, with one chapter on the folklore of American murder. Of the ten stories, one is of an Oregon cult leader known as Joshua II; another is of Belle Gunness, who is reputed to have murdered over forty people, including her own three children. Index.

"The detective work and the trials are made uniformly interesting; but, for some reason as baffling as any of the crimes, the cumulative effect of the grisly deeds themselves is rendered more rather than less horrifying by the fact that mass slaughter is today a commonplace and so much of the world a blood-bath." Wilson Follett

Atlantic N '41 250w

Booklist 38:90 N 15 '41

"All well told and satisfyingly complete. Mr. Holbrook contends that some crimes are as much a part of the history of certain communities as are military, political or economic history, and very often are far more entertaining." He seems to have proved his point. Sound stuff." Stanley Walker

+ Books p5 O 5 '41 900w

Christian Century 58:1213 O 1 '41 70w

"Not since the brilliant studies of Edmund Pearson has such a sound job on little-known American murders come along. As Mr. Holbrook's title suggests, he has taken for his field crime in the hinterland, and anyone who is interested in criminology will find his knowledge extended by making the acquaintance of such worthies as Norman Williams, Harry Orchard, Dr. Ruloff and George Abbott." Elizabeth Huling

+ New Repub 105:442 O 6 '41 480w

"The stories are told with rare gusto that has room for sardonic humor in its appreciation of human complexity. Here as in his other books Stewart Holbrook has re-created time and place and social custom with effortless vitality and objective skill. 'Murder Out Yonder' must go to a special position on the little shelf of sound and interesting studies of crime, as it makes compelling reading of the development of community folklore from the 'back country's' monstrous realities of brutalized callousness and savage greed." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p4 S 28 '41 1450w

"Lurid Americana, set forth with the requisite grim jocosity."

New Yorker 17:78 S 27 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 5 '41 550w

HOLBROOK, STEWART HALL. Tall timber; with il. by Armstrong Sperry. 179p $1.50 Macmillan

634.9 Forests and forestry—Juvenile literature. Lumbering—Juvenile literature

(W) 41-16801

The story of the lumber industry in America, from the first sawmill established in South Berwick, Maine, in 1631, to the modern lumberjack of 1941. Along with descriptions of the industry itself, the author has discussed the changing methods, the life of the lumberjacks, and the economic problems involved. Includes a short lumberjack dictionary. For older boys and girls.

Booklist 38:84 N 1 '41

"It is truth and good reading." M. L. Becker

+ Books p18 N 2 '41 260w

"This fascinating story has an authoritative ring. A lumberjack's dictionary is a useful adjunct." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:372 S '41 130w

"'Lumberjack's Dictionary' is clever and enlightening. Armstrong Sperry's illustrations in black and white are perfectly fitted to the text. Recommended for ages eleven to sixteen." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 66:846 O 1 '41 100w

"A history of the American lumber industry which contains only one mention of Paul Bunyan is something of an achievement, but Mr. Holbrook's ordered and clear account is so full of facts and data that one scarcely misses that roisterer. . . Unfortunately, it is, too, a story of great waste, and the author describes the sinful destruction of our forests in the old, roaring days in such a way as to emphasize strongly the importance of our present-day conservation. The main emphasis is, indeed, upon the economic aspects of the industry, but it is also a well-rounded picture of the whole." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 S 14 '41 360w

Wis Lib Bul 37:179 N '41

HOLCOMBE, ARTHUR NORMAN. The middle classes in American politics. 304p $2.50 Harvard univ. press

973 U.S.—Politics and government. Middle classes. Democracy 40-32763
For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

Reviewed by H. F. Angus
Am J Soc 47:636 Ja '42 500w

"One has grown accustomed to receive stimulation from Professor Holcombe. He brings to bear upon our political problems something in addition to the thoroughness and detachment of a scholar. He has a way of discovering factors which have escaped men of less realistic perspective and less penetrating vision. Yet his originality does not rest upon any desire to reinterpret facts in the light of any erratic philosophy or to produce novel and startling effects. This book not only gives evidence of mature thought, but also it reassures those who doubt the solidity of American institutions." E. M. Sait

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:145 F '41 800w

Bookmark 2:8 Mr '41

"Although Professor Holcombe's volume may act as a sedative upon those who are suffering from a communist or fascist neurosis, it can hardly be looked upon as more than a preliminary investigation into the phenomenon of classes in American politics." S. C. Wallace
Pol Sci Q 56:154 Mr '41 220w

Wis Lib Bul 37:29 F '41

HOLDEN, RAYMOND PECKHAM. Arrow at the heel; poems. 110p $2 Holt

811 40-33316

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"Mr. Holden is a lyric poet of the traditional kind. He has a fine and firm control of his craftsmanship, and can make the movement of his verse echo his meaning in an effective and musical fashion. He is at his best in such a poem as 'Storm over Rockefeller Center.' . . . But he is blocked by pessimism, and though his poetry has much excellence, it is not the poetry of a full vision." T. S.

+ Atlantic Ap '41 150w

"Mr. Holden's forms are traditional in the dearest sense of the word; often one can hardly pay attention to the poem for staring at the terrible I AM A SONNET writ large on every feature. The poems are competent, sincere, thoroughly respectable productions; many of the phrases are effective, some of the ideas are interesting; but phrases and ideas survive only as random notes, barely heard over the terrible din of the machinery. The subject is picked and the mills begin to grind; Mr. Holden's mills grind slowly and oh! so small. The reader emerges from them a little wiser and a whole lot sadder; he has had what advertisements call An Experience." Randall Jarrell
New Repub 104:222 F 17 '41 240w

"Mr. Holden is a poet of contemplation; of that human flesh 'that with the tongue of reason licks its wounds'; and his flowing rhythms and careful diction tend to become a little monotonous. This is particularly true of the sequence of fifty sonnets which concludes the book. . . . This poetic low-blood-pressure is disappointing, because there is one poem in the book which shows that Mr. Holden can write with direct and ardent feeling. In 'Storm Over Rockefeller Center' the incisive and fiery octosyllabics create all that is missing in the sonnets." Elizabeth Drew

+ Sat R of Lit 23:6 My 3 '41 650w

"Variety of subject matter, mood, and pattern is a characteristic of this quite worth-while collection of poetry." A. M. J.

+ Spring'd Republican p7e F 23 '41 270w
Wis Lib Bul 37:73 Ap '41

HOLDING, MRS ELISABETH (SANXAY). Speak of the devil. 281p $2 Duell

41-5576

Mystery story.

"Highly recommended volume." Will Cuppy
+ Books p9 Je 15 '41 170w

"Here is a Caribbean mystery tale with an odd quality of distinction; an odd quality of horror too. . . . There are, as a matter of fact, three murders in 'Speak of the Devil.' But the story's special excellence is in its originality and shrewdness, up to its final twist of surprise." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p17 Je 15 '41 200w

"Quick, easy reading, but you may be left with the notion that Mrs. Holding wrote this book a little too hurriedly."
+ New Yorker 17:80 Je 14 '41 50w

"Sleuthing and plot abecedarian but atmosphere and excellent writing keep tale spinning along speedily to satisfactory pay-off. Grade B."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:17 Je 28 '41 40w

HOLE, CHRISTINA. Haunted England; a survey of English ghost-lore; il. by John Farleigh. (English countryside ser) 191p $3.75 Scribner [10s 6d Batsford]

133.1 Ghosts, Folklore—England 41-11080

"[This work] names all the more famous apparitions of England; dates their births—which means, of course, the violent deaths that set them going; tells when they were 'laid' and how, and gives their works, their recreations . . . and their house addresses. . . . Miss Hole tells all this, not by bald summaries, but in pleasant narratives, grouping together types of ghosts—the gray ladies and phantom coaches, historic specters and quiet phantoms without history, screaming skulls and 'bargeguests' haunting churchyards, the Dun Cow, the Clattering Ghat and the Field of Forty Footsteps lurking under the roadway in London." Books

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p20 Mr 23 '41 320w

"The inside of this book shows a fine control of the use of adjectives like uncanny, and a happy avoidance of Celtic wailing. Any declension into old-fashioned shudders is offset by the sophisticated decorations of Mr. John Farleigh. Instead, apparitions are paraded in their respective classes and age groups merely as they happen in popular belief in different parts of England, and the author barely obtrudes an opinion about their authenticity. Neither the most sceptically minded nor the most heady devotee of the planchette has got anything to complain about. This is just the raw material, not too raw. Indeed, quite tender." Pennethorne Hughes

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:442 Ap 26 '41 850w

Sat R of Lit. 24:20 Je 21 '41 390w

Spec 166:512 My 9 '41 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p28 Ja 18 '41 1150w

HOLLAND, RUPERT SARGENT. Secret of Blennerhassett; il. by John Watrous. 292p $2 Farrar

(W) 41-3319

Story of the Ohio river settlements in the early nineteenth century, when Aaron Burr was reputed to be conspiring against the United States. The Blennerhassetts are among the characters in this historical novel for high school age girls.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p8 Mr 23 '41 270w

"A story that should have special appeal for fifteen-year-old girls." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 66:269 Mr 15 '41 30w

Wis Lib Bul 37:162 O '41

HOLLANDER, FREDERICK. Those torn from earth; pref. by Thomas Mann. 448p $2.50 Liveright

41-9497

Saga of a group of German refugees. The book begins in 1933, and the wanderers—a group of artists, musicians, a motion picture director, and other gifted individuals—go to London, Paris, New York, and Hollywood in their search for a country and a livelihood. Insecurity and fear is their lot often-times, and some of them end their lives by suicide.

"It is an experimental novel, a first book in English, I gather, and not, it seems to me, quite successful in either form or expression. But, as Thomas Mann writes in his preface, it is 'tense with life, courageous . . . a first novel, happily and distinctly hitting the mark, that has something invigorating'—and I should add 'revealing.'" F. T. Marsh

+ — Books p22 My 11 '41 550w

Nation 152:705 Je 14 '41 30w

New Repub 104:898 Je 30 '41 40w

"This is a convincing book, worth reading for its political implications. As a novel it is far from perfect. Its construction seems loose, if not at times careless, its characters somewhat on the technicolor side. Their happiness, love and despair are put on a bit too thick, like mascara meant for the photographic lens. Both Hamforter and his wife Ethel fail to come really to life. Yet despite such faults there is a knowledge of human suffering and a fine quality of faith and hope." Marianne Hauser

+ — N Y Times p7 My 11 '41 700w

"Mr. Hollander does not add much that is new to a familiar story, but he is more than ordinarily feverish, swift, and dramatic. Not the last word on the bitterness of exile, but an impressive one."

+ — New Yorker 17:90 My 10 '41 110w

Sat R of Lit 24:21 Je 7 '41 60w

"Such scenes as this novel presents are melodramatic and at times seem the product of a disordered mind. There is a certain power in them, to be sure, but there is also a decided straining for effect that weakens them. On the other hand, the writer shows his burning sympathy for these distinguished refugees and sweeps the reader along with him. It is a book to shake one's nerves, stir one's indignation—and put down with relief." M. D.

+ — Springfd Republican p7e My 11 '41 650w

Time 37:104 My 19 '41 30w

HOLLING, HOLLING CLANCY. Paddle-to-the-Sea; il. by [the author]. [63p] $2 Houghton (W) 41-13399

North of the Great Lakes an Indian boy carved a miniature canoe with a seated passenger, with this message scratched on it, "Please put me back in water. I am Paddle to the Sea." In the spring the little canoe started its journey, from Lake Nipigon, Canada; four years later, after passing thru the Great Lakes and the St Lawrence river, Paddle reached the sea. The story of the adventurous trip, and the characteristics of the country thru which Paddle passed, are told in prose and picture in this book for ages nine to eleven.

Booklist 38:37 O 1 '41

"This little traveler will teach many children many things. The pictures are so large and richly colored that reduced black-and-whites give no idea of them. Around the margins go descriptive drawings, but full-page color plates are the feature. They give any one as vivid an idea of the Great Lakes as he is likely to get under twelve, as well as a start on maps by combining them with pictures in a peculiarly telling way." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ag 31 '41 360w

"A big book full of delightful pictures by the author in which legend, geography and history are all intermingled." E. V. Wyatt

+ Cath World 154:374 D '41 70w

"Traveling with Paddle by story and pictures is good fun for nine to twelve-year-olds and is a fascinating way to learn geography. Younger children, too, will enjoy this book." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 N 3 '41 240w

"This is one of the most interesting of the year's crop." H. L. Binssse

+ Commonweal 35:112 N 21 '41 20w

"This is geography of the best kind, made vivid by the power of imagination. . . The artist-author knows by experience the life of the men along the route, as well as the appearance of forests, great docks, rapids and steamers. This is his most important book, so far." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:357 S '41 120w

Reviewed by Warren Chappell

Horn Bk M 17:455 N '41 10w

"The numerous full-page illustrations in color and the margin decorations in black and white are good. There are also diagrams of a saw-mill, a freighter, the canal locks at the Soo, and Niagara Falls. For ages nine to eleven." Alice Monroe

+ Library J 66:736 S 1 '41 140w

"Here is geography presented with freshness and originality and imagination. 'Paddle-to-the-Sea' will appeal to a wide range in age; younger children respond to the idea of the small canoe making its long voyage to the sea, older readers are delighted with the fine sweep of country the book shows them. . . A book that school and public libraries will want to add to their shelves and one that children will enjoy owning that they may look again and again at the pictures whose interest it will be difficult to exhaust." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p28 N 2 '41 240w

+ New Yorker 17:147 D 6 '41 70w

Reviewed by Raymond Holden

Sat R of Lit 24:9 N 8 '41 30w

Wis Lib Bul 37:203 D '41

HOLLINGSHEAD, ARTHUR DACK. Guidance in democratic living. 260p $1.50 Appleton-Century

370.1 Education—Aims and objectives. Social psychology. Democracy 41-5126

"The philosophy of democracy and modern theories of learning translated into actual classroom situations and teaching techniques, with emphasis on socialization as a major objective of education." (School & Society) The author is principal of the Ashland School, East Orange, New Jersey. Index.

"This book is one to be studied and not scanned in rapid fashion; for skimming may fail to bring true understanding of the function or the premises of the program. The sincere student of education will find that the author's discussion questions and suggested lists of readings stimulate careful study of the book. . . Principals and teachers may well use this treatise as a guide to an introspective analysis of the psychology of their teaching. They should use it as a basis for evaluating their contribution to their communities, for now, if never before, our citizenry needs guidance in the practice of democratic living." E. W. Mills

+ El School J 42:148 O '41 900w

School & Society 53:320 Mr 8 '41 30w

HOLLIS, CHRISTOPHER. Noble castle. 216p $2.50 (8s 6d) Longmans

239 Christianity—Evidences

"When Dante passed through the uppermost circle of Hell he found it a region in which there was no torment, but the eternal air trembled only with the sadness of sighs. He was conducted there to a noble castle over which was a dome of exceptional light, and within whose precincts was a green sward smooth as enamel. It was here that those who had lived virtuously, but without Christian faith, had their unchanging abode for eternity—the heroes and philosophers and poets of old Greece and Rome and the good paynims of his own time, such as Saladin. It was an existence not without dignity and pleasantness, yet shadowed by an abiding sadness because none of these spirits would ever attain that vision which was the true felicity of man and which could be attained, in Christian times only by those who held the faith of the Church and had undergone baptism. The communion of Dante is also Mr. Christopher Hollis's communion, and in this book he sets out to tell us how, from this standpoint, the special thing appears which the members of the Christian Church have, and the inmates of that castle had not." Spec

HOLLIS, CHRISTOPHER—Continued

"The book is written with agreeable literary skill and a charm of open-minded frankness." Edwyn Bevan

+ Spec 166:556 My 23 '41 760w

Times [London] Lit Sup p194 Ap 19 '41 550w

HOLLOWAY, RUPERT. The unknown garden. 319p $2.50 Bobbs

41-13499

The scene of this novel is London in 1913. There Ralph Hamar, a Shropshire lad of no family or fortune, meets once again a childhood sweetheart, Helen Randolph, blessed with both fortune and family. And now Ralph, conscious of his lack, goes thru a period of conflict—worshipping Helen as Woman and desiring her but unable to believe that he can win her love. In the end it is Helen who has to resolve his difficulties.

"'The Unknown Garden' is earnestly written, and has some excellent scenes, but it is too tenuous in plot and treatment to capture the imagination." George Conrad

Books p8 Ag 31 '41 320w

"The book is conscientiously written, and if Helen never comes to life, Ralph with all his shadow-boxing, has moments of being a real person." L. M. Field

N Y Times p7 Ag 31 '41 700w

HOLMES, FREDERICK LIONEL. Voice of Trappist silence. 114p il $2.50 Longmans

271.125 Trappists (W) 42-601

Study in prose and pictures of the life of silence and simplicity upheld by the monks of the Trappist order. The book is the result of five years' study made by the author in the three Trappist monasteries in the United States: New Melleray in Iowa; Gethsemani in Kentucky; and Our Lady of the Valley in Rhode Island.

Booklist 38:183 F 1 '42

"The descriptions and interpretations evidence a deep appreciation of the values which the silent Cistercians seek and find. It is impossible to review such a book without reviewing monasticism, so it must suffice to say that this is beautifully done and that its authenticity can be trusted."

+ Christian Century 58:1579 D 17 '41 130w

Reviewed by R. J. Racine

Springf'd Republican p6 D 26 '41 550w

HOLMES, OLIVER WENDELL. Judicial opinions; constitutional opinions, selected excerpts and epigrams, as given in the Supreme judicial court of Massachusetts (1883-1902). [ed] by Harry C. Shriver; with a foreword by Francis Biddle. 360p il $3.50 Dennis & co, inc, 269 Main st, Buffalo, N.Y.

345.2 Law—Reports and digests. Massachusetts—Constitutional law 40-32306

"Mr. Shriver has exhumed from the reports a selection from Holmes' majority and minority ty opinions written while a member of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts. . . The limitations of these selections derives from the fact that Holmes wrote over 1300 opinions in the course of twenty years. Consequently, in choosing to reprint some sixty of these cases, together with a larger number of small excerpts, Mr. Shriver has had to eliminate many of Holmes' decisions of equal importance with those included. He has, however, wisely confined the cases to one important field, namely, Holmes' opinions on questions involving matters of constitutional law." J Philos

"The publication of these selected opinions, limited though they are in subject matter, will give further evidence to many of the unforgettable qualities which Holmes possessed." M. D. Howe

+ Books p13 D 29 '40 460w

Reviewed by Edwin Garland

J Philos 38:135 F 27 '41 400w

HOLMES, OLIVER WENDELL, and POLLOCK, SIR FREDERICK, 3d bart. Holmes-Pollock letters; [their] correspondence, 1874-1932; ed. by Mark DeWolfe Howe; with an intro. by John Gorham Palfrey. 2v 275;359p il $7.50 Harvard univ. press

B or 92

(W) 41-4520

These letters exchanged by the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes and the English lawyer and scholar, Sir Frederick Pollock, span fifty-eight years. The early letters were of a technical nature, but as they grew more friendly with the years the two began to discuss questions of philosophy, history, literature, and their mutual friends. Table of cases. Index.

Reviewed by C. B. Swisher

Am Pol Sci R 35:782 Ag '41 800w

Reviewed by W. W. Cook

Ann Am Acad 217:205 S '41 600w

Atlantic Ap '41 190w

Booklist 37:407 My 1 '41

"The correspondence for nearly sixty years between two men of profound learning and highest culture is without parallel. The letters reveal the minds of the writers as no biography or autobiography could. They are wholly free of self-consciousness; they were written with no thought of publication, friend to friend. Reading the letters consecutively, one realizes the truth of what Pollock said: 'There was no stage of acquaintance ripening into friendship; we understood one another and were friends without more ado.'" C. C. Burlingham

+ Books p1 Mr 23 '41 1600w

"The style of the letters is splendid. We expect of course the letters of Holmes to sparkle with epigrams and are not disappointed, but Pollock was not far behind him. . . Serious as the subjects of their letters generally were, neither was ever pompous. . . The work is annotated with care and skill; all of the informal references to persons and decisions are explained in the margin. No lawyer can afford to miss reading these letters, and I am sure that any intelligent layman, carefully skipping the technical legal comments, would find himself amply rewarded by what was left." Philip Nichols

+ Boston Transcript p8 Ap 12 '41 800w

"Two biographers, had they deliberately set about it to record the chief events of their distinguished careers, could not have more clearly and impressively expounded and exemplified the precepts of understanding through friendship than these two masters have done, not by design, but not entirely, let us agree, by inadvertence." F. L. P.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 18 '41 500w

Reviewed by Joseph Calderon

Commonweal 33:625 Ap 11 '41 300w

Reviewed by Eleanor Van Alen

Current Hist & Forum 52:5 My '41 240w

"Holmes is the more human and has the lighter touch. He relished frivolities which had little temptation for Pollock. Yet both swapped views on life's ultimates and the cosmos with a profundity worn so lightly that one wonders why the professional philosophers must so often be so wearisome and so reluctant to shoot directly at the target posed most plainly by the only questions which really press for answer." T. R. Powell

+ Nation 152:589 My 17 '41 950w

"These letters furnish us a commentary on the vividness, the action and the passion—and on the varied and robust intellectual interests—of Holmes's life. They reveal a mind muscular, acute, sophisticated, profound and elegant; they discover a character humane, courageous, affluent, humble and magnanimous. They confirm the conviction that Justice Holmes was not only the most distinguished jurist but the most distinguished citizen of his generation." H. S. Commager

+ N Y Times p1 Mr 23 '41 2300w

"Two stout volumes which will doubtless rank among the few important books of the year... These volumes recall to us something forgotten these days: the charm, and I use the word with care, of scholarship when it is the easy tool of men who are more than scholars. For lawyers, of course, the books are mandatory. To others not afraid of their bulk and their frequent technicalities, they are also commended." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:84 Mr 15 '41 300w

Pratt p7 autumn '41

"Unreserved praise must be accorded to Mark DeWolfe Howe, the editor, for his careful and loving work, and to Mr. Palfrey, for his most illuminating introduction."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:7 Mr 29 '41 1400w

"These volumes add little to history, but their biographical interest and their charm and vitality will appeal to all who appreciate fine qualities of personality. The selecting and editing have been done with critical care and perspicacity. The legal comments really increase the value of the books, even if mainly to the specialist."

+ Springfield Republican p7e Mr 9 '41 1350w

Time 37:96 Ap 14 '41 1100w

Reviewed by A. H. Feller

Yale Law J 50:1311 My '41 2100w

"This is a wholly delightful book... Naturally, the letters are of peculiar interest to lawyers, for they run the gamut from jurisprudence through the judicial and juristic process to eminent English and American legal personalities... But law is only one facet of these amazing letters; even more striking was the wide reading here disclosed—from Dante in the original Italian (not so hard, Holmes says, if one remembers his Latin and has a dictionary) and Spengler in German, which seems to have been tougher, perhaps because he was 'an odious animal who must be read,' to Wodehouse, the 'dear delightful'... Though Holmes's judgments were warm and human, the depth of Pollock's learning was amazing." C. E. Clark

+ Yale R n s 30:822 summer '41 1600w

HOLMES, VICTOR, pseud. See Kitch, K. H.

HOLMES, WILFRED JAY (ALEC HUDSON, pseud). Enemy sighted. 61p $1.25 Macmillan 41-51572

Another story of modern naval warfare by the author of Battle Stations! (Book Review Digest, 1940). For two months and a half the light cruiser Perseus and the submarine Petard had been patrolling the Indian Ocean waiting to engage a pocket battleship known to be in the vicinity. With the signal, Enemy sighted, the grim battle is on.

Booklist 37:292 Mr 1 '41

"One is less conscious of men dying than of the dreadful precision and delicate co-ordination of the devices that kill. You watch pressure gauges and signal lights, you measure the split-second margin between victory and defeat with a stopwatch. Men give orders, but they are carried out by the laws of mechanics. The text bristles with technical terms which are dramatic even though you are not quite certain that you know their exact meaning. For the kind of story Mr. Hudson tells, the method is highly successful." George Conrad

+ Books p10 Ja 19 '41 320w

"The author knows the Navy and writes convincingly." E. B. S.

+ Boston Transcript p1 F 8 '41 60w

Christian Century 58:60 Ja 8 '41 20w

"Imaginary, of course, but logical and maybe even prophetic."

New Repub 104:126 Ja 27 '41 60w

"Mr. Hudson does not go in for individuality very heavily. He might do a little more for us in that respect. However, the action suffices for a short tale. What we want to know is what a modern battle at sea is like, and his two tales carry authority and convincingness into the description and the action." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 19 '41 650w

Springf'd Republican p10 F 14 '41 180w

HOLT, ARTHUR ERASTUS. Christian roots of democracy in America. 187p $1; pa 60c Missionary educ. movement

261 Christianity and politics. Sociology, Christian. Democracy 41-6820

"The high cost of a democratic society can only be met by a generation of people stirred by the great truths of Christianity, who seek a social order in which its spirit has free expression. This is the theme of Dr. Holt's book. He emphasizes the fact that Christianity and democracy have come down the ages together, that they reinforce each other or die together. In two striking chapters Dr. Holt deals extensively with the rootage of democracy in the Old and New Testaments. He traces the emergence of this principle in America, and the part home missions has played in its extension across the continent." (Publisher's note) Index.

Reviewed by A. R. King

+ Christian Century 58:861 Jl 2 '41 650w

Reviewed by A. F. Gilmore

Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 5 '41 340w

"Dr. Holt perhaps over-emphasizes Protestantism as the mother of democracy, but, aside from this, has written one of the best text-books ever offered missionary-minded people." A. L. Murray

+ Churchman 155:21 Ag '41 120w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '41

HOLTON, EDITH AUSTIN (ELIZABETH ALDEN HEATH, pseud). Anchors to windward. 304p $2 Penn 41-5979

Story of Cape Cod, in which Captain Isaiah Snow takes a hand in smoothing the path of young love, and helps beat Meribah Lane's formidable grandmother at her own game.

"As a substitute for a vacation on Cape Cod, the stories by Edith Austin Holton commend themselves. Her delight in its beaches and balmy air, its lazy catboats swinging at anchor, the tang of native humor and the serene rhythm of existence in its friendly villages—all this finds its way into her narratives, with just enough complication of plot to maintain momentum." Lisle Bell

+ Books p15 My 18 '41 240w

"Even outlanders will become keenly aware of the full flavor of the natives' temperament: wry, realistic humor, cranky loyalty, penny shrewdness and on the debit side, an occasional downright orneriness, when they read Mrs. Holton's pleasant story of old and young Codders."

HOLTON, E. A.—Continued

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 19 '41 120w
Springf'd Republican p7e Je 1 '41 30w

HOMANS, GEORGE CASPAR. English villagers of the thirteenth century. 478p $4.50 Harvard univ. press

914.2 Village communities. England—Social life and customs. Agriculture—England. Peasantry—England A41-574

"This work is a study of the English villagers resident on unclosed lands in the 13th century—once called 'the greatest of centuries.' The author tells how these ordinary Englishmen lived from day to day and through the years. He describes the kind of land they occupied, how it was distributed amongst them, and how it was farmed. He also tells about the social and economic activities of the villagers, of their domestic arrangements and customs, and their manner of worship. These and many more topics [are included] from the most localized agricultural data to a consideration of the place of the typical English village of the period and its inhabitants in the larger world outside." Springf'd Republican

"This is a book that has been waiting a long time to be written. Its appearance at last is worth a hearty welcome. The study of the village communities of medieval England the author gives us is a little difficult to classify, not because its subject matter is esoteric, but because its appeal should be so wide. . . . It is sociology of the best tradition; it will be of as much interest to historians; it is a first-rate ethnological or social-anthropological study of a peasant people, who in this case, as the author amply demonstrates, are the cultural ancestors of a large segment of American life and institutions." C. M. Arensberg

+ Am J Soc 47:491 N '41 1050w
Am Soc R 6:928 D '41 220w

"Informative and agreeably written book." S. C. Chew

+ Books p14 Je 22 '41 700w

"That his abundant primary research in his special subject makes his work important to medievalists goes without saying. But Dr. Homans has not contented himself with merely assembling the results of his own specific explorations. He has drawn upon a broad background of general historical knowledge as well, and writing with a clarity never too spare and a distinct skill in human evocation, he has produced a work of literary worth and wide scholarly enlightenment. For general enjoyment, 'English Villagers of the Thirteenth Century' demands only a literate intelligence and a taste for the socially important aspects of history."

+ N Y Times p36 O 26 '41 600w
Pratt p22 D '41

"Mr Homans writes well, and he has made a happy balance between the use of the more customary literary sources (like 'Piers Plowman') and new information dug out of English archives (especially the neglected manorial court rolls). Those who may be inclined to think the last word has been said about medieval history will find in this volume of nearly 500 generous pages convincing evidence of what enthusiastic scholarship can still do to make earlier times vivid and real."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 Ap 29 '41 500w

HOMER, JOY (MRS WILLIAM MAIN DOERFLINGER). Dawn watch in China. 340p $3 Houghton

915.1 China—Description and travel. China—History (W) 41-6170

During fourteen months this young American woman, daughter of Sidney and Louise

Homer, traveled thru war-torn China. Her travels were made as press correspondent for the Interdenominational church committee for China relief. Her book, informal in tone, relates her experiences and her observations on the Chinese under war conditions.

Booklist 37:462 Je 1 '41

Bookmark 2:12 N '41

"'Dawn Watch in China' does not go deeply into political or economic backgrounds. Though the author presents little except what she actually saw, her gift for words and her understanding of the people combine to produce a clear picture of the qualities that have made possible China's long and heroic resistance." Elsie McCormick

+ Books p7 Ap 13 '41 850w

Reviewed by Frederick Reinstein

Boston Transcript p7 Ap 12 '41 650w

"While the political conclusions of the book were overshadowed by events which occurred while it was on the presses, they constitute only an incidental part of this moving and revealing document. The story stands on its own feet as a well written, warmly personal account by a young writer who spent a year traveling in China during changes which only the young have the daring or the faith to understand." H. E. Fey

+ Christian Century 58:627 My 7 '41 390w

"This most readable book sees China through the eyes of youth, earnest, intelligent, startlingly competent youth." E. C. Thompson

+ Churchman 155:18 Je 1 '41 200w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:206 O '41 30w

Reviewed by Nym Wales

New Repub 105:316 S 8 '41 300w

"Miss Homer has written an exciting travel story, lively and fresh and full of incidents which show her sense of adventure and often great courage. But it is a pity that she feels called upon to join the schoolgirl chorus which sings lyrics about Madame Chiang's beauty. . . . However, an over-lyrical style here and there does not hide the author's sense of the courage of a people which have withstood Japan's mechanised armies and built up a new national life even while the invader is on their territory." Dorothy Woodman

+ New Statesman & Nation 22:460 N 29 '41 650w

"Miss Homer spent a year in remarkable travel and investigation and acquaintance in Free China, and she has written what may without exaggeration be called a remarkable book."

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 13 '41 800w

New Yorker 17:87 Ap 12 '41 30w

"Many readers will gain a new appreciation of the dimensions and difficulties of China's struggle from this narrative of a sympathetic, open-eyed observer. It does not pretend to be a factual or analytic study, but it captures those elusive intangibles of atmosphere and human feeling that are more important to real understanding. Perhaps the sole criticism might be that it is a little too lyrical in its admiration, and does not bear down hard enough on the obstacles which still confront the building of a democratic China." T. A. Bisson

+ Sat R of Lit 23:16 Ap 26 '41 600w

"'Dawn Watch in China' is travel plus adventure, with the comic elbowing the tragic at a moment's notice. The story of the new China that is emerging from their centuries old civilization is convincing." S. M. N.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 20 '41 1850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p510 O 11 '41 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 37:91 My '41

HOMES, GEOFFREY, pseud. See Mainwaring, D.

HONNESS, MRS ELIZABETH (HOFFMAN). The flight of Fancy; il. by Pelagie Doane. 44p $1.25 Oxford

41-5698

Picture-story book about little Peter Patrick Percival Perneau and his adventures with Fancy, a merry-go-round horse who has lost his sense of rhythm. With the help of his father, who conducted an orchestra, and his mother, who was a ballet dancer, Peter corrected Fancy's trouble and won the eternal gratitude of the merry-go-round owner.

"It is not necessary to be musical to enjoy this merry tale for six-year-olds, who seem naturally to have rhythm. It may even put a very young pianist on more friendly terms with the metronome, sometimes less than popular with the young." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 My 4 '41 240w

"Not an important book, but its gaiety and humor will appeal to children. For large collections." Marian Herr

+ Library J 66:222 Mr 1 '41 90w

"The pictures which have genuine gaiety and charm, give substance to an otherwise tenuous tale. For children 7 to 10." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p11 My 4 '41 160w

HONORE, YORK. Pottery making from the ground up; phot. by Larry Morris, jr. 72p $1 Viking

738 Pottery. Modeling (W) 41-51746

Handbook on pottery making for older boys and girls and for amateurs. It describes how to dig and prepare suitable clay; how to form, fire, and glaze the pottery; and how to make and use both a potter's wheel and a kiln. Photographs and diagrams.

Booklist 37:444 My 15 '41

"No other pottery book that I have seen is so self-reliant as this one, an appealing feature." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Ag 24 '41 170w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '41

"The book is not good for a beginner to use for instruction because the information is incomplete and the methods used in many cases are poor." H. J. Greene

Horn Bk M 17:295 Jl '41 120w

"This book should be especially helpful to older boys and girls, or to adults interested in pottery making." Alice Martin

+ Library J 66:467 My 15 '41 110w

Wis Lib Bul 37:90 My '41

HOOGSTRAAL, HARRY. Insects and their stories; with camera studies by Melvin Martinson and drawings by Carl O. Mohr. 144p $2 Crowell

595.7 Insects—Juvenile literature

(W) 41-51779

Presents an account of the life histories of some sixty of the insects best known to this part of the world—beetles, flies, bees, butterflies, moths, wasps, etc. Each has a large scale photograph and drawings. Tabulated guide to recognition of the insects and index.

Booklist 37:466 Je 1 '41

Christian Century 58:595 Ap 30 '41 10w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '41

"A good book for any family of children to own." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:289 Jl '41 70w

"Recommended for all libraries." A. E. Brown

+ Library J 66:465 My 15 '41 150w

"The very much enlarged photographs which accompany each page of text are noteworthy from the standpoint of photography; but these insect 'close-ups' are not clear enough to be of much aid in identification and study, and the strong shadows and much larger-than-life scale tend to make them confusing. The drawings, however, are clear and helpful. The author's enthusiasm, the dignified style which assumes intelligence on the part of the reader, will make this a pleasing and provocative book for boys and girls." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p9 Je 1 '41 280w

"This book should be in the library of every man or woman who cultivates a garden." H. S.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:21 Ap 26 '41 80w

Wis Lib Bul 37:206 D '41

HOOVER, THEODORE JESSE, and FISH, JOHN CHARLES LOUNSBURY. The engineering profession. 441p $5 Stanford univ. press

620.69 Engineering

41-15663

"This book describes qualifications and duties of the professional engineer and his habit of mind. It hopes thus to serve as a vocational guide to the young man matching his capacities against the requirements of various professions. The book does no more than offer him objective data for forming his own picture of engineering; appraisal of his own qualities is left to him. . . The book hopes to interest also the experienced engineer, whether or not he has made his own analysis of his profession; and to him this volume is submitted as a progress report on the efforts of the authors to satisfy themselves as to the characteristics of engineering. Points of technology enter into this work only by way of illustration." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 38:75 N 1 '41

"The basic purpose of this book is to provide a text for study by aspirants to any one of the many fields of engineering practice, but its character is such that any engineer will find much of value and no small amount of inspiration within its covers. For engineering students at the close of their second or the opening part of their third year, it should be prescribed reading."

+ Eng N 127:87 S 25 '41 390w

HOPE, CONSTANCE (MRS MILTON L. BERLINER). Publicity is broccoli; il. by John Groth. 264p $2 Bobbs

301.154 Publicity

41-21486

Experiences of a publicity expert related in light, semi-humorous vein. Among the celebrities and institutions on Constance Hope's list of clients are Lotte Lehmann, Lily Pons, the Philadelphia orchestra, Longchamps restaurants, etc.

Booklist 38:125 D 15 '41

"It is amusingly written, with a wealth of diverting anecdotes about the great and the near-great. The author has survived a lot of headaches and had a lot of fun. Her book is an illuminating guide to a profession that has no professional secrets." Lisle Bell

+ Books p36 N 2 '41 120w

"This is an entertaining book which will interest many readers. Certainly it should not be judged by its stupidly imitative title."

+ N Y Times p16 O 5 '41 480w

HOPKINS, CHARLES HOWARD. The rise of the social gospel in American Protestantism, 1865-1915. 352p $3 Yale univ. press

261 Sociology, Christian. Protestantism

41-1101

"Dr. Hopkins' main thesis is that the 'social gospel'—which he calls 'this indigenous and typically American movement'—was called into being by the impact of modern industrial society and scientific thought upon the Protestantism of the United States during the half-century following the Civil War. Defined by one of its leaders (Shailer Mathews) as 'the application of the teaching of Jesus and the total message of the Christian salvation to society, the economic life and social institutions . . . as well as to individuals," social Christianity involved a criticism of conventional Protestantism, a progressive theology and social philosophy, and an active program of propagandism and reform. It reached its climax in the optimistic pre-war years of the twentieth century." He sticks to this thesis consistently throughout the whole study, and concludes with a note of restrained optimism." (Christian Century) Index.

HOPKINS, C. H.—Continued

"It is heartening to find historians giving increasing attention to the history of social movements. No movement has been more significant in the development of American civilization than the rise of the so-called social gospel. Dr. Hopkins traces this movement with meticulous care from 1865 to 1915. His book is so scholarly, so well documented, and so interesting that it seems ungracious to make any criticism of it whatsoever. Indeed, any criticism that is made must be of a minor character, which this reviewer would say in advance in no wise detracts from the merit and the value of the work." C. A. Ellwood

+ — Am Hist R 46:945 J1 '41 700w

"The author writes with clarity and charm. He can with equal facility sketch a personality, analyze a book, describe a convention. His accuracy, so far as I have been able to check it, is impeccable, his range of material enormous, his judgment sound. As I peruse his work I feel that an important job has been done once for all." J. H. Holmes

+ Books p13 Ja 12 '41 440w

"Every person who has any stake at all in the effort to make Christianity effective as a force in civilization and as a creative factor in contemporary history should be everlastingly grateful for this remarkable book." D. J. Bradley

+ Christian Century 58:184 F 5 '41 1150w

"My only criticisms of Professor Hopkin's work arise from certain disagreements with his interpretation. Perhaps the book might have profited from compression and closer organization around a few main points, and from further use of periodical and denominational material. Nonetheless, when one considers how enormous, amorphous, and repetitive is the body of opinion on which Professor Hopkins has drawn, one can conclude only that he has done an excellent job with a difficult and important subject." H. F. May, Jr.

+ — New Eng Q 14:382 Je '41 1300w

"This programme, with its most revealing item, the adjective 'wholesome,' is not quite what the Kingdom of God has usually meant in this world or the next. But this book is a very valuable contribution to American social history."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p375 Ag 2 '41 240w

HOPKINS, LEVI THOMAS. Interaction; the democratic process. 490p $2.75 Heath

370.193 Teaching. Education—U.S. 41-12454

"The author feels that the schools should help secure a better insight into the democratic process; help build a sounder, firmer belief in its values; and develop a greater competence in its practice. This book emphasizes the need for a change from the authoritarian practices of the schools to a more democratic system, in order that our pupils may experience in their school life the democratic processes which should help them to meet their own problems today and those of adult life." (El School J) Index.

"This book is written in a clear, forceful manner, and the topic is significant in the present state of world-affairs. The importance of the theme is obvious to all, and it must be realized that an evolution in school practices has been taking place and that much progress is being made toward democratic practices. The desirability of this plan has been shown by school surveys made during the past decade. The leadership in developing democratic practices has been taken by the Progressive Education Association. This book reflects this point of view and is a valuable contribution to the movement by giving detailed suggestions for the accomplishment of democratic training in our schools." H. T. Ramsey

+ El School J 42:231 N '41 1100w

School & Society 53:744 Je 7 '41 30w

HOPPER, MILLARD FILLMORE. Checkers; all the answers on the art of successful checker playing. 107p il $1 Barnes, A.S.

794.2 Checkers 41-51599

The principles of the game set forth by the holder of the world's unrestricted championship. Index.

Booklist 37:326 Mr 15 '41

Christian Century 58:397 Mr 19 '41 20w

Wis Lib Bul 37:136 J1 '41

HORGAN, PAUL. The habit of empire [landscapes by Peter Hurd]. 114p $2 Harper

978.9 New Mexico—History. Oñate, Juan de. Acoma, New Mexico

Story of the expedition under Juan de Oñate, which set out from Mexico in 1599, and which resulted in the conquest and opening up for colonization of the southwestern part of the United States. The Indian village of Acoma, built on a rock five hundred feet high, figures prominently. The book was formerly published by Rydal in 1939.

"This little book in its special format, telling an old and half-forgotten story, the first conquest of the Southwest, in cleanly chiseled and brightly burnished prose-for-the-occasion (which is to say, as many a poem has been conceived and given special form), graced with Peter Hurd's half mystic landscapes washed in sunlight, is an item for all collectors of Americana, a sound as well as pleasant little volume for anybody to read and to own, for that matter." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p6 My 4 '41 240w

New Repub 104:769 Je 2 '41 50w

"It is one of the most stirring of all the almost-forgotten stories, certainly, in this country's history. And Paul Horgan has caught its stirring quality in brilliant prose. . . It is a clear and colorful picture all the way. Peter Hurd's 'landscapes' in lithograph hold the country's dream and portent. The book as a whole is like a rare color-etching, with the terrible rock of Acoma always beckoning with its mystery in the center."

+ N Y Times p9 Ap 20 '41 440w

"Well and sympathetically done."

+ New Yorker 17:91 Ap 19 '41 20w

Time 37:104 My 19 '41 40w

Wis Lib Bul 37:138 J1 '41

HORN, FLORENCE. Orphans of the Pacific; the Philippines; with phot. by Fenno Jacobs. 316p map $3.50 Reynal

919.14 Philippine Islands (W) 41-6357

Study of conditions in the Philippine Islands, describing the people, their customs, economic and social conditions, their internal problems, and their leadership. The author, an American woman, insists that it is time the United States gave their attention to the Philippine question, since they are slated to have their independence in 1946, and because Japan is an important consideration in any such move. Photographs grouped at end of volume. Index.

Reviewed by J. R. Hayden

Am Pol Sci R 35:1208 D '41 450w

Booklist 37:437 My 15 '41

"With no great depth and at times barely escaping superficiality, 'Orphans of the Pacific' manages to give an entertaining account of some phases of Filipino activity, an account essentially social and up to date. Emphasis is upon personalities and in this respect the author has a flair for picturesque and arresting externals." P. J. Searles

+ Books p12 Ap 20 '41 440w

Reviewed by B. L. Conway

Cath World 153:503 Jl '41 240w

"It is an informing, impartial and intelligent book."

+ Christian Century 58:500 Ap 9 '41 120w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 D '41

Reviewed by W. A. Fletcher

Commonweal 34:236 Je 27 '41 240w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:884 Jl '41 20w

"Sharply and penetratingly, Miss Horn explores every facet of life in the Philippines; social, religious, political, economic, military. More important, she examines the Filipinos, themselves; discovers what they think about their American 'protectors' and why." J. H. Smyth

+ Living Age 360:292 My '41 280w

"Necessarily in a rapid and comprehensive work there are likely to be minor mistakes in fact. This book, unfortunately, is not free from them. One or two of them, indeed, can hardly be called minor. . . Attention is called to this fact because the book is controversial at times, and persons who wish to take one or the other side of a controversy may be inclined to distort small mistakes, taken from their context, and challenge the major thesis of the book, which is well thought out and ably presented." R. A. Smith

+ N Y Times p9 My 18 '41 900w

"A highly interesting and even valuable report of the Philippine Commonwealth today as seen by a representative American. What might have been an outstanding contribution to American understanding of its Far Eastern responsibilities can perhaps best be summarized in the following phrase: Miss Horn didn't like Manila." Stuart Lillico

+ Sat R of Lit 23:8 Ap 12 '41 440w

Springf'd Republican p6 My 19 '41 480w

Reviewed by E. O. Hauser

Survey G 31:40 Ja '42 140w

Time 37:74 Mr 31 '41 450w

HORN, STANLEY FITZGERALD. Army of Tennessee; a military history. 503p il maps $3.75 Bobbs

973.742 U.S.—History—Civil war—Campaigns and battles. U.S.—History—Civil war—Regimental histories 41-21191

In the written annals of the American Civil war many volumes are devoted to the exploits of the Army of Northern Virginia, led by Robert E. Lee; few if any to the Army of Tennessee, which suffered thruout its history from inept commanders, which fought bravely, but was doomed to failure. This volume contains the story of that army: an army which "left its bloody footprints on the soil of Tennessee, Kentucky, Mississippi, Georgia, Alabama, South Carolina and North Carolina; it fought and marched over more territory than any other organized body of Confederate troops—an area approximately 300 by 600 miles—and it carried its battle flag to the very banks of the Ohio River." (Foreword) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:156 Ja 1 '42

"Mr. Horn has told this dramatic story well. His account is detailed, though far from exhaustive—that would require many volumes. It is informed, critical, and well balanced, its criticisms intelligent and just, its style dignified and vigorous." H. S. Commager

+ Books p5 N 30 '41 1550w

Reviewed by Paul Hutchinson

Christian Century 59:48 Ja 14 '42 150w

"It is a sound, well proportioned, enlightening life history of a half-forgotten host in the forgotten half of a war." F. F. Van De Water

+ N Y Times p3 Ja 4 '42 900w

"[An] excellent study." S. L. A. Marshall

+ Sat R of Lit 24:20 N 29 '41 650w

"The author's treatment of the commanders on both sides is critical but fair, and his work shows careful and thorough research. It is well written, moreover, and unexpectedly gains rather than loses by the background of new war against which it is projected."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 N 4 '41 1300w

HORNBORG, HARALD. Passion and the sword; tr. from the Swedish by Gösta Larsson. 318p $2.50 Appleton-Century

41-3906

"A novel which won a prize as the best in the Swedish language by a Finnish author. It is the story of the struggles of a newly appointed pastor in northern Finland of the eighteenth century to win over the people of his pastorate in spite of diabolical traps set by his enemies." Library J

Booklist 37:360 Ap 1 '41

"Since there is little of the rich building up of atmospheric detail that historical novels often rely on, the burden of conveying a sense of the peculiar world of Finland in the 1730s falls on the characterization. In that direction 'Passion and the Sword' comes through with a number of effective and unusual studies. . . They, along with the pastor, his Kristina, the drunken, Silenus-like Tarvolander and Captain von Wessing comprise a vivid gallery of historic Finnish types." Milton Rugoff

+ Books p8 F 16 '41 650w

"The story is typically Scandinavian in its restraint and its economy of artistic means. A certain grim fatalism seems to sustain the progress of the life presented in its pages. It is hard to tell whether the beauty of nature, the enjoyment of existence, the enigma of character, the mystery of human life, and the meaning and nature of joy and sorrow, are lessened or emphasized by this characteristic bleak intensity of experience." W. C. Derry

+ Boston Transcript p2 Mr 1 '41 320w

Library J 66:34 Ja 1 '41 50w

"Like many other Scandinavian stories this is grim, unrelieved melodrama; lush murder and sudden death abound. The characters scarcely come alive, but plot interest is strong and there is a lively picture of the customs of the period." J. S. Cleavinger

+ Library J 66:139 F 1 '41 100w

"A very absorbing narrative this, and one which will take a high place among Scandinavian novels already familiar to the English-reading public." John Courmou

+ N Y Times p7 F 23 '41 650w

New Yorker 17:82 F 15 '41 30w

"Color, motion, and drama are the main ingredients of this robust and artistic historical novel of eighteenth century Sweden and Finland. . . Aside from the three-dimensional figure of Ryselius, most of the other characters are also picturesque and believable. . . The translation from the Swedish is uncommonly faithful and sensitive." Holger Lundbergh

+ Sat R of Lit 23:11 Mr 8 '41 400w

Wis Lib Bul 37:116 Je '41

HORNE, JOICEY M. Art class in action; a collection of technical information and suggested activities for schools. 135p pl $2 Longmans

707 Art—Study and teaching

"This book gives general information to the classroom teacher of art and includes brief

HORNE, J. M.—Continued

chapters on a variety of activities. These include 35 subjects adaptable to schoolroom crafts." (School Arts) "The nucleus of the material outlined in the book was collected by the teachers in training at the Toronto Normal School for their own benefit. The author has carefully organized the various contributions and greatly expanded the general scope of the work until a veritable encyclopedia of art activities has been compiled." (El School J)

"The book contains valuable suggestions for all teachers of art and for all persons interested in the advancement of the subject in the schools." W. G. Whittford

- + El School J 42:312 D '41 420w
- School & Society 53:776 Je 21 '41 40w
- School Arts 41:8a Ja '42 60w

HORTON, WALTER MARSHALL. Can Christianity save civilization? 271p $2 Harper 261 Civilization, Christian 40-14418
For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"A wide reading of this prophetic book would surely hasten the Christian renaissance which this hour in history demands." Gordon Poteat
+ Crozer Q 18:174 Ap '41 420w

"Taken as a whole, this is a stimulating and timely work. Few theologians in America can equal Horton in vivacity of expression. He is vividly aware of the newer world-currents, and his racy sentences at times almost overwhelm one. This book is one of his better productions, and it is decidedly worth reading, especially those chapters dealing with religion and culture in previous historical contexts. Yet one lays this book aside with a nagging sense of misgiving. Horton lays bare with surgical incisiveness the lesions and focal infections of contemporary culture. Yet again and again in the course of the book, just as the reader is about to sense the gravity of the disease of our culture, he is quickly relieved by being offered a sure-cure remedy." H. S. Smith

- + J Religion 21:211 Ap '41 700w
- Reviewed by J. P. Jones
- Survey 77:228 Jl '41 200w
- Wis Lib Bul 37:50 Mr '41

HOSKINS, ROY GRAHAM. Endocrinology; the glands and their functions. 388p $4 Norton 612.4 Endocrinology 41-8161

"This book represents an attempt to present a succinct account of the more significant aspects of endocrinology as known today. . . In this undertaking [the author] has drawn frequently upon material utilized in a former work, The Tides of Life, which appeared in 1933 [Book Review Digest, 1933]. The material has been brought up to date and amplified with an eye particularly to the needs of biologists, psychologists, premedical students, and those physicians who desire a not-too-technical introduction to the science of the hormones. [The author has] also tried, however, to keep for the most part within the comprehension of the intelligent general reader." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 37:487 Je 15 '41

"Dr. Hoskins is not a Sunday supplement feature writer nor even a science reporter. He is a practicing research worker who in addition knows how to write. Therefore 'Endocrinology' is built on a solid foundation. It is a store of information for intelligent general readers, for biologists, medical students and for those physicians who are not endocrinologists." W. G. Lennox, M. D.

- + Books p8 Je 8 '41 440w

"It will be easily read by physicians, but will constitute difficult reading for one not familiar with the rather specialized vocabulary of the field of study." E. H. Rynearson, M.D.
Survey 77:312 O '41 100w

HOUGH, FRANK OLNEY. The neutral ground. 526p map $2.75 Lippincott

(W) 41-6174

Historical novel about the effects of the American revolution upon Westchester county, New York. The Westchester Guides, that dashing but loosely organized company, has as a member the young rakehell Robert Trowbridge. Sam Hilton, owner of a large Westchester estate, and a gentler sort than Robert, belongs to the opposite party. The picture is of the war in both camps, as the men ranged over the Westchester countryside, trying to bring the neutrals into one party or the other.

"Mr. Hough knows this country like his hand. He loves it, and out of his affection and his skill he has re-created the spirit of the place as it must have been, first in those days of doubt when the easiest course seemed to be neutrality, and then through those five long years of persecution when neither army held the ground but each would raid it for what they could get. This story, so full of masculinity and so truly stamped with the hard, wry humor of fighting men, shows us the civil war within the Revolution which we are all too prone to forget." Edward Weeks

- + Atlantic Jl '41 500w
- Booklist 37:439 My 15 '41
- Bookmark 2:16 N '41

"Without attempting an enormous canvas, Frank Hough has striven to view the war steadily and whole. The defects of his novel seem to me to lie in these very respects in which he excels his contemporaries, which is to say, in those respects in which the English historical novelists surpass and delight us—in turn of phrase, in subtlety, in those intangible nuances of irony, wit, charm, and style. His opening chapters have the quality not in the least imitative, for Mr. Hough has always had his own slant, of delighting the purely literary sense, outside the grip of the story. It is the best opening of an historical novel in a long time." F. T. Marsh

- + Books p1 My 4 '41 1550w
- Reviewed by C. F. Thompson
- Cath World 153:500 Jl '41 500w

"The most vivid and convincing element in the novel is the background. Mr. Hough lives in Westchester County and is intimately acquainted with the whole region. In using this locality as the scene of the novel he has contributed to our knowledge both of minor operations in the Revolution, and of the larger conflicting currents of opinion. He has written a good story besides." W. K. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 31 '41 480w

"Has special regional interest, solid history, and dashes of melodrama. Competent rather than highly skilled writing; overlong. Recommended." H. A. Wooster
+ Library J 66:305 Ap 1 '41 70w

"Mr. Hough has grown steadily in skill as a story teller, and 'The Neutral Ground' is technically the most satisfying novel he has given us to date. But he is at his unmistakable best in his description of the war in the Westchester Lines. . . It was a scene of swift, irregular operations, raids by night, and forced marches by day, of pitched battles between isolated patrols, of constant watchfulness to report, if possible to delay, an attack in force from New York, of espionage and counter-espionage so elaborate that it involved nearly every remaining inhabitant of the ravaged county. In his masterful grasp of its strategic aims, in his ability to render an exciting and intelligible account of the most bewilderingly swift events, Mr. Hough is second to none." Margaret Wallace

- + N Y Times p6 My 4 '41 750w

"The historical concepts underlying the book can be found in good histories. The story and characters are just old friends, fresh off the belt line. What gives 'The Neutral Ground' plus value for me (and possibly other New Yorkers) is something that has nothing to do with its literary qualities. There is a special, minor pleasure derivable from visiting, under Mr. Hough's guidance, such familiar places as New Rochelle and White Plains and noting how different, back in 1775, were their inhabitants, real-estate values, and commuting times to Grand Central." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:84 My 3 '41 900w

"The larger historical figures who enter the book come in plausibly and naturally. There are excellent sketches of Burr and Arnold, a good portrait of Rogers, a really first-class one of Washington. The Westchester Guides are admirably handled and the development of Abe Kromkhyte from country bumpkin to cool, daring, and ruthless partisan is excellently done. The women are much more conventional. . . . Neither as long nor as comprehensive as 'Oliver Wiswell' and lacking something of Mr. Roberts's driving force in the descriptive passages, 'The Neutral Ground' is a fairer and more balanced book. A sound historical novel, it should rank with the best of the season." S. V. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 23:10 My 3 '41 950w

Wis Lib Bul 37:93 My '41

HOUGH, HENRY BEETLE. That lofty sky. 273p $2.50 Doubleday

(W) 41-17251

The scene of this novel is South Africa; the time the early months of 1938. A young Nazi naval officer, off on a sightseeing tour while his ship lies in Capetown, is by a series of accidents branded as a deserter and is induced to flee. Tho he begins his flight as a loyal Hitler man, confused and bewildered, gradually his character changes, something about the country, and the love of an English girl, make him finally see the meaning of freedom.

"The plot of 'That Lofty Sky' moves swiftly, amusingly, informingly. Some of it is very funny; much of it is wise. 'That Lofty Sky' gives one a disturbing sense of having been written more with the head than with the heart. But it provides a steadily interesting version of Hitlerian psychology functioning, concretely, in the life and experience of a single German youth." F. H. Bullock

+ Books p5 S 21 '41 480w

Christian Science Monitor p10 N 1 '41 460w

"Henry Beetle Hough tells a concise, mature story. The plot is perhaps a bit too tricky in spots, a bit too constructed. But the main character and the main problem of the book come off with great clarity." Marianne Hauser

+ N Y Times p7 S 21 '41 800w

"Mr Hough writes with charm and delicacy. His first novel is pleasantly heart-warming. One is grateful for Hugo as if, in a desert, he had come upon a small and incredibly green oasis. While one still has water he does not feel too grieved if the oasis is only a mirage."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 19 '41 190w

HOUGH, LYNN HAROLD. The Christian criticism of life. 312p $2.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

261 Christianity—Philosophy. Civilization, Christian. Humanism (W)

The dean of Drew Theological seminary surveys the philosophy of humanism, and studies Christianity as the highest interpretation of human values, and the safeguard of civilization. "Teachers, ministers, students of philosophy, and all others who wish a larger, surer view of man's rightful place in a universe where too often not mind but 'things' are in the saddle," should read these pages." (Publisher's note)

Booklist 38:89 N 15 '41

"There is rich learning in this book, there is some eloquence which is genuine, there is a vigorous enthusiasm for a noble tradition in human thought, and a sincere attempt to preserve the human values in Christian experience. One hopes that without losing these qualities Dean Hough will yet give us a book on the Christian criticism of life which will bring humanism itself to Christian judgment."

D. D. Williams

+ Christian Century 58:1505 D 3 '41 1100w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell

Churchman 155:18 D 1 '41 250w

Reviewed by G. W. Davis

Crozer Q 19:75 Ja '42 750w

"This book is important because it is typical of an epoch. Religion has laid itself open to grave criticism. Among the critics Dean Hough has his place. But the sword of criticism that he wields is double-edged. It strikes churches, but it does not spare society as a whole. Secularity as a solution of life's problem, emancipation from the discipline of conscience and the claims of duty, surrender of the will to decide and believe, abandonment of the heritage accumulated by countless generations of builders whether of culture or of cathedrals, all of these are summed up in the thesis that man thus abdicates his appointed throne. How to restore the dynasty is the theme to which Dean Hough has applied his learning and his literary gifts. In this sense, his volume is a contribution to citizenship." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p18 N 2 '41 950w

HOUGHTON, NORRIS. Advance from Broadway; 19,000 miles of American theatre. 416p $3 Harcourt

792.0973 Theater—U.S. Amateur theatricals (W) 41-22179

This is a report based on a 19,000 mile trip during which the author visited commercial theatres, "little" theatres, summer theatres, theatrical schools, colleges and secondary schools with courses in dramatics, night clubs and tent shows, workers' theatres, and so forth from New England to California and back to Broadway. Index.

"The accuracy of the author's observations is supported by the fact that the annual meeting of the National Theatre Conference has just passed resolutions intended to rectify the mistakes noted in Advance from Broadway. It is, in fact, one of the merits of the book that its critical passages are as interesting as its travelogue. His recommendation of theatricalism as a means of enlivening the stage is astute." John Gassner

+ Atlantic Ja '42 250w

Booklist 38:109 D 1 '41

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books p26 N 30 '41 750w

"Mr. Houghton has a trained eye for the drama, and his report is both readable and informing."

+ Christian Century 58:1412 N 12 '41 60w

"Mr. Houghton's survey is intelligent and readable but we are disappointed that he found no place to mention any Catholic little theater except in a footnote. He is disappointed in the lack of accomplishment of the American National Theater and the small accomplishment of the National Theater Conference. Perhaps the Catholic Theater Conference may surprise him." E. V. R. Wyatt

+ — Commonweal 35:204 D 12 '41 650w

"Mr. Houghton is the author of Moscow Rehearsals [Book Review Digest, 1936] the most brilliant book in English about the Russian theater, and is a designer of note. This volume is a factual as well as inspirational survey of the theater as it exists in America today. . . . Concise, memorable, remarkably well written; he presents his findings

HOUGHTON, NORRIS—Continued

so clearly that there can be no mistaking his intentions. Supplants all previous volumes, including the invaluable Footlights Across America (1929) by Kenneth Macgowan. Highly recommended." George Freedley

+ Library J 66:840 O 1 '41 130w

"In setting down his observations, Mr. Houghton has rendered a distinct service to both the stage and the nation." John Gassner

+ N Y Times p8 D 28 '41 1050w

"In attacking so broad a field as the whole American scene Mr. Houghton runs into many obvious difficulties. Exception will be taken to some of his conclusions and strictures, reached as they must necessarily be after a brief and single visit, but his book has the great value of being a challenge and not a eulogy. His enthusiasm for the theatre is evident throughout, but he is clear-headed and entirely realistic about it, ready to analyze its deficiencies and even to question its survival value in this mechanized age." Rosamond Gilder

+ — Theatre Arts 25:919 D '41 1350w

HOUSELANDER, FRANCES CARYLL. This war is the passion; with foreword by Leonard Feeney. 185p $2 Sheed

248 War and religion 41-22299

A volume of meditations on the war and the Catholic way of life by a young English woman.

"Frances Caryll Houselander, though only a little English girl, writes like some old Saint out of hundreds of years ago. Her wisdom is immense. Her style is the style of the young. She tries to say everything all at once. She is like a poet essaying a burning image in every phrase. . . A fine foreword by Leonard Feeney makes the book still more splendid." T. B. Feeney

+ America 66:189 N 22 '41 950w

Reviewed by Ansgar Nelson, O.S.B.

Commonweal 35:275 Ja 2 '42 300w

HOW to win the war, by an Englishman. 145p $1.50 Knopf

940.5342 World war, 1939—Great Britain.

Great Britain—Politics and government.

Great Britain—Foreign relations 41-4252

"The thesis of this little volume is that Britain cannot win by arms alone but must be aided by revolts among the continental peoples now subject to the Nazis. The anonymous author analyzes the antediluvian methods and mentality that rule Britain's Foreign Office, Ministry of Information and Home Office, and shows that these must be made efficient and democratic-minded before Britain can pose as the savior of European peoples." Foreign Affairs

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:873 Jl '41 70w

"Directed as it is at British policy, this book can also be of great value in this country, for all too many Americans still fail to appreciate the scope of Hitler's ambitions and the techniques he employs to fulfill them. I would criticize only its cursory and over-optimistic treatment of the Russian problem." Keith Hutchison

+ Nation 152:330 Mr 22 '41 600w

HOWARD, SIR ALBERT. Agricultural testament. 253p il $4.50 (15s) Oxford

630 Agriculture. Soils Agr41-425

"[This book contains] Sir Albert Howard's well-tested conclusions as to the way of salvation for modern agriculture. They are based on 40 years experience and research in England, India, and the West Indies. A number of his methods bear a marked similarity to biodynamics. . . The first chapters in the book give evidence of the author's conviction that Nature's methods of agriculture—in the primeval forest, the prairie and the ocean—hold the clues for successful and continuous cultivation of the soil. . . The book is crammed with information. It shows how soil fertility can be restored, describes the highly successful Indore process of utilizing vegetable and animal wastes to the full and discusses the problem of soil aeration." Commonweal

"The author ranges appositely and entertainingly through various civilizations, eras and sectors of the modern globe to find evidence for his contentions." Edward Skillin, Jr.

+ Commonweal 33:522 Mr 14 '41 850w

Reviewed by R. O. Whyte

Nature 147:590 My 17 '41 750w

"Sir Albert Howard has done a great public service in making the 'Indore' process known to so many people. Full details of it are given in his book and suffice it to say that it has successfully produced plants and animals resistant to disease." L. F. Easterbrook

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:255 S 14 '40 1250w

"Sir Albert's 'Testament' is an invaluable, nay an indispensable, book for every tropical cultivator; it gives him a basis for the permanent exploitation of his land. But the reader may be warned to run lightly over the more theoretic and polemic chapters of Sir Albert's book; there are other methods than his of composting and 'humus' is not always to be read as the product only of the Indore Process."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p376 Ag 3 '40 800w

HOWARD, ELIZABETH. Sabina; il. by Susanne Suba. 269p $2.50 Lothrop

41-21287

"This story of Detroit and vicinity, when the Mexican War was beginning to simmer on the back of the national stove . . . concerns sixteen-year-old Sabina, who had never been really welcome among her relatives since her parents died. . . But things are due for a turn. Uncle Peter lives on the other side of Detroit. On her way thither she passes through the city and meets Uncle Roger, president of the railroad. . . Uncle Peter's family are reticent, but Sabina feels with them the confidence that comes from being part of a family. She champions a young stray falsely accused of horse stealing, and manages, in spite of restrictions placed on a young lady by Godey's Lady's Book, to prove his innocence. She is part of the clan that gathers at Detroit when Uncle Roger's lovely daughter has a society wedding, but with Uncle Peter, retiring and reliable, she remains, at last belonging somewhere." Books

Booklist 38:161 Ja 1 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ Books p22 N 2 '41 280w

Reviewed by Dorothea Dawson

Library J 66:1049 D 1 '41 50w

"A book which depends primarily upon character for its motivation, but which also contains a warm and vivid sense of a period and region new in juvenile fiction. Its charm finds ample expression in Susanne Suba's illustrations, which are the strongest and most vital which she has yet done." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p28 N 2 '41 150w

"'Sabina' is not a tense thriller but a vivid and instructive story, with just enough plot to hold young interest, and with illustrations by Susanne Suba."

+ Springfield Republican p7e N 2 '41 160w

HOWARD, JOHN TASKER, and MENDEL, ARTHUR. Our contemporary composers; American music in the twentieth century. 447p il $3.50 Crowell

780.9 Music—History and criticism. Musicians. Music—U.S. (W) 41-6762

Supplements Mr Howard's earlier book, Our American Music (Book Review Digest, 1931).

It presents a complete record of music written in the United States from 1930 to the present and contains short sketches of those who have written this music. Bibliography. Index.

"In this highly detailed volume of 447 pages Mr. Howard brings up to date the information provided in his well-known earlier volume, Our American Music. By it he wins our lasting gratitude for what must long remain the standard authority in its field, prepared with exemplary care and accuracy. Admirable as a reference book, it is not quite so satisfactory when what we seek is less mere facts than impressions, characterizations, orientations—in short, critical appraisal and guidance in an art field bewilderingly complex." D. G. Mason

+ — Am Hist R 47:384 Ja '42 650w

Booklist 37:488 Je 15 '41

Bookmark 2:7 My '41

"This is a big book, almost as big and fully as important as its predecessor. It answers practically all the questions that are likely to be asked about the American music of today. But it is far more than a reference work; it makes fascinating reading throughout the greater part of its 448 closely written pages."

Sigmund Spaeth

+ Books p22 Ap 6 '41 700w

"Just how much does this sort of exposition help? The answer is—study the book to learn who wrote what, and then listen to the music to find what it is like."

+ Christian Century 58:658 My 14 '41 200w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 9 '41 360w

"One may not agree always with Mr. Howard's emphases or judgments, but his survey is an invaluable geography of America's creative horizons in music." Howard Taubman

+ N Y Times p19 Ap 6 '41 700w

Social Studies 32:238 My '41 30w

Wis Lib Bul 37:90 My '41

HOWARD, KENNETH S. Methods of sales promotion. 273p $2.25 McGraw

658.85 Salesmen and salesmanship 41-1568

General information upon methods of sales promotion used by manufacturers and retailers. Includes supplementary chapters on institutional advertising, house organs, and use of radio. Index.

Booklist 37:403 My 1 '41

Management R 30:156 Ap '41 80w

HOWARD, MARY. Devil in my heart. 296p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Collins]

41-13059

Love story of a plain little English girl, whose eyes were her only beauty and whose forthrightness attracted a sophisticated young member of the R.A.F. Part of the action takes place in Egypt.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p30 N 23 '41 80w

"Miss Howard has a real gift for making the whole romantic tale interesting and plausible, even to the inheritance. Readers who liked her previous English-Egyptian story 'Uncharted Romance' will find this one equally enjoyable." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p24 N 16 '41 190w

HOWARD, MARY. Strangers in love. 308p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Collins]

41-11804

When Lisa Martin fell unexpectedly in love and married Grant Claythorpe, she found true happiness eventually but not before she had had to fight with Grant's former mother-in-law, half-owner of the Claythorpe mills, an autocratic, ambitious woman.

Books p6 J1 13 '41 180w

Springf'd Republican p7e J1 13 '41 160w

HOWARD, MARY. Uncharted romance [Eng title: It was romance]. 301p $2 Doubleday [7s 6d Collins]

41-2810

The story of Veronica and Michael Carson, who married after each of them had had a disappointment in love. Later Michael, a member of the R.A.F. stationed in Egypt, allowed his pride to build a barrier between them. His rescue from an airplane crash in the desert settled any doubts he had about Veronica.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p15 F 16 '41 140w

"There is no war stuff in the book, but plenty of fighting with the forces of nature in the desert, as well as battling among the women and wrangling among the men. This is Mary Howard's first novel for American readers, who will no doubt join their English sisters in admiring her romances." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p17 F 16 '41 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p269 My 6 '39 60w

HOWE, MARK ANTONY DE WOLFE. A venture in remembrance. 319p $2.50 Little

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. New England—Intellectual life (W) 41-16365

Informal autobiographical chapters by the author of Barrett Wendell, and His Times, winner of a Pulitzer prize for biography, and other biographical works. In his preface the author says: "[The book's] chief purpose is to fix attention not so much upon its author as upon backgrounds, personalities, and phases of life in the region and period he has known. The period, as it unfolded for him, was one in which he counts it good fortune to have lived." Index.

"[In this] charming volume of autobiography the author is revealed to those who are so unfortunate as not to know him at first hand as a delightful writer in a new field, humorous, modest, wise, and good. A New Englander, but not of Boston, he became a Boston institution. His account of that sea change is fascinating reading." R. E. Danielson

+ Atlantic O '41 300w

Booklist 38:34 O 1 '41

"Industry, skill and good taste have won Mr. Howe repute as a biographer, and 'A Venture in Remembrance' will enhance that repute through the charm with which he exercises the kindred art of autobiography." Royal Cortissoz

+ Books p4 Ag 17 '41 900w

Christian Science Monitor p12 S 27 '41 600w

Reviewed by L. L. Riley

Churchman 156:17 Ja 1 '42 150w

"In this small and charming book the present dean of Boston letters applies to himself the biographical skills which he has applied to so many eminent Bostonians. It is the most readable of Mark Howe's many books, and by no means the least important, for all his apologetic air about it, for here he writes of the world he knows so well as he himself sees it, and not through the eyes of some eminent, if pompous, Bostonian." Mason Wade

+ Commonweal 35:74 N 7 '41 250w

"This is a delightful and leisurely autobiography. Of especial interest are the chapters dealing with Mr. Howe's childhood and family life and the gradual development and growth of his literary ability." E. M. Olcott

+ Library J 66:614 J1 '41 90w

HOWE, M. A. D.—Continued
Reviewed by Odell Shepard
Nation 153:378 O 18 '41 700w

"Unlike many autobiographers, Mr. Howe is most successful (for me at least) not when he reaches back through the pathos of distance to his 'Boyhood Summers in Rhode Island' but when he describes his active, mature life, crowded with contacts with New England's and America's foremost writing men." Edward Wagenknecht

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 24 '41 1050w

"Gentle and charming memoirs."
+ New Yorker 17:56 Ag 30 '41 30w

"Mr. Howe escapes from that snobism which was the ruin of Thomas Bailey Aldrich. His pages breathe honesty and simplicity. . . If the old stock had all been like Mr. Howe, there would have been less tension and more tolerance. The excellence of his liberalism cannot remedy the deficiencies of a tradition, but he makes us remember that simplicity, courage, and humor can flourish even on Beacon Hill and Louisburg Square." H. M. Jones

+ Sat R of Lit 24:15 S 6 '41 550w
Wis Lib Eul 37:177 N '41

HOWELLS, THOMAS HENRY. Hunger for wholeness, man's universal motive. 307p il $3 World press

128 Personality 40-14412

"A 'wholistic' psychology of personality, founded on physical and biological processes. Interprets play, art, religion and the social order. Intended as a text for courses in personality, mental hygiene, scientific theory and general orientation and for supplementary use by teachers of literature, art, education, religion." School & Society

"If this sounds like the prospectus of a deep but dry book, the impression is misleading. It is deep enough, but is full of juice and sparkle. The author knows his psychology and uses it intelligently and effectively."

+ Christian Century 57:1483 N 27 '40 240w

"Analogy is frequently pressed unduly by the writer and too sweeping conclusions drawn. . . However, the book is filled with wise counsel. This is preaching of a high order. It is rich in ideas and should be heartily welcomed by religious workers and others who have to give advice on the real problems of life. As a philosophy of life, it is not vague, sentimental or materialistic." K. P. L.

+ J Philos 38:721 D 18 '41 420w

Reviewed by L. B. Bloch

Living Age 359:384 D '40 200w

School & Society 53:616 My 10 '41 30w

HOWIE, EDITH. Murder for Christmas. 314p
$2 Farrar

41-23669

Detective story.

"This is a most unusual bit of pre-Yuletide reading by a fairly new author who seems to be headed in the right direction." Will Cuppy

+ Books p32 N 30 '41 160w

"One can await 'Murder for Breakfast,' or whatever other murder the author next contrives, with expectations. She can do a brisk and exciting story, though she's not too good at unraveling." Mort. Post

+ New Repub 105:836 D 15 '41 150w

"After the holiday season, when the bills begin to come in, you will find this book just the thing to take your mind off your own petty troubles." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p32 N 30 '41 180w

"Exciting variation on family hatred theme, spooky from the start, fantastically characterized and satisfactorily deduced. Diverting."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:19 N 29 '41 40w

HRUSHEVSKY, MICHAEL. See Grushevskii, M. S.

HUBBARD, MARGARET ANN. Seraphina
Todd; il. by Manning de V. Lee. 308p $2
Macmillan

(W) 41-5700

Texas in 1777, when it was still a province of Spain, is the scene of this tale for readers of ten and older. Two families, the Todds and the O'Kanes, from New Orleans, escape from a boatload of traders attacked by the Indians, and after some difficulty succeed in making homes for themselves near the present San Antonio. Seraphina Todd, a brave little twelve-year-old is the heroine.

Booklist 37:444 My 15 '41

"Texas is by no means over-represented in historical fiction for our ten-year-olds; considering how much material there is, it sometimes seems surprising that so little, relatively speaking, has been used. This story uses a region where settlement had special difficulties, to show some difficulties settlement in the eighteenth century had in general to surmount." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 My 25 '41 400w

"The fresh locale, together with the picture of contrasting cultures, makes a thoroughly interesting story, full of action and well filled with a feeling for the early history of San Antonio." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:215 My '41 110w

"Colorful details are given of life in a mission in pioneer days in the Southwest, and of the carefree Spaniards and their precarious existence. While the book may not have the wide appeal of Little Whirlwind, it is a story of a period and locale perhaps unfamiliar to readers of ten to fourteen." E. A. Groves

+ Library J 66:403 My 1 '41 150w

"Though Seraphina is not so refreshing nor quite so distinct a personality as Chatty Mackenzie of 'Little Whirlwind', Miss Hubbard's first book, and though the story slows up a little in the middle, there is action aplenty at both ends to hold the attention of girls from 10 to 14. We have had very few stories of early Texas and it is especially fitting now when we are drawing closer in spirit to our Spanish neighbors that we should have such a vivid and friendly portrayal of the romantic life of one of the early colonies." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 J1 20 '41 400w

"The story is designed for young readers, but some of their elders will appreciate it quite as much. There are fights and fiestas, and at the end an heroic action by Seraphina ends an Indian attack at midnight."

+ Springfd Republican p7e My 11 '41 240w

HUBLER, RICHARD G. Lou Gehrig; the iron horse of baseball. 206p il $2 Houghton

B or 92 Gehrig, Lou (W) 41-25309

Biography of the New York boy who became one of the ablest of all first basemen, and whose career in athletics brought him hundreds of friends. Written for readers of eleven and older. Contains a tabulation of Gehrig's baseball records.

Booklist 38:157 Ja 1 '42

"A handy, quick-reading biography. . . Mr. Hubler's book is virtually all about baseball, and it makes out Gehrig to be very nearly perfect in every respect, which may be straining a point. But why quibble? It is good stuff."

+ Books p26 D 14 '41 110w

Reviewed by Florence O'Gara

Library J 67:42 Ja 1 '42 100w

HUDSON, ALEC, pseud. See Holmes, W. J.

HUDSON, JOHN CHRISTOPHER. Corrosion of iron and steel; being a general account of the work of the Corrosion com. of the iron and steel inst. and the British iron and steel federation; with an introd. by W. H. Hatfield and T. Swinden. 319p il $5.75 Van Nostrand [18s Chapman]

620.1122 Corrosion and anti-corrosives [41-7700]

"Addressed to those engaged in the manufacture, fabrication and use of iron and steel products in the hope that the Committee's work will be made directly useful to them." The author is the Official Investigator to the Committee. Subjects included are the economic problems of rust, protective coverings and coatings, fundamental research work both projected and in process, and numerous other equally pertinent topics." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"It was stipulated that the book be simple in form yet accurate in detail which would appeal to all those who wish to apply the results of this work and at the same time be not without appeal to the scientific worker in securing a continuance of the research effort. The Committee has performed much valuable work and the author is to be complimented on the manner in which he has selected and arranged the material."

+ Chem & Met Eng 47:654 S '40 180w

Nature 147:307 Mr 15 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 25:45 O '40

HUESTON, ETHEL (POWELSON) (MRS E. J. BEST). Preacher's wife. 308p $2.50 Bobbs B or 92 Powelson, Mrs Julia Anne (Buell) (W) 41-9453

Biography of an Iowa matriarch, the author's mother. She was a Methodist minister's wife, the mother of eleven children, all of whom she brought up on her preacher husband's salary of a few hundred dollars a year. Born in 1854, she lost her own mother at the age of nine, but lived out all the rest of the years of her life taking care of other people, beginning with her own two brothers, and extending her mothering beyond her own large family to anyone who needed her.

Booklist 38:10 S '41

"A discriminating portrait of a woman for whom one gains increasing respect and liking, even affection, as the story goes forward—just as her children did. It is also a portrait of a way of life which had its charms as well as its rigors and skimpiness. Mrs. Hueston does not sentimentalize the joys of a big family nor gloss over the discomforts of parsonages which were equipped with stoves and pumps and, no matter how large, almost always over-crowded." Mary Ross

+ Books p2 Je 15 '41 700w

"Were it not for the familiar intimate touches so generously mingled with the crudities and trials of small-town life, Ethel Hueston's story of her own mother's experiences would be almost too revealing. . . The daughter has provided for her public one of the best of her several books. None but an artist of her insight, perspicacity, and genuine love for the realities could have pictured so faithfully and accurately the story of the struggles of a brave mother, her happy-go-lucky preacher father, and the eleven children in the small towns and somewhat less crude college cities of America's prairie West a generation or more ago. . . Such reading will bring to all of us a better understanding, a clearer realization, and a sense of sincere gratitude." F. L. P.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Jl 8 '41 500w

"This story should take a distinct and popular place among rural and regional books. For neither Charley Powelson nor his wife could be pigeon-holed as types—and Charley was a very rampant individual. . . It may be read with well-satisfied attention as the story of a more or less turbulent, yet always innately devoted and in the main contented, family group. . . But in a deeper and more specialized significance this book is a character study which is both subtle and courageous."

+ N Y Times p3 Je 15 '41 600w

"Readable, humorous, Americana."

+ New Yorker 17:79 Je 14 '41 40w

HUGHES, MRS DOROTHY BELLE (FLANAGAN). The bamboo blonde. 314p $2 Duell

41-5435

Mystery story.

"The wordage in this one is okay and the characters are really human, if you're fussy about those things." Will Cuppy

+ Books p10 Ag 3 '41 150w

Reviewed by Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p12 Jl 27 '41 140w

"Sinister and unscrupulous characters seeking vital war-time radio data give intricately-built and urbane-written tale that timely touch. Up to snuff."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 Ag 2 '41 40w

HUGHES, HELEN SARD. Gentle Hertford, her life and letters. (Wellesley college publication) 506p il $4 Macmillan

B or 92 Somerset, Frances (Thynne) Seymour, duchess of 40-32705

"A full-length portrait of that estimable woman the Countess of Hertford, née Frances Thynne, who was the friend and the patroness of James Thomson, John Dyer, William Shenstone, and other poets of the first half of the [eighteenth] century." Sat R of Lit

"The narrative portions of this biography are greatly overweighted by the collection of letters, journals, household accounts and other documents. This bulky material does not afford very lively reading. . . Perhaps the most interesting portions of the book are the occasional remarks upon new publications—the latest poem or the latest novel. The editorial work has been done with the greatest care." Books p10 Jl 27 '41 130w

Reviewed by J. C. Skinner

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 15 '41 450w

"Every student of eighteenth century letters will be grateful to Miss Hughes for this excellent book." C. D. A.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:19 Mr 15 '41 270w

HUGHES, MRS MARY VIVIAN (THOMAS). London family between two wars. 180p il $3 (7s 6d) Oxford

B or 92 A41-1407

"In this, the latest of her autobiographical volumes, Mrs. Hughes brings us to the beginning of the war. . . Going to Cuffley, still a village at the end of the Great War. . . Mrs. Hughes set to work to educate her sons on very little money, much of which was earned by her work as school inspector and reviewer. . . She makes everything adventurous—the building of a little house, the buying of a little car and learning to drive it; a journey to London, even the very 'chores' of everyday life in her servantless home." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by Harold Hobson

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 5 '41 60w

"This book about English 'intellectuals' introduces us to people well worth knowing—people of sparkling minds and rooted culture, of energetic labor, gay courage and the completely natural independence that joins enterprise to content."

+ N Y Times p6 Je 8 '41 550w

HUGHES, M. V.—Continued

"This quiet little record is not without its sociological implications, regarded as a picture of one section of English life between the wars. It is a very fine section to which the Hughes family belongs: the professional middleclass. People of complete integrity, sound scholarship, small income; people of absolutely reliable moral courage and, above all, of a high and individual standard of taste." Phyllis Bentley

+ Sat R of Lit 24:8 J1 26 '41 700w

Spec 166:22 Ja 3 '41 170w

"It is not in the externals of this quiet chronicle of a scholarly family life that the importance of the book lies, but in its re-statement of inevitable and changeless values that are independent of death, of warfare, of separation and of comparative lack of money."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p646 D 21 '40 370w

HUGHES, RUPERT. City of angels. 349p $2.50 Scribner

41-3907

Warren Thorburn, a young college student earning his way thru an engineering course, happened to be almost too handsome. One day he saved a prominent business man from drowning, and had his picture in all the papers. A movie talent scout saw it, and Hollywood followed, with first a national reputation, and then a sudden descent.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p11 Mr 16 '41 360w

"As unreal and unconvincing as his environment, our hero moves through the book through no volition of his own. Even the author does not know him well enough to call him by his first name more than occasionally. Like the lifeguard-actor, the other characters are all three feet off the ground in their wanderings." Jane Ayres

— Boston Transcript p3 Mr 22 '41 300w

Reviewed by Otis Ferguson

New Repub 104:443 Mr 31 '41 40w

"Rupert Hughes, who knows his ground intimately, does not try for satire. He tells in 'City of Angels' a story of wild improbability. But he tells it directly and with a straight face, knowing very well that it not only can happen, but has happened, in Hollywood." Margaret Wallace

N Y Times p7 Mr 9 '41 700w

"A frothy and at times highly amusing story of the incredible land of Hollywood. On the face of it the story seems fantastic, but it probably is not. The meteoric success portrayed by Mr Hughes is a thing that has happened and will no doubt happen again. . . For all its rather hackneyed plot, 'City of Angels' remains a sprightly and entertaining narrative."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 16 '41 360w

HUGHES, THOMAS HYWEL. The psychology of preaching and pastoral work. 266p $2.25 Macmillan [8s 6d Allen, G]

250 Psychology, Religious. Preaching

[40-11355]

"The emeritus principal of the Scottish Congregational College, Edinburgh, applies the findings of the 'new' psychology to the work of the minister as preacher and pastor. To a considerable extent this book builds upon the author's earlier work, The New Psychology and Religious Experience (1933). In fact, the introductory first chapter, 'The Basic Principles of the New Psychology,' is largely a condensation of the earlier book, and the reader is frequently referred to that volume. But the bulk of the book deals with the subjects indicated in the title. Part I discusses 'The Psychology of Preaching,' and Part II deals with 'The Psychology of Pastoral Work.' The concluding Part III, 'General Considerations,' comprises two chapters on 'Other Aspects of Work' and 'The Minister Himself.' Christian Century

"The book does not contain anything especially new, but it brings together in a way which will be helpful to many pastors the findings of the new psychology and their application to the round of ministerial duties." C. T. Holman

Christian Century 58:1082 S 3 '41 650w

"The book will give a psychological basis of understanding of his work to any pastor who reads it, and though it is written from the point of view of the Free Church minister it should be read with equal profit by 'Catholic' preachers and pastors. If one book is to be chosen as a text book on this subject, this should be the one." H. J. Simpson

+ Churchman 155:18 J1 1 '41 200w

HULL, RICHARD, pseud. See Sampson, R. H.

HUME, EDGAR ERSKINE. Medical work of the Knights hospitallers of Saint John of Jerusalem; foreword by Ludovico Chigi-Albani; pref. by Sir Aldo Castellani. 371p il $3 Johns Hopkins press

929.711 Malta, Knights of. Charities, Medical. War—Relief of sick and wounded

40-30162

"Although the other practical needs this Order was founded to meet have long since disappeared, one aspect of its work is as important now as when it was started in the eleventh century. For nearly nine hundred years the Knights have carried on their medical work in spite of all the difficulties and reverses they have had to face. Dr. Hume, who is both a Knight and an officer in the Army Medical Corps, has written [the account of this part of the organization]." Commonweal

"This work was written by a Knight Hospitaller 'as a labour of love' and also, it seems, for the glorification of the order. Obviously a work produced under such influences cannot be considered a thoroughly objective piece of critical scholarship, and the reader will find numerous panegyric passages which detract from the mass of excellent material in the book. . . For the recent period (since 1798) the author's emphasis is quite properly on the ambulance and hospital service of the order in wartime and in connection with the Red Cross. In this section, more noticeably than elsewhere, the account is devoted to a constant and thinly veiled laudation of the order's achievements. There are other irksome factors: the bibliography, in one general list, lacks critical analyses, and throughout the book authorities are cited in the body of the text. There are also a number of outstanding excellences, among them generous quotations from original sources and a large number of unusually fine pictures accommodately placed alongside the texts they illustrate." L. C. MacKinney

+ — Am Hist R 46:857 J1 '41 490w

"A fascinating account of a great achievement."

+ Commonweal 33:131 N 22 '40 70w

HUNT, LAWRENCE. A letter to the American people [Eng title: An American speaks]. 131p $1.50 Putnam [5s Hodder]

940.5373 World war, 1939—U.S. U.S.—Foreign relations 41-11145

A New York lawyer makes this plea for Americans to face the responsibilities of the present crisis, in order that we may maintain our own freedom and help Great Britain. The book is especially addressed to the American appeasers and isolationists, and puts before them the salient facts of the present situation.

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 J1 '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:199 O '41 20w

"Clear thought, moral earnestness and hard hitting mark this little book. . . We can well imagine this book being read by sincere and confused men and women who have unthinkingly supported the isolationist idea and showing them their error."

+ N Y Times p2 Ag 3 '41 390w

Reviewed by Samuel Grafton

Sat R of Lit 24:5 Ag 2 '41 280w

"A Letter to the American People is not a letter so much as a harangue. The author employs all the tricks of the rabble-rouser, though his demagoguery is full of pungent truth. . . Though partisan his statement of the case is excellent. Against a background of simplified historical fact, he has adduced compelling argument." R. C.

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 20 '41 400w

Times (London) Lit Sup p378 Ag 9 '41 150w

HUNT, MABEL LEIGH. Billy Button's butter'd biscuit; il. by Katherine Milhous. 62p $1 Stokes

(W) 41-51600

The story hidden behind the old B jingle of Peter Piper's Practical Principles of Plain and Perfect Pronunciation, published 200 years ago. It seems that a baby bear captured the original buttered biscuit, thereby necessitating a new supply all around, for Billy, his uncle, and the bear. For children of three and four.

Booklist 37:328 Mr 15 '41

"The jingling story appeals to four-year-olds and may strengthen their later application to reading." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 F 23 '41 150w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 17:103 Mr '41 30w

"If ever a book has cried aloud for ownership, this enchanting little one does. . . Throughout, words beginning with B are literally and engagingly sprinkled. Katherine Milhous' illustrations are delightful. . . It is a safe prediction that much loving handling will wear out every copy put in the hands of small children, although the reading itself must be done for them by grown-ups." Miriam Snow

+ Library J 66:222 Mr. 1 '41 90w

"Any one who has ever heard children giggling over the intricacies of Peter Piper, Pumpkin Eater, can guess the effect this tale will have, especially as it has, on its own small scale, real excitement and suspense. It is printed in a little book comfortably shaped for small hands and further enlivened by Katherine Milhous's drawings, which have the quaintness of an earlier age, but a good deal more vivacity." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 27 '41 320w

"The writing is rather oppressively cute, but young children will be amused by the alliteration and the pictures in old woodcut style are good."

+ — New Yorker 17:86 My 24 '41 40w

Wis Lib Bul 37:159 O '41

HUNT, MABEL LEIGH. John of Pudding Lane; drawings by Clotilde Embree Funk. 161p $1.75 Stokes

(W) 41-15927

Story of child life in colonial Boston, when Thomas Fleet had his printing shop in Pudding Lane, and his family lived upstairs. The children reveled in their Grandmother Goose's gay rhymes, until finally Thomas Fleet printed them in a small pamphlet and sold them for two coppers a piece. Another budding printer, Benjamin Franklin, is one of the characters.

Booklist 38:116 D 1 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p9 D 14 '41 360w

"The phrasing is just quaint enough to recreate Colonial Boston with its christenings, apprenticeships, Sabbath observances, muster days, and love of the sea. . . Recommended for fifth to seventh grades." J. E. Wooster

+ Library J 66:678 Ag '41 150w

"Well done." Zoë Durrell

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 N 8 '41 20w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 2 '41 180w

HUNTER, ALLAN ARMSTRONG. Secretly armed. 159p $1.50 Harper

172.4 Peace

41-10228

"The author's evident purpose in writing the book is to deal a stout blow to militarism, and to offer a better way than the 'war-method' to solve the difficult problems of human relationships, personal and international. In laying out his campaign against Mars, he singles out fear as the first foe to be faced. He insists that there is a 'mysterious principle' working in us which we should trust, and which will replace the desire for 'safety first' with 'creative expectation' as the motivating principle in our lives. After giving many striking instances of how this has worked in the promotion of friendliness and normality, he points to 'paranoid nationalism' as the pressing evil which men of faith must overthrow today." Crozer Q

Reviewed by J. S. Watson

Christian Century 58:984 Ag 6 '41 490w

Churchman 155:35 N 15 '41 40w

"The volume is ably written and never lets the interest of the reader flag. Even the pages which may not carry conviction have a challenging and inspiring quality." Rittenhouse

+ Crozer Q 18:346 O '41 360w

HUNTINGTON, ELLSWORTH, and CUSHING, SUMNER WEBSTER. Principles of human geography, by Ellsworth Huntington; 5th ed. largely rewritten; based on original work in collaboration with Sumner W. Cushing. 594p il maps $3.50 Wiley

573.4 Anthropogeography (W) 40-34580

"The text is generally revised, and the author states that approximately half of the material is new. The diversity of the lands in low latitudes, and microgeography, are two topics given special treatment. Maps and new illustrations have been added." (Booklist) For fourth edition see Book Review Digest, 1934.

Booklist 37:218 Ja 15 '41

Books p37 D 8 '40 60w

HUNTINGTON, MRS HARRIET E. Let's go to the seashore; il. with phot. by the author. 89p $2 Doubleday

591.92 Marine fauna—Juvenile literature

(W) 41-51808

"A book about the small creatures that live in the sea, on the seashore, and on the rocks under the water, written to satisfy the curiosity of very young children when they begin to ask questions about the small things they see and find on the beach, including the sand and sea itself." Publisher's note

Booklist 37:496 Je 15 '41

"This is not a book for the commercial bathing beach, but for seaside regions where children play in sandy coves or beside rock pools, finding there the creatures of an underwater world." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 My 25 '41 190w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 17:289 Jl '41 70w

"This book will be useful with pre-school children and for the eight- and nine-year-old's own reading." Marian Herr

+ Library J 66:522 Je 1 '41 60w

Reviewed by Jessie Stanton & E. W. Steele
New Repub 105:837 D 15 '41 20w

HUNTINGTON, H. E.—Continued

"Let's Go to the Seashore" will greatly enrich a seaside holiday, and is an important item in the book experience of young children." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p8 Je 29 '41 360w

HUNTRESS, ERNEST HAMLIN, and MULLIKEN, SAMUEL PARSONS. Identification of pure organic compounds. 691p $7.50 Wiley

547 Chemistry, Organic. Chemistry, Analytic—Qualitative 41-8607

"This volume presents in organized and accessible form a summary of data on a selected list of organic compounds containing carbon and hydrogen, or carbon, hydrogen, and oxygen. It will be found useful not only to students engaged with courses in organic qualitative analysis but also to all chemists who have occasion to utilize any of the compounds herein considered. . . Unusual care has been given to the selection of the 1364 compounds whose characteristics are listed in this volume. Many of these represent materials now of common occurrence and greatest practical importance but not even known forty years ago. Conversely, many of the 2300 individuals mentioned in the precursor of this book [Mulliken's Identification of Pure Organic Compounds, 1904] have here been excluded as of but slight interest. Since this book may perhaps find use in courses of instruction, only those materials have generally been included which are commercially available or which can be prepared with ease from accessible materials." (Pref) Indexes.

"The first volume of the new work leaves no doubt that the revision is being done well. This book is, however, much more than a second edition. In fact, the treatment of the compounds is essentially new. . . The book is intended to accompany a system of identification (soon to be published) and contains a short outline of this system. The appearance of this and other volumes now contemplated will be awaited with great interest. In the meantime the present volume will be of inestimable value as a reference book." R. C. Fuson

+ Am Chem Soc J 63:2537 S '41 180w
N Y New Tech Bks 26:39 Jl '41

HURD, CLEMENT. The merry chase; il. by [the author]. unp $1.50 Random house

41-14764

Picture story book, describing for the very young the things which can so easily happen when a dog meets a cat, which he thinks needs to be chased.

"One is reminded, on certain pages, of Slovenly Peter. Though the drawings are successful in a narrative sense, the naïveté seems self-conscious." Warren Chappell

+ — Horn Bk M 17:453 N '41 20w

"The 3-to-6 year olds who last year took Mr. Hurd's 'The Race' to their hearts will find this new picture book equally exciting and even more brilliant. . . There is very little text in fine large print, and the many details of the pictures in the brightest of colors assure prompt and repeated returns to the book." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p12 N 23 '41 110w

HURD, EDITH THACHER (MRS CLEMENT HURD). Sky high; il. by Clement Hurd. [34p] $1 Lothrop

629.13 Aeronautics—Juvenile literature

41-14651

"The big transport ships play an important part in our country's life. Sky High will answer many questions about these big sky liners. It tells the complete story of a flight, from the preparation for take-off to the check-up after the flight is finished. The simple brief explanations will be easily understood by young boys and girls, though many older readers will be interested as well." Library J

Reviewed by D. M. MacDonald

Library J 66:846 O 1 '41 100w

Reviewed by Jessie Stanton & E. W. Steele
New Repub 105:837 D 15 '41 20w

"Commonplace." Raymond Holden

— Sat R of Lit 24:9 N 8 '41 20w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 14 '41 90w

HURD, MARY ABBY. Portraits of Jesus in the New Testament, and other sermons; foreword by Arthur L. Swift, jr. 174p $1.75 Assn. press

252 Sermons 41-3155

Ten sermons by a woman pastor, who died after only a few years of successful work in a rural Maine pastorate. Six of the sermons present interpretations of Jesus in the four gospels and in the epistles of James and Paul.

"The sermons show a keen and cultivated mind, a firm grasp upon religious realities, and a keen awareness of the needs of people in our time."

+ Christian Century 58:259 F 19 '41 50w

"Rather long for this hurley, burley age, the sermons are a curious blend of theological obscurantism such as marked my own sermons half a century ago (when just out of the seminary) and an expression of the rippling, pulsating and eager young lives of today. We are sure the two rural congregations in Maine, privileged to hear the sermons, were benefitted and inspired." A. L. B-C.

+ Churchman 155:34 F 15 '41 70w

HURLEY, DORAN. Says Mrs Crowley, says she! 254p $2 Longmans

41-4626

Short stories in which are embodied the sentiments of a staunch New England Irish Catholic, Mrs Crowley herself. She has opinions on many subjects—sermons, church holidays, fifth columns, books, and Ireland—all of which she speaks upon with pungent wit.

"Mrs. Crowley has positive views on many topics. . . Mr. Hurley reports her with admiration and zest." Lisle Bell

+ Books p21 Mr 23 '41 90w

"To all who have found amusing, loveable characteristics in the Irish we affirm that this is a book worthy of their attention."

+ Cath World 153:121 Ap '41 80w

"Mr. Hurley's clever and amiable expositions of folk-lore of Irish Catholicism are familiar to many readers. They are always truly observed and reported; they are exasperatingly accurate and they have much of the arrogant charm which one associates with the triumphant Irish. I am in the minority, I suppose, but herself, Mrs. Crowley, does not have half the interest that several of the minor characters possess." J. G. E. Hopkins

+ — Commonweal 33:580 Mr 28 '41 180w

HUSBAND, RICHARD WELLINGTON. General psychology. 513p il $2.75 Farrar

150 Psychology

40-9460

"A new textbook in the field of general psychology. . . The chapters are grouped under these headings: Psychology and Its Aims (1 chapter), Genetic Background (2 chapters); Neural and Sensory Processes (3); Motivation, Emotions, and Personality (7); Individual Differences and Intelligence (5); Learning, Memory, and Thought (4). Thus this is another text evidencing the trend in psychology teaching in America today, in which motivational and personality problems are given more and earlier attention and the intellectual given less and later." Am J Psychol

"As a device for teaching, Husband's book has good and bad points. It clearly aims at enlisting the student's interest; and this is done without employing techniques of the newspaper columnist and the candid camera, but maintaining a dignity of presentation on a level with that of the student's texts in other college courses. . . . In places the handling of the material seems to border on the hasty and careless," J. F. Dashiell

+ — Am J Psychol 54:459 J1 '41 900w

"The work is authoritative, based on scientific studies and has adequate references. Those for quotations are given in footnotes and those for described studies are given at the end of each chapter. In the way of pedagogical devices, the book has clear and adequate headings, good, clear and well-placed illustrations and frequent summaries. But the latter do not occur systematically. . . . Teachers who are looking for an interesting up-to-date book in psychology for beginners at the junior-college level should examine this book," H. B. Reed

+ — School & Society 54:526 D 6 '41 490w

HUSSLEIN, JOSEPH CASPER, ed. See Roman Catholic church. Pope, 1878-1903 (Leo XIII). Social wellsprings

HUSTED, MRS HELEN McLANAHAN. Timothy Taylor, ambassador of goodwill; the story of an English boy [poem] il. by A. Mireur. [63p] $1 Coward-McCann

41-4026

A story in rhymed verse, recording the experiences of a small English boy in America as an "ambassador of goodwill" during the war.

"Written in colloquial verse, the flow is so easy that reading aloud is imperative and stopping midway impossible. I was involuntarily set against it beforehand, as an obvious follow-up of the success of 'The White Cliffs,' but on its own merits it won me over. . . . I have read the book aloud—to a young English guest and to my own compatriots; none of us found a false note," M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 F 23 '41 360w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '41

HUTCHESON, ERNEST. A musical guide to the Richard Wagner Ring of the Nibelung [with Table of themes in back pocket]. 216p $2.75 Simon & Schuster

782.2 Wagner, Richard—Ring of the Nibelung (W) 41-1343

This book for both student and layman is designed to show the connection between leit-motiv and story in Wagner's Ring of the Nibelung.

Booklist 37:289 Mr 1 '41

"There are few who are equipped to study with profit the original scores of Wagner's Ring operas. All others, ambitious to enrich their inner lives with an understanding of one of man's greatest achievements, will need a guide, a systematic and faithful analysis of the works in question, in which the poetry, the plots, the staging and the musical motives are clearly set forth in an arrangement at once readable and convenient for reference. Such a guide is presented by Dr. Hutcheson."

+ Books p21 S 14 '41 360w

Pratt p18 D '41

"A book by so distinguished a musician, teacher and composer as Mr Hutcheson is bound to be of incalculable aid to the student."

+ Springf'd Republican p8 F 18 '41 330w

"It is unusual to be told by a musician that the first step in understanding the Ring is to read the libretto, preferably in German; it is even more unusual to be cautioned not to skip the stage directions. But Ernest Hutcheson is right. Both laymen and students of music will find this new guide an indispensable aid."

+ Theatre Arts 25:320 Ap '41 180w

HUTCHINSON, ARTHUR STUART-MEN-TETH. He looked for a city. 425p $2.75 Duell [9s 6d Joseph, M]

41-51510

"The tale of how an English vicar and his brave wife bear up under the strains caused by the imprisonment and death of their eldest son, a high-minded conscientious objector in the World War, and by their kindhearted harboring of a German woman who had become part of the family in youth long years before, but who was suspected of being an enemy sympathizer. The story is relieved and intensified by incidental happy and sorrowful episodes provided by family, school, social, and church life involving one other son (a naval hero), the two daughters (especially the youngest), and various town characters." Library J

Booklist 37:241 F 1 '41

"'He Looked for a City' has that naive and unconscious pathos which one gets in looking over old photographs and seeing, when they were young and eager and hopeful, faces that one has known in after years. . . . But the war, on which the story turns and through which the Brecques are so clearly revealed, gives immediacy, rather than a nostalgic charm, to Mr. Hutchinson's novel. You are almost sure to enjoy and respect the Brecques, even if—like the author—you do not share all their beliefs, and so to follow their story eagerly to the end." Mary Ross

+ Books p4 Ja 12 '41 750w

"If you dote on crying willow, willow over sweetly sentimental stories of the good pastor meting out rewards to the virtuous and converting the indifferent, you won't enjoy Mr. Hutchinson's realistic picture of a vicar and his flock. But if your spine needs stiffening, it may comfort you to read this courageous affirmation of faith." Margaret Clark

+ — Boston Transcript p1 Ja 11 '41 440w

"Gordon Brecque is the characteristic Hutchinson hero, an inspiration to some, an aggravation to others."

+ — Cath World 153:252 My '41 270w

Christian Century 58:464 Ap 2 '41 130w

Reviewed by Clifton Macon
Churchman 155:18 Mr '41 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '41

Reviewed by L. N. Feipel
Library J 66:32 Ja 1 '41 140w

"In family and parochial affairs Brecque is a variant of Mr. Hutchinson's typical suffering hero, and as priest he was under-valued. His charming wife and the book's best though minor character, a sturdy-minded ritualistic parson with a trace in him of the comedian, save this from being a depressing novel." Harold Brighouse

+ — Manchester Guardian p7 O 18 '40 160w

"As a novelist Mr. Hutchinson has many faults. His style is stiff and formal. He is sentimental. He overdraws his characters. One of the vicar's daughters is adulated and light-minded beyond credence; the other is an equally incredible dominating prig and bore. But they are individuals, even though their individuality is overdone. And the vicar's patience, his forbearance, his charity, even his likable stupidity are not overdone. It is the power of goodness for its own sake that makes an often unskillful novel alive and interesting." Dorothy Van Doren

+ — Nation 152:105 Ja 25 '41 600w

"Back in 1920, this kind of thing, written with the horrible quivering 'tenderness' that Mr. Hutchinson has made so peculiarly his own, seemed deeply moving. I do not prophesy the same success for this novel as for the earlier one, if only because individual perfection now seems less important and the struggles of vicars with stipends of only £700 a year less

HUTCHINSON, A. S.—Continued
impressive. But Mr. Hutchinson's powers have not deserted him. Anyone wanting a good cry might do worse than He Looked for a City." George Orwell

— New Statesman & Nation 20:499 N 16 '40 240w

"Simple human goodness is an excellent subject for a novel. Unfortunately it is also an exceedingly difficult one. The Rev. Gordon Brecque's story is neither well thought out nor well written. It fails, so, in interest as in clarity." Katherine Woods

— N Y Times p23 Ja 12 '41 550w

"The vicar, his wife, and the two sons are excellently done, the daughters are overdrawn to the point of caricature. The period—from the middle eighteen-nineties to the nineteen-thirties—contributes soundly to the development of character. A very moving book with an old-fashioned flavor, partly the result of the rather formal, old-fashioned style. Read it."

+ — New Yorker 16:64 Ja 11 '41 100w

Time 37:76 Ja 13 '41 310w

Times [London] Lit Sup p517 O 12 '40 310w

HUTCHISON, GRAHAM SETON (GRAHAM SETON, pseud.). The V plan. 386p $2.50 Smith & Durrell [9s Eyre]

41-23671

A tale of the British secret service in France just before and after the beginning of war.

Booklist 38:160 Ja 1 '42

"It is all very well for the reader to shake his head and ask himself whether human beings have ever been so crassly stupid, whether even stage Englishmen have seemed as asinine as this, whether such conversations are even faintly probable. He will still read on. And 'The V Plan' will probably sell, no matter what any one says about it, although as a mystery shocker it is unusually inept and, as a piece of fiction, must be read to be believed and is difficult to read without incredulity." Iris Barry

+ — Books p8 D 21 '41 440w

"It's an exciting yarn and spy story addicts will find it to their taste." Drake De Kay

N Y Times p28 D 7 '41 500w

"It is certainly good to encounter unusual heroes in a story of this type, to get away from hackneyed formulas, but it is also dangerous to elaborate on the characters until they resemble people in a psychological novel." R. R. Plant

Sat R of Lit 25:11 Ja 3 '42 430w

"Mr. Seton's work is marked not only by his care and thoroughness, but also by an excellent sense of timing plus genuine writing ability. His characters are real, and he is able to recreate in the reader their identical emotions as the story marches."

+ Springfd Republican p7e N 9 '41 240w

"The author has succeeded in giving a new twist to the usual story of espionage—no light feat. It is a pity however that his writing is sometimes marred by such unfortunate expressions as 'oleaginous lusciousness' (oil plants), 'the Island Home' (Britain), 'hirsute adornment' (hair), and 'completed his ablutions' (washed himself)."

Times [London] Lit Sup p421 Ag 30 '41 220w

HUTCHISON, JOHN ALEXANDER. We are not divided. 337p $3 Round table

280.6273 Federal council of the churches of Christ in America 41-15292

"A critical and historical study of the Federal council of the churches of Christ in America." (Subtitle) Partial contents: Fore-runners and origins; The Council is born; Years of growth; Crusade for brotherhood; In search of peace; Toward a world Christian community; The Council as teacher. Bibliography.

Booklist 38:89 N 15 '41

"The many quotations from pamphlets and books emanating from or inspired by the Federal Council add greatly to the usefulness of the book." A. L. Murray

+ Churchman 155:22 O 1 '41 50w

HUXLEY, ALDOUS LEONARD. Grey Eminence; a study in religion and politics. 342p il $3.50 Harper

B or 92 Le Clerc du Tremblay, François, in religion Joseph. Church and state in France 41-20444

A biography of Father Joseph, Cardinal Richelieu's right hand man and collaborator. This work is not only a biography; it is also a study of a strange personality, half mystic and half politician, who lived in poverty and personal saintliness but whose policies led to the Thirty Years' War and prolonged it, and who is, therefore, according to Mr. Huxley, the ultimate originator of the terrible wars of the twentieth century. Index.

"Never has Mr. Huxley displayed his talents as an interpreter of a bizarre personality with greater skill and acumen, nor, I believe, has he ever put more of himself into a book than in this instance. One can take for granted from so experienced an author his erudition, his skillful analysis, and his historical sense. But what is astonishing in the present book is his ability to get inside the skin of a seventeenth-century mystic and to analyze with skill and amazing virtuosity the processes by which a virtual saint became one of the most subtle, most hated, and most Machiavellian foreign ministers of his time. . . . It is not always possible to follow Mr. Huxley's historical logic." R. E. Danielson

+ — Atlantic N '41 480w

Booklist 38:79 N 1 '41

"Mr. Huxley tells the story with mordancy and art. He not only senses that it is tragedy, but he has a quite extraordinary insight into the forces which were operative in that tragedy. I feel none the less that his book is a torso vigorous but incomplete. The truth that the practice of the religious life is a kind of training which renders the discipline of contesting physical athletes infantile and unproductive by comparison is clearly admitted, but the most important consequences of that truth are only dimly seen." G. N. Shuster

+ — Books p4 O 12 '41 1200w

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley

Cath World 154:364 D '41 600w

Reviewed by Gerald Heard

Christian Century 58:1372 N 5 '41 900w

"'Grey Eminence,' though handicapped by the author's want of sympathy with doctrinal and historical Catholicism, unfolds a convincing argument concerning the legitimate rôles of politics, morals and mysticism. Its clarity is admirable, its importance beyond question, its fullness, however, slightly offset by a detachment slightly clinical." T. O. Sloane, III

+ — Commonweal 35:21 O 24 '41 1450w

Reviewed by A. C. Hansen

Library J 66:730 S 1 '41 100w

Manchester Guardian p3 D 16 '41 450w

Reviewed by George Barker

Nation 153:350 O 11 '41 800w

"Although I can agree with little that he says, Mr. Huxley has now reached a more interesting stage in his career as a mystic. He is no longer the mere disciple or the Hollywood dilettante of Eastern religions. He no longer argues about his convictions, as he did in 'Ends and Means'; nor does he illustrate them by a rather scabrous fable for worldlings, as he did in 'After Many a Summer.' He now tries to carry them into practice, and he begins to deserve the respect one accords to a man whose ambition is a sort, even if a mistaken sort, of sainthood." Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 105:516 O 20 '41 700w

"Mr. Huxley deserves our gratitude for writing a biography that is, as one would expect, lucid, scholarly and thoughtful. . . In this book Mr. Huxley repeatedly declares that mysticism is the only cure for human ills. . . I am quite incompetent to criticise this theory, but in his considerations upon mystical technique, which are as near clarity as the subject allows, Mr. Huxley does strike me as a little self-assured. On these very hard matters he does not so much suggest a hypothesis as lay down the law. He forgets to be a historian and becomes a propagandist." Raymond Mortimer

+ New Statesman & Nation 22:457 N 29 '41 1450w

Reviewed by W. M. Lowry
N Y Times p5 O 12 '41 1300w

"This will hardly attract the audience that waits eagerly for his novels, but it should interest those to whom Huxley's own personality, with its curious shifts and cold agonies, is more interesting than his books." Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 17:83 O 4 '41 300w

Reviewed by Crane Brinton
Sat R of Lit 24:17 O 18 '41 1300w

"Whatever the objections of historians or the arguments of philosophers, Grey Eminence is incontrovertibly the work of a thinker, whose undeviating integrity is one of the few spiritual torches left burning in the black-out." C. V. Wedgwood

+ Spec 167:538 D 5 '41 700w

"The chances are that if this book is read once it will get the rereadings it deserves." E. H. C.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 12 '41 650w
Time 38:97 O 6 '41 2150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p588 N 29 '41 2300w

Wis Lib Bul 37:200 D '41

HUXLEY, JULIAN SORELL. Democracy marches [foreword by Lord Horder]. 126p $1.50 Harper [3s 6d Chatto]

309.142 Democracy. Great Britain—Politics and government 41-51940

"In this little book Dr. Huxley has put into print the substance of a number of wireless talks that he gave in North America last winter and spring. He begins with a lucid sketch of our social services and of desirable reforms. But the most important part of his book is his chapter on 'Democracy Between Nations.' He argues that after the war what may be called a Security Club must be formed; the small nations must join, and the United States and Britain should play the same kind of part as regards the supply of arms as that played at present by Britain within the British Commonwealth. Economic organisation would be based on a Raw Materials Union such as has been suggested in 'Planning.'" Manchester Guardian

Booklist 38:74 N 1 '41

Reviewed by F. T. Jones
Current Hist 1:467 Ja '42 220w

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 26 '41 110w

"This is an exceedingly thoughtful book, characterized by the useful fact that the author leaves the realm of generalization and gets down to the hard facts of actual experience and organizational forms. It blazes the trail of a kind of thinking that will become more and more urgently necessary with every approach we make toward a stable and humane world." Frank Kingdon

+ Sat R of Lit 24:17 N 15 '41 400w

"Democracy Marches is the title of a B.B.C. series of talks to which Dr. Huxley contributed, and, while it has a good rhetorical flavour, it does not, at first hearing, suggest the kind of book that Dr. Huxley has written. For in this brilliant little book, there is hardly any of that appeal to emotion-stirring words, hardly any of that evocation of admirable but vague moral sentiment, that such titles usually suggest." D. W. Brogan

+ Spec 167:110 Ag 1 '41 1300w

"Huxley writes in fluent prose and interposes relevant facts without disturbing the flow of his sentences." E. C. Lindeman

+ Survey G 31:37 Ja '42 130w

Times [London] Lit Sup p368 Ag 2 '41 390w

HUXLEY, JULIAN SORELL. Man stands alone [Eng title: The uniqueness of man]. 297p $2.75 Harper [10s 6d Chatto]

570.4 Biology—Addresses, essays, lectures. Man (W) 41-6014

"The fourteen essays here reprinted were written at various times between 1927 and 1939, and for very diverse audiences. But they all have this in common, that they were written during that strange restless indecisive period during which an age was dying but most of us were refusing to face the imminence of its dissolution. . . The large majority of these articles are efforts towards some new formulation of our basic beliefs and attitudes, or at least attempts to state some of the bases on which the new formulation will have to build." (Pref) Contents: The uniqueness of man; Eugenics and society; Climate and human history; The concept of race; The size of living things; The origins of species; Mice and men; The way of the dodo; The courtship of animals; The intelligence of birds; Science, natural and social; The analysis of fame; Scientific humanism; Religion as an objective problem; Life can be worth living.

Reviewed by Wilson Follett
Atlantic JI '41 200w

Booklist 37:433 My 15 '41

"Mr. Huxley's new essays are in some respects disappointing; for, after all, the essay is a literary form, and unfortunately Mr. Huxley's literary style is undistinguished. In substance, however, much of the book under review is interesting and important." H. M. Parshley

+ Books p14 Ap 13 '41 750w

Reviewed by R. M. Green, M.D.
Boston Transcript pl Ap 5 '41 800w

Reviewed by C. W. M. Hart
Canadian Forum 21:125 JI '41 480w
Christian Century 58:1083 S 3 '41 150w

Reviewed by Clifton Macon
Churchman 155:20 Je 15 '41 240w

Reviewed by J. A. Sohon
Library J 66:263 Mr 15 '41 80w
Living Age 360:294 My '41 440w
Manchester Guardian p7 F 28 '41 230w

"A book full of good reading, very diversified and occasionally very provocative, like the mind of its author. . . These papers vary in quality from the admirable essay which gives the book its title to a cheery little review of 'Who's Who', which lines up with its betters as 'The Analysis of Fame'. Such papers as 'Climate and Human History', 'The Origin of Species', 'The Concept of Races', and 'Mice and Men', are exactly what the man of intelligence, mainly preoccupied with other work, needs to keep him up to date with his biological ideas. The concluding three papers are 'religious' and very earnest in tone." H. G. Wells

+ Nature 147:247 Mr 1 '41 1200w

"Having marshalled in many orders his facts, Professor Huxley states his faith, which is rationalist, humanistic, godless, and religious, and carries nobly all the bleaker implications of the uniqueness of man. 'My final belief is in life' is his last word. This may seem trite, but not to one who has caught the fine sweep of his argument, which echoes in it and makes it profound." Barrington Gates

HUXLEY, J. S.—Continued

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:280 Mr 15 '41 1150w

"Fifteen essays written over a period of as many years constitute this new volume by a brilliant scientist and humanist. They present a continuity of style and of method, if not that of an organized whole. Severe contradictions, if any, must have been edited out. . . The most important essay of the volume is on 'The Uniqueness of Man.' It is beautifully written and carefully reasoned." W. M. Malisoff

+ N Y Times p9 My 4 '41 1600w

"Persuasive and important."

+ New Yorker 17:70 Mr 29 '41 50w

"In the last chapters the author again rises to an inspiring level in his discussion of social science and the religion of humanism. He envisages the day when world-wide planning will be carried on as a matter of course, but not by politicians. Some readers may object to the way in which the final chapters relegate God to the past, but no thoughtful person can read the earlier and later sections without receiving a great stimulus to thought. Such books are what we need." Ellsworth Huntington

+ Sat R of Lit 23:5 Ap 12 '41 1150w

Scientific Bk Club R 12:2 Ap '41 360w

"It is generally agreed that Dr. Julian Huxley (as his grandfather was before him) is one of our greatest scientific writers, in that he can express the implications of science in a form 'understood of the people.' The present book is a new link in a chain already long, and for anything which does so well the job which it sets out to do praise would be almost an impertinence." Joseph Needham

+ Spec 166:231 F 28 '41 1000w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple

Survey G 30:254 Ap '41 700w

"Mr. Huxley's place in contemporary letters must be judged high, even though not with the highest. Quite apart from its content, this volume makes fascinating reading. It has its dull places, and occasional slipshod paragraphs, as though Mr. Huxley were executing a commission and not liberating an inspiration; but they are rare, and the generally easy flow of his prose marks him as a literary craftsman of a high order."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p178 Ap 12 '41 2450w

Wis Lib Bul 37:89 My '41

"Any intelligent reader should be able to find much of value [here], even if he cannot wholly accept the major theme. At a time when many people are beginning to think about the possible shape of things to come, it is stimulating to have the thoughts of a man who began thinking in that direction long ago." J. H. Bradley

+ Yale R n s 31:416 winter '42 1100w

I

I am Saxon Ashe, 306p $2 Alliance bk. [8s 3d Hodder]

41-18614

"Eve-of-war spy tale describing adventures of famous European clown in search of twin brother imprisoned by Nazis." Sat R of Lit

"This would not have been so bad if the author had chosen to tell it simply and without undue embroidery. As it is—well, if the Second World War is to bring us many more tales like this we are against it." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p12 S 7 '41 160w

"Exciting."

Sat R of Lit 24:20 S 27 '41 40w

IAMS, JACK. The countess to boot. 312p $2 Morrow

(W) 41-1828

A humorous story about a young artist with a war on against civilization, a girl who had graduated from M.I.T. as an electrical engineer and now held a job as a social secretary, and—the countess, from Minneapolis. The three have a round of adventures on a trip to the Virgin Islands ending up with wedding bells and a good fat price for a work from the artist's hands.

Booklist 37:292 Mr 1 '41

"The book has to be read for other things besides story. It's slight, it's politically, economically, historically unimportant and insignificant. But socially it's a sure thing, guaranteed either to make you or break you when you read it aloud." Rose Feld

+ Books p3 F 16 '41 700w

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 8 '41 120w

"Gayly, cheerily, with a quirk and a wink now and then in the direction of those realities which have a reputation for being especially stern, 'The Countess to Boot' goes its lively way." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p6 F 16 '41 700w

"None of it makes much sense, but it's a lot of fun."

+ New Yorker 17:81 F 15 '41 40w

ICKES, HAROLD LE CLAIRE, ed. Freedom of the press today; a clinical examination by 28 specialists. 308p $2.50 Vanguard

323.445 Liberty of the press. Press—U.S. (W) 41-6607

"Twenty-eight articles on the freedom of the press and what newspapers do with it, by such specialists as Herbert Agar, Raymond Clapper, Ralph Ingersoll, George H. Gallup, Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, Archibald MacLeish, and Louis Stark, collected by Mr. Ickes." (New Yorker) Index.

"The essays average about eight pages each, which does not give room for much development, but the very sharpness with which the ideas of the authors are stated contributes to a clarification of the issues that are involved. And it is as a statement of issues rather than as a handbook of solutions that the volume has real merit." M. M. Willey

+ Ann Am Acad 217:175 S '41 450w

Booklist 37:431 My 15 '41

"Good reading here—and food for hours and hours of pointless but heated argument in circles where people wonder where, if anywhere, the press is trending." Stanley Walker

Books p15 Ap 20 '41 1000w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:199 O '41 20w

Reviewed by G. F. Milton

New Repub 105:165 Ag 4 '41 950w

"Some persons are allergic to Mr. Ickes. About the only point upon which they and his friends would agree is that the Secretary of the Interior is a successful provocateur. One of his outbursts now brings something of more enduring value than the usual stirrings he provokes over the air waves, in editorials and in columns of syndicated thought. With an Ickes introduction to set off the fireworks, twenty-eight editors, publishers, news writers and commentators of distinction examine the question whether Americans have a free press. . . Here one may find in one book whatever one wishes to believe about newspapers; which is perhaps about as accurate a generalization as could be made of what one finds in the press itself." S. T. Williamson
N Y Times p20 Ap 20 '41 1100w

"A lively symposium, led off by the ar-ranger's tart introduction."

+ New Yorker 17:91 Ap 19 '41 50w

Pratt p15 autumn '41

IDELL, ALBERT E. Cross in the Caribbean. 288p $2.50 Holt

41-15443

The scene of this story is a small island in the Caribbean whose contacts with the outside world are few. To this island, sometime in the 1930s, comes Ben Gerson, to work on a figure of Christ on a huge white cross on a mountain top. The story relates how priests, natives, and others looked upon his work, some with disgust and fear, some with superstition, some with growing sympathy and understanding.

Booklist 38:130 D 15 '41

"If Mr. Idell had eliminated some of his themes, and had subordinated the others, either to the conflicts of Ben or of Father Euchariste, he might have lifted more of his characters out of the still life in which they are painted. Father Euchariste, however, has the vitality of some of Willa Cather's missionaries." W. S. A. Dollard

+ — Books p14 N 23 '41 600w

"Book is so badly written one is puzzled as to why it was published as serious novel. The reason seems to be current mild vogue for religious novels." H. S.

— Commonweal 35:349 Ja 23 '42 100w

Reviewed by Drake de Kay

N Y Times p28 N 30 '41 500w

"It is a work of unusual merit, fine characterization of several types, an illuminating discussion of widespread poverty in the disease-ridden island, and the French government's criminal indifference toward its natives."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 7 '41 240w

IDELL, ALBERT E. Pug. 245p $2 Greystone 41-7692

"Whitey" Phillips had a magnificent physique, but his brains did not match it, so he became the victim of prize fight backers looking for easy money. At first he was a success, but after he received his first bad beating Whitey began to slip. All his naive self-confidence and the love of Eve, who understood him, could not save him.

"'Whitey' recalls to our mind Lenny, of 'Mice and Men,' who was also a giant with the mind of an infant. Mr. Idell is, of course, very far from approximating the literary significance of Steinbeck. But as a first novel his work is professionally and smoothly done and his quality is authentic." Milton Hindus

+ Books p4 My 11 '41 360w

"This is a prizefight story with a difference. . . There are descriptions of some tough bouts here, sufficiently gory for ringside sadists, sufficiently technical for followers of the sports experts. But Idell has a point to his story quite apart from writing another fight thriller."

It is an unusual little item in the field." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p7 My 18 '41 600w

"The author's style is casual, laconic, and often too mannered. The novel is serious and realistic, and it contains sound social information about pugilism. However, it is not original in conception nor in characterizations." J. T. F.

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 My 24 '41 350w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 15 '41 330w

IDLEMAN, FINIS SCHUYLER. Peter Ainslie, ambassador of good will. 184p il $2.50 Willett

B or 92 Ainslie, Peter 41-8661

"Peter Ainslie (1867-1934), the third of that name in the ministry in successive generations, was pastor of the Christian Temple, Baltimore, for thirty years, a leader in all good causes in his adopted city, a conspicuous figure in the national life of his own communion, the Disciples of Christ, and a foremost advocate—coequal and contemporary with Bishop Brent and Archbishop Söderblom—of full fellowship among all Christians." Christian Century

"The record is not burdened with unnecessary personal details. It is, rather, the story of the growth of Ainslie's mind, a record of his work, and a discriminating picture of his gracious, courtly and deeply religious personality. There are a few unimportant slips, e.g., in regard to the early history of Bacon College and Transylvania University, in the statement that Bethany was the first Disciple college, and in the reference to the 'seat of a cardinalate.' These are trivial errors in a work which, though a tribute of affection by one saintly character to another, is also a work of sound historical substance and graceful literary quality." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 58:690 My 21 '41

850w

Reviewed by J. H. Melish

Churchman 155:17 Je 1 '41 400w

INFELD, LEOPOLD. Quest; the evolution of a scientist. 342p $3 Doubleday

B or 92 Scientists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 41-51631

Life story of a Jewish physicist, a collaborator of Einstein. The son of a fairly prosperous family, he spent his early life in Cracow, when Poland was a subject state of Austria. After his years of struggle he became a minor faculty member at a Polish university, and later a protégé of Einstein at Princeton, a fellow of the Rockefeller foundation, and now holds a professorship at the University of Toronto.

Booklist 37:357 Ap 1 '41

"Among all the books of science, there are very few which portray the intimate life and the personalities from which these ideas spring. Dr. Infeld's autobiography is both fascinating and important as such a book." Gerald Wendt

+ Books p6 Mr 30 '41 1050w

"Honest autobiography always makes good reading, and this autobiography is honest—not in the impossible sense of telling the whole truth, which would in any case be tedious, but because it is frank and direct, both in style and thought. Unlike so many writers, the author does not tell his story before a looking glass, or care overmuch what figure he cuts in any particular incident." G. M. A. Grube

+ Canadian Forum 21:57 My '41 800w

"Well written. Recommended for library purchase." H. A. Carpenter

+ Library J 66:218 Mr 1 '41 70w

Living Age 360:297 My '41 170w

"Not all autobiographies are worth writing, and few attain distinction. Infeld's picture of his life possesses both qualities to an unusual degree." C. E. W.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 26 '41 300w

New Repub 104:641 My 5 '41 90w

"For the most part, Dr. Infeld tells his story remarkably well, with the fluent lucidity that is often characteristic of artists and scientists when writing about themselves. He regards physics, which, on his own admission, he originally embraced as an escape from unpleasant reality, primarily as a pure aesthetic whose practical value is remote and largely incidental. Perhaps that is why he is so effective a writer." John Mair

+ New Statesman & Nation 22:459 N 29 '41 390w

"Leopold Infeld has written a fascinating book. The book has three subjects: the Polish ghetto, from which Infeld originated; Leopold Infeld, and the discoveries of theoretical physics in which Infeld participated. The three subjects form a remarkable composite, convincingly held together by the skill and the scrupulous truthfulness of the autobiographer." W. M. Mallisoff

+ N Y Times p18 Mr 23 '41 900w

INFELD, LEOPOLD—Continued

New Yorker 17:37 Mr 15 '41 30w

"We have not the usual autobiographical chronicle but an enthralling human document, which is fittingly subtitled 'the evolution of a scientist', and which discloses the flowering of an original mind in the face of hardship, frustration, and temporary defeat." Walde-mar Kaempfert

+ Sat R of Lit 23:12 Ap 5 '41 650w

"Leopold Infeld has seen many countries and known famous and infamous people. He writes excellent prose, not only of exactitude but of shading and feeling. . . . It is too much to hope that 'Quest' may hold an equal place with 'As I Remember Him.' But it has the same qualities of greatness, the same devotion to science, the same talent for self-analysis. It should evoke pity, understanding, and admiration." A. H. Compton & others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:1 Mr '41 1200w

"This moving work lifts a corner of the curtain that shuts us off from understanding the strange and difficult folk who inhabit the European miserybelt. . . . It is a book which any Englishman may read with justified pride, for it was the sane and catholic English university system that provided its author, in his 34th year, with the first refuge from the madhouse in which he had been reared. When the historian sums up the vast spiritual conflict of which we are witnesses, the healing power of abstract knowledge will appear as one of the great forces of human regeneration." Charles Singer

+ Spec 167:208 Ag 29 '41 850w

"Unless you are interested in science and scientists, you are not likely to turn to an autobiography of a mathematical physicist for sentiment, poetry, drama, humor, compassion. That is unfortunate, for scientists are people, too. Infeld at least has a very human story, and a charming way of telling it. You are arrested by the very first page and held until well past your station, or until it is too late for your appointment." B. C. Gruenberg

+ Survey G 30:484 S '41 190w

Times [London] Lit Sup p410 Ag 23 '41 900w

INGALLS, JEREMY. Metaphysical sword [poems] with a foreword by Stephen Vincent Benét. (Ser. of younger poets) 80p $2 Yale univ. press

811

41-21740

This book contains the work of a young American poet, now on the faculty of Western College, Oxford, Ohio. "It is interesting to see such writing being done; it is interesting to see the work of a new poet, at once mature and sensitive, who owes little or nothing to the two chief trends in recent poetry, the intellectual-symbolist school or the school of the Left, whose work is entirely and originally her own, and in whom intellectual force is combined with a consistent spiritual philosophy." (Foreword)

"Her language is precise and economical. In 'A Message to Tu Fu' she commands the carved visual image, the clear light and cool phrasing, of the Chinese manner, but the majority of the poems are created in strong forthright speech rhythms 'carried alive into the heart by passion'; and, as in 'The Fable of the False Premise,' she has a direct, edged irony which goes straight to its mark." Elizabeth Drew

+ Atlantic D '41 200w

"There is a group of five fables, oblique and compressed in statement, but—especially one called 'Fable of Deceptive Appearance'—witty and well-turned. The most interesting work, however, is to be found in the section 'In Time of Civil Wars.' Here Miss Ingalls' richness of background—classical, mythological, biblical—serves her well when dealing with contemporary matters. 'Cassandra as Artist' and 'The Invasion of Greece,' for example, are beautifully done. And when Miss Ingalls uses her excellent command of ideas to frame the essential human factor itself, her poems come warmly to life." Ruth Lechlitrer

+ Books p6 D 21 '41 500w

"Miss Ingalls is no idle singer of an empty day. Her poems exhibit great verbal resources and the power to marshal syllables in musically effective verse, both applied to the production of poems which require some thinking about."

+ Christian Century 58:1380 N 5 '41 30w

Christian Science Monitor p12 N 29 '41

Churchman 156:18 Ja 1 '42 50w

"I wish that Miss Ingalls' critical faculty, which is excellent, had led her to reject one poem, 'The Grail,' or at least label it more definitely for what it is, an outright imitation of Hopkins. Otherwise this collection is fine, clean work, admirably arranged, and warmer in temperature than you might think on first reading." Rolfe Humphries

+ New Repub 105:899 D 29 '41 800w

Reviewed by P. M. Jack

N Y Times p5 D 14 '41 70w

"Miss Ingalls' experimentations are no more memorable than most echoes, and, despite Mr. Benét's denial, I find some of her other poems, in particular the short ones on unpretentious subjects, difficult. In some instances the meaning of an entire poem escapes. This is true of some of the 'fables,' which I suspect might have wit if they had more clarity; it is also true of that contortion entitled Cassandra as Artist. But Miss Ingalls' religious poems are something else again. These, though they have a kinship to Hopkins, are convincingly her own; and in them her approach, paradoxically, is a simple one. No one can easily forget the first part of A Plain Poem or the last part of Cathedral. . . . These, and the poems like these, have fresh conviction. They are genuinely exhilarating: like altitudes from which we see new aspects of a familiar landscape." Marion Strobel

+ Poetry 59:218 Ja '42 700w

Reviewed by Louis Untermeyer

Yale R n s 31:375 winter '42 190w

INGERSOLL, RALPH MCALLISTER. America is worth fighting for. 152p $1.50 Bobbs

940.5373 World war, 1939—U.S. 41-7543

In this new book by the editor of PM, the author sets down and attempts to answer the chief arguments raised by American isolationists, heading his chapters with such quoted sentences as: A possible Nazi victory will not affect us; We should stay at home to mend the fences of our own democracy; We'll get licked if we try to fight the Nazis; The British have no war aims—There's no object to the war.

Booklist 37:512 Jl 1 '41

"Mr. Ingersoll's thesis is, to my mind, indisputable: that a Nazi victory would affect us vitally and disastrously. . . . Mr. Ingersoll's zeal is beyond question. His case is—at least in the opinion of this reviewer—fool-proof. But his intemperance of expression, his inability to admit that those who disagree with him might have a modicum of sincerity on their side, his innuendoes and his irrelevancies make his book a trivial and futile contribution to the most important discussion the American people have listened to since the Lincoln-Douglas debates." Nicholas Roosevelt

+ Books p8 Je 1 '41 650w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:199 O '41 20w

New Yorker 17:95 My 17 '41 50w

Pratt p24 autumn '41

Reviewed by Samuel Grafton

Sat R of Lit 24:5 Ag 2 '41 280w

INNES, MICHAEL, pseud. See Stewart, J. I. M.

INSTITUTE OF PACIFIC RELATIONS. International secretariat. Legal problems in the Far Eastern conflict. 211p $2 The Institute [10s Allen, G]

327.5 Eastern question (Far East). International law and relations 41-51848

Study of the legal problems involved in the conflict in the Far East, as presented by four authorities on international law. "In Part I Dr. Quincy Wright, Professor of International Law at the University of Chicago, analyzes the legal situation in the Far East, both de facto and de jure, basing his study on the conclusion that any future satisfactory settlement of Far Eastern hostilities must stem from that situation as it exists today. Opposing views on the problem of non-recognition are set forth in Parts II and III by Dr. H. Lauterpacht, Professor of International Law, Cambridge University, Dr. Edwin M. Borchard, Professor of International Law, Yale University, and Miss Phoebe Morrison, Research Associate in International Law, Yale University, together with the findings of the I.P.R. round tables on these aspects of international law, summarized in the Appendix." (Publisher's note) Index.

"To the specialist on the Far East and to the international lawyer, this volume will be valuable and stimulating. . . . A student either of the Far East or of American foreign policy will do well to read in full this detailed discussion of the highly controversial principle of non-recognition." G. H. Blakeslee

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:998 O '41 700w

Reviewed by O. I. Janowsky

Ann Am Acad 218:203 N '41 650w

IRELAND, GORDON. Boundaries, possessions, and conflicts in Central and North America and the Caribbean. 432p il maps $4.50 Harvard univ. press

327.7 Central America—Boundaries. North America—Boundaries. America—Politics A41-1330

"This scholarly book is the companion volume to Boundaries, Possessions, and Conflicts in South America [Book Review Digest, 1938] and thus it completes the history of the boundary and territorial disputes of the Western Hemisphere. As almost all conflicts among Latin-American countries were caused by boundary disputes inherited from the time of the Spanish rule, this book represents the documentary history of the most important chapter in the history of those countries. . . . The boundaries of the continental United States are discussed from the foundation of the colonies through the American Revolution and the subsequent purchases or conquests to the present day. The story of the Mexican line, the Isthmian Canal and the history of the Caribbean and Atlantic Islands, as well as the British, French and Dutch possessions around the Caribbean, are particularly timely in view of the present war and the discussion over granting naval and air bases to this country." Living Age

"The volume under review is an important contribution which cannot fail to invoke the gratitude of those interested in the field. But in several respects it is imperfect. Some of the summaries are inaccurate, superficial, and misleading; and the bibliographical references, while nearly always valuable, are often far from complete. . . . The volume will be most valuable to careful investigators who use it with caution and awareness that they are not consulting a definitive work but a sort of preliminary guide." J. F. Rippey

+ Am Hist R 47:396 Ja '42 450w

"Together with the preceding volume, by the same author, covering the countries of South America, this work completes a very valuable compendium of the factual record of international boundary disputes in the Americas. . . . Since the work is concerned solely with territorial problems, it is most unfortunate that neither the author nor his map-maker appears to have any knowledge of either principles or techniques of geographic study of boundaries." Richard Hartshorne

+ — Am Pol Sci R 35:1179 D '41 370w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:207 O '41 20w

"It is greatly to be regretted that, in a book representing so much scholarship and research and in other respects so well organized and finely printed, the black-and-white maps should be so crudely drawn and so generally inadequate. None of them is self-explanatory, as maps of this kind could easily be if proper symbols were used for the various elements; and only in the case of the Costa Rica-Panama and the Honduras-Nicaragua boundaries are rival territorial claims shown."

+ — Geog R 31:517 J1 '41 700w

"Several excellent maps, diagrams, an index and a complete tabulation of all treaties between these countries—when signed, ratified, or denounced—make this volume an indispensable reference supplement of all histories of Latin America."

+ Living Age 360:397 Je '41 300w

IRVINE, HELEN DOUGLAS. See Douglas-Irvine, H.

IRVING, ROBERT LOCK GRAHAM. Ten great mountains. 213p il $3.75 Dutton [12s 6d Dent] 796.52 Mountaineering. Mountains (W)

An English mountaineer selects ten mountains, describes them as to geographic and scenic differences and as to the most important ascents of each, and gives the names of the climbers. They are Snowdon and Ben Nevis in Britain; Mt Cook in New Zealand; the Matterhorn and Mt Blanc in the Alps; Ushba in the Caucasus; Mt Logan in North America; and Nanga Parbat, Kangchenjunga and Mt Everest in the Himalayas.

Books p14 My 4 '41 120w

"This small and unpretentious book gives one of the best and clearest descriptions one has yet read of the difficult 'Second Step' on Everest which has baffled so many climbers. Its ten chapters have hundreds of interesting points, and the photographs are remarkable, sometimes even terrifying, for the way in which they show the massive proportions, the tremendous downrush of precipices, and the dizzying effect of corners and slabs that seem to be hung out over space." M. C.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 N 5 '40 280w

Scientific Bk Club R 12:4 Mr '41 420w

Spec 165:563 N 22 '40 250w

"To all this Mr. Irving brings his immense experience as a practical mountaineer and leader, his great knowledge of mountaineering literature and history, a delightful style and a very vivid power of appreciation and of sympathy. We may guess that in a court of conscience he would find himself forced to condemn some of the actions which he here describes, even some of his own. But, extenuating nothing and setting down nothing in malice, he places on record his admiration of the skill and courage displayed and leaves the issue to the verdict of the reader."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p539 O 26 '40 390w

IRWIN, INEZ (HAYNES) (MRS WILL IRWIN). Many murders. 314p $2 Random house 41-7861

Detective story.

"Genteel yet highly exciting thriller. . . . Somehow or other, it all sounds credible enough as Mrs. Irwin tells it. If you're looking for all-around quality and plenty of shocks, read 'Many Murders.'" Will Cuppy

+ Books p28 My 11 '41 200w

IRWIN, INEZ—Continued

"The story is beautifully written, but it proceeds at such a leisurely pace that there is but little excitement despite the dreadful carnage. Most readers will probably find the conclusion a bit unsatisfactory." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p19 My 11 '41 160w

"Good honest detecting with everything fitting tightly."

+ Time 37:100 Je 9 '41 30w

J

JACK, DANIEL THOMSON. Studies in economic warfare. 178p $4 Chemical pub. co [12s King]

330.19355 War—Economic aspects 41-8850

"An historical study covering the period since the latter part of the eighteenth century and devoted largely to maritime warfare." Foreign Affairs

"This study is extremely well documented. It is, of course, a special study and no light reading, but the material is very well arranged and the book should be of very immediate interest to anyone who wants to understand the problems and implications of economic warfare, and why the very idea of neutrality is fast becoming an anachronism." G. M. A. Grube

+ Canadian Forum 21:190 S '41 240w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '41

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:872 Jl '41 20w

Reviewed by D. W. O'Connell

Pol Sci Q 56:466 S '41 550w

"All these matters are excellently presented and clearly argued; and the argument is well backed with facts and figures."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p612 D 7 '40 600w

JACK, HAROLD K. Physical education for small elementary schools. 184p $1.60 Barnes, A. S.

371.7322 Physical education and training

41-8771

"The purpose of this book is to present a plan of graded physical education for the rural or small school. . . . The program outlined divides the physical education content into three divisions. The first division is for grades one, two, and three; the second division for grades four, five, and six; and the third division for grades seven and eight. The activities selected are sufficiently simple so that any teacher will find them easy to teach and directions are supplied for all activities listed in the program." (Pref) Index.

"With the exception of a few diagrams, there are no illustrations in the book. However, its usefulness and its value to the classroom teacher are not seriously affected by this omission. The author is to be commended for compiling and outlining so much helpful material in this small volume. It has much to offer teachers in large elementary schools where the physical-education program is not completely prescribed, and for rural teachers or for those in small elementary schools, it offers a balanced program which may be adapted to any local situation." C. L. Byerly

+ El School J 42:234 N '41 600w

School & Society 53:760 Je 14 '41 20w

JACKSON, MRS ANN, and JACKSON, DEL. MAR E. The wonders of oil; il. from official phot. and charts. 146p map $2 Dodd

665.5 Petroleum industry and trade—Juvenile literature (W) 41-955

In simple language and partly in story form this book tells all about oil, what it is and where it is found, how man discovered it, what he does to it, and what he does with it. For boys and girls from ten up. Index.

Booklist 37:328 Mr 15 '41

"The book reaches boys earlier than other books of this general nature. Its pictures and basic facts have been furnished by a long list of oil companies, but all this has been skillfully adapted to a small but sensible boy's interests." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 Jl 27 '41 270w

"The style is clear and the book is very readable, although it seems a pity that the author chose to burden her text with the well-worn and irritating device of an informative uncle and a nephew over-eager to learn. . . . Nevertheless, this book covers so admirably and fully a topic on which there is little or nothing in print for children that it will be a welcome addition to school and public libraries. There are many excellent photographs and an index." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p12 Mr 9 '41 240w

JACKSON, MRS CHARLOTTE E. (COBDEN). Sarah Deborah's day; pictures by Marc Simont. 74p $2 Dodd

41-18618

California during the Gold Rush days is the scene of this story for young readers of eight to ten. It describes Sarah Deborah's adventures on what was to have been her first day at school, but turned out to be much more exciting. It included three scares—from Indians, a cattle drive, and a fire.

"The pictures are bold, brisk and in bright colors; they go well with a favorite theme of childhood—adventures of a good little girl in being bad. In this case the adventures are more striking than in the East today; children could be sure something might happen any minute in Gold Rush California. What happened on this great day is told with affectionate sympathy." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 N 2 '41 320w

"These illustrations help make an attractive looking book. At times the brush technique is so violent that it obscures the good qualities of the drawings." Warren Chappell

+ Horn Bk M 17:455 N '41 20w

"The story is amusingly told and has a colorful background. The illustrations by Marc Simont are well suited to the text." Florence O'Gara

+ Library J 66:951 N 1 '41 90w

"Excellent." Zoë Durrell

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 N 8 '41 30w

JACKSON, DAVID KELLY, ed. See Duke university. Americana club. American studies

JACKSON, GILES. Witch's moon. 224p $2 Dial press

41-11798

Detective story.

"After a protracted spell of wackiness you may find it hard to keep your face properly straight toward the end, but why should you? This is much more amusing than most of the alcoholic mysteries." Will Cuppy

Books p11 Je 29 '41 180w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p17 Je 29 '41 150w

"This story would be better reading without the love interest."

New Yorker 17:64 Je 28 '41 50w

JACKSON, JAMES J. Taking the merchandise inventory; the preparation and taking of the physical inventory and its use as a tool of management. 262p $4 Chemical pub. co.

658.787 Inventories

41-3076

"Outlines the fundamental principles of the physical inventory as a basis for the financial reports and other data used in the operation of modern business. It is primarily a guide for the executive who finds himself confronted in a limited space of time and at a minimum cost. The principles discussed here may be applied to manufacturing plants, warehouses, or any other places in which goods are stored." N Y New Tech Bks

Management R 30:76 F '41 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 26:9 Ja '41

JACKSON, JOHN HAMPDEN. Estonia. 248p $2.25 Macmillan [8s 6d Allen, G]

947.4 Estonia A41-3267

"The author begins with the Russian-Estonian pact which in 1939 ended Estonian independence, then goes back to the beginning of that state and outlines its history. A companion to the author's Finland [Book Review Digest, 1939]. Bibliography." Booklist

Booklist 38:33 O 1 '41

"This is a thoughtful and valuable book and a worthy companion of the author's previous one on Finland." Agnes Rothery
+ Books p11 J1 20 '41 600w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:202 O '41 10w

"This book does not do half enough justice to what is an Estonian virtue, a true democratic and receptive conception of life. Had they been so busy hating and nourishing grouses, as Mr. Jackson makes them out to have done, they would not have had the energy to make the supreme effort they did from 1918 onwards of modelling their little country to the best of their ability, making mistakes and correcting them, content, modest and unassuming. . . What I have said should not deter people from reading Mr. Jackson's book. His enthusiasm is unquestionable. His heart is in the right place, and there is no other book of the sort available." M. Z.
+ New Statesman & Nation 21:559 My 31 '41 750v

"Mr. Hampden Jackson's account of [Estonia] could hardly be better; what might have been the rather dry details of party-politics and political experiment are suffused with the poetic light."

+ Spec 166:562 My 23 '41 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p174 Ap 12 '41 800w

JACKSON, JOHN HAMPDEN, and LEE, KERRY. Problems of modern Europe; the facts at a glance, 128p maps $1.75 Macmillan [8s 6d Cambridge]

330.94 Europe—Economic conditions. Europe—Politics (W) 41-11786

Picture diagrams, maps, and brief explanatory text, presenting the economic resources, industrial developments, trade, finances, unemployment, standards of living, etc., of the various European nations. List of sources of statistics.

Booklist 38:2 S '41

Christian Century 58:807 Je 18 '41 60w

"This book is not for people who consider minority problems, the dialectic materialism of Marxism and similar subjects as light table talk. But folk who think they just can't keep their minds on anything heavier than a romance from a women's home journal or a Thursday evening Post may be glad of this aid to discovering their more statesmanlike qualities." C. W. M.

Christian Science Monitor p18 J1 16 '41 450w

Reviewed by J. B. Parrish
Churchman 155:21 S 1 '41 180w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:194 O '41 20w

"The authors have done well in presenting a comprehensible and comprehensive picture of 'the problems of Europe which the people of this generation must solve if their civilization is to survive'; and not of Europe only."

+ N Y Times p8 S 28 '41 500w

"Whether you like this book depends entirely upon whether you like your facts and interpretation straight or with pictograms. This reviewer prefers the former, but admits the utility of illustrated statistics in presenting purely factual problems. More abstract questions—like disarmament and sanctions—prove less tractable for the illustrator. The volume contains a wealth of useful figures for ready reference, but employs so many different symbols that the reader is frequently compelled to consult the introductory pages." J. F. Green
+ Sat R of Lit 24:13 Je 28 '41 380w

"To anyone who wants to honestly evaluate the situation for himself and not depend on propaganda, and yet finds the study of economics and wading through text books unprofitable, this book should prove invaluable."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Je 23 '41 320w

JACKSON, JOSEPH HENRY. Anybody's gold; the story of California's mining towns; il. by E. H. Suydam. 468p $5 Appleton-Century

979.4 California—Gold discoveries. Frontier and pioneer life—California. Gold mines and mining (W) 41-16292

An anecdotal, informal history of California's mining towns. The book is in two parts, the first dealing with the towns in the past, chiefly in the 1850s; the second with the ghost towns as they are today. Index.

Reviewed by Wilson Folett
Atlantic D '41 200w

Booklist 38:33 O 1 '41

"Mr. Jackson modestly remarks that no one book or twelve books could encompass a record of the lively goings-on in the decade following 1848. Thereupon he packs into his 450 pages the richest pans of pay dirt I have yet seen in one volume on the subject. Using diaries, manuscripts and other obscure documents known only to historians for his source materials, he recounts the highlights, and some of the lowlights, of an astounding era." S. H. Holbrook
+ Books p3 S 7 '41 1050w

Reviewed by O. G. Lawson
Library J 66:567 Je 15 '41 130w

"The gold rush did not produce its outstanding classic—nothing to compare, say, with Dana's 'Two Years Before the Mast' or Parkman's 'Oregon Trail'. . . Joseph Henry Jackson probably hasn't written the missing classic. Probably no one ever will, now. Tastes may change. Mr. Jackson belongs to his own generation. But what Mr. Jackson has written will serve the purpose of a classic for the year 1941 and, one may believe, for some years to come. . . Mr. Suydam's illustrations reveal the artist at his best and increase the regret at his untimely death." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p4 S 7 '41 1300w

"A first-rate job of scholarship and atmosphere."

+ New Yorker 17:79 S 6 '41 30w

"The most valuable, if less entertaining part of the book is the description of the mines as they are today, whether empty sites, decaying ruins, or prosperous corporate holdings. . . The author has picked up a great deal of local fact and legend, and relates it well, while he often sets the picturesque past against the prosaic present with dramatic effect. Everywhere he was accompanied by that graphic illustrator, the late E. H. Suydam, whose pictures of buildings are admirably clear, faithful, and picturesque, though his handling of human figures may be criticized." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 24:28 D 6 '41 650w

Wis Lib Bul 37:153 O '41

JACKSON, MICHAEL. Karin Ellis. 384p $2.50
Penn 41-8357

Character study of a career woman, whose whole life was spent in an earnest attempt to compensate for an unhappy childhood. She became head of a great cosmetics business and was a success in every business deal, but in her personal life she was baffled and defeated.

"The significance of Michael Jackson's novel is artfully woven into the narrative, and all the more pointed because it is not underscored. One is subtly made aware, however, that Karin Ellis created a demand for herself just as she created a demand for the cosmetics she exploited—by being smooth and scented and smartly packaged." George Conrad
+ Books p22 My 11 '41 500w

"The telling is smooth and knowing. The study of Emily-into-Karin shows a penetrating insight into the single-track, ambitious type of mind which carries a business woman head and shoulders above her competitors, male and female. . . Karin is not a sympathetic character, but one must grant that Michael Jackson has made her a realistic specimen of her type. He doesn't offer her as a solution of the problem of well-rounded happiness for a career woman, but as a creature of burning ambitions who finally accepts the fact that the ordinary satisfactions of life must be nipped up incidentally. Mr. Jackson has made a thorough job of his career Karin, and the result is an interesting though not exactly inspiring novel." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p20 My 25 '41 550w

JACKSON, ROBERT HOUGHWOUT. The struggle for judicial supremacy; a study of a crisis in American power politics. 365p $3 Knopf

347.99 U.S. Supreme court. U.S.—Constitutional law. U.S. Constitution. Roosevelt, Franklin Delano (W) 41-51602

"The Attorney General of the United States has given us enough of the Supreme Court's history to explain its reputation. His book is less than a history of the Court and more than the story of the reorganization fight. It is a survey of the judicial power, foreshortened so as to concentrate for half its length on the New Deal judicial crisis. It presents a broad constitutional landscape, with the Judges of the 1933-38 Court in the foreground." New Repub

"Mr. Jackson's [book] is a particularly stimulating study of the judicial process, written with a background of sound knowledge of the entire history of the struggle for judicial supremacy, even though with an obvious bias in favor of the New Deal." C. B. Swisher
+ Am Hist R 47:387 Ja '42 420w

Booklist 37:318 Mr 15 '41

"Attorney General Jackson's book has very real intrinsic merits, for it is the work of a legal scholar who can write simply and at times brilliantly. It shows a firm grasp of the fundamentals of our constitutional history; it is notably complete (and therefore indispensable) for its discussion of judicial problems under the New Deal; and it represents, of course, the New Deal's position on the role of the Federal judiciary in our governmental functioning." Louis Hacker
+ — Books p3 F 2 '41 1550w

Reviewed by Philip Nichols

Boston Transcript p2 F 15 '41 900w

"The Attorney General has written a brilliant and dramatic account of the Supreme Court's usurpation of political power in the United States, culminating in the President's court reorganization bill in 1936." Francis Biddle
+ Harvard Law R 54:896 Mr '41 1450w

"This is the legal justification of New Deal policies by the administration's 'most candid and articulate spokesman.' . . The text will be referred to in the future by students interested in contemporary opinion on controversial New Deal measures, which may prove to be as pivotal, in another generation, as the Dred Scott decision." D. F. Lucas
Library J 65:921 N 1 '40 240w

Reviewed by T. R. Powell

Nation 152:273 Mr 8 '41 1150w

"He paints it from the peculiar vantage-point of one who has himself been in the thick of the battle. He knows what 'government by lawsuit' is because he has had to prepare the briefs and argue the cases. If consequently some bitterness and impatience have crept into the book (it is amazing how little), a good deal also of the clarity and orderliness of Mr. Jackson's mind has found its way in." Max Lerner
+ New Repub 104:156 F 3 '41 1500w

Reviewed by H. S. Commager

N Y Times p4 F 2 '41 1800w

"The Attorney General of the United States writes a brilliant and readable study of 'the vice of judicial supremacy' which has been enforced on legislative acts by the Supreme Court since 1803."

+ New Yorker 16:71 Ja 25 '41 100w

Reviewed by C. B. Swisher

Pol Sci Q 56:447 S '41 700w

Pratt p19 spring '41

Reviewed by J. R. Parker

Sat R of Lit 23:13 F 8 '41 700w

Social Studies 32:144 Mr '41 30w

Reviewed by H. C. Hockett

Social Studies 32:280 O '41 550w

"Robert H. Jackson treats at times from the standpoint of partisanship a controversy that should now be treated impartially as a chapter in the nation's legal and political evolution. . . Mr. Jackson is a brilliant writer, and this work will be a useful handbook for persons seeking criticisms of the supreme court's use of its authority or a defense of the Roosevelt administration's attack upon the court in the proposal to increase the number of justices."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 26 '41 550w

Reviewed by Harry Shulman

Yale Law J 50:1307 My '41 2100w

JACOB, NAOMI ELLINGTON. Cap of youth. 335p $2.50 Macmillan [9s Hutchinsonson]

41-14757

John Preston, son of a successful Yorkshire merchant failed as a writer, so he joined his father's firm. Because he was a person of integrity himself, he married a scheming woman, totally unprepared for her infidelities. The marriage ended in divorce, and a new understanding of life for John.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p9 Ag 31 '41 260w

New Repub 105:382 S 22 '41 40w

"Reading 'The Cap of Youth' is a relaxing, unquestioning experience, like watching a broad stream flowing smoothly in midsummer. . . There is insufficient conflict in the book to warrant its being truly stirring. John drifts along rather than try to swim against the current. Then, too, for a gifted author, Miss Jacob indulges in a goodly amount of sentimental simplification. Never once does she really storm the poor little defenses behind which men hide their weaknesses. . . Probably her purpose was to avoid stark realism and produce instead a feeling of warmth and serenity." M. L. Rossbach
+ — N Y Times p16 Ag 24 '41 550w

"Naomi Jacob is a most satisfying writer. When one opens a book of hers, one is conscious of the enormous relief of reading, at last, a novel written by a true, a predestined, novelist, a pleasure which is rare enough nowadays. . . "The Cap of Youth" probes no abysses, explores no uncharted seas; it is compact, deftly composed, cheerful, and rings as true as silver coin." Currie Cabot

+ Sat R of Lit 24:14 Ag 30 '41 450w

"The clashing personalities and types make this tale of a bewildered young man worth reading. If the raffish widow is an unlovely person, Patricia Herron makes amends."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 24 '41 170w

"There is a rich odour of homely things and people about every book that Naomi Jacob writes; even when her book concerns lords and ladies she contrives to make them human and to introduce subsidiary characters of very common clay. . . As in all Miss Jacob's books about Yorkshire, the characters are drawn with sincerity and skill, and in spite of the sham culture of Louise and her circle of vulgar and rootless friends the book breathes an atmosphere of something, as Miss Jacob's Yorkshire folk might say, 'genuine,' that homely sincerity that is so typically English, and therefore all the more precious to-day."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p101 Mr 1 '41 240w

JACOBS, CHARLES MICHAEL. What then is Christianity? 136p $1 United Lutheran pub. 230 Christianity 40-34184

"A small posthumous work by the late president of the Lutheran Theological Seminary at Mt. Airy, Pa., in which post he had succeeded his father, Dr. Henry E. Jacobs. It exhibits a thorough understanding of the course of modern thought, and a firm adherence to the substance of the old faith. By successive steps and in successive chapters there is built up this definition: 'Christianity is a life of faith in God—through Jesus Christ—which has as its goal a perfect righteousness—and in which we have salvation.'" Christian Century

Booklist 37:235 F 1 '41

Christian Century 57:1451 N 20 '40 60w

Churchman 155:34 F 15 '41 60w

JACOBS, FRANCES E. Finger plays and action rhymes; photographs by Lura and Courtney Owen. 53p $2 Lothrop

649.55 Games. Children's songs 41-18892

"A teacher of kindergarten, then of music to children whose ability to carry a tune had to be developed, Miss Jacobs has used this experience to the good of any one with a baby to amuse, in these broad and varied pages. The little plays do not stop with babyhood. . . Thus a little boy is shown feeding a rabbit, then the hand making a rabbit as one does in a shadow-play, then two hands making a rabbit eating a carrot. A rainstorm is going on in one photograph, while opposite hands represent clouds floating, the patter of rain, thirsty flowers, and an open umbrella. Each play has a rhyme and for some of these is music." Books

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 O 19 '41 120w

Reviewed by S. J. Johnson
Library J 66:908 O 15 '41 30w
Springf'd Republican p7e N 30 '41 80w

JACOBS, HELEN HULL. Tennis. (Barnes dollar sports lib) 77p il $1 Barnes, A.S. 796.34 Tennis (W) 41-51747

Rules and technique of tennis by a famous American woman player. Illustrated by many action photographs showing details of play posed by Miss Jacobs and other champions. Index.

Booklist 37:441 My 15 '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '41

"A brief book on tennis which will well repay reading by anyone interested in the game, whether an expert or a beginner. . . Miss Jacobs has had her try as a novelist and it is to her present advantage that she writes better than many tennis experts who have tried to write books on their favorite game. Her little book is modest and engaging, although it is somewhat uneven and would have been bettered by careful revision. It is also apparent that if Miss Jacobs had had more experience as a teacher or coach, rather than merely as one of the world's foremost amateur players, she would have been able to make some of her points more clearly. But, with this qualification, the book is to be warmly commended."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 18 '41 650w

JACOBS, MORRIS BORIS. Analytical chemistry of industrial poisons, hazards and solvents. 661p il $7 Interscience

543.5 Chemistry, Analytic. Poisons. Solvents 41-15173

"This book is written primarily for the analytical chemist in the field of industrial hygiene and is therefore largely a collection of methods of analysis. . . Roughly the book is divided into three sections comprising Sampling, Gas Measurement and Dusts; Inorganic Industrial Poisons; and Organic Industrial Poisons. . . The 19 chapters discuss in succession a long and imposing list of industrial poisons and their analytical determination, with a final chapter devoted to chemical warfare agents." Am J Pub Health

"While one could wish for more critical treatment of some of the material, it could hardly be expected in a volume which covers so much ground and its lack is more than compensated for by the wealth of useful information which is presented." H. B. Elkins

Am Chem Soc J 63:3544 D '41 550w

Reviewed by L. T. Fairhall

Am J Pub Health 31:1217 N '41 360w

"On encountering a book such as this, one finds it difficult to evaluate because of the almost overwhelming amount of data contained and the broad range of subjects covered. As shown by the footnote references appearing on nearly every page, Dr. Jacobs has collected information for this one volume from more than a thousand reference sources. He has extracted his analytical procedures from many of these and therein will probably lie the value of the book, since it will quickly furnish accepted procedures for practically any dangerous industrial material."

Chem & Met Eng 48:182 N '41 230w

JACOBSON, MRS DOROTHY HOUSTON. Our interests as consumers. (American way ser) 338p il $1.48 Harper

339.4 Buying. Cooperative societies. Consumption (economics) 41-12487

"This book has been written to meet the need for introductory material for those studying their interests as consumers. It has been organized primarily from the point of view of the needs of a high school course in social studies, but its adaptability to other groups and other courses has been constantly kept in mind. It is hoped that the material in this book may be used not only as a basic text in consumer education, but also as supplementary material for other courses in social science, in orientation, business and home economics courses, as well as by adult groups interested in the subject." (Pref) Index.

"Useful as a school text or as general reading."

+ J Home Econ 34:51 Ja '42 60w

"Excellent for a semester course or the high school library."

+ Social Studies 32:336 N '41 20w

JACOBSON, PAUL BENJAMIN, and REAVIS, WILLIAM CLAUDE. Duties of school principals. 812p $3.50 Prentice-Hall

371.2 School superintendents and principals. School management 41-11293

"A handbook for the principal on the job as well as for the training of 'new recruits to the principalship.' Throughout the book the authors have attempted to maintain a carefully considered balance between administrative theory and successful practice. Comprehensive consideration is given the common elements in the work of principals in both elementary and secondary schools." (School & Society) Chapter bibliographies, Index.

"A number of specific statements in the volume might be questioned. . . One major criticism of this reviewer is that the book attempts to cover the elementary-school principalship while dealing primarily with the duties of the secondary-school administrator. The result often is an inadequate treatment of elementary-school problems. . . A second criticism is that the authors have introduced many questions and topics without giving either detailed treatment in the text or adequate reference to other publications. . . In spite of the limitations as seen by this reviewer, the volume stands in a class by itself as a comprehensive review of the opportunities and duties of the principalship." F. W. Hubbard

+ — El School J 42:229 N '41 1000w
School & Society 53:792 Je 28 '41 40w

"The book gives every appearance of having been well planned and of having been written carefully and deliberately. The authors have capitalized not only on their wide experience but on recent research. Their ability to describe current practices without frequent quotations from studies or researches has resulted in a clear, running narrative throughout and is evidence of a fine ability to write. Their knowledge concerning duties of school principals is so extensive that the reader is constantly impressed with the ability of the authors to distinguish between important and unimportant materials. There are no extraneous words, yet at no point does the volume appear dull or unwieldy." P. A. Rehms

+ School R 49:787 D '41 800w

JACOBUS DE VARAGINE. Golden legend; tr. and adapted from the Latin, by Granger Ryan and Helmut Ripperger. 2pts 356,347-800p pl ea $3 set $5 Longmans

922.2 Saints 41-7850

"Jacobus de Voragine, a Dominican friar of the thirteenth century, became Archbishop of Genoa in 1293, and achieved renown in his lifetime as a scholar, preacher and spiritual guide. He is chiefly remembered, however, for his lives of the saints, known under the title 'Golden Legend.' . . The present edition of the Golden Legend is based on the Latin edition of Graesse, published in Leipzig in 1850, and generally conceded to be the best available text. Modern French and German versions have also been freely consulted. However, this work is not meant to be a scholarly edition, but a popular presentation of the Golden Legend. The translators have made few omissions and fewer changes, but their aim has been to render the spirit, rather than the letter, of Jacobus masterpiece." (Publisher's note). The first part of the book tells the stories of the saints whose days fall in the first part of the year, from January first to July; the second part covers the remainder of the year, Index.

"Jacobus de Voragine was not an historian, but he was a good story-teller. He knew nothing and cared little for critical method; his purpose was wholly pragmatic. He wanted to edify, instruct, inspire. His Saints were a concrete embodiment of the Gospel message; they were Christian virtue personified. . . As a secondary source for past events, critical history would give Jacobus a very low rating; as a primary document his collection of stories is a nearly perfect mirror of the times in which he wrote." R. Corrigan

+ America 65:414 JI 19 '41 420w

Reviewed by G. N. Shuster
Books p8 Je 22 '41 480w

"One may congratulate Messrs. Ryan and Ripperger for having finished an agreeable translation of the 'Golden Legend.' It may be difficult to convey to a modern reader any great part of the charm and value which these stories of saints had for our ancestors, but the prose of this version is urbane and the editing judicious." G. N. Shuster

+ Books p18 D 14 '41 400w (Review of pt 2)

"If Emile Male was right in placing the Golden Legend among the ten books best representing medieval psychology—and few will care to question it—then this new and admirable translation is a real service to human solidarity as well as to scholarship." Katharine Brégy

+ Cath World 153:629 Ag '41 440w

"Altogether, the book abounds in what might be described as devout Christian fairy tales, where the curious medieval realism is punctuated by sailless ships, docile beasts, bells that ring and churches which light up of themselves—and by such a multitude of miracles that the modern reader is at once a little vertiginous and a little nostalgic."

+ Cath World 154:510 Ja '42 270w (Review of pt 2)

"There is a general and not ill founded impression among Protestants that lives of the Saints are rather dull reading, with their cloying piety, their crude propagandist intent and their total disregard of evidence and probabilities. But there is in these a sweet simplicity and sincerity that disarms criticism and makes them as delightful as edifying. The translation is smooth and graceful, and the 'adaptation' has omitted passages which might be tiresome or offensive to modern tastes."

+ Christian Century 58:722 My 28 '41 280w

"It is doubtful whether this body of entertaining and edifying material has ever been given more attractive form." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 58:1578 D 17 '41 800w (Review of pt 2)

Reviewed by D. H. Moseley
Commonweal 35:9 O 24 '41 3000w

Reviewed by E. L. Tinker
N Y Times p19 Je 22 '41 850w

Reviewed by A. J. Green
N Y Times p9 Ja 18 '42 700w

"The translators tell us that they have omitted some of the more involved and disputatious theology, as well as some stories which would be found more offensive than edifying, and they have supplied a sympathetic foreword; but they will hardly be able to commend their author to more than a small public. Still, it is pleasant to have available a translation of so famous a work." Basil Davenport

Sat R of Lit 24:32 D 6 '41 410w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 11 '42 110w (Review of pt 2)

JACOBY, HENRY SYLVESTER, and DAVIS, ROLAND PARKER. Foundations of bridges and buildings. 3d ed 535p il $5 McGraw

624.15 Foundations. Bridges 41-10527

"Since the second edition (1925) was published, developments in this field have necessitated a complete revision, hence this new edition. The chapters cover: soil explorations and bearing capacity; some fundamentals of soil mechanics; timber piles and drivers; driving and protecting timber piles; bearing power of piles; concrete piles; sand piles, metal piles, and sheet piles; cofferdams; box and open caissons; pneumatic caissons for bridges; pneumatic caissons for buildings; land foundations in open excavating and control of water; spread foundations; bridge piers; doubleshaft and pivot piers; bridge abutments; and underpinning buildings. [For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1914]. (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 38:15 S '41

Reviewed by C. S. Hill

Eng N 127:87 D 18 '41 550w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:42 J1 '41

JAGENDORF, MORITZ ADOLF. Penny puppets, penny theatre and penny plays; il. by Fletcher Clark. 190p $2 Bobbs

791.5 Marionettes. Puppet plays (W) 41-24363

Directions for the making of inexpensive puppets, with diagrams for necessary scenery and costumes, written simply so that it may be used by children of eight to ten. Includes nine puppet plays.

Booklist 38:161 Ja 1 '42

"The directions are exceedingly explicit and complete." E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:376 D '41 90w

"This book should encourage initiative, and may well relegate to the adult collection several excellent but more ambitious texts in this highly specialized art." Maude Adams

+ Library J 66:1049 D 1 '41 100w

JAKOSKY, JAY JOHN. Exploration geophysics. 786p il $8 Times-mirror

622.1 Geophysics. Prospecting 40-35172

"The chief object of this book is to describe the fundamental theories, equipment and field techniques of the recognized exploratory geophysical methods, and to illustrate their application to problems of economic geology. . . An effort has been made to cite patent references whenever possible as well as literature references, because, due to the highly competitive nature of modern exploration geophysics, patent specifications oftentimes tend to be more authoritative than the reports in contemporary literature." N Y New Tech Bks

Eng N 126:62 Ja 30 '41 200w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:8 Ja '41

JAMES, GEORGE VAUGHTON. Water treatment; a comprehensive treatise on the treatment of water for all purposes and effluents purification, sterilisation, coagulation, filtration, storage of industrial and domestic water. 223p il $12 Chemical pub. co. [30s Tech. press]

628.16 Water—Purification. Sewage—Purification 41-50595

"The author has attempted to cover the entire field of water purification for industrial and sanitary uses and has included also a discussion of the treatment of domestic sewage. The text consists of 15 chapters and is divided into three parts. Part I is related to domestic water supplies, Part II to industrial supplies and effluents, and Part III to domestic sewage." Chem & Met Eng

"The point of view of the entire book is almost exclusively British or Continental. American research and developments are less prominently treated. . . Due to the limited size of the text, the subjects discussed are not presented as thorough-going studies or exhaustive inquiries. They are merely summaries or brief outlines." S. T. Powell

Chem & Met Eng 48:176 S '41 300w

"It has a novel viewpoint in that sewage and industrial waste treatment are considered subdivisions of water treatment for domestic and industrial purposes. The organization of the book is poor with no clear separation between different processes and methods of treatment. The book would have made an impression if it had been published between 1910-1915, but on the basis of today's more exacting standards it is an inadequately treated hodge-podge." Willem Rudolfs

— + Eng N 127:140 O 23 '41 350w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:13 Ja '41

JAMES, MARQUIS. Alfred I. Du Pont, the family rebel. 599p il $4.50 Bobbs

B or 92 Du Pont, Alfred Irénée. Du Pont family (W) 41-51938

"A vivid picture of the Du Pont dynasty and its part in American life. [The author's] story of perhaps the most brilliant member of the family is based on a great wealth of firsthand information, which he evaluates with tact and without any trace of bias." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:79 N 1 '41

"Marquis James has written an important biography of one of the leading creative characters of modern American industry. To Mr. James this Du Pont is the only one of a large family famous in American industrial history who approaches the stature of the illustrious founder of the family in the United States, Pierre Samuel du Pont de Nemours. Mr. James's book contains a mass of convincing and fascinating detail to prove this point. . . While Alfred I. du Pont obviously is a hero to Marquis James, his adulation seems well founded and is amply documented." M. R. Werner

+ Books p5 O 19 '41 950w

— Commonweal 35:325 Ja 16 '42 160w

"Should appeal to a large audience, because many people want to know more about the Du Ponts and their methods, because Alfred Irénée himself was a man of character and vision, and because James has a fascinating way of writing biographies. Recommended for public and college libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 66:792 S 15 '41 120w

"Once again, Mr. James has given us a biography which is as scholarly as it is readable, and, incidentally, he has provided social historians with a wealth of material bearing on industrial organization and corporate finance. Mr. James has been, perhaps, a trifle over-generous in his estimate of Alfred I. duPont's character, although by no means all the warts are painted out, but he proves in a very satisfactory manner that his hero was far from being a stuffed shirt." Keith Hutchison

+ Nation 153:585 D 6 '41 700w

"The rebel du Pont is gone, and Mr. James offers this appraisal only six years after his death. It is a story upon which we may well have a better perspective in a generation, and can judge better what use such men of vast opportunities made of their talents. Mr. James's book will be of help in gaining that perspective." C. McD. Puckette

+ N Y Times p9 N 30 '41 1300w

"A rich portrait, plus a detailed view of what happened to an old-line paternalistic business when it became a dominant corporation."

+ New Yorker 17:91 O 25 '41 100w

"This is a full-length life of one of America's principal industrialists and financiers—and might have been a dull one. It might have been a mere recording of the law-suits and bickerings of the duPonts. But Marquis James, as he has demonstrated before, is a born storyteller, and his book is enlivened by anecdotes which are pertinent and which illuminate the character of Alfred duPont." H. F. Pringle

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 N 15 '41 700w

JAMES, NEILL. White reindeer; il. by Cyrus Le Roy Baldrige. 157p $1.75 Scribner

40-30717

The story of Pirak, a boy of Lapland, who found an orphan white reindeer, and brought him up as a pet. Years later the reindeer, grown to a great white stag, guided his herd and Pirak to secret feeding grounds, and saved them all from starvation.

JAMES, NEILL—Continued

"Pirak's devotion to the fawn is sympathetically told. . . . Distinctive illustrations by Cyrus L. Baldrige. For nine-to-twelve-year-old boys and girls." Florence O'Gara

+ Library J 65:926 N 1 '40 130w

"Children from 7 to 10, who are always eager to know how people live in strange countries, are delighted with this picture of everyday life in Lapland, that fascinating country of midnight suns and gleaming northern lights. . . . The book has the freshness and charm of a first-hand account and the writer's own enthusiasm and liking for the sturdy people she describes has found its way into the story, touching a sympathetic chord in boy and girl readers." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 F 9 '41 550w

JAMESON, STORM (MRS GUY CHAPMAN).
Cousin Honoré. 315p $2.50 Macmillan [8s Cassell]

(W) 41-51529

The tale takes place in Alsace between the years 1918 and 1939. Honoré Burckheim, owner of a small estate and an iron foundry, is the central figure. The growing power of Germany, and the almost universal hatred of that power among the characters provide the plot.

Atlantic Mr '41 180w

Booklist 37:270 F 15 '41

Bookmark 2:14 My '41

"'Cousin Honoré' is a singular book. Impressive, it is far from comfortable reading. Its characters, inextricably involved in countless relationships with one another, become indistinct and merge into one huge, Rodinesque figure. The atmosphere grows supercharged, oppressive. . . . In seizing upon and making evident so many various facets of France through the beings of so many and varying unheroic Frenchmen and Alsations, Miss Storm Jameson has ardently and justly affirmed her own particular English faith in that great if crippled country." Iris Barry

+ Books p4 Ja 19 '41 1000w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Merrill

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 18 '41 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '41

"Simple, cunning, strong, selfish, egotistical, Honoré is convincingly drawn as are the sharply differentiated characters of the group around him. The author has succeeded in making the reader feel the intense devotion and love of the Alsations for their country. A novel to be recommended." A. T. Davidson

+ Library J 66:32 Ja 1 '41 140w

"'Cousin Honoré' is a fine study of the movement of history during the period covered, displayed in the conversations and actions of the various people involved. It is indeed one of Miss Jameson's best books." J. D. Beresford

+ Manchester Guardian p7 D 6 '40 180w

Nation 152:108 Ja 25 '41 70w

"Read this for its extraordinary background, its fabulous intrigues, its careful scrutiny of the people a jittery Europe produced. Read it, in short, because it makes good reading and good sense."

+ New Repub 104:126 Ja 27 '41 60w

"Cousin Honoré displays a very remarkable knowledge of the viticultural, social and political structure of France, and contains, considering that it was completed a week before the Collapse, some acute prophetic moments. . . . Perhaps the stage is a little overcrowded. . . . but the eager sensuousness with which the landscape, and Honoré's intuitive passion for it, is depicted, more than compensates." Brian Howard

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:546 N 30 '40 330w

"This newest novel by Storm Jameson . . . was begun last winter, she tells us, and finished just a week before the fall of the Reynaud government and the capitulation of France. Much of it, in the light of subsequent events, seems curiously prophetic. Other parts cannot be read without a sense of painful irony. Yet Storm Jameson has refused to change or delete so much as a single passage. Her readers will find reason to be grateful. As a work of symbolism—largely subconscious symbolism, one thinks—'Cousin Honoré' seems complete and unalterable as it stands." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 12 '41 900w

New Yorker 16:79 Ja 18 '41 100w

"There is nothing specially original about this story or its development; but there are flashes of insight, brief descriptions, meditative paragraphs, passages of dialogue which reveal the singularity of Miss Jameson's vision. They run like a remarkable thread through what would otherwise, no doubt, be just a competent piece of story-telling; and have filled one reviewer at any rate with gratitude, admiration, and delight." George Dangerfield

+ Sat R of Lit 23:6 Ja 18 '41 550w

"This book gives us meanness, vanity, fear and megalomania, in terms of French and individualistic desires. It also gives us love—exposed as a peril; a source of venality, cruelty, and honour. It shows us brains at work, for good and evil, upon the complications of tradition and cupidity and self-respect. And if, in some of its asides on human feeling, it seems to ask too much of the unsaid or the monosyllable, its direction still is civilised truth. . . . And finally, the passion informing the book is, for our time, an essential one—for France, for its life, its restoration. Looking on the brink of war, to the far future, Edouard Berthelin, soldier, Catholic, man of brains and honour, prays: 'Let there be French hands and feet, and a brain.' So do we pray, closing with gratitude this honourable, passionate book." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 165:656 D 13 '40 850w

"Miss Jameson's story has naturalness and dignity and reveals, besides the fineness and strength of her instinct for character, impressive Yorkshire shrewdness. And yet, as a story, it does not quite come off. Except for Berthelin, not one of these French people, true to type though they are, touches our sympathy at all closely; even Honoré is too much like a lusty Gallic cock strutting and crowing in incomprehensible vanity. The feeling of tragedy is there in 'Cousin Honoré,' but something that should have given wholeness and tragic unity to the story is lacking."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p589 N 23 '40 550w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 30:xiv spring '41 30w

JAMESON, STORM (MRS GUY CHAPMAN).
The fort. 136p $1.75 Macmillan 41-19311

By means of conversations between French and English soldiers and a German captive, hidden in a French farm cellar, the author attempts to show the futility of the European wars of 1914 and 1939, and the national psychologies behind them.

Booklist 38:52 O 15 '41

"'The Fort' is a story—very brief, moving, imperfect—a kind of one-act play which takes place in the cellar of a French farmhouse during the confusion of the Battle of France. . . . The realism is far from perfect. It seems a waste for a Storm Jameson to expend herself on parables. But if somebody has to do them, no one can do them better." F. T. Marsh

Books p14 O 26 '41 500w

Commonweal 35:229 D 19 '41 40w

Reviewed by M. M. Kehl

Library J 66:841 O 1 '41 60w

"Thanks to Miss Jameson's restraint, 'The Fort' has the clean-cut unity of a one-act play; you read it not so much to find out what is going to happen to these men, because that is virtually predetermined, but to see how they behave while waiting, and to compare their talk with what you imagine to be the conversation of men who know they are trapped but will not admit it." L. B. Salomon
+ Nation 153:433 N 1 '41 310w

New Repub 106:30 Ja 5 '42 50w

"This is in some ways the least bitter of all Storm Jameson's recent novels, but there is nothing soft about it on that account. It has clarity and courage and a diamond-hard wit not easy to match even in her own recent writing. 'The Fort' is the sort of novel we had no real reason to expect for another decade to come." Margaret Wallace
+ N Y Times p5 O 26 '41 850w

"Miss Jameson, being extremely skillful and intelligent, is able to cover the various points of view exemplified by her characters and to comment on them without being didactic. A clever job, with overtones of tragedy."
+ New Yorker 17:90 O 25 '41 80w

JARON, PHILLIP, and STAFFORD, HORACE.
Two alone. 241p $2.50 Houghton

41-5436

A Polish love story with a background of war. A young peasant, sent by his commanding officer to a distant village to seek tobacco, meets and falls in love with a young girl. He stays at her home for three days, and then rejoins his company. Eventually he creeps away from battle, rejoins his Sonia, and hand in hand the two escape thru a war-torn country, cross the border into Lithuania, and are married there.

"It is all so exciting that one cannot stop reading, but the story has a rarer quality. It has charm. Wladek and Sonia are such lovable youngsters, so honest, natural, and decent, so absorbed in each other, that the war goes on over and around them and is accepted as the wind and rain. This is a new kind of war book, as simple and naïve in style as a folk tale, laughable but touching." R. M. Gay
+ Atlantic My '41 110w

"Mr. Jaron has written his book with a fairy-tale simplicity which is appealing, but it is a pity that he numbers the chapters in Polish and sprinkles the text with Polish words (in two cases incorrectly spelled), since presumably American readers can neither pronounce nor understand them." Virgilia Sapieha
+ Books p11 Mr 23 '41 320w

"It would be an exaggeration to call 'Two Alone' a great literary work. But it possesses the appeal of a tale of adventure in a strange, exotic land. . . . The author conveys vividly the sense of what it feels like to be tired, hungry, lost in strange towns and villages, with nothing in the way of currency except a ring. And amid all the hardships and adventures the love of the two young people for each other supplies a constant note of hopefulness and cheer." W. H. C.
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 26 '41 500w

"The love story has charm and directness; the atmosphere of war is convincingly conveyed; and the Polish chapter headings (1 to 20) and bits of easily understandable Polish scattered throughout the pages give a pleasant tang to the excellent prose." J. S. Southron
+ N Y Times p7 Mr 23 '41 550w

JEANS, SIR JAMES HOPWOOD. An introduction to the kinetic theory of gases. 311p $3.50 Macmillan [15s Cambridge]

533.7 Gases, Kinetic theory of 41-6525

"The classical kinetic theory of gases presented in a straightforward manner. The author states in his preface 'I have intended that the present book shall provide such knowledge of the Kinetic Theory as is required by the average serious student of physics and physical chemistry. . . . Inevitably the book covers a good deal of the same ground as my earlier book, The Dynamical Theory of Gases, but it is covered in a simpler and more physical manner.' Gas viscosity, heat conductivity, diffusion, heat capacity, etc., are all studied in a very thorough way, and where possible experimental corroboration of kinetic theory deductions included." Chem & Met Eng

"The chief limitation of the book is its brevity and limited scope, which make the work less desirable for reference purposes. The prospective purchaser might well examine also the recent book by Kennard, which is somewhat more comprehensive. On the other hand, the book has the advantage of the entertaining and graceful style for which Sir James Jeans is deservedly so well known, as well as the advantage of a rather small cost." R. C. Jones

+ Am Chem Soc J 63:1775 Je '41 550w

"The book will certainly become a standard text on kinetic theory, for in spite of its subject matter it is quite readable." G. F. Kinney

+ Chem & Met Eng 48:133 Ja '41 180w

"I think that the author is to be warmly congratulated on the successful achievement of his purposes and on doing this in a book of only three hundred pages. This book strikes me as being an ideal introduction to the kinetic theory of gases and as such will no doubt be welcomed by all teachers of this subject." F. H. MacDougall

+ J Phys Chem 45:877 My '41 320w

"There can be little doubt that, judged by the text, the book will deservedly succeed, and maintain for many years to come the already long association of the author's name with his present subject." S. Chapman

+ Nature 146:535 O 26 '40 800w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:42 Jl '41

JEFFERS, ROBINSON. Be angry at the sun. 156p $2.50 Random house

811

(W) 41-51990

"A long narrative, a dramatic dialogue, and shorter poems on current themes, in which Jeffers sticks to his usual gloomy view of man's fate." New Yorker

Booklist 38:110 D 1 '41

"Despite the violence of his action, Jeffers is not essentially a dramatic poet. His scenes are not designed for the development of character or incident, but rather to expose subconscious and primitive layers. The characters are motivated by his own desire to break the crust of the senses. The climaxes, more often than peaks, are pits. To this end credibility goes by the board. The critical faculties, involving humor, are in abeyance. The volcanic process is not selective in its activity: the ludicrous is disgorged quite as easily as the monstrous. Nevertheless there has always been an impetus, a fever-pitch of words, that made up for other kinds of suspense. This carried his stories along at break-neck speed, preventing the immediate application of an analysis that might threaten his effects." Lloyd Frankenberg

Books p7 N 30 '41 700w

"Brilliant blank verse with odd cadences, reminiscent of the poet's earlier work. . . . Recommended." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 66:902 O 15 '41 70w

New Yorker 17:136 D 6 '41 20w

Reviewed by S. J. Kunitz
Poetry 59:148 D '41 2400w

Reviewed by Louis Untermeyer
Yale R n s 31:378 winter '42 460w

JEFFERSON, BEATRICE W. Small town murder. 280p $2 Dutton
41-17323
Detective story.

Booklist 38:114 D 1 '41

Reviewed by Will Cuppy,
Books p17 O 12 '41 150w

"The setting of the story is excellent, and the working out of the plot shows Beatrice Jefferson to be the possessor of a genuine talent for story-telling," Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p22 O 5 '41 230w

"Pleasant local color and a nice plot in this first mystery."

+ New Yorker 17:88 O 4 '41 40w

"Forthright, pleasantly written, and ably characterized small town tragedy—trifle short on 'mystery' side but full of 'local color' and interest. Passes muster."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:36 O 18 '41 40w

"Writing in the first person, Miss Jefferson draws the reader into quick and easy attention. Her style is disarmingly natural, her presentation of events clear and unimpeded in spite of a dodging chronology. . . 'Small Town Murder' is briskly exciting. Miss Jefferson's characters are understandable people, her writing nicely tinged with humor, her line from cause to effect tight with logic and enlightening in detail."

+ Springfield Republican p7e O 5 '41 360w

JEFFERSON, THOMAS. The wisdom of Thomas Jefferson; including the Jefferson Bible, The life and morals of Jesus of Nazareth; sel. and ed. by Edward Boykin. 301p il $2.50 Doubleday 308.1 41-6586

"In selecting the passages included in this book, the editor has carefully gleaned the various editions of Jefferson's Letters, Writings and State papers. Jefferson seldom wrote a letter or paper without pointing a moral, and his wisdom was distilled drop by drop over sixty years. The titles are supplied by the editor—the text is completely Thomas Jefferson's." (Foreword) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by E. L. Tinker

N Y Times p18 Je 15 '41 600w

"[A] sound and valuable collection of Jeffersoniana. There is probably no political figure today who is more quoted and less read by the public." H. S.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:21 Ap 26 '41 100w

Wis Lib Bul 37:134 J1 '41

JENKINS, DAVID ROSS. Growth and decline of agricultural villages. 95p $1.60 Teachers college

323.354 Villages. Sociology, Rural 41-3867

"[This book deals with] the causes and consequences of changes in the population of agricultural villages, illustrated by case studies in various parts of the United States, with comparison of conditions in growing and in declining communities." (J Home Econ) Bibliography.

"Judged as a sociological investigation, the work strikes the reviewer, who is not a sociologist, as a serious effort to handle a rather difficult problem. Handicapped by the inadequacy of census data and the difficulty of obtaining other information, the author seems to have used to advantage the materials that were available. In general the conclusions drawn seem to be justified by the data, although the relatively short period of time through which change has been traced would lead one to label the conclusions as tentative only. Perhaps the most serious criticism would be made of the poorly organized nature of the report itself." V. M. Sims

+ — EI School J 41:709 My '41 700w

J Home Econ 33:264 Ap '41 30w

School & Society 53:128 Ja 25 '41 40w

Reviewed by V. H. Whitney
Social Forces 20:129 O '41 320w

JENKINS, ROY HORACE. Practical pottery for craftsmen and students. 192p il $2.75 Bruce pub.

738 Pottery (W) 41-5662

"A practical book on pottery particularly applicable to school classes, and a chapter on General Information at the end of the book contains valuable formulas and temperature tables for the potter. Mr. Jenkins' long experience in teaching his subject in one of California's State Colleges, enables him to arrange economical and simplified equipment and methods of procedure throughout his book. Numerous step-by-step illustrations illustrate Casting, Throwing, Turning, Trimming, Tilemaking, Glazing, and other methods. A complete index enables quick reference to any of the information in the book." (School Arts) Index.

Booklist 37:434 My 15 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:11 Ja '41

School Arts 40:7a Je '41 90w

JENNINGS, JOHN EDWARD. Call the New World. 459p maps $2.75 Macmillan

(W) 41-5496

Long historical novel, beginning during the War of 1812 and following the career of Peter Brooke, a West Point graduate, from the time he was court martialed because of orders which miscarried, thru his part in the struggle for South American independence, to his marriage with a Washington belle in the 1820s.

"Both historically and geographically it is well-informed and interesting. . . The account of Peter Brooke's various campaigns is able, vivid, and rich in detail—too rich, perhaps; for a smaller canvas and a lighter burden of fact might have made it run more freely. It staggers a little under its materials." R. M. Gay

+ — Atlantic My '41 120w

Booklist 37:465 Je 1 '41

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p12 Ap 13 '41 280w

"'Call the New World,' despite certain obvious faults, is a better than average novel and one that, by nature of its material, should sell well. Popular interest in South American history is growing and, as a historian, Mr. Jennings is at his best; his picture of South America in the throes of its struggle for freedom is as sound historically as it is vivid in the telling." W. E. Barrett

+ — Boston Transcript p7 Ap 12 '41 700w

Christian Century 58:464 Ap 2 '41 40w

"Recommended." R. D. Minnich
+ Library J 66:220 Mr 1 '41 40w

Reviewed by Harold Brighthouse
Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 22 '41 220w

Nation 152:648 My 31 '41 100w

"A few seasons ago 'Call the New World' would have been thought a longish novel. Now, when books twice its length are hardly extraordinary, it seems brief to the point of austerity. Mr. Jennings has allowed himself all too little space for the gigantic story he undertakes to tell. There are passages and even chapters which read rather like synopses. In the main, however, this is a good quality. Probably few story-tellers at the moment could have packed so much action and information into a novel with less tax upon the reader's time and patience." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 30 '41 700w

New Yorker 17:70 Mr 29 '41 50w

"The unfamiliar background is both an advantage and a disadvantage to the author. He is dealing with places, people and events which are bound to be interesting to readers because they have not been handled a hundred times before. On the other hand, the prevailing North American ignorance of South American history makes it necessary for the author to interrupt his narrative time and again to describe events in which Peter Brooke takes no part. This sometimes slows up the action, but on the whole the novel moves rapidly and is almost always interesting."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Ap 13 '41 550w

"It is all very lengthy and shows signs of much reading, and the battle pieces are numerous and done with naive zest. But 550 pages of a somewhat schoolboy narrative are possibly a little too much."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p393 Ag 16 '41 310w

JENNINGS, WILLIAM IVOR. British constitution. (English institutions) 232p il $2.50 Macmillan [8s 6d Cambridge]

342.42 Great Britain. Constitution. Great Britain—Politics and government 41-18688

"In his two books on 'Cabinet Government' and 'Parliament' Dr. Ivor Jennings has provided the standard works on the detailed practice of English government at the present day. In the present much shorter sketch he detaches himself from the intricate network he has drawn in order to survey the pattern as a whole. . . . Dr. Jennings leaves one whole branch of the constitutional system, the judiciary, almost entirely out of account. This is the greatest of several obvious omissions—another is the relation of Church and State. There is very little about individual rights. The book therefore reduces itself to a discussion of a limited, though large, part of the constitution—the mutual relations of the executive, the legislature, and the electorate." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by E. P. Chase

Am Pol Sci R 35:1169 D '41 360w

"This is not only an excellent book for the ordinary citizen, but it ought to be invaluable for students beginning the study of British constitutional law, especially in foreign jurisdictions." W. P. M. Kennedy

+ Ann Am Acad 218:206 N '41 400w

"The book is simple—as it ought to be for the audience addressed—but it is a simplicity derived from deep scholarship. It is wise; but it is the practical wisdom of politics so dear to the Greeks. In other words, this 'wise simplicity' is not writing down to the audience." W. P. M. Kennedy

+ Harvard Law R 55:319 D '41 450w

"A book that every student of government should be careful to read; its sense of proportion and its massive common sense are alike remarkable." H. J. L.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 1 '41 200w

"The present book is avowedly a general and elementary introduction to its subject. But it is a further illustration of the general truth that only a master of the subject can write a first-rate introduction to it. For it is not necessary to accept all that Dr. Jennings urges to recognise how admirable are the proportions, how excellent the examples, by which he gives clarity to a general theme." H. J. Laski

+ New Statesman & Nation 22:18 Jl 5 '41 550w

"The book as a whole illustrates very remarkably that curiously unprogressive quality of academic Liberalism, always fighting a rear-guard action against ghosts and shadows, while the real battlefield is miles ahead."

— Spec 166:686 Je 27 '41 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p295 Je 21 '41 900w

JENNISON, KEITH WARREN. Vermont is where you find it; pictures by [the author]. 118p $2.50 Harcourt

917.43 Vermont—Views 41-22540

Collection of photographs illustrating Vermont nature, human and otherwise, with a very short running text illustrative of Vermont's special brand of wit.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p6 D 21 '41 350w

"The total number of words in this book is not far from 500. Yet it is a treasure of verbal wit and pictorial beauty. Vermonters are not loquacious; they can say a good deal in 500 words."

+ Christian Century 58:1411 N 12 '41 60w

"The book will delight anyone who has ever felt Vermont's charm and also enlighten him. It is a beautiful book, and deserves the high praise Carl Sandburg has given it." Mason Wade

+ Commonweal 35:229 D 19 '41 160w

"These fifty-eight full-page pictures taken in Vermont get closer to the character of the state and its people than all the stuff that's been written about them. Nothing spectacular or tricky, just excellent photography inspired by good sense."

+ New Repub 105:709 N 24 '41 40w

"An unusual mixture of spendthrift pictures and economical prose which can be ranked high among Vermont books."

+ Spring'd Republican p6 N 3 '41 360w
Wis Lib Bul 37:176 N '41

JENNY, ALEXANDER. Anodic oxidation of aluminum and its alloys; tr. by Winifred Lewis. 231p il $6.50 Chemical pub. co. [16s Griffin]

669.7 Aluminum. Aluminum alloys. Oxidation 40-28968

"Aims to present 'in convenient form a general survey for the technically interested reader who, in general, has not the time at his disposal to entertain a study of the extensive and scattered literature on the subject, with the object of making him rapidly acquainted with the present-day position in the field.'" N Y New Tech Bks

Chem & Met Eng 48:145 Ap '41 360w

"For the most part, the book is easy to read and has many interesting observations not found elsewhere. It has been written more from the practical than the theoretical standpoint and is recommended to those interested in the commercial production of aluminum oxide coatings." R. B. Mason

+ J Phys Chem 45:1337 N '41 400w

"One or two criticisms of detail may be made; aluminum does not form a useful protective film in chloride solutions (p. 63) and may be very seriously attacked by anhydrous stearic acid in the absence of air (p. 64); and many readers in Great Britain will be disappointed by the limited attention given to the Bengough-Stewart process. Nevertheless, the book must be recommended to all interested in the protection of aluminium alloys."

H. W. G. H.

+ Nature 147:659 My 31 '41 240w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:44 O '40

JENSEN, MERRILL. The Articles of confederation; an interpretation of the social-constitutional history of the American revolution, 1774-1781. 284p $3 Univ. of Wis. press

342.73 U.S. Articles of confederation. U.S.—Constitutional history 40-34489

"This book is an account of the writing and ratification of the first constitution of the United States in terms of the ideas and interests of the men who wrote and ratified it. . . It is, furthermore, an effort to consider the Articles of Confederation in their proper relation to the revolutionary movement in the individual colonies, a movement that was unified in the revealing though seldom considered struggles between party and party in the two continental congresses. It is an attempt to describe the Articles of Confederation in terms of the concrete issues that Americans faced in 1776, rather than in terms of the unwarranted assumption that they are important only because their weaknesses made necessary the Constitution of 1787." (Pref) Index.

JENSEN, MERRILL—Continued

Reviewed by Max Farrand

Am Hist R 47:138 O '41 650w

Nation 152:26 Ja 4 '41 120w

"Since this is a thesis book, it is only just to review it that way. I could talk about the hard work the author has put into it and indicate that on the basis of his footnotes he has plowed through an extensive, although not an all-inclusive, list of secondary and source materials. But that is not the point of the book. And since I am reviewing it as a thesis book it is only fair at the beginning of my remarks to say that after reading it carefully, some parts several times, I find the author's argument unconvincing. He seems to me to have over-simplified his problem, to have fallen into the ancient error of dichotomy, to have seen everything as black or white, and to have supplied the labels in good part out of his own preconceptions." B. F. Wright

New Eng Q 14:174 Mr '41 950w

"There are two criticisms which must be advanced against Mr. Jensen's thesis. The first is that to consider the Articles of Confederation without any reference to the problem of imperial organization is to miss at least a considerable part of their historical significance. The second is that Mr. Jensen has not linked the two parts of his argument together strongly enough—that, with the exception of the land question, it does not appear how issues of democracy or of property were transferred from the State to the national arena or just how these issues were affected by the Articles. Possibly this problem will be cleared up in a subsequent book." H. S. Com-mager

N Y Times p19 Mr 2 '41 950w

Reviewed by Irving Brant

Social Studies 32:183 Ap '41 800w

JEPSON, SELWYN. Keep murder quiet. 271p $2 Doubleday [8s Joseph, M]

(W) 41-2433

Detective story.

Booklist 37:325 Mr 15 '41

Bookmark 2:16 My '41

"All but the hardest-boiled crime addicts should be knocked for a loop by this importation. Here, if we may say so, is thriller material handled so deftly that you wouldn't think of calling the underworld by its right name." Will Cuppy

+ Books p22 F 9 '41 170w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggan

Boston Transcript p2 F 15 '41 50w

Reviewed by Mort. Post

New Repub 104:350 Mr 10 '41 120w

"The book belongs on any list of the year's best detective stories." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p16 F 16 '41 200w

"Unusual in plot, excellently written, and completely convincing, this is a good book."

+ New Yorker 17:60 Mr 1 '41 70w

"A yarn that keeps eyes glued to every page."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:18 F 15 '41 40w

"Once we accept the hypothesis that a wealthy young man would plunge into the underworld in search of his father's murderer, the rest follows very smoothly. Keep Murder Quiet combines plenty of excitement with a human touch." Nicholas Blake

+ Spec 165:558 N 22 '40 60w

"In a detective tale remarkable for freshness and vigour [Mr Jepson] keeps our wits puzzled over a plot that is simply a crown for the labours of those who have long sought to put Hamlet into modern dress. If anyone questions whether the Prince of Denmark were an amateur detective, here is the answer."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p509 O 5 '40 280w

JERNBERG, ALBERT W. My brush monkeys; a narrative of the CCC; ed. by Marya Tze Caraman. 283p il $2.50 Smith, Richard R.

634.9 U.S. Civilian conservation corps 41-10980

"Experiences of a former Army Reserve officer who served as commander of CCC camps in Illinois and Michigan. . . [It] tells how the camps were set up and administered and how officers and enrollees learned to adapt themselves to a new and exacting democratic routine. Some plain talk about organization politics, too." New Yorker

Reviewed by E. F. Allen

N Y Times p10 Jl 27 '41 440w

"A straightforward, heart-warming narrative."

+ New Yorker 17:63 Je 28 '41 50w

JESSE, FRYNIWYD TENNYSON (MRS H. M. HARWOOD), and HARWOOD, HAROLD MARSH. London front; letters written to America, 1939-1940; with answers from Marion Balderston [and others]. 333p $2.50 Doubleday [12s Constable]

940.548142 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, English 41-5830

Letters written from England between August 29, 1939, and July, 1940, to S. N. Behrman, Alexander Woolcott, and other American friends. They express the opinions and feelings of the writers, and attempt to give "a picture of the time thru which we have been passing." Index.

"There are two elements which one misses in the letters, although this does not make them less authentic or representative. The intense drama of the last months, when any charwoman's experiences might be an epic of heroism and suffering, is necessarily absent, since the letters antedate the period of mass air attack. And one senses in some of the letters a rather unrealistic overconfidence. For the authors are more at home with witty sayings. . . than with military strategy. Only at the end, after the fall of France, is there a recognition of the desperate seriousness of the situation." W. H. Chamberlin

Atlantic Jl '41 200w

Booklist 37:405 My 1 '41

"[The] praise with which each letter is greeted produces rather an unfortunate effect on the reader. It is a little annoying to any one outside this intimate circle to meet the attitude of reverence with which the opinions of Miss Jesse and Mr. Harwood are awaited—intelligent and sensitive though they are—and one wishes also that there were less opinions and more plain, simple accounts of the details of life in a country at war. The fact that a highly intellectual group of Americans is so deeply impressed with these letters makes the reader expect much. Therefore the expression of rather usual opinions on the political and military developments is disappointing." Diana Forbes-Robertson

+ Books p17 My 25 '41 800w

"'London Front' is a most entertaining book, written with complete honesty of purpose, with literary skill, and with considerable courage it is presented entirely unmodified in the light of later events, with all its many errors of judgment thick upon it." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 18 '41 270w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:197 O '41 10w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates
Nation 152:673 Je 7 '41 300w

Reviewed by Alistair Cooke
New Repub 105:260 Ag 25 '41 280w

"It is an interesting book throughout, but its important contribution is in its revelation of the swift British adjustment: that clear and effective courage of the mind which met its moment and holds fast thus to save the freedom of the world."

+ N Y Times p2 Ap 13 '41 650w

"I am one of the unreconstructed minority that believes the best writing is done by writers. We have been flooded with English correspondence lately, most of it moving, even heroic, all of it interesting. A great deal has come from individuals who can do very great things, such as suffer, fight, and die, but cannot do a small thing like writing well. The Harwoods are professionals. Their letters have a vigor, a clarity, a humor, and—why not?—an elegance lacking in the amateur variety."

+ New Yorker 17:88 Ap 5 '41 550w

Reviewed by Cecil Roberts
Sat R of Lit 24:12 My 10 '41 120w

— Spec 165:620 D 6 '40 260w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 5 '41 550w
(Reprinted from the Times [London] Lit Sup)

Springf'd Republican p7e My 18 '41 550w

"Private letters, written feverishly, are likely to exaggerate. It seems unfair to take Mr. and Mrs. Harwood too seriously. While reading their gossip you may have embarrassed feelings of prying into other people's business and you may need assurance that it has been given book form as a matter of public interest. . . There are bright patches when Mr. and Mrs. Harwood write about their individual concerns, but there seems little point in Mrs. Harwood's description of Dunkirk since their American friends could as easily have 'written it up' for her. . . Cold print is not kind to little friendly messages."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p612 D 7 '40 750w

Reviewed by Herbert Davis
Yale R n s 30:826 summer '41 140w

JEVONS, JOHN DUDLEY. Metallurgy of deep drawing and pressing; foreword by H. W. Swift. 714p il $10 Wiley [50s Chapman]

671 Sheet metal work, Metals—Testing
41-13385

"The author has put into book form a careful, thorough, and comprehensive study of deep drawing and pressing sheets of brass, steel, aluminum, magnesium, copper, nickel, monel, nickel silver, Inconel, zinc, and stainless steel. The production and difficulties encountered in working these metals and alloys are adequately discussed and many steps are illustrated with photographs. Quite often the theoretical investigations cited are illustrated with microphotographs, graphs of physical data and x-ray photographs." Chem & Met Eng

"The book has the necessary exhaustive presentation and dignity to be regarded as a treatise on this subject, and is timely in view of the importance of metal drawing and pressing in armament, ammunition, and airplane manufacture." C. B. F. Young

+ Chem & Met Eng 48:146 Ap '41 350w

"The lavish illustrations add to the value of the book, and the way in which it is produced is worthy of the excellence of its contents."

+ Nature 148:451 O 18 '41 1200w

JOHANSEN, DONALD ALEXANDER. Plant microtechnique. 523p il $4.50 (39s) McGraw 578.8 Plant cells and tissues. Microscope and microscopy. Botany—Anatomy 40-9218

"This book appears to be an excellent vademecum to an adequate training in botanical microtechnique, with sufficiently minute details of approved methods and apparatus to be quite 'self-sufficient' for home use, and comprehensive enough for the student in the laboratory. In fact, a person with no previous training as a technician, with this book in hand, ought to be able to become an expert. A systematic arrangement of plants appears, and all the required special manipulations are described. A knowledge of systematic botany is presupposed." (N Y New Tech Bks) Bibliography. Index.

"The book is not intended to be an encyclopaedia of methods, but succeeds in giving in a readable form full details of a range of procedures which have been selected as the more reliable and generally useful, as the result of tests carried out in the Stanford laboratories."

+ Nature 147:222 F 22 '41 400w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:21 Ap '41

JOHANSEN, MRS MARGARET (ALISON). Hawk of Hawk clan; il. by William O'Brian. 280p $2 Longmans

41-17951

Story of the Indians of the Land of Tall Trees (Texas) before the coming of the white man. A Hasinal Indian boy forms the pact of blood brotherhood with a boy of an enemy tribe. After many adventures the two are able to end the enmity between the tribes. For readers of ten to twelve.

Booklist 38:116 D 1 '41

"There is good action and adventure and much interesting detail of everyday life. The story is simply written and should appeal to children of ten to twelve." Marian Herr

+ Library J 66:846 O 1 '41 80w

Social Studies 32:336 N '41 10w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 28 '41 90w

JOHL, MRS JANET (PAGTER). Wilhelmina, a little Dutch girl; il. by Rosalie Lane. 121p $1.50 Greystone

Children in the Netherlands 41-19638

Stories about a little nine-year-old Dutch girl, whose kindness to a small, plump compatriot paved the way to good fortune for her family. Glossary.

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:381 D '41 90w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p10 N 24 '41 80w

"Told with charm and a great deal of honest moral purpose. Author and illustrator are Dutch, and there is a genuinely Dutch feeling in what they have done." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 35:112 N 21 '41 30w

"Both text and pictures—the latter beautifully done by Rosalie L. Lane—indicate extraordinary, even loving, care."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 12 '41 70w

JOHN, EVAN, pseud. See Simpson, E. J.

JOHN, MARIUS. Philippine saga. 247p $2 House of Field

919.14 Philippine Islands. Education—Philippine Islands

"An unusual record of Philippine adventuring is here set forth. . . Marius John was a soldier who became a school teacher. . . Not altogether unnaturally, the Filipinos in the outlying districts refused at first to believe in the disinterested purposes of the schools; they thought the teachers were government spies. And it just so happened that Marius John was sent to one of the most unfriendly—not to say rebellious—of the hinterland districts. He won the people's friendship; he succeeded in his work with the children and started a class of adults. . . . There are some funny stories, some entertaining personal glimpses, a lot of local color, in his forthright chronicle." Books

JOHN, MARIUS—Continued

- + Books p12 D 29 '40 130w
Boston Transcript p1 Ja 18 '41 30w
Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 11 '41 480w

JOHNS, MRS VERONICA PARKER. Shady doings. 312p $2 Duell

41-26004

Detective story.

"This struck us as a pleasing item on the lighter side, shuddery but not too much so." Will Cuppy

- + Books p36 D 7 '41 180w

"It all makes an intricate but entertaining puzzle." Isaac Anderson

- + N Y Times p38 D 7 '41 280w

JOHNS, MRS VERONICA PARKER. Singing widow. 311p $2 Duell

41-7652

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

- Books p14 Ap 27 '41 120w

- Boston Transcript p2 Ap 19 '41 50w

"It is an odd story, interesting in some ways, but at no point does it give an illusion of reality." Isaac Anderson

- + N Y Times p20 Ap 27 '41 180w

"Dark and dreadful tale of family hatred lightened by wholesome heroine and likeable ivory-tickler. Writing deserves some special economies. Startling."

- Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ap 26 '41 40w

JOHNSEN, JULIA EMILY, comp. Compulsory military training. (Reference shelf) 266p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

355.22 Military service, Compulsory. U.S.—Army—Recruiting, enlistment, etc.

(W) 41-3057

"Last fall high schools in a number of states adopted the proposition, 'Resolved: That the United States government should require universal military and defense training for youth becoming of age,' as a debate topic. At the time, Congress was debating the same vital problem. . . . What are the arguments for and against the act? The latest 'Reference Shelf' book . . . reprints the pros and cons that have been expressed by recognized authorities on this subject. The book opens with a general introduction including the history and legal aspects of conscription. It includes a statement issued by the war department concerning the reception and training of selectees." (Springf'd Republican) Bibliography.

"A splendid source of information for all who desire to know the arguments for and against compulsory military training." D. B. Carroll

- + Am Pol Sci R 35:1200 D '41 150w
Booklist 37:327 Mr 15 '41
Christian Century 58:328 Mr 5 '41 30w
Pratt p17 D '41
Springf'd Republican p7e F 9 '41 90w
Wis Lib Bul 37:71 Ap '41

JOHNSEN, JULIA EMILY, comp. International federation of democracies (proposed). (Reference shelf) 263p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

321.041 International federation of democracies (proposed). International cooperation. World politics (W) 41-51851

"The next step for democracy—who can define that?" This collection of papers pro and con attempts to answer the question. "The history of movements for world organization and the general principles are interpreted by men like Guy E. Talbot, Nicholas Murray Butler, James Brown Scott. Clarence Streit's 'Union Now' is, of course, the theme of one section—with pro views from Sherwood, Mumford, and Dorothy Thompson, the con view from Senator Bennett Clark. Finally we have discussion of regional federations—Pan-Europe, Pan America, the danger of Pan-Germanica. This is a primer for the future, that future that can be translated from dream to reality only by the acts of plain men and women." (Survey G) Bibliography.

Reviewed by W. L. Godshall

- Am Pol Sci R 35:1020 O '41 80w

- Booklist 37:548 Jl 15 '41

- Christian Century 58:887 Jl 9 '41 40w

"In 250 pages a remarkable range of material is presented, then summarized in a helpful tabulation of the arguments for and against creation of a federation of democracies. An extensive bibliography beckons the yet-unwearied to further reading."

- + Springf'd Republican p7e Je 8 '41 100w

"Admirable collection of papers with a grand bibliography." Leon Whipple

- + Survey G 30:404 Jl '41 150w

JOHNSEN, JULIA EMILY, comp. Interstate trade barriers. (Reference shelf) 215p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

381 Interstate commerce (W) 40-29411

"In presenting this material on interstate trade barriers the compiler has endeavored primarily to represent a cross section of the situation as appearing in current discussion, including reference to past history of similar barriers and the growth, forms, effects, and other phases of a general or critical nature. In offset to the critical material a section is presented containing some reasons in support of the laws, or indicating some aspects of the background out of which such restrictions grow. In a final section is given some discussion of state as opposed to federal action. A pro and con summary has been incorporated setting forth some of the leading phases of argument and thought appearing in discussions. A selected bibliography is included, covering more particularly materials published in recent years." (Intro) Bibliography.

"This work is not advanced as an exhaustive study of interstate trade barriers, but it serves a useful purpose in collecting in one volume materials not otherwise readily available."

C. L. Larsen

- + Am Pol Sci R 35:589 Je '41 180w

- Booklist 37:272 F 15 '41

- J Home Econ 33:412 Je '41 60w

"The publication of this volume is timely and brings up for close examination by every person interested in furthering the unity of the United States a problem which threatens to disrupt our economic structure, just as it did in the Balkans." C. D. V.

- + Special Libraries 32:24 Ja '41 200w

- Wis Lib Bul 37:16 Ja '41

JOHNSON, ALAN CAMPBELL. Viscount Halifax. 575p il $3.75 Washburn [21s Hale, R] B or 92 Halifax, Edward Frederick Lindley Wood, 3d viscount 41-27713

This biography of the present [1941] British ambassador to Washington is in three parts.

The first deals with the early life and career of Edward Wood, up to 1926, when he went as viceroy to India. The second section describes his years in India as Lord Irwin. The third part of the book is devoted to his subsequent ministerial career as Lord Halifax. Index.

"Mr. Johnson has digested his material well, and he presents it with distinction. It is a convincing biography." J. M. Minifie
+ Books p3 D 21 '41 800w

Manchester Guardian p3 N 18 '41 550w
"Neither critical nor unduly laudatory, but sober, astute, and capably written. Much detailed political background, some of which may be opaque to American readers."
+ New Yorker 17:60 D 27 '41 70w

"Each part [of the volume, Mr. Johnson] treats with a thoroughness that lifts his work quite above the level of ephemeral political journalism. His volume has some irritating qualities. An excessive amount of space is given to that rather minor part of Halifax's career which preceded the viceroyalty. Mr. Johnson shows an undue regard for the British aristocracy, the High Churchmen, and the group that he calls 'the landed gentry of the shires'. . . . But on the whole the book is a remarkable feat in contemporaneous biography. The author has had some new and valuable materials at his disposal." Allan Nevins
+ — Sat R of Lit 24:9 D 27 '41 800w

"Mr. Johnson may yet write a very good book, if he can manage to curb his copiousness and be content to develop some less ambitious theme in nearer 170 pages than 570. He has not written one this time, and what he has written can hardly be regarded as a service to his subject." H. W. H.
— Spec 167:430 O 31 '41 470w

"The first [section of the book] though marred by some inaccuracies, not in themselves very material, on points of fact, and by some slipshod writing from which no part of the book is free, gives a good and pleasant account of the development of the character of a great Christian gentleman."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p570 N 15 '41 1000w

JOHNSON, CHARLES SPURGEON. Growing up in the black belt; Negro youth in the rural South; prepared for the Am. youth commission. 360p $2.25 Am. council on educ. 325.26 Negroes—Moral and social conditions 41-5246

"The author, who is head of the department of social sciences at Fisk University, studied 2,000 Negro youth in eight counties typical of different conditions and talked with many of their families. His discussion, strengthened by statistics and vitalized by case studies, attempts to show the relation between personality development and economic and social conditions and concludes that the prevalence of extreme poverty and economic insecurity is even more hampering than race relations to desirable personal adjustments." (J Home Econ) Index.

"This book studies rural Negro youth in somewhat the same way urban youth was studied in Negro Youth at the Crossways. With admirable objectivity, both books show the tragic plight of these young people who constitute, roughly, a tenth of all the youth in America. Growing Up has a wider scope than Crossways and uses its case material as illustrative and interpretative rather than as primary data. The case studies are always definitely subordinate to the overall picture obtained by a sample-and-testing procedure." Read Bain
+ Am Soc R 6:424 Je '41 950w

"The scope and methodology of the study recommend it to all who seek careful analysis of the problems of rural youth in general and Negro youth in particular. . . . The entire volume is well organized, filled with factual materials, and written in clear and understandable language." T. L. Smith

+ Ann Am Acad 219:202 Ja '42 800w

Booklist 37:382 Ap 15 '41

J Home Econ 33:264 Ap '41 60w

"Based on the most up-to-date tests supplemented by personal interviews, it is a very useful document for the record, even if the conclusions were already well known to many who are not sociologists."

+ Nation 153:233 S 13 '41 60w

School & Society 53:224 F 15 '41 20w

"Growing Up in the Black Belt is the result of an investigation sponsored by the American Youth Commission, and carried out by a staff whose work Dr. Johnson supervised and whose findings he wove into a synthesis. . . . The results are presented in a matter-of-fact-way, sometimes statistically, yet with concreteness and a charm of style." Christiana McFadyen + Social Educ 5:562 N '41 650w

"The entire study makes pleasant and refreshing reading. It provides an entertaining introduction to factual knowledge of how difficult and tedious a thing is childhood to a goodly part of the American populace. It should be of interest to every person whose profession touches the lives of Negro youth in any way." M. H. Diggs

+ Social Forces 20:287 D '41 650w

"Not only is Dr. Johnson a good organizer, as shown by his ability to integrate so well the findings of his assistants and staff workers, but a good writer, for he has succeeded in injecting in a much overworked topic a lot of vigor and freshness. He has again demonstrated—as in his numerous other works—his capacity for a magnificent virtuosity in the management of his material." J. S. Roucek
+ Social Studies 32:284 O '41 420w

"Dr. Johnson presents an exceptionally well-organized and cohesive picture of the whole, one of the most vivid studies of any segment of American life. The reaction patterns of both individuals and groups are clearly drawn, and the mass of multi-phased material is handled with ease. A fortunate balance between the interpretative and the statistical gives the reader the choice of passing over or analyzing for himself the statistical portions." G. M. Beech
+ Survey 77:340 N '41 700w

JOHNSON, CHARLES SPURGEON, and others. Statistical atlas of southern counties. 355p maps $4 Univ. of N.C. press

317.5 South—Statistics 41-8730

Statistical analysis of 1,104 counties in thirteen Southern states, issued under the sponsorship of the Council on rural education. "Each county is tabulated with regard to density of population, ratio by race, occupational distribution, types of farms and major crops, proportion of mortgaged farms, school attendance, comparative expenditure for education by race, distribution of one-teacher schools, proportion of illiteracy by race, and many other items. In all, the counties are analyzed with respect to fifty-one indices of social and economic characteristics." (Publisher's note) Bibliography.

Am Soc R 6:771 O '41 170w

Booklist 37:510 Jl 1 '41

"The major contribution of the volume is this convenient tabulation by counties of the data, most of which are taken from the census, although there are some from less easily available sources. The second contribution is a typing of the counties of the South by dominant crop, by diversity of crops, and by extent of industrialization and urbanization. . . . The third contribution, comprising a considerable proportion of the 39 pages devoted to the text proper, is an analysis of two types of counties—cotton and metropolitan. . . . These contributions are valuable regardless of the point of time to which they relate. However, their value in planning for current problems is somewhat diminished by the fact that they are based on data mainly for 1930 or previous years. It is to be hoped that the authors and their sponsoring foundation will provide in a year or so a companion volume giving comparable data on a 1940 basis." M. J. Hagood

JOHNSON, C. S.—Continued

+ — Social Forces 20:116 O '41 390w

Survey 77:232 J1 '41 50w

JOHNSON, EDGAR AUGUSTUS JEROME, ed. A treasury of biography. 504p $3.75 Howell, Soskin

920 U.S.—Biography. Great Britain—Biography 41-24288

An anthology of more or less extensive excerpts from the greatest English and American biographies from the Renaissance to the present. Contents: The life and death of Thomas Wolsey, by George Cavendish; The life of Sir Thomas More, by William Roper; The second voyage of Martin Frobisher, by George Best; The deaths of Latimer and Ridley, by John Foxe; The life of Dr John Donne, by Izaak Walton; Memoirs of the life of Colonel Hutchinson, by Lucy Hutchinson; Grace abounding, by John Bunyan; The life of Dr John North, by Roger North; Gibbon's autobiography, by Edward Gibbon; The lives of the English poets: Richard Savage, by Samuel Johnson; The life of Samuel Johnson, by James Boswell; Franklin's autobiography, by Benjamin Franklin; Adventures of a younger son, by Edward Trelawny; The life of Sir Walter Scott, by J. G. Lockhart; Walden, by H. D. Thoreau; The life and letters of Lord Macaulay, by G. O. Trevelyan; The life of Charles Dickens, by John Forster; Mill's autobiography, by J. S. Mill; Thomas Carlyle: the first forty years, by J. A. Froude; Præterita, by John Ruskin; The education of Henry Adams, by Henry Adams; Father and son, by Edmund Gosse; Cardinal Manning, by Lytton Strachey; The autobiography of Lincoln Steffens, by Lincoln Steffens.

Booklist 38:188 F 1 '42

"In attempting an anthology of biography, Mr. Johnson hurls a defy in the teeth of critics convinced long ago that there is no way of making a satisfactory anthology of a literary form in which the originals run to book length. A treasury of biography (as, for that matter, of novels) must, says that conviction, be done with mirrors: it is bound to be a kind of optical illusion. And so I must report that Mr. Johnson has carried off his undertaking with laudable enthusiasm and much skill, but without exploding that conviction." Milton Rugoff

+ — Books p27 O 26 '41 480w

"Twenty-four 'treasures' of British and American biography are here gathered in a very well edited anthology. . . But the book's special originality is not in its choices, but in the editor's treatment of them."

+ N Y Times p11 D 14 '41 650w

"Nineteen shrewdly condensed classic biographies with first-rate general and special introductions."

+ New Yorker 17:91 N 1 '41 20w

"Not only is this one of the most enjoyable anthologies I have ever met, but it should also be one that will send the least enterprising reader to the originals from which Mr. Johnson has made his excerpts, and of which he gives intelligent resumes and appreciations." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 24:26 D 6 '41 470w

JOHNSON, MRS EMILIE FENDALL. Little book of prayers; with the addition of prayers from the Bible and drawings by Maud and Miska Petersham. [47]p $1 Viking

264.1 Children's prayers 41-24145

Prayers in verse for ages six to nine. They are for days of the week, birthdays and holidays.

Booklist 38:161 Ja 1 '42

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p9 D 14 '41 40w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 D '41

"Unpretentious in appearance, as a book of prayers should be, this little volume is appropriately and reverently decorated, in soft blue by Maud and Miska Petersham." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 66:1096 D 15 '41 70w

"A book of small dimensions which will appeal to young children, with illustrations which are not very successful when they attempt to evoke the wider implications of prayer, but which have a child-like simplicity and appeal when they emphasize its relation to daily life."

E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p10 D 21 '41 140w

JOHNSON, FREDERICK ERNEST. The social gospel re-examined. 261p $2 Harper

261 Sociology, Christian. Theology, Doctrinal 40-34183

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"A keenly analytical discussion of man, the church, secular culture, war and democracy is presented. To the reviewer only the chapter on war seemed unsatisfactory. But the book is an edifying defense of the social gospel which, far from being dead, may, after its recent chastisement, be the means to lead us out of our wilderness." J. H. Titus

+ — Churchman 155:17 Mr '41 260w

Reviewed by Vergilius Ferm

Ethics 51:248 Ja '41 100w

"The book is a simple and sincere appeal for 'an infusion of Christian motive into elemental relationships.' It contains a brilliant critique of our secular culture and reveals the futility of seeking to maintain democracy without the support of a spiritual ethic." J. W. Ingles

+ N Y Times p12 Mr 30 '41 320w

Reviewed by J. P. Jones

Survey 77:228 J1 '41 250w

JOHNSON, GERALD WHITE. Roosevelt: dictator or democrat? 303p $3 Harper

B or 92 Roosevelt, Franklin Delano. U.S.—Politics and government (W) 41-23001

"A sympathetic political biography of Franklin D. Roosevelt, with emphasis on his profoundly American experiences and viewpoints, and a development of the thesis that the 'New Deal' is a natural, not to say inevitable development of the American democratic process.' To reassure those who suspect some alien form of dictatorship may occur under present national leadership, comparison is made with the unusual presidents, Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln, Theodore Roosevelt, Wilson, and with other periods of shock, change, and readjustment in American history." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by Wilson Follett

Atlantic N '41 340w

Booklist 38:112 D 1 '41

"As brilliant a piece of political writing as we have had in many years: Mr. Johnson is in that long line of descent that runs clear back to the authors of 'The Federalist.' . . . This further thought obtrudes. If confidence in the President is first on the order of the day, what of a loyal opposition? The author does not say. On this point we badly need further illumination. Mr. Johnson would be doing us as great a service as he has already performed in the writing of his interesting book if he were to apply himself to the elucidation of this problem." L. M. Hacker

+ Books p6 N 2 '41 1650w

"An engaging, often persuasive tribute to the President. Not entirely uncritical, it defends him at every turn, even to the extent of reviving the Rooseveltian arguments for packing the Supreme Court. Not an intimate study, the book none the less gives a disarming picture of the President's forebears and his early career."

+ Commonweal 35:276 Ja 2 '42 70w

"Its story of the New Deal is excellent. It is fair-minded and well balanced and does not hesitate to take the President to task when necessary. The book, however, is neither a biography nor an historical study, but a tract for the times—a very adroitly argued and persuasive plea to the American people to sink their differences and unite behind the President in the present crisis even if, though Mr. Johnson does say so, it is, as far as the United States is concerned, largely of the President's own making." Alvin Adey

+ Current Hist 1:369 D '41 750w

"Recommended," H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 66:840 O 1 '41 140w

Reviewed by C. C. Munz

Nation 153:514 N 22 '41 1100w

"Mr. Johnson has made out his case. As the reader might suspect from the order of words in the subtitle, the evidence shows that President Roosevelt is a democrat and not a dictator. The book deserves to have a wide hearing. Friends of the New Deal will find it to be as skillful a defense of their cause and its leader as the present reviewer can recall. For the same reason the opposition cannot afford to pass it by. It is an able statement of the New Deal case, but it is not unanswerable. Beyond that, the book is a splendid expression of what we may call the New Deal spirit." Simeon Strunsky

+ N Y Times p1 N 23 '41 2300w

"There are many flashes of insight in this book. There are passages, too, which waste argument on such old issues as whether or not Roosevelt lived up to the 1932 platform of his party. More attention might have been given to the origins and development of the President's views on international affairs. But no one book can encompass what already has become the raw material for a library. This is a well-grounded, discriminating analysis by a first-rate journalist, who has also a knowledge of history and a sense of the epochal nature of the events with which Franklin D. Roosevelt, as our representative, must grapple today and in the days ahead." E. K. Lindley

+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 N 1 '41 600w

Springf'd Republican p6 N 1 '41 1250w

JOHNSON, HAROLD V. 32 metal spinning designs. 102p il $2 Bruce pub.

671 Metal spinning 41-12478

"Simple step-by-step descriptions of the making of small metal articles for the home. A few of the projects require combinations of metal, plastics, and wood. Working drawings and photographs of the finished articles." Booklist

Booklist 38:2 S '41

Wis Lib Bul 37:199 D '41

JOHNSON, HUGH SAMUEL. Hell-bent for war. 155p $1.50 Bobbs

327.73 U.S.—Foreign policy. World war, 1939—U.S. 41-6337

"The author lambastes what he calls 'the pressure groups for war' and argues that we are being eased into a struggle we aren't ready for and don't want. He believes we must aid Britain only by such means as will not involve us in a European war and only to the extent that British aid does not impair sound hemisphere defence. The book includes a memorandum by Bernard M. Baruch on controls for war-time inflation, and General Johnson uses this as a text for criticism of the defence program." New Yorker

"Even if Gen. Johnson is, like the rest of us, sorely puzzled by world events and even if some of his conclusions will seem to many of us to be mistaken, he has written a book which interventionists and isolationists alike could read with profit. His warning is unquestionably sound—that we are 'hell-bent for war.' His main thesis—that this process has been shrouded in hypocrisy and deceit—is indisputable. So also is he undeniably right in his insistence on concentrating every possible effort of the nation as a whole on preparation against a possible attack. If—as so many of us believe—war is unavoidable, the problem boils down to one of choosing the theater of war. He apparently prefers to wait and let them try to get us. Whether he is right or wrong in this judgment, he is characteristically forthright and honest in analyzing the arguments for and against such a course." Nicholas Roosevelt

Books p13 Ap 27 '41 1400w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:199 O '41 30w

"From his World War experience in industrial mobilization, Hugh Johnson is qualified to speak, and his all-too-short recital of unlearned lessons of 1917-18 sounds like a buzzsaw in a wilderness. In other respects 'Hell-Bent for War' is a hippity-hop, lickety-split bit of pamphleteering by an old master." S. T. Williamson

+ — N Y Times p12 My 18 '41 650w

New Yorker 17:31 Ap 19 '41 80w

Pratt p24 autumn '41

"No other daily writer on international events has a vocabulary so incisive or so immediately convincing; that is, unless you happen to disagree with him at which point he becomes a menace. He will remain one of the great antagonists of the present regime until he is removed by natural causes, by somebody's bullet, or ends at the right of a dictator's seat. This book should be read, pro or con, as a last fleeting glimpse beyond the world that might have been into the never-never world we are entering." H. S.

Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ap 19 '41 160w

Time 37:88 Ap 28 '41 250w

JOHNSON, JOHN BERLIN. Airplane welding and materials. 2d ed 409p il $3.50 Goodheart-Willcox

629.1342 Welding. Airplanes 41-6283

A revised and enlarged edition of a textbook first published in 1929 (Book Review Digest, 1930). "The second edition represents a complete revision of those chapters wherein the practice and application has changed since the original text was written. A chapter has been added on spot and seam welding covering equipment, procedure and design for stainless steel, aluminum and magnesium alloys. The text on materials and methods of test has been rewritten and greatly augmented with tables giving the properties and applications for steel, aluminum, magnesium and other alloys. Brief reference has been made to the metallurgical processes involved in the manufacture of metals and alloys." (Pref)

Booklist 37:549 Jl 15 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:37 Jl '41

JOHNSON, LOYAL R. How to landscape your grounds. 221p il $2.75 De La Mare

635.9 Landscape gardening 41-18728

Many illustrations, including plans, diagrams, and photographs illustrate chapters on: Locating the house; Architectural features of the garden; How to plan walks, drives and entrances; Lawns; What trees and shrubs will you require? Flower gardens; Rock gardens; Wild gardens. The book also contains lists of shrubs, acid soil plants, trees, and vines, and a section of planting plans and keys for various parts of the country.

Booklist 38:91 N 15 '41

JOHNSON, L. R.—Continued

"There are plenty of books on this general theme, but too few of them are as boiled down and practical as this one. . . . The book is planned for those who do much if not all of their own outdoor work and so is marked by a definitely 'how to' character." R. S. Lemmon
+ Books p32 D 7 '41 80w

"A book likely to be invaluable to the homeowner with fairly ambitious landscape plans for the year ahead. . . . Some, however, are likely to be a little beyond the purse of the average home-owner unless he is capable of undertaking much of the labor involved. . . . Key plans to entire plantings, however, are the major feature of this book on landscaping which tempt the comfortably well-off enthusiast to beautify his home grounds—if he doesn't turn them into vegetable plots."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e D 28 '41 240w

JOHNSON, MARGARET SWEET, and JOHNSON, MRS HELEN (LOSSING). Carlo, the hound who thought he was a calf; il. by [the authors]. 87p $1.75 Harcourt

(W) 41-4028

Carlo was a lonesome little hound puppy and seemed to get into trouble with all the animals on the farm except Dolly, the calf. As he grew older Carlo learned dog ways, and was once able to help his friend Dolly out of a really bad situation. For second and third grade children.

"There is no talking of animals nor anything like it; this is a straight farm-story. . . . It is a lifelike tale, all the better for being truthful." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 F 16 '41 200w

"A dog story easy enough for second or third grade children to read for themselves is welcome. The simplicity of this story and the nice big print will recommend it to that age group. The tale itself is slight." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 66:222 Mr 1 '41 80w

"This is a particularly appealing dog story for little children. . . . The large, clear type will tempt beginners in reading. The drawings, as in all the books by the Johnsons, are accurate and beautiful and pleasantly suggest life on the farm as the seasons pass." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 23 '41 160w

Wis Lib Bul 37:79 Ap '41

JOHNSON, MARGARET SWEET, and JOHNSON, MRS HELEN (LOSSING). Rolf, an elk-hound of Norway; il. by [the authors]. 106p $1.75 Harcourt

Dogs—Legends and stories. (W) 41-15466

Story of an elk-hound brought to Canada by his Lapp master, to help in the herding of reindeer. When he was stolen by a brutal trapper, the dog escaped and lived alone for a time in the Arctic wilderness. Later he was rescued and befriended by a young camper and taken back to live on a comfortable Ontario farm.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p6 O 12 '41 210w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p9 N 3 '41 110w

"This team has long specialized on writing dog books, especially work-dog books. They succeed very well in conveying the characteristics of a breed and their illustrations are excellent." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 35:111 N 21 '41 30w

"A small, well-balanced story. . . . Fine animal illustrations, excellent margins, and large print. Recommended for children eight to ten." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 66:678 Ag '41 130w

"A story that may be enjoyed by adults as well as children."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e S 14 '41 120w

JOHNSON, MARTHA. Ann Bartlett, navy nurse; il. by Richard Rose. 321p $2 Crowell 41-5876

Career story about a nurse with the United States navy, following her thru her various duties in navy stations from Parris Island to the Hawaiian Islands. There is a romantic tinge to the story which will make it interesting to older girls.

"There is little about nursing technique, though Ann occasionally appears in action; the vocational side of the story is in showing how nursing is adapted to the Navy in time of peace. The geographic spread of the field, the generally attractive surroundings will set girls dreaming along these lines." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 My 25 '41 320w

Christian Century 58:464 Ap 2 '41 10w

"One senses at once that the author's knowledge of nursing is superficial. The characters are colorless and the heroine something of a prig. This is a harmless story which girls will read avidly for subject-interest, but one hesitates to launch them on what may be another series which carries neither the professional authority of Dorothy Deming nor the story-telling skill of Helen Boylston." Maude Adams

+ Library J 66:404 My 1 '41 90w

"Though rather slight and sentimental, the book is recommended for girls of fourteen or over, because its subject merits a place on library shelves." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 66:404 My 1 '41 110w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p15 Je 15 '41 40w

JOHNSON, OSA HELEN (LEIGHTY) (MRS CLARK HALLAM GETTS). Four years in paradise. 345p il $3.50 Lippincott

B or 92 Johnson, Martin Elmer. Photography of animals. Africa—Description and travel. Adventure and adventurers (W) 41-52046

Describes the four years which the Johnsons spent in the uplands of Kenya Colony, where they were sent to film wild life for the American museum of natural history. Osa was an excellent housekeeper, even in the jungle, and part of the book is devoted to the recital of her struggles to provide a real home—even to corned beef and cabbage—for her hard working husband. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 38:157 Ja 1 '42

"As partners in high adventure, as well as in domestic companionship, the Johnsons seem incomparable. The jungle comes alive in the pages of the volume. While the material in this book is greatly similar to that in the preceding, it still makes excellent reading for the good reason that Osa Johnson has a natural talent for telling a story." Rose Feld

+ Books p5 D 14 '41 1300w

"The romance of pioneering is not over for courageous souls, and Mrs. Johnson's home in the wilderness was, and is, a triumph of human intelligence in conquering primitive nature. She makes us forget all drawbacks in her enjoyment of the beauty of mountains, wild flowers, rivers, and lakes." A. R. Eaton

+ Library J 66:949 N 1 '41 100w

"Like its predecessors, 'Four Years in Paradise' owes its appeal to its pleasant simplicity rather than to any really sensational adventures or any literary quality. The writing is simple almost to the point of naivete, but it does manage somehow to communicate the fact that the Johnsons were very likable people happily doing exactly what they wanted to do. No wonder, that it makes very pleasant reading indeed."

+ Nation 154:45 Ja 10 '42 300w

"The book is beautifully illustrated. Whereas the format is pleasing, it is obvious that Webster has not been followed in the orthography of certain familiar words . . . nor Taylor, for the Swahili terms. But this may be due to the editor-publisher's oversight rather than to the author's leaning toward phonetics. Finally, Mrs. Johnson establishes a record of her accomplishments in jungle homemaking, in hair-breadth escapes from death. And she also pays tribute to Martin Johnson's genius and industry." M. L. J. Akeley

+ N Y Times p6 Ja 4 '42 1200w

JOHNSON, OSA HELEN (LEIGHTY) (MRS CLARK HALLAM GETTS). Pantaloons; il. by Arthur August Jansson. 57p $1.50 Random house

Elephants—Legends and stories 41-22154

The story of the experiences of a little elephant, growing up in the jungle, and of the things which his mother and the other grown up elephants taught him.

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:371 D '41 60w

"'Pantaloons' will find an eager audience with boys and girls. . . . Many fine illustrations in color by Arthur August Jansson, who went with Carl E. Akeley to British East Africa, add interest and atmosphere to this authentic book." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 N 3 '41 80w

"Very entertaining."

+ Churchman 155:4 D 15 '41 30w

"Well told, and the pictures are vivid."

H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 35:111 N 21 '41 30w

"The amusing and exciting experiences are authentic; the prose is rhythmic and has the charm of storytelling about it. Boys and girls from eight to twelve will enjoy reading this, and it will make good reading aloud for the younger ones." Marguerite Nahigian

+ Library J 66:1096 D 15 '41 80w

JOHNSON, RICHARD. Saint George and the dragon; ed. by Alice Dalgliesh; with pictures by Lois Maloy. [30p] $1 Scribner

(W) 41-5506

Legend of St George and the dragon retold in simple prose for young readers. It is based on the Darton edition of The Seven Champions of Christendom, which is an adaptation of the Richard Johnson romance of that title, written before 1597.

Booklist 37:412 My 1 '41

"This ancient legend . . . has a peculiarly affecting timeliness to older readers; to little ones it has the charm of a fine hero tale."

M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Ap 13 '41 240w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 30 '41 160w

"This attractive little book should be quite useful with younger readers, for the text is simple enough for the eight- to ten-year-old reader. The illustrations in black and white by Lois Maloy are lively and give a good background for the story." Alice Wetherell

+ Library J 66:308 Ap 1 '41 50w

JOHNSON, WALTER EDWARD. Franka; a guide dog. 96p il $1 Whitman, A.

Dogs—Legends and stories 41-27186

Franka is a German shepherd dog, trained at the Seeing Eye school in Morristown, New Jersey. While there she learned to guide the blind, and later became the pet and guide of the blind girl, Jane. This book for young readers outlines the phases of the training of a Seeing Eye dog.

"The brief story element, with the introduction of two children who present a pet dog to the school, adds little to the book, as children in this age group, ten or eleven years, will find the facts of the dog's training appealing enough. Photographs of the dog illustrate the book. A very usable item for libraries." A. L. Shea

+ Library J 67:41 Ja 1 '42 90w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 30 '41 90w

JOHNSTON, MYRTLE. Amiel. 383p $2.50 Appleton-Century

41-5577

A novel within a novel, in which the two stories run side by side. Michael McClane, living in a town in a war torn country, is prevented from escaping because his wife lies critically injured. In the midst of the most sordid surroundings Michael goes on writing his story of Amiel, half Scotch and half Russian, who is a bogus explorer. The town is bombed; a stream of refugees pours thru the town; but Michael goes on writing. The story of Amiel breaks off, unfinished.

"There are times when the machinery bothers the reader a little and times when Michael's novel strikes an obviously feminine note; but the entire book is written with great seriousness by one whose theme is very near her heart. The artist, as a man driven inexorably by powers from within, and beyond his control, is portrayed without extenuation but with rare understanding." R. M. Gay

+ Atlantic My '41 160w

"'Amiel' as a book is better than Amiel as a character. However strained and tortured the story, one recognizes the fact that Miss Johnston can write. She has a deep sense of poetry, a keen feeling for mood. But in her efforts to explore the twisted paths of a man's integrity, she lets herself be caught by the artificial and the grotesque." Rose Feld

+ Books p10 Mr 30 '41 700w

"Miss Johnston's novel is truly a work of art. She has managed the difficult handling of two themes with such subtlety that one detects even the changing nuances of style as she divides the narrative between her author and herself. . . . All in all, this novel is worth reading, worth owning, and worth saving not only for itself but as a gauge of the work of a more than promising author." C. M. Healey

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ap 26 '41 440w

"The novel as a whole is as provocative and fascinating as it is thoughtfully original and skilled. . . . Myrtle Johnston made an enviable reputation as a novelist with 'Hanging Johnny' at the age of 18. With 'Amiel' she reaches a memorable height of sound, brilliant and completely individual maturity." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 30 '41 800w

"Myrtle Johnston takes the familiar pattern of a novel within a novel and gives it a fresh and exciting treatment. . . . The two parallel stories are equally absorbing, although tantalizingly incomplete. . . . 'Amiel' is a novelist's novel, but it will be enjoyed also by those readers who are able to stand up to their reading with the same fortitude and spirit they summon for the anxieties and afflictions of real life. It is an unusual book, adult, tensely dramatic, and expertly written." R. A. Cordell

+ Sat R of Lit 23:6 Ap 5 '41 550w

JOHNSTON, SAMUEL PAUL. Flying fleets; a graphic history of U.S. naval aviation. 188p il $3 Duell

623.74 Airplanes. Aeronautics, Military. U.S.—Navy (W) 41-15825

Review of the history of naval aviation in the United States, with 124 pages of photographs, showing types of aircraft that have been used in the navy, and those in use at present.

Booklist 38:47 O 15 '41

New Yorker 17:79 S 6 '41 40w

JOHNSTON, SAMUEL PAUL. Horizons unlimited; a graphic history of aviation. 354p il $3.75 Duell

629.13 Aeronautics—History 41-51697

"A chronological history of aviation, its significant dates registered in the running series of illustrations. Lighter and heavier than air craft are treated separately, with two introductory chapters entitled Ocean of air, and Aircraft and how they fly." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 37:403 My 1 '41

"On the whole Mr. Johnston has done a creditable and workmanlike job of recording the successes and failures of those who made flying possible, and he carries his story down through the amazingly rapid developments of the last few years." A. E. Talbert

+ Books p6 Mr 30 '41 700w

"Horizons Unlimited" is a splendid addition to aeronautical literature. It will delight those who have been seeking a single volume which will supply an aeronautical background against which to measure today's developments—and it will be a 'must' addition to any ambitious aeronautical library." W. E. Barrett

+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 15 '41 280w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:194 O '41 10w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:36 J1 '41

"Horizons Unlimited" is written in an easy-going and straightforward style. Even if you are one of the very few who have no interest in aviation's fascinating history, you will want this book for its remarkable and voluminous collection of pictures." L. E. Neville

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 20 '41 650w

Pratt p3 autumn '41

Wis Lib Bul 37:72 Ap '41

JOHNSTONE, MRS NANCY J. Sombreros are becoming; il. by the author. 272p $2.50 Longmans

917.2 Mexico—Social life and customs

41-51748

The author of A Hotel in Spain (Book Review Digest, 1938) with her husband fled to Mexico in July 1939, and in this volume describes her adventures in house hunting, with the Mexican food, pets, the secret police, and in attempting to live on twenty-eight dollars a month.

Booklist 37:437 My 15 '41

Bookmark 2:12 N '41

"A most refreshing little book about Mexico. Refreshing because she has not tried to turn out a profound economic and political treatise on the basis of her single year in Cuernavaca; nor (praise God!) offer us another one of those shallow, personalized narrative guides based on two or three weeks of enthusiastic but hurried travel through that enchanting up-and-down-and-up-again land to the south of us." F. H. Bullock

+ Books p4 My 4 '41 900w

"Mrs. Johnstone sets down sharpish, discerning, and beguiling comments on her eighteen months in Cuernavaca. Few absurdities either domestic or foreign have escaped her. . . Recommended for small library purchase." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 66:304 Ap 1 '41 90w

"An airy, amusing record, resolutely cheerful in the face of hardships, but not nearly so striking as the author's earlier 'Hotel in Spain'."

+ New Repub 105:166 Ag 4 '41 40w

"In 'Hotel in Spain' and 'Hotel in Flight' Mrs. Johnstone had something to say and said it well. Her new effort is practically without substance, and its forced and opinionated chatter offers no substitute for vanished spontaneity and charm. . . The author's mood is sometimes gay and sometimes peevish, but it is always self-satisfied; her snap judgments and superficial generalizations seem as important to her as careful reflections, and her unabated flow of personal chatter seems to her stuff enough for a book."

— N Y Times p14 My 4 '41 360w

"This one is frothier than the author's other books, and rather less diverting."

New Yorker 17:88 My 3 '41 60w

Times [London] Lit Sup p593 N 29 '41 800w

Wis Lib Bul 37:114 Je '41

JOHNSTONE, WILLIAM CRANE. The United States and Japan's new order. 392p $3 Oxford

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—East (Far East). U.S.—Foreign relations—China. Chinese-Japanese war, 1931-. Eastern question (Far East). Japan—Foreign relations—U.S. 41-3881

"A summary of U. S. relations with the Far East, with major attention on concessions, extra territoriality and other characteristics of our commerce with China. The author's recommendations for American foreign policy include: economic agreements and alliances with the British Empire for the Far East, intelligent propaganda in Japan and at home, peace in the Far East through genuine economic threats against Japan." (Commonweal) Bibliographical note. Index.

"The specialist will find the data in the first two sections of as much value as the discussion of policy in the third. The general reader will probably find the third part the most interesting and illuminating. Both will agree that Professor Johnstone has made a real contribution to the literature both of the Far East and of American foreign policy." H. M. Vinacke

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:781 Ag '41 490w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

Atlantic Je '41 200w

"Nowhere else is there between the covers of one book as full and as objective an account of what the Japanese activities of the past few years, especially beginning with 1937, have done to the interests and treaty rights of the United States. The volume is chiefly a collection of facts. These have been gathered with due regard to scholarly accuracy. They have been presented in a clear and readable literary style. . . Two features of the mechanics of the book leave something to be desired. There are very few references to sources. This defect is only partially remedied by an all too brief bibliography. The index seems rather slight. On the whole, however, the book is notable and will be of great use to students of Far Eastern relations." K. S. Latourette

+ Ann Am Acad 215:187 My '41 550w

Booklist 37:385 Ap 15 '41

"Here is a book that contains much valuable background data for the student and is essentially sound in everything but the author's own plan for a settlement of the Far Eastern problems, which must take into account the existing conditions as well as the background in which they have developed." Wilfrid Fleisher

+ Books p28 Ap 6 '41 1050w

"The United States and Japan's New Order" fairly but vigorously presents the case against Japan as a treaty violator. This aspect of Japanese expansion will be no news to most readers. What is of special interest in the book is the orderly presentation of material, the scholarly analysis and the clear thinking of Dr. Johnstone who is able to prove every statement he makes. A valuable guide to recent events." P. J. Searles

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 5 '41 320w

"A model of scholarly objectivity and analysis." J. F. T.

+ Cath World 153:118 Ap '41 410w

"Extremely timely, informative, and sound is the review of American-Japanese relations presented, with a most well-reasoned recommendation of policy, 'The United States and Japan's New Order,'" T. N.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 F 25 '41 650w

Commonweal 33:405 F 7 '41 60w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 19:883 J1 '41 30w

Reviewed by J. H. Smyth
Living Age 360:94 Mr '41 800w

"Dr. Johnstone, whose work is more vivid and realistic because he knows China at first hand, discusses in detail all the more important notes which have passed between Washington and Tokyo since the beginning of the Sino-Japanese conflict and traces in detail the background of American Far Eastern policy."

W. H. Chamberlin

+ N Y Times p3 F 16 '41 1550w

"Despite aversion to responsibility, the policy Mr. Johnstone recommends, while appearing to be 'all measures short of war,' is surely in its implication power politics requiring the will to fight if necessary. How at the moment any nation can follow any other line of action that will bear the name 'policy' it is hard to see. The book constitutes a careful and dispassionate record and analysis, handy to have at one's elbow," A. R. M. Lower

Pacific Affairs 14:122 Mr '41 380w

"Ambitious and really first-rate scholarly work," A. W. Griswold

+ Pol Sci Q 56:455 S '41 260w

Reviewed by T. A. Bisson
Sat R of Lit 23:18 Mr 1 '41 360w
Springf'd Republican p10 F 28 '41 750w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
Yale R n s 31:420 winter '42 1350w

JOINT COMMITTEE ON CURRICULUM ASPECTS OF EDUCATION FOR HOME AND FAMILY LIVING OF THE HOME ECONOMICS DEPARTMENT OF THE NATIONAL EDUCATION ASSOCIATION AND THE SOCIETY FOR CURRICULUM STUDY. Family living and our schools; suggestions for instructional programs . . . Bess Goodykoontz and Beulah I. Coon, co-chairmen. 468p il $2.50 Appleton-Century

370.1 Family. Home and school 41-5484

"Presupposing the continuity of the child's experience and the educational significance of what happens in the home, this book discusses the ways in which the school may guide and strengthen that factor in education and makes definite recommendations in regard to the curriculum and methods of instruction." (Christian Century) Index.

Booklist 37:402 My 1 '41

Christian Century 58:397 Mr 19 '41 80w

"A comparison of the basic principles which are developed in the first part of the book with the school practices presented in the following chapters reveals in the educational programs certain serious gaps that should not be overlooked. The book, however, should be valuable to teachers and school administrators at all levels. Even those who are working in a school which has made especially good provisions in educating for family living should be able to glean from the volume many suggestions for further improvement. In addition, the excellent statement of the underlying principles should stimulate thoughtful individuals to develop many new practices, thereby making the book doubly valuable." E. F. Potthoff

+ — El School J 41:708 My '41 850w

J Home Econ 33:337 My '41 350w

School & Society 53:320 Mr 8 '41 50w

Reviewed by G. H. Groves
Survey 77:230 J1 '41 230w

JOINT COMMITTEE ON LIBRARY RESEARCH FACILITIES FOR NATIONAL EMERGENCY. Guide to library facilities for national defense; ed. by Carl L. Cannon for the Committee. rev ed 448p planographed pa $2.50 A.L.A.

027.073 Libraries—U.S. U.S.—Defenses

41-51886

"As a result of a rapid survey made in the summer and fall of 1940 by the Joint Committee on Library Research Facilities for National Defense, the preliminary edition of the present volume was issued with descriptions of the library resources for national defense of about 500 libraries. For the revised and enlarged edition (under the same editorship), a systematic effort has been made to secure information about all libraries of importance omitted from the earlier volume, and to add further details from the libraries that reported their holdings at the beginning of the project. Following suggestions from readers of the first edition, there has been a rearrangement of headings and the inclusion of new subject matter." School & Society

Reviewed by I. L. Towner

Am J Pub Health 31:517 My '41 180w

Booklist 37:263 F 15 '41

Booklist 38:15 S '41

Library Q 11:389 J1 '41 160w

Pratt p6 spring '41

Pratt p8 D '41

School & Society 54:172 S 6 '41 140w

JOLAS, EUGENE. Planets and angels. 44p pa 75c English club of Cornell college, Mt Vernon, Iowa

811

"In the introduction to his book, Eugene Jolas, better known as editor and translator than as poet, explains what he means by 'Verticalism.' He says, 'It is time for a spiritual revolution, for a new and dynamic myth, for the vision of a celestial imagination.' 'Poetry is prayer,' he says. . . 'Poetry is another form of mysticism. It is the 'night,' as understood by the great (sic) visionary St. John of the Cross.' . . These are keys. The thirty-five poems which follow illustrate the thesis." Poetry

Reviewed by Richard Eberhart

Poetry 57:276 Ja '41 700w

"Eugene Jolas, remembered for his editorship of transition and championship of Joyce's linguistic blitzkrieg, now announces that in 'verticalism,' language 'must become a dialogue between the I and the collective you, between the I and the Higher Reality.' Whatever the 'Higher Reality' may be, Mr. Jolas has still to find his medium in poetry. That poetic vice of the Twenties—rebellious so strenuously against the content or body of poetry that nothing remains but its functionless arms and legs—is elevated by Mr. Jolas into a religion." Selden Rodman

— Sat R of Lit 22:15 Je 8 '40 350w

JONES, ALFRED WINSLOW. Life, liberty, and property; a story of conflict and a measurement of conflicting rights. 397p $3.50 Lip-pincott

335.01 Civil rights. Property. Trade unions. Rubber industry. Akron, Ohio. Class distinction 41-51632

A survey of the relative value of personal and property rights in an American industrial city, Akron, Ohio, in 1938 and 1939. The first half of the book is devoted to a discussion of the city itself; the second half consists of a report on the 1700 interviews conducted in different sections of the community. Index.

JONES, A. W.—Continued

Reviewed by Alvin Johnson
Books p4 F 23 '41 1000w

"This book will take a place among the path-breakers. It shows that there is an American way, and that the present social situation is full of hope." R. H. M.
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 14 '41 500w

Reviewed by W. M. Callahan
Commonweal 33:604 Ap 4 '41 230w

"Recommended only for college and larger public libraries." R. H. McDonough
Library J 66:138 F 1 '41 210w

"It is a highly provocative book. Experts may argue and probably disagree on the validity of the techniques it employs, but the conclusions arrived at appear well borne out by observation and by history. The most readable parts of the book are the verbatim recordings of actual interviews. These reveal a degree of confused but independent thinking which is a most heartening testimonial to the vitality of our democracy." R. M. Stein
+ Nation 152:450 Ap 12 '41 850w

"The value of the book lies in the light it throws upon the inadequacy of existing techniques for estimating public attitudes, in its able reporting of some of the more interesting interviews, and in the attention it focuses upon a task which the Left in the United States now has cut out for it: making intelligible to ordinary people the special characteristics of corporate property." Willmoore Kendall
+ New Repub 104:864 Je 23 '41 650w

"An inquiry like this is suggestive rather than decisive. For the general reader the book is loaded with too much explanation of method and with tables which cannot be read at a glance. One would like to see similar studies made in other communities and on a broader scale, with more attention to the use of graphs and diagrams in making the results readily visible. But the field is certainly white to the harvest. America, looking at itself and studying its own thinking and feeling, is quite a spectacle." R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p18 Mr 2 '41 1050w

New Yorker 17:83 F 15 '41 50w

"This is a most encouraging book. Not only does it show that the great majority of people in this country approach the basic questions of social policy in a spirit of compromise and with a willingness to reason, but it also shows that commonsense is stronger than propaganda. Neither the Daily Worker nor Social Justice will like the book and what it tells about the spirit of the American people. It is a convincing testimonial to the strength of democracy among the common people." P. F. Drucker
+ Sat R of Lit 23:10 Mr 15 '41 750w

"Even the New Yorker, our leading sociological journal, says of this book that though it is a bit technical you had better read it; and to Fortune Magazine it seemed important enough to warrant printing a condensed version in the February number. No doubt some of the welcome that Dr. Jones is getting is based on feelings of relief because his studies show American opinion to be so sound and middle class in the midst of all these alarms and excursions. . . Yes, you had better read it; incidentally, you will enjoy it." D. C. Coyle
+ Survey G 30:256 Ap '41 240w

Wis Lib Bul 37:50 Mr '41

JONES, ARTHUR HOSKING. Cheltenham township; a sociological analysis of a residential suburb. 173p $2 Univ. of Pa. press

309.174812 Cheltenham, Pennsylvania. Social surveys. Community life 40-29724

"This is a factual study of certain objective aspects of a residential suburban area approximately 10 miles north of the city of Philadelphia. After a brief introductory chapter on methods employed, there is a chapter summarizing generally known material on the growth of cities. There follow two chapters on the historical background and development of the area studied. The rest of the monograph is devoted to a fairly detailed account of migration, the family, schools, business and occupational distribution, economic status, government, disorganization, recreation, and the church. All the available statistical sources bearing on these subjects have been used. . . A Bibliography and Index are appended." Am J Soc

"The study is competent and is modest in its pretensions. It will be valuable as a source of local information as well as a source of comparison with other suburban areas. Some day, perhaps, data of this kind from a large number of widely scattered communities can be brought to bear on some general theory of suburban society." G. A. Lundberg
+ Am J Soc 47:249 S '41 230w

J Home Econ 33:114 F '41 20w

JONES, ELI STANLEY. Is the kingdom of God realism? 284p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury
201 Kingdom of God. Psychology, Religious 41-74

This treatise presents the kingdom of God as the realm of reality. The thesis is that Jesus' plan of the kingdom is the only thing which is realistic and practical—all else is unnatural. He gathers evidence from both the individual and social points of view, and brings in history and science in the course of his reasoning.

Booklist 37:263 F 15 '41

"In his typical evangelistic style, the world-famous missionary and preacher, E. Stanley Jones, restates his well known message concerning the nature of the Christian faith and way of life. Those who have found his several former volumes interesting and helpful will find this most recent one equally so for the same reasons, since it bears the unmistakable stamp of his character as an exponent of the gospel—his rapid-fire epigrammatic speaking, his rich treasure of illustration, his not profound but vigorous thinking, and his convincing religious faith in and devotion to Christ." W. W. Sikes

+ Christian Century 58:458 Ap 2 '41 900w

"The book is replete with anecdote and a vivacity which makes for easy reading. Dr. Jones is never dull." A. F. Gilmore
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 11 '41 800w

"Possibly all the comment that needs to be made on this book is to write that it is the author's best. There could be no higher praise. But this reviewer is so elated by its reading that he would like to throw in a few superlatives. If out of this present chaos could come this, then it has not been entirely in vain. It is wrung from the great heart and great mind of Jones as he looks upon the world and sees its answer in Christ. . . The chapter entitled 'The Kingdom of Heaven is Within You' offers enough stimulus for a year of sermons." J. H. Titus

+ Churchman 155:19 Ja 1 '41 220w

JONES, GUY PEARCE. Two survived; with an introd. by William McFee. 193p il map $2 Random house

940.5452 Tapscott, Robert. Widdicombe, Roy. Anglo-Saxon (merchantman). World war, 1939—Naval operations (W) 41-14977

In August 1940 a German raider torpedoed and sank a British freighter in the Atlantic. The Germans evidently believed they had succeeded in killing all the crew, but one boat, with seven men, managed to escape in the darkness. This book tells the story of the two survivors of the seven, who finally, after seventy days, reached one of the outer islands in the Bahamas.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic S '41 250w

Booklist 38:9 S '41

"'Two Survived' is a book that will be widely read, and kept on every shelf for reference, along with Capt. Voss and Capt. Slocum and other nautical records that stand alone. And the author is to be congratulated on his simplicity and restraint; under extreme temptation he has refused to sensationalize a tale which of itself is utterly sensational." Lincoln Colcord

+ Books p3 J1 20 '41 1250w

"Numerous accounts have been written about the small-boat voyages of imperiled seafarers. What distinguishes this from the Bounty's, the Hornet's, the Trevesa's—to mention three epic sea journeys not unlike that of the Anglo-Saxon's boat—is the fact that this ordeal did not produce a strong leader to carry the castaways through." H. T.

Christian Science Monitor p12 D 27 '41 600w

Reviewed by J. A. Sohon

Library J 66:567 Je 15 '41 50w

Manchester Guardian p3 D 2 '41 200w

Reviewed by Otis Ferguson

New Repub 105:93 J1 21 '41 550w

Reviewed by H. A. Stevens

N Y Times p1 J1 27 '41 900w

"Guy Pearce Jones, a reporter, tells the story in a simple and straightforward manner, without the embellishment or slick-magazine fold-erol that might have spoiled it. The result possesses those characteristics of an epic: the tragedy, the humor, the strength, and weakness of human beings." Eric Devine

+ Sat R of Lit 24:12 J1 19 '41 400w

JONES, IDWAL. Black bayou. 280p $2.50 Duell
41-7863

Story of the hunters and trappers of the Louisiana swamps. Egremont was the last of the great sugar plantations of the Delta. Captain Tone, the owner, was interested only in draining the swamps to plant more sugar. So began the battle of the Cajun muskrat trappers to keep their vested rights, for which Captain Tone had only contempt. The Egremont overseer, in sympathy with the trappers, was torn between two loyalties, and played his part in the struggle which brought destruction to Egremont.

"To the urban Louisianian the trappers and their ways are, we grant you, foreign, but they are not nearly so strange as Mr. Idwal Jones would have us believe. There never were, in cane field or bayou, such wooden folk as these. Had they ever come alive, we should be less inclined to quibble over discrepancies in background. There are, however, innumerable discrepancies, countless flaws which lead us to subscribe whole-heartedly to a statement on the blurb. 'Mr. Jones, the legend runs, 'has by no means . . . spent his life in that one spot.'" Tess Crager

Books p8 My 4 '41 240w

"The picture of the Cajun trappers is splendidly and economically drawn—these salty, free men who kept the patois, the tricks of trapping and hunting, that their fathers had brought with them from Nova Scotia. Rishey, Dr. Egan, Mr. Caleb and Captain Tone are given the stamp of definite character with few words and almost cold impartiality. But they are all limned in their relationship to Egremont. And the characterization of that great, almost feudal, estate is the prime object and excellent achievement of 'Black Bayou.'" Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p7 My 4 '41 850w

"Clever and entertaining."

+ New Yorker 17:86 Ap 26 '41 40w

"Although it deals with material meaty enough for several novels, 'Black Bayou' is interesting only as a picture of a way of life that has no counterpart anywhere else, and it has this interest only fitfully. The book moves very slowly, the action seems somehow to take place between chapters, and the ending, which seems to strive for a high, stirring note, achieves only a vague unsatisfying mistiness." W. J. Gold

— + Sat R of Lit 24:7 Ag 2 '41 290w

JONES, NARD. Scarlet petticoat. 303p $2.50
Dodd

41-23672

A tale of the fur trade on the lower Columbia river in the early nineteenth century. The principal character and narrator is a historical figure, Alexander Henry, assistant to the factor at Fort George.

"It is the background, as in all Mr. Jones's books, that counts. The reader will know more about one significant aspect of the country's history when he has finished the book. He will know some new things about the beauty and majesty of Columbia, too. And he will have absorbed these things easily, slowly, naturally, along with a first-rate yarn." J. H. Jackson

+ Books p10 N 30 '41 850w

"Mr. Jones does not need to justify his own improbabilities and melodramatic vagaries. His is a yarn, based on facts, but a pure fiction in its essence from beginning to end, one with an original slant but designed to entertain readers of popular adventure fiction. As such it belongs in the upper brackets." F. T. M.

+ N Y Times p24 D 7 '41 850w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 4 '42 140w

JONES, ROBERT EDMOND. The dramatic imagination. 157p $2 Duell 792 Drama. Theater

41-6602

A volume of essays, called "reflections and speculations," by a notable American state designer; on the subject of the art of the theater. Contents: A new kind of drama; Art in the theatre; The theatre as it was and as it is; To a young stage designer; Some thoughts on stage costume; Light and shadow in the theatre; Toward a new stage; Behind the scenes.

Booklist 37:483 Je 15 '41

"About this book I would say that no one working in the theater will long escape its influence; and therefore, every one at all interested in the theater, every one taking pleasure in the theater, should read it." Gilbert Seldes

+ Books p9 J1 6 '41 950w

"It is to actors Mr. Jones addresses himself most frequently. The book is a 'must' for all of them, young and old. To the former it is a solemn admonition to have done with the 'I-hope-you're-all-going-to-like-me-because-I-need-the-money' type of acting, back to the glorious, thrilling art of creating, which is the artist's privilege. His is an answering voice, to those young voices 'crying in the wilderness' that is the confused theater of today." Erica Donovan

+ Cath World 154:119 O '41 360w

"The author is a stylist of imagination and literary charm whose ideas are productive and highly significant. He deals with all theatrical problems and, undoubtedly, his ideas will influence strongly our students as well as more mature theatrical workers." George Freedley

+ Library J 66:355 Ap 15 '41 110w

"Never in the history of our present-day theatre was such a book more needed. There are passages here where the content is subtly original, based on genuine experience, and with a capacity for numberless rereadings on our part. There are others that are superb in form at once and then suddenly dazzling in the observation and meaning they present. . . And the style, the tone and the mood of aspiration, hope and foreknowledge in this writing on the theatre reflect the influences and bear constantly on them the marks of the contagion of the great art it deals with and requires." Stark Young

JONES, R. E.—Continued
 + New Repub 104:759 Je 2 '41 1050w

Reviewed by John Gassner

+ N Y Times p20 Jl 13 '41 800w

"Warmly intuitive, poetic, and exciting, though sometimes on the romantic side."
 New Yorker 17:86 Ap 26 '41 80w

"It is a fine thing, not only for the theatre library but for the theatre itself, that Mr. Jones has found the way to put his ideas into words that are at once so clear and so inspiring as in The Dramatic Imagination." E. J. R. Isaacs

+ Theatre Arts 25:401 My '41 1000w

JONES, RUFUS MATTHEW. Small-town boy. 154p $2 Macmillan

B or 92

(W) 41-10327

Account of the author's own boyhood in the Maine village of China, so called from the hymn of the same name. The Jones family was the fourth generation in this country, having arrived from Wales in 1690, and belonged to the town's strong Quaker faction. The book is made up of vivid portraits of his family, relatives, and neighbors, and his lively picture of his own experiences. All of it is liberally spiced with amusing stories.

Booklist 37:545 Jl 15 '41

"These quiet chapters shine, of their own light, in our days of black-out." M. L. Becker
 + Books p6 Je 22 '41 400w

Cath World 154:508 Ja '42 130w

Christian Century 58:865 Jl 2 '41 20w

Churchman 155:34 O 1 '41 100w

"The heart of this memoir's quality [is] its sturdiness, its democracy, its grace. It was not an idyllic boyhood that Dr. Jones looks back on, nor one that was sheltered against roughness or even vulgarity. . . . But in home and community values were clear and a life that could be well described as 'good' was also savorous and interesting."

+ N Y Times p2 Je 22 '41 500w

"A good picture of a Maine community, in the era before telephones, automobiles and bathtubs, Dr. Jones' book is written in unhurried style, a pace maintained even in its touches of restrained humor."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 29 '41 70w

Wis Lib Bul 37:155 O '41

JONES, RUFUS MATTHEW. Spirit in man; foreword by David Elton Trueblood. 70p $1.25 Stanford Univ. press

128 Immortality

41-21157

Three lectures on immortality delivered at Stanford University. Contents: The uniqueness of spirit in man; Goods that are good without any qualification: the realm of values; Intimations of an over-world of reality.

Christian Century 58:1243 O 8 '41 30w

J Philos 39:26 Ja 1 '42 400w

JONES, WILLIAM THOMAS. Morality and freedom in the philosophy of Immanuel Kant. 178p $3 (8s 6d) Oxford

193.2 Kant, Immanuel. Ethics. Free will and determinism [41-14182]

"It is Mr. Jones' contention that 'Kant has something to say about the problem of freedom which is of contemporary interest and importance.' . . . The antinomy of freedom and natural necessity is one which still occupies the minds of moralists. To show that Kant had something of permanent value to say concerning this dilemma, even to prove that the Kantian analysis, correctly understood, offers a valid and final solution, is the object of this book. The primary task is to state the Kantian position with regard to morality. Mr. Jones admits that incongruous and incompatible elements are contained in Kant's moral writings. His object, then, is to present a Kantian view, i.e., one which is consistent, not only internally, but with the results of the first Critique." J Philos

J Philos 38:556 S 25 '41 550w

"Thoughtful and penetrating study."
 + Times [London] Lit Sup p16 Ja 11 '41 800w

JORDAN, ELIZABETH GARVER. Faraway island. 297p $2 Appleton-Century

41-7653

A group of well-to-do, sophisticated Americans, traveling for pleasure and adventure on a small yacht in the Pacific, are cast away on a small island off Central America. They are supplied with most of the necessities and some of the luxuries of life, but the receding hope of rescue becomes daily more dim and the strain finally begins to tell and to bring out changes in character. When rescue does come several lives have undergone radical changes.

Booklist 37:515 Jl 1 '41

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p29 My 11 '41 200w

"The movie star, the studious young man, the millionaire twins and the rest of the shipwrecked lived luxuriously, improved their manners and morals and were sought anxiously by rescuers who found them before the onset of the rainy season. It all bears no relation to life, but makes an entertaining fantasy." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p19 Ag 3 '41 240w

Wis Lib Bul 37:116 Je '41

JORDAN, MRS HELEN ROSALINE (ASH-TON). Tadpole Hall. 296p $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d Collins]

41-51771

"In this novel of England in September, 1939, the author has tried to show how various people reacted to the outbreak of war and the harrowing war of nerves which preceded it. Young and old, refugee and native, laborer and professional man, all contribute their color to the picture." Library J

Booklist 37:464 Je 1 '41

Bookmark 2:15 N '41

"In its small, colorful way 'Tadpole Hall' succeeds in painting a very sympathetic portrait of an elderly Englishman in circumstances which the past had left him ill-prepared to meet but under which he acquits himself well. The details of life in the village are familiar, almost hackneyed, and while the background is strikingly like that depicted in Angela Thirkell's novels her sprightliness and penetrating psychological qualities are not equaled here in any degree." Iris Barry

+ — Books p8 My 18 '41 550w

Reviewed by Katharine Shorey

Library J 66:304 Ap 1 '41 80w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p6 Mr 21 '41 200w

Reviewed by Myfanwy Piper

New Statesman & Nation 21:334 Mr 29 '41 90w

"Miss Ashton has no axe to grind. As a fictional artist of genuine merit and distinction nothing is further from her mind than propaganda. She is concerned, first and last, with her characters and in setting them free to act naturally against such a background as English novelists have never before had thrown to them. She is salty, but not satirical, and her book is characterized by a ripe wisdom which precludes shallow optimism no less than it makes pessimism unthinkable. The result is a novel of English manners and character that has gone very far beneath the surface and arrived somewhere near bed-rock." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p6 My 18 '41 900w
"Well put together, sympathetic, and sensible."

+ New Yorker 17:94 My 17 '41 60w
"Tadpole Hall seemed boring to me—but then there really have been too many of these novels about the village and the refugees. This contains one very unpleasant poor devil of an alien, and one absolute darling who gets surprisingly, if rather dully, rewarded for her all-round sweetness. But why, in a book of flat, neat realism, call all the characters by the names of birds?" Kate O'Brien
— + Spec 166:326 Mr 21 '41 60w

"The novel is written with Helen Ashton's usual expertness and there are some lovely descriptions of the country around Tadpole hall. There is also an unforgettable chapter dealing with an auction sale at Lambescot grange after the death of old Lady Peacock. The places and people all seem real and appealing and the quiet story is consistently interesting."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 18 '41 400w

JORDAN, MILDRED A. (MRS J. LEE BAUSHER). One red rose forever. 550p $2.75 Knopf

Stiegel, Henry William—Fiction (W) 41-11497

A romantic historical novel based on the life and loves of "Baron" Stiegel, the German immigrant whose name was given to a famous early American glassware.

"For a first novel, [Miss Jordan's] is very competent. It is frankly sentimental, a little marred by conscious quaintness and by synthetic archaism in the speech of the characters; but it presents many fresh and interesting facts and tells the story of Stiegel's rise and fall with spirit." R. M. Gay
+ — Atlantic O '41 240w

Booklist 38:80 N 1 '41

"Romantic as are the facts about Stiegel, Miss Jordan's attempt through them to recreate the man, his loves and his times is not altogether successful. The far-flung scene of his emotional and financial operations requires a technique more mature than she possesses. Characterization and language, both, suffer from artificiality. . . . In spite of these very real defects, however, there is enough solid material about the fascinating art of glass-blowing and its American beginnings to make the book an interesting contribution to the literature about this country's past." Rose Feld

— + Books p8 S 7 '41 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '41

"Using the few authenticated facts now known concerning the life of 'Baron' Henry William Stiegel, the famous early American glass-maker, Miss Jordan has woven them into a stirring tale of early American life. By adding a poignant love story, the author has convincingly portrayed the dynamic 'Baron,' lover of music and beauty in all forms, reckless and daring, and thoroughly convinced of his own lucky star." R. D. Minnich

+ Library J 66:731 S 1 '41 80w

"In this long and rather ineptly written historical novel . . . practically all the characters are frustrated, and that goes double for the reader."

— New Repub 105:446 O 6 '41 60w

"In a novel written with the care and dignity of a first-rate biography, Mildred Jordan has traced his career from the moment young Stiegel, with his Stradivarius violin and his dreams of fame, landed in America until he died in obscurity and was laid in an unmarked grave. Her novel, obviously a labor of much love and study and understanding, opens up slowly, as a biography might. The background is set in rich and leisurely detail. . . . What she lacks in practice as a story teller, in the ability to compress and elide [the author] more than makes up in thoroughness and sincerity. 'One Red Rose Forever' is, by any standard, an extraordinary first novel." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p6 S 14 '41 800w

New Yorker 17:75 S 13 '41 50w

Pratt p5 D '41

"This is readable and interesting. The romance is lusty; the style lively. The part about manufacturing glass is accurate, and there are many details about what the people ate and wore. Miss Jordan's novel, however, falls between two stools. It is neither history, nor fiction, and suffers thereby. It would be better if it were either the glass-manufacturer's romance (fiction) or the life of H. W. Stiegel (history)." R. C. Benét

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:13 O 4 '41 450w

"It is a glamorous book, partly a historical romance, but more pronouncedly a glowing love story. If sometimes the romance seems very high-colored, it is truly consistent with the giant personality of Stiegel and the untamed nature of Diane. It has much beauty, much gaiety, and seethes with tense emotions. It has not enough history to call for documentation, but much of the story it tells is based on historical fact." M. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 7 '41 750w

JORDAN, MRS NINA (RALSTON). American costume dolls; how to make and dress them; il. by the author. 230p $2 Harcourt

649.55 Dolls. Handicraft (W) 41-51603

Simple directions for making and dressing American period dolls. Each doll represents an American child of some period from 1620 to the present. The materials are inexpensive; the dolls are made of wire covered with strips of newspaper dipped in heavy paste, and so have no joints. Additional chapters describe dressing a baby doll, and making various accessories. Suitable for school use, with ages eight to twelve.

Booklist 37:328 Mr 15 '41

"Nine of the dolls shown in this fascinating book were constructed according to these directions by eleven-year-old girls who found it easy and amusing." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Ap 27 '41 200w

"The book may prove useful in classroom projects as well as to girls interested in handicrafts. Ages eight to twelve." E. A. Groves

+ Library J 66:222 Mr 1 '41 150w

"This is an excellent example of the newer type of handicraft book, for it has an idea behind it which makes it more than mere entertainment or training in manual dexterity. . . . A book that school and public libraries will find a useful addition to their shelves and one that a child who enjoys experimenting with needle and thread and scissors and paste will be able to understand and use independently." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p12 Mr 9 '41 200w

Pratt p12 autumn '41

Wis Lib Bul 37:97 My '41

JORDAN, MRS NINA (RALSTON). How to sew; il. by the author. 237p $2 Harcourt

646 Sewing—Juvenile literature (W) 41-15327

Sewing book for ages ten to twelve. Part one contains clear, simple directions on the rudiments of sewing, with diagrams. Includes description of how to cut a pattern. Part two is devoted to directions for making fifteen articles: aprons, bibs, curtains, crib quilt, laundry bag, broom bag, oven mits, bridge table cover, bath moccasins, handkerchiefs, belts, sunback halter, coolie coat, slip, and negligee. Index.

Booklist 38:17 S '41

JORDAN, NINA—Continued

"The pictures in this guide to good needlework are on so large a scale that every stitch shows: a quick glance may give the impression that it is for little girls. As a matter of fact, it is, but not for them only. Any beginner will be the better for it." M. L. Becker
+ Books p6 Ja 18 '42 150w

"Excellent for any girl who wants to learn."
H. L. Binsse
+ Commonweal 35:113 N 21 '41 10w

"A welcome addition to the meagre supply of sewing books for girls. . . In [the second] section the author has not been completely successful; the pattern for the slip and the negligee are too old-fashioned to be of much use to the modern girl. There is need for a good book on home sewing, but this book does fill a need and will be useful in many libraries." E. A. Groves
+ Library J 66:736 S 1 '41 120w

"God-send." Phil Stong
+ Sat R of Lit 24:10 N 8 '41 10w
Springf'd Republican p7e O 12 '41 110w
Wis Lib Bul 37:206 D '41

JORDAN, WILBUR KITCHENER. Development of religious toleration in England; attainment of the theory and accommodations in thought and institutions (1640-1660). 499p $5 Harvard univ. press [21s Allen, G]

274.2 England—Church history. Religious liberty. Reformation—England A41-1250

"This, the last volume of a momentous work, analyses in detail the lay thought about religion in England during the twenty years that preceded the Restoration." (New Statesman & Nation) For volume three see Book Review Digest, 1938.

"Professor Jordan's masterly use of this material would have delighted Carlyle and have shown him that the historian need not be a Dry-as-Dust, that from these pamphlets could be written an inspiring history of man's triumph over bigotry." E. W. Kirby
+ Am Hist R 47:327 Ja '42 650w

"Since the author, in presenting the individual contributions to the theory of toleration, gives little attention to their relation to the general intellectual, social, and political trends of the time, the chief value of the volume is its utility as a reference book." Henry Janzen

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:600 Je '41 260w

"Reviewers of earlier volumes in this series have paid high tribute to the scholarship, industry and sound judgment that Professor Jordan has exhibited. It remains only to say that the work as a whole deserves all the praise that has been given to its parts, and that it will long remain a landmark in Christian historiography."

+ Christian Century 58:153 Ja 29 '41 180w

"A rich book. The writing is picturesque and full. (One could wish for variations of the constant use of 'the tuition of history' and 'the tuition of experience.') The reading of the book would sharpen the preacher's pulpit weapons. Jordan's copious use of simile and metaphor is certainly an echo of the vivid language employed by the men he is interpreting, men who fought valiantly in a battle that may not yet be considered won." J. W. Brush

+ Crozer Q 18:166 Ap '41 650w

"Previous reviewers have remarked on the painstaking care with which Professor Jordan has digested his materials. In the last volume I have noted only one omission of consequence: John Saltmarsh, a preacher in Cromwell's army, was one of the more important advocates of toleration. . . He deserves mention in a four-volume work on toleration. The chief error of commission in the fourth volume is the interpretation of Winstanley, the communist. . . Other passages in the fourth volume betray an uncritical reading of seventeenth-century philosophical terms. . . In spite of all criticism, these volumes stand as a solid work of scholarship." R. B. Schlatter

+ New Eng Q 14:745 D '41 1450w

New Repub 105:30 Jl 7 '41 70w

Reviewed by Flora Grierson
New Statesman & Nation 20:449 N 2 '40 700w

Springf'd Republican p12 My 23 '41 650w

"[The author's] present volume is characterized, as its predecessors have been, by great erudition, minute research and the magisterial authority of its conclusions. . . The four volumes which he has given us represent a large draft on the gratitude of historical students. Not only the massive erudition, but the lucid marshalling of so much evidence compels admiration."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p628 D 14 '40 550w

JORDANOFF, ASSEN. Safety in flight; il. by Frank L. Carlson and Fred L. Meagher. 371p il maps $3 Funk

629.1324 Aeronautics (W) 41-12621

Sequel to the author's Your Wings, and Thru the Overcast (Book Review Digest, 1937 and 1938). It gives "post-graduate information on flying, not only for civilian use, but also for the vital purpose of national air defense." (Pref) Some of the subjects covered include: Practical application of our weather knowledge, typical cloud forms, radio as a navigational aid, the todays and tomorrows of aircraft, airplane and engine accessories. Index.

Booklist 38:4 S '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '41

"Should find its way into every flier's library because of its scientifically correct yet easily understood content." William Bowden

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ag 5 '41 900w

JOSEPH, MME MARGUERITE (MAGINOT). He might have saved France. 310p $3 Doubleday

B or 92 Maginot, André. France—Defenses 41-4660

Biography of André Maginot, the French minister of war, whose famous fortifications, known as the Maginot line, might conceivably have saved France if they had been completed according to plan. The book is partly written by Maginot's sister; part is a diary kept during the first World war by the then Sergeant Maginot.

Booklist 37:386 Ap 15 '41

"I do not think André Maginot could have saved France. But this simple, unavoidably pathetic little tribute to him, completed just in the hour when irretrievable disaster suddenly overwhelmed his line and all he had stood for, supplies its own sidelights on why France fell." Walter Mills

Books p5 Mr 9 '41 850w

"The present biography, written with feeling, style, and discrimination by his sister, transforms Maginot from an institution into a strong and attractive personality, a typical Frenchman of the intense conservative nationalist school; more than that, a typical son of his native province of Lorraine in many ways." W. H. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 19 '41 600w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:878 Jl '41 20w

"Exceedingly interesting biography written by his sister in personal pride and affection but nevertheless holding much fact and suggestion that is impersonally and historically informative. . . This is a sympathetic and illuminating portrait-biography from the old French bourgeoisie." K. W.

+ N Y Times p9 F 23 '41 900w

"This is no story of the engineer who wrought to make his country safe. It is, rather, the story of a man. In one way, it is too bad that André Maginot's sister has not gone further into the reasoning that activated the sponsor of the famous and ill-fated 'Line.' Instead she has tried to put on paper the doting of a younger sister for the brother who has evidently been her hero since she was able to remember. Mr. Updegraff has done an excellent job of translation." R. E. Dupuy

+ Sat R of Lit 23:28 Ap 5 '41 450w

JUDSON, CLARA (INGRAM) (MRS J. M. JUDSON). Railway engineer; the story of George Stephenson; il. by Eric M. Simon. 171p $1.50 Scribner

B or 92 Stephenson, George—Juvenile literature (W) 41-51991

Account of the life of the eighteenth century inventor, George Stephenson, who was the perfecter of the steam locomotive. He constructed a "traveling engine," driven by steam, which was used between the coal-pit at Killingsworth, England, where he worked, and the port nine miles distant. Later he was made engineer of the Stockton and Darlington railway, the first to carry passengers and goods by steam. For young readers.

Booklist 38:116 D 1 '41

"It is a lively book for ten-year-olds who like things that go; the pictures are like woodcuts of the period." M. L. Becker

+ Books p24 N 2 '41 280w

"Children who like trains and engines will enjoy his story. The charming illustrations which give the book distinction are by a specialist in 18th century art and decoration." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:362 S '41 90w

"Another in the series of biographies of early inventors for ten-year-old readers. Based on sound research, it is carefully but less spontaneously written than the author's Boat Builder, and it is unlikely that it will be read as a story as much as the Fulton biography. . . At a moment when we are being swamped with the influx of biographies at all reading levels, libraries will do well to check their available material on Stephenson and compare it carefully with the demands. Recommended if needed." J. L. Sauer

+ Library J 66:908 O 15 '41 130w

"The story of the English miner's son who, almost without education, began his models and inventions as a child and grew up to design the Rocket and to lay out the first real railways should be interesting to any boy between eight and twelve. Attractively illustrated in the manner of old engravings."

+ New Yorker 17:145 D 6 '41 80w

"[The] illustrator this time is Eric Simon, who added to his already broad knowledge of the 18th century background by spending hours studying the details of the Stevenson engines. His many full-page drawings, his decorative bits and his lovely endpapers make this a book of art as well as information. The text itself is simply written, with accuracy, and from it young readers will learn that Stevenson was much more than the inventor of the Rocket."

+ Springfield Republican p7e S 23 '41 180w

JUDSON, HELEN. Edith Cavell. 288p $2.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Cavell, Edith (W) 41-9138

"To Edith Cavell's unpublished letters, and to interviews with relatives, friends, associates and pupils, Helen Judson has gone for the material of this book; and in England and Belgium in the Summer of 1939 she followed the whole course of her heroine's life." N Y Times

Booklist 37:513 J1 1 '41

Bookmark 2:13 N '41

"Miss Judson's biography is nearly as unassuming as the straight gray-eyed little nurse who inspired it. It is the story of a life singularly devoid of personal desires and satisfactions, as most individuals know those terms." Mary Ross

+ Books p14 J1 6 '41 750w

Christian Century 58:723 My 28 '41 80w

"Miss Judson unearths much interesting material regarding the Belgian underground work for refugees, the betrayal of Miss Cavell by spies, the questioning by the German authorities, the military court trial and the fruitless midnight efforts of the American and Spanish legations to procure a stay of execution. But the work as a whole seems to reassure us that while the Nurse Cavell of legend will continue to inspire devotion the real Edith Cavell will repose in grateful oblivion, her sterling qualities known only to those of her intimate circle." H. J. S.

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 9 '41 700w

Reviewed by M. L. Eglinton

Churchman 155:19 J1 1 '41 300w

"Her writing itself lacks distinction, but it is direct and clear; and her comprehensive research has brought forth both the progress of event and the expression and consistency of character. The oversimplification of persistent legend has vanished, and the complex reality makes its own appeal of implication and insight. This reviewer, for one, is ready to welcome the absence of the Strachey touch." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p5 My 25 '41 1650w

Sat R of Lit 24:16 Je 28 '41 150w

Wis Lib Bul 37:139 J1 '41

JUSTMAN, JOSEPH. Theories of secondary education in the United States. 481p $3 Teachers college

373 Education, Secondary. Education—U.S. Education—Philosophy 41-1485

Comparative and critical review of the main currents of thought in present-day secondary education. Each theory is examined as to its philosophy as well as in its proposals for curriculum and organization. Bibliography. Index.

School & Society 52:704 D 28 '40 20w

"The fundamental difficulty with a hard and fast classification such as the author adopts is that it does not do justice to the full scope of the thinking of those who are criticized. It is especially difficult to follow the author in his effort to distinguish social evolutionism from social realism." C. H. Judd

Social Studies 32:186 Ap '41 490w

JUSTUS, MAY. Cabin on Kettle creek; il. by Helen Finger. 177p $2 Lippincott

(W) 41-22952

Story of life in the Tennessee mountains, which contains many realistic details of that life, its folkways and customs. For readers of eight to twelve. Glossary.

"We can depend on May Justus for authentic descriptions of the Tennessee mountaineers. . . Less plot is to be found than in some of her other books, but even more emphasis on folkways. It is for the better readers among the ten- and eleven-year-olds who can take unfamiliar words and turns of phrase in their stride." Miriam Snow

+ Library J 66:1000 N 15 '41 140w

"Interesting if not exciting." Zoë Durrell

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 N 8 '41 30w

K

KAFKA, FRANZ. Franz Kafka miscellany; pre-fascist exile [tr. by Sophie Frombaum; with comments by Harry Slochower and others]. 99p $2 Twice a year press, 509 Madison av, N.Y.

830.81

41-1402

"The volume is made up of illuminating essays on Kafka by Harry Slochower and Edwin Muir, an extract from Brod's biography of his friend, another from Kafka's revealing 'Letter to My Father,' a brief autobiographical sketch, and passages from Kafka's writings, including some from his novel 'The Castle,' not published in the Muirs' translation of that work." Books

"This little book should prove of interest to those who suffer from the perplexities that tortured Kafka, to all students of religious experience, and also to readers concerned with questions of psychopathology. It is a limited, even a small, audience." Babette Deutsch
Books p13 F 16 '41 400w

Reviewed by Philip Rahv
Nation 152:218 F 22 '41 330w

Reviewed by W. H. Auden
New Repub 104:185 F 10 '41 600w
New Yorker 16:87 D 21 '40 40w

"For the first time we find, in Slochower's essay, a clear definition of Kafka's art and a measurement of the proportion of its merit and demerit." Paul Rosenfeld
+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 F 8 '41 380w

KAGAWA, TOYOHICO. Behold the Man; ed. by Maxine Shore and M. M. Oblinger. 346p $2.50 Harper

Jesus Christ—Fiction (W) 41-12351

Novelized biography of Jesus Christ, written by the famous Japanese Christian. It begins with the death of John the Baptist and ends with the scene between Christ and Thomas on the Sunday evening following Easter.

"The portrayal of Martha is in part unpleasing and has no scriptural support. Again, the movement toward a revolution in Galilee during the ministry of Christ is too far removed from the realities which should control even an imaginative reproduction of Christ's life and times. All in all, however, the reader will not fail to remark the devotion of this Japanese convert to evangelical Christianity." W. J. McGarry

America 65:388 J1 12 '41 160w
Booklist 38:35 O 1 '41

"'Behold the Man' has a unique value. As one more book about Jesus, it is perhaps of only passing interest. But as Kagawa's testimony of the secret of his own life, it takes a central place in the record of a career which is among the spiritual miracles of our time." J. H. Holmes

+ Books p8 J1 6 '41 700w

Reviewed by A. F. Gilmore
Christian Science Monitor p10 J1 19 '41 500w

"Kagawa, in traditional fashion, seems to exaggerate Jesus' revolt against the rites of Judaism. One might ask whether this book should be put into the hands of those who have no background of New Testament scholarship, and still more the general reader who does not even know his New Testament. But on the whole the author has painted a true picture of the essential significance of the life and teaching of Jesus." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 155:20 Ag '41 400w

"'Behold the Man' is well constructed, decidedly readable and often very moving." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p7 Je 29 '41 750w

"The author brings an oriental mind to the interpretation of a greater Oriental. In fact, Kagawa himself has been a prophet of salvation in his ministry to lower and lowest classes in his own country, fighting filth and ignorance and disease in the slums. As one who knows him says, he knows something of the suffering and sin of the world and something of the power of the love that was in Christ."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e J1 20 '41 400w
Wis Lib Bul 37:202 D '41

KAGEY, RUDOLF (KURT STEEL, pseud).
Madman's buff. 266p $2 Little 41-17324

Detective story.

"'Madman's Buff' is a meaty affair, well worked out and packing a water-tight answer. Plenty of amusement, too, especially when it concerns Lip Sisko, Hank's cab-driving friend." Will Cuppy

+ Books p20 S 28 '41 200w

"Try to figure it out for yourself. It's fun." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p33 S 28 '41 140w

"High grade."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:21 O 4 '41 40w

KAHMANN, MRS MABLE (CHESLEY). Gypsy goes to college; il. by C. Le Roy Baldrige. 341p $2 Random house

(W) 41-10150

Story of a first year in college, in which a girl brought up by gypsies attempts to reconcile modern social ideals with the lure of the gypsy philosophy. For older girls.

Booklist 37:551 J1 15 '41

"The tale is romantic to the outer edge of credibility, the only realism coming from acquaintance with Gypsy mentality." M. L. Becker

Books p7 Je 1 '41 400w

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt
Cath World 154:381 D '41 100w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan
Christian Science Monitor p13 Je 26 '41 130w

"There are good characterizations, good plot, and high ethical values in realistic situations." Maude Adams

+ Library J 66:465 My 15 '41 100w

"Mizela's progressive dilemmas and adjustments, described with Mrs. Kahmann's light touch for comedy, make a highly entertaining college story for older girls. It does not go so deeply below the surface as some of her earlier books, but it gives an insight into gypsy attitudes which do not seem so very strange in contrast to some of the more fantastic viewpoints of a campus." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p9 J1 6 '41 360w

KAHMANN, MRS MABLE (CHESLEY). XDY and the soap box derby; il. by Louis Cunette. 201p $1.75 Random house

41-14771

Story of a boys' secret society and the new boy in town who was forbidden by his parents to join. Ted was clever enough to evolve a scheme of cooperation which later led to membership, and both Ted and XDY proved their worth in the famous soap box derby.

"A good gang seldom gets a chance to speak for itself so well as here, or to show itself so fairly in ways readily recognizable by small boys." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Ag 24 '41 230w

"An original plot, based on sound psychology, and a sympathetic understanding of modern boys of Scout age. Recommended for ages ten to thirteen." J. E. Wooster

+ Library J 66:736 S 1 '41 120w

"Interesting." Phil Stong
+ Sat R of Lit 24:10 N 8 '41 20w

KAINS, MAURICE GRENVILLE. We wanted a farm. 228p il $2 Greenberg 630.1 Farm life

Account of the author's experiences, first on a rented suburban place, then on his own suburban place, and finally on a twenty-odd acre subsistence farm. Anecdotal and autobiographical in style but with many hints on soil conditioning, cold frame structures, fruit and vegetable planting, buying and selling—and guests.

"In the first part suburban gardeners find their problems treated, and for the rest of the time the actual working of a little farm that must pay its way is described. This is done without the grace of writers who farm by remote control; the story must hold, and does, without benefit of style."

Books p29 N 23 '41 140w

Spring'd Republican p14 D 5 '41 190w

KALNAY, FRANCIS, and COLLINS, RICHARD, eds. The new American; a handbook of necessary information for aliens, refugees and new citizens. 388p il map $2.50 Greenberg

323.6 Aliens—U.S. Naturalization—U.S. Refugees, Political (W) 41-7830

"While this handbook brings up to date the information which both immigrants and candidates for citizenship need in regard to naturalization procedures and educational requirements, other important problems which face the immigrant are given equal consideration. Thus considerable space has been devoted to laws and rulings which discriminate against the alien. . . . Likewise, it has seemed necessary to point out the avenues open to him for procuring work. On the other hand, certain advantages which he may enjoy as a citizen but not as an alien have been indicated. . . . A survey of the refugee situation, with a list of organizations which give refugee aid of one kind or another, is given place. Other reference lists cover fraternal societies of the foreign-born, foreign language newspapers in the United States, radio stations which broadcast foreign language programs, and American organizations devoted to immigrant welfare." (Introd) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:510 J1 1 '41

Bookmark 2:6 N '41

"A book of present usefulness and value."
+ Books p14 My 25 '41 160w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '41

"This book fills a definite need at this time and is recommended for all public libraries."
G. W. Hill

+ Library J 66:355 Ap 15 '41 130w

"The subtitle of this book, 'A Handbook of Necessary Information for Aliens, Refugees and New Citizens,' is a modest description. It is almost an encyclopaedia of the subject. No other work in existence contains in one volume so much information on so many subjects of such importance to all immigrants, refugees, those who seek naturalization, as well as foreign-born citizens. It is also of interest to those concerned with the life and problems of the racial groups partially or not at all absorbed into the American melting pot." S. N.
+ Living Age 360:395 Je '41 280w

"Some of this valuable information is presented in question-and-answer form, and personal usefulness is the book's well-met criterion."

+ N Y Times p39 N 30 '41 260w

Spring'd Republican p7e Ag 10 '41
70w

KANE, HARNETT THOMAS. Louisiana hayride; the American rehearsal for dictatorship, 1928-1940. 471p il $3.50 Morrow

976.3 Louisiana—Politics and government. Long, Huey Pierce. Corruption (in politics) (W) 41-7143

The first third of this book tells the story of Huey Long during the days of his power in Louisiana. The latter part recounts what happened after Long's death until the victory of the opposition forces in 1940. The author is a New Orleans newspaper man. Index.

"Written in good, forthright journalistic style, marred in spots by careless proofreading, this book presents the sad and sorry story of Huey Long and his henchmen and successors. . . . A horrid story, capably told."
R. E. Danielson

+ Atlantic Ag '41 170w

Booklist 37:462 Je 1 '41

"Although it is hardly the definitive work on Longism, 'Louisiana Hayride' is a clear, smooth-running and highly entertaining account of one of the most astonishing episodes in American political history." G. W. Johnson
+ Books p5 My 11 '41 900w

Christian Science Monitor p22 Je 12 '41
650w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:381 Ja '42 50w

"Although the Huey Long episode was not without its humorous aspects, the author is intensely serious in presenting his story as an object lesson 'to demonstrate the ease with which the American form may be distorted to fit the purposes of totalitarianism.' For that reason, as well as for its sustained interest, this book deserves to be widely read." G. W. Hill

+ Library J 66:399 My 1 '41 110w

"It is an exciting story, and Mr. Kane portrays this amazing gallery of rogues with much skill. . . . But one who believes in democracy will not find much comfort in reading Mr. Kane's account of their decline and fall." C. C. Munz

+ Nation 152:728 Je 21 '41 1050w

"A thorough, lively, first-rate job. It ought to stand as the definitive work on the subject." Hamilton Basso

+ New Repub 105:162 Ag 4 '41 1300w

"A lively, free-hitting narrative, it is the work of a young newspaperman who had a ringside seat for many of the more sensational incidents of the Long regime. It is written with the proper appreciation of the grotesque humor of many of its episodes, as its title suggests, but also with the proper appreciation of the potential significance of what happened in Louisiana for the rest of the United States, as its subtitle makes sufficiently clear." Herschel Brickell

+ N Y Times p1 My 11 '41 1500w

"An entertaining and intelligent book."

+ New Yorker 17:91 My 10 '41 70w

Reviewed by Harrison Smith

Sat R of Lit 24:20 My 17 '41 550w

KANE, HENRY B. Tale of the bullfrog. (Wild world tales) [48p] il $1.25 Knopf

Frogs—Legends and stories (W) 41-51698

Life story of the bullfrog, told in factual prose, photographs, and drawings, for ages eight to twelve. Each stage from tadpole to grown frog is shown, as well as some of the frog's most prevalent enemies.

Booklist 37:412 My 1 '41

"The reproduction does justice to split-second photography: the pictures of the grown-up bullfrog, especially in mid-jump, are amazing. And the story is really true." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 Ap 20 '41 200w

KANE, H. B.—Continued

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 35:111 N 21 '41 20w

"The direct and simple text is made immensely vivid by the distinguished illustrations, by pen and camera. These show a series of actions in the frog's own environment, under the water of ponds or on the edge of marshes. Mr. Kane has shown much more than our eyes are able to catch in his exploration of a frog's home life." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:207 My '41 90w

"An unadulterated educational book that should please professional naturalists as well as the children who see it." Warren Chappell

+ Horn Bk M 17:453 N '41 30w

"Well-written narrative and superb photographs." Marian Herr

+ Library J 66:403 My 1 '41 100w

"Graphic text, distinguished for its simplicity and conciseness, which nevertheless has room for flashes of humor, a quality to be found also in the supplementary line drawings. This second volume in the Wild World Tales is similar in plan and format to 'The Tale of the Whitefoot Mouse' and both of them are fine additions to nature books for younger children." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 My 11 '41 190w

Wis Lib Bul 37:97 My '41

KANNER, LEO. In defense of mothers; how to bring up children in spite of the more zealous psychologists; decorations by Kurt Wiese. 167p $2 Dodd

649.1 Children—Management 41-19978

A book of advice to parents based on the thesis that too many psychologists have overdone their job, and it is time to return to common sense methods.

"Dr. Kanner's way of saying things is that recommended by Horace: to tell the truth laughingly. For this particular purpose such an approach is already persuasion; it would be hard to quarrel with anything drawn so gayly from experience so enlightening."

+ Books p17 Ja 11 '42 220w

"A constructive approach to the subject with accent on common sense."

+ School & Society 54:284 O 4 '41 10w

KAPLAN, SIMON. Once a rebel. 311p $2.50 Farrar

B or 92 Russia—History—Revolution, 1905 (W) 41-799

A democratic American looks back upon a life extending from a revolutionary boyhood in Russia to loyal and prosperous United States citizenship. The book is chiefly an account of his first eighteen years and experiences of the 1905 revolution.

"Mr. Kaplan is graphic in his descriptions of people, place and behavior, eccentrics in his own family, the bordellos outside the lumber camps, scenes from the lower depths, racial conflicts. Though neither an artist nor a skilled writer, his devotion to the Russian classics has kept him from lapsing into mediocrity or dullness, sustained him in presenting a human and emotional self-portrait without self-consciousness. As one man telling a story out of his past because he feels impelled to, Mr. Kaplan has achieved a book that must be set down as a success." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p4 Ja 12 '41 600w

Reviewed by J. K. Paulding
Commonweal 33:578 Mr 28 '41 200w

"This is not a particularly well written yet a very unusual book, worthy of the perusal of the reader interested in human experience." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p30 Ap 20 '41 850w

"He attempts to develop the details of his memories along two lines, one reminiscent, one hortatory, and it must be said that the first is quite effective, the second much less so. As a series of suggestive pictures that restore a section of a scene now utterly destroyed, the book is good. . . But as a study of political forces and revolutionary tactics it falls short." N. L. R.

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:19 Ja 25 '41 220w

KAPSTEIN, ISRAEL JAMES. Something of a hero. 596p $2.75 Knopf

(W) 41-5877

Portrait of life in a midwestern town from 1907 to 1929. The central character is John Cantrell, whose ancestors were among the town's founders, and John at sixty-five is still one of the leading citizens of Persepolis. Around him move the other characters—ordinary citizens, Jews, Negroes, bootleggers, industrialists—all striving for a place in the sun, some of them failing, some finding a small measure of success. But John Cantrell, with his understanding heart, he who is "something of a hero, something of a saint," out-distances them all.

Booklist 37:515 Jl 1 '41

"The opening of the novel, brilliantly sustained for 120 pages, is perhaps the finest descriptive narrative and story piece about an old-time Fourth in a small city ever set down in fiction. . . Mr. Kapstein is a story writer of remarkable virtuosity, erring at times, it seemed to me, in lack of restraint, carrying a thing, sometimes, beyond the point of diminishing returns. But these are remarkable portraits from the life in this small city gallery." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p4 My 18 '41 800w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '41

"It is, despite its occasional insight, its several exciting passages, a generally disappointing book from the author of one of the best novelettes of our time, 'The Song the Summer Evening Sings.'" Harry Sylvester

+ Commonweal 34:235 Je 27 '41 360w

"In spite of its length and its obvious purpose, Something of a Hero is a good novel. In times when great stress is being placed on the 'American Tradition' this book may be widely read. Recommended." R. D. Minnich

+ Library J 66:305 Ap 1 '41 80w

Reviewed by Hassoldt Davis

Nation 152:700 Je 14 '41 480w

"The book has few flaws outside of a stiff beginning and a theatrical conclusion. . . As a whole [it] stands solidly on its own feet. It is an impressive novel—and would be at any time. It comes to us now with doubled force." W. J. Gold

+ — N Y Times p3 My '18 '41 1250w

"I am a sourpuss who had reservations even about 'The Grapes of Wrath,' 'Native Son,' and 'For Whom the Bell Tolls,' so it may not be surprising that I think 'Something of a Hero' goes deeper than any of these, is at least as well written, and tells us more of what we need to know about ourselves." Vincent McHugh

+ New Yorker 17:66 My 31 '41 900w

"Mr. Kapstein writes warmly, with considerable drama, and with deep humanity, so that while his purpose and his spirit are altogether admirable, his technical devices often seem too mechanically contrived and his characters too much the types and not enough the individualized human beings. Nor is his structure always satisfactory in its proportions. . . Mr. Kapstein has written a serious, engagingly human book which deserves serious attention." Bess Jones

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:9 My 17 '41 700w

"'Something of a Hero' is unusually well told and there is plenty of action."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 18 '41 450w

Time 37:86 Je 2 '41 210w

KASTLER, NORMAN MANTONYA. Modern human relations; an elementary sociology; il. by C. E. B. Bernard. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 462p $1.72 Little 300 Sociology

40-13798

A high school sociology textbook by an instructor in economics and sociology in the University extension division of the University of Wisconsin. The book is in nine parts: Part I: Human relations; Part II: Modern distribution; Part III: Modern industrial society; Part IV: Modern rural society; Part V: Population; Part VI: The family; Part VII: Agencies of social control; Part VIII: Social planning; Part IX: Statistics and human relations. Bibliography. Index.

"The book is readable enough for high-school students; and charts, diagrams, and sketches add both interest and significance. The factual material is well selected; and divergent positions on current issues are indicated. Despite the excellent material, current issues are not presented in such a way as to come alive for the student, perhaps because the author was too concerned in making the discussion attractive, readable, objective—and unobjectionable." Seba Eldridge & Marston McCluggage

Am Soc R 6:455 Je '41 160w

School & Society 52:128 Ag 24 '40 30w

"The author has succeeded in realizing his objective of 'keeping the volume attractive' and 'easy to read.' The text is enriched by numerous cartoons and sketches. Statistical material in the form of graphs, charts, and tables are interspersed throughout. The publisher has cooperated in providing a pleasing, and unique format and a visually restful 'old style' type. Each chapter includes an adequate number of well-chosen questions and exercises. Some may not find the choice of content materials quite the ideal for their particular school situation. It would, however, be very difficult to find a similar text better adapted for general use throughout the nation." W. S. Salisbury

+ Social Educ 5:237 Mr '41 480w

Reviewed by H. T. Knight

Social Studies 32:191 Ap '41 320w

KATONA, GEORGE. Organizing and memorizing; studies in the psychology of learning and teaching [Foreword by Max Wertheimer]. 318p $3.50 Columbia univ. press [17s 6d Oxford]

154 Learning, Psychology of. Educational psychology. Memory 40-9121

"The problem of this volume is the validity of three assumptions regarding the primary form of learning: 1. Memorizing is the prototype of learning. 2. Understanding organized wholes is the prototype of learning. 3. Memorizing and understanding are distinct and independent processes (p. 246). The objective is to show that the first assumption is not valid, and to support the avowed, but undefended, belief that the second assumption is correct." (Am J Psychol) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by A. W. Melton

Am J Psychol 54:455 Jl '41 1000w

Reviewed by Leonard Carmichael

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 18 '41 140w

KAUFFMAN, ERLE. Kingdom of the trees; il. by Calvin Fader. 128p $2 Reilly & Lee

582.16 Trees—Juvenile literature 40-9216

"Trees in their relation to human activity are entertainingly and informatively described by Erle Kauffman, associate director of the American Forestry association. . . The information is presented through conversations between the Old Forester and his young friends, Betty and Ben." Spring'd Republican

Spring'd Republican p6 Mr 17 '41 420w

Wis Lib Bul 37:21 Ja '41

KAUFFMANN, STANLEY. The king of Proxy street. 263p $2.50 Day

41-16060

"Dexter Grace, a famous novelist and cosmopolite, returns to the country town of his childhood to spend the last year of life that his doctors have allowed him in writing his final and greatest novel—a novel that is to be the embodiment of the tidy fastidiousness, the incisive rationalism of his brilliant mind. Back, too, to Proxy Street comes an obscure haberdasher whose life has been one constant series of misfortunes. He wants desperately to believe in something, but he can find nothing reassuring in his narrow world of pain and confusion. The lives of these two men are woven inextricably together by the manipulations of what seems a strange destiny." Publisher's note

Booklist 38:113 D 1 '41

Reviewed by F. T. Marsh

Books p12 N 9 '41 450w

"As fiction, 'The King of Proxy Street' has the faults usually found in what may be called the essay novel, written more for its thesis than for its characters. But the book is written with obvious sincerity, and deserves respect as the careful, conscientious setting forth of one man's ideas and beliefs regarding the great questions which so vitally concern us all." L. M. Field

+ — N Y Times p32 N 2 '41 500w

"When you have a plot such as Mr. Kauffmann's fantastic story, it must be exceedingly well written. The 'King of Proxy Street' is not. The characters are badly drawn, flat, unconvincing, and monotonous."

— Sat R of Lit 24:20 O 25 '41 130w

Spring'd Republican p7e N 16 '41 140w

KAULA, EDNA MASON. Growing up in New Zealand; il. by the author. 147p $1.50 Lothrop 919.31 New Zealand—Juvenile literature

41-15361

Account of "the carefree childhood of Edna Kaula and her brother Harry in New Zealand. It is entertainingly interwoven with the history and legends of the country. The pronunciations of all the strange words are listed at the bottom of each page to simplify reading aloud." Sat R of Lit

Sat R of Lit 24:21 N 15 '41 50w

Spring'd Republican p7e Ja 4 '42 130w

KAUP, MRS ELIZABETH (DEWING). Not for the meek. 697p $2.75 Macmillan

(W) 41-1829

Story of a Danish immigrant boy who came to the United States in the 80s and rose to wealth and power in the steel industry.

"It seems to me that Martin in his youth is much more believable than Martin in his wealth; it seems to me that too much luck softens him as it softens his story; it seems to me that his wife and her Calverton kin and her wawking Julian are caricatures, and that too often as the book proceeds there is a stogy note which jars our acceptance of the easy, colorful flow of incident." Edward Weeks

+ — Atlantic Mr '41 300w

Booklist 37:292 Mr 1 '41

"In vigorous, unadorned, sometimes awkward prose Mrs. Kaup writes a fine sweeping history of a man, his family and his times. She is perhaps more successful in creating Martin's inner life, his relations with his children and friends than she is in visualizing the industrial battleground on which he lived. But in either setting he towers, a vital engaging personality." Page Cooper

+ Books p2 F 2 '41 800w

KAUP, ELIZABETH—Continued

"As it stands in its present form, this story of a steel magnate is as much a majestic and stirring panorama of these last incredibly fantastic 75 years in our nation's history as it is the story of one man's life." Ruth Blodgett

+ Boston Transcript p1 F 1 '41 360w

Christian Century 58:499 Ap 9 '41 180w

"A novel that is worth while both for its background and for its portrayal of a rugged individualist in the days when rugged individualism paid dividends." G. W. Hill

+ Library J 66:80 Ja 15 '41 140w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 O 31 '41 110w

Nation 152:136 F 1 '41 60w

New Repub 104:382 Mr 17 '41 60w

"Primarily it is a novel about an individual. An individual we are not required to admire or condemn, merely to understand. Elizabeth Dewing Kaup herself is as sparing of judgments as Dreiser ever was. It is not for nothing that a line from Spinoza follows the title page: 'I have sedulously endeavored not to laugh at human actions, not to lament them, nor to detest them.' The spirit of this novel, which stirs the imagination profoundly, could not be better expressed." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p7 F 2 '41 1000w

"Since the story is told as a review by an old man of a full life, it has an air of omniscience that is sometimes overdone, but on the whole it makes a readable and interesting novel."

+ New Yorker 16:54 F 1 '41 100w

"[Mrs] Kaup has so devised 'Not for the Meek' as to make it proceed out of Lyndendaal's own thinking. . . It is in one sense an old man's private autobiography; it is in another sense an apologia for the captain of industry, as he himself would write it if he had the imagination, the probing wisdom, the high spirits and the impeccable motives, of a Martin Lyndendaal. Certain valuable things are here which the objectivity of Dreiser and Norris would not have included: the real personal springs of action. Certain other things are for the same reason missing: the equally real crassness of the power-grab." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 23:10 Mr 8 '41 400w

"Mrs. Kaup tells Martin's story skilfully, abundantly, indefatigably, but cannot exorcise from it a certain doubt whether it was better worth the telling than, on the whole, the living!"

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p553 N 8 '41 330w

Wis Lib Bul 37:93 My '41

KEDARA-NATHA DASA GUPTA. See Das Gupta, K.

KEEFER, CLARENCE EDWARD. Sewage-treatment works; administration and operation. 673p il $6 McGraw

628.3 Sewage disposal plants 40-35863

"A discussion of the administration and operation of sewage plants, emphasizing the treatment processes that are in wide use today. [The work] describes the various types of modern equipment, tells how they perform, outlines operating methods and discusses costs of operation. Quantity and composition of sewage from institutions, municipalities and industrial plants are also given." (Publisher's note) Index.

"This first edition reflects the ability, serious purpose, and conscientious work of the author and should prove a valuable contribution in the interest of more efficient and economical sewage treatment." R. J. Morton

+ Am J Pub Health 31:641 Je '41 700w

Booklist 37:288 Mr 1 '41

"Practical, complete and up-to-date, this book may be considered as both a text and a manual which tells the 'why and how' of sewage disposal practice."

+ Eng N 125:77 D 19 '40 160w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:28 Ap '41

KEELER, HARRY STEPHEN. The man with the wooden spectacles [Eng title: Wooden spectacles]. 378p $2.50 Dutton [7s 6d Ward, Lock]

41-14052

Mystery story.

N Y Times p24 O 5 '41 150w

"Typical Keeler compendium of data on almost everything under the criminal sun, a tortuous plot, and great gobs of conversation. For Keeler fans."

Sat R of Lit 24:18 S 20 '41 40w

"Despite overmuch chatter, many digressions and occasional dull spots, 'The Man With the Wooden Spectacles' lives up to its author's reputation."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 21 '41 360w

KEELER, HARRY STEPHEN. The peacock fan. 316p $2.50 Dutton

41-1235

Mystery story.

"With his usual long-windedness, Mr. Keeler brings it all out right in the end." Marian Wiggan

Boston Transcript p2 F 8 '41 30w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p24 Mr 23 '41 120w

Sat R of Lit 23:18 F 15 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 26 '41 240w

KEELER, HARRY STEPHEN. The sharkskin book. 287p $2 Dutton

41-7865

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p11 Je 29 '41 130w

"The manner in which Mr. Keeler extricates his hero from the predicament in which he has placed himself is as ingenious as anything that this writer has ever done. As for the digressions, you will probably find the continuation of at least one of them in some future book by Harry Stephen Keeler." I. A.

N Y Times p17 Je 15 '41 190w

"Highly flavored Keeler mixture of decayed corpses, tough hombies, Chinese aphorisms, deplorable dialogue, and what have you. Passing strange."

Sat R of Lit 24:20 Je 14 '41 40w

KEELER, HARRY STEPHEN. Vanishing gold truck. 317p $2.50 Dutton

41-23263

Mystery story.

"Sticks to its last much better than most Keelerganzas and has some colorful circus bits in it—but woefully overwritten."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:20 D 13 '41 40w

"Mr Keeler's dialog is frankly boring, his technic will make the reader of modern fast-paced detective stories writhe in agony. But Mr Keeler has his fans, and 'The Vanishing Gold Truck,' composed as it is of a welter of apparently unrelated facts and a solution which has a tenuous relation to all of them, is directly in the Keeler 'tradition.'"

Springf'd Republican p7e D 21 '41 210w

KEESING, FELIX MAXWELL. The South seas in the modern world; with a foreword by J. B. Condliffe. (Inst. of Pacific relations. Int. research ser) 391p $3.50 Day

990 South Sea Islands (W) 41-10244

"This survey of the island region of the Pacific, often spoken of as the South Seas, attempts to define comprehensively the political, strategic, and economic role these Oceanic islands play in the world today, and especially the modern experience and problems of the peoples native to them. . . The book brings together and co-ordinates materials scattered through numerous official documents, published and unpublished, as well as books, articles, and scientific monographs relating to the islands and their peoples. To these are added materials from first-hand personal research and observation in the area, carried on from time to time over the last twenty years." (Author's pref) Bibliography. Index.

"How medical, educational, and religious services have dealt with native ideas, and the requirement of more adequate attention to such services, as well as the most serious concern for the economic disorganization accompanying the increase of population and the loss of foreign markets, are very thoughtfully presented. Dr. Keesing has contributed notably to the treatment of the task which he lays upon the statesmanship of the next decade: to regard the islands as an important charge upon its attention and constructive effort." H. S. Quigley

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1000 O '41 380w

Booklist 38:8 S '41

"A competent and wise book." Margaret Mead

+ Books p3 Ag 17 '41 600w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:206 O '41 40w

"A decidedly worth-while book as a reference book for students and those interested in all information regarding the islands of the Pacific and, second, for those readers wishing interesting descriptions of the social life, population, native and migratory, and the habits and customs of the present population." I. M. Turner

+ Library J 66:614 J1 '41 90w

"A difficult job well handled and the only volume comprehending this material, which was coördinated from special investigations, conferences, documents, books and articles, personal research. Ninety-one pages of statistical appendices, bibliography and index; charts are few and poor."

+ New Repub 105:286 S 1 '41 120w

"The value and merit of Dr. Keesing's study lie largely in specific and fair-minded thoroughness with which he has set forth the concrete facts and thoughtful opinions touching every facet of the problem of South Sea civilization in these changing years." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p3 J1 13 '41 1550w

"Masterly exposition of a very knotty subject, well organized, readable, scholarly, and objective. Looks like the standard background work on the past and present of the islands. Excellent maps, diagrams, and appendices."

+ New Yorker 17:55 J1 5 '41 60w

"Dr. Keesing has written another excellent volume dealing with the government of dependencies, a volume marked by careful judgment, considerable insight, and attractiveness of literary style." L. A. Mander

+ Pacific Affairs 14:373 S '41 1100w

"The book is rich in bibliography and appendices, detailing the resources of the islands, their communications, their trade, land tenure, currency values, with authoritative tables of native and alien population. It is a book not only of considerable importance for today, but for our dubious tomorrow." Hassoldt Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 24:15 J1 12 '41 600w

"A valuable report on a little known region." A. H. Compton & others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:1 J1 '41 1000w

KEITH, ARTHUR BERRIEDALE. The constitution of England from Queen Victoria to George VI. 2v 485;515p $7.50 (30s) Macmillan

342.42 Great Britain—Constitution. Great Britain—Constitutional history. Great Britain—Politics and government [40-12241]

"These two new volumes cover the events of the same period as that dealt with in Professor Keith's book on the British Cabinet System, 1830-1938 which was published last year. But the new book includes a description of the functions of the executive departments of the central government of England and of the judiciary, as well as a brief review of the functions of Parliament, the political parties, the rights of the citizen, and the relation between the state and different religious organizations. The author has deliberately omitted any treatment of local government." Ethics

"There is some treading on highly controversial ground, notably in the discussion of the King as guardian of the constitution. . . But what is incidental in the book should not be stressed at the expense of its essence. This is an important work, packed with reliable information and contributing materially to a better understanding of the English system of government as it existed on the eve of the present war." R. L. Schuyler

+ Am Hist R 47:120 O '41 700w

Reviewed by J. A. Fairlie

Am Pol Sci R 35:362 Ap '41 430w

"The admiration of all scholars for the learning and industry of Professor Keith should be greatly increased by these two volumes. His studies of British government in the dominions have already made him a recognized authority on constitutional law and on the working of modern government." C. D. Burns

+ Ethics 50:472 J1 '40 1000w

"In such a wide sweep of material, opinions must differ as to treatment and emphasis. For myself, I miss, in spite of the author's apology, a survey of the law of municipalities or local governments; and I should have wished, for example, a deeper discussion of the law of the press flowing from Hulton v. Jones, and the law of public meetings as illustrated in Thomas v. Sawkins. . . The style is clear if undistinguished, and criticisms are inoffensive if sometimes pungent. The index and facilities for references are, as we have learned to expect from Professor Keith, first-class, and bear witness once more to his high sense of responsibility to his readers." W. P. M. Kennedy

+ Harvard Law R 55:317 D '41 800w

"This is indeed much the best book that Professor Keith has written since 'Responsible Government in the Dominions.'" W. I. Jennings

+ Manchester Guardian p3 F 16 '40 900w

Reviewed by H. J. Laski

New Statesman & Nation 19:180 F 10 '40 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p90 F 17 '40 800w

KEITH, HAROLD. Sports and games. 292p il $2.50 Crowell

796 Sports. Games (W) 41-7426

"A general treatise on the history and technique of all kinds of games, including the minor as well as the major sports and field and track events and not omitting the new six-man football." (Christian Century) Index.

Booklist 37:461 Je 1 '41

Christian Century 58:500 Ap 9 '41 30w

"Illustrated by photographs and provided with a good index, the book is of excellent practical value." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:210 My '41 60w

"A readable as well as a practical book." Maude Adams

+ Library J 66:404 My 1 '41 120w

KEITH, HAROLD—Continued

"A book on sports and games that is out of the ordinary and more than usually interesting. . . . This is a book that school and public libraries will certainly want to add to their shelves and one that adults interested in tennis, badminton and other games will find extremely useful." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p8 J1 13 '41 160w

Wis Lib Bul 37:136 J1 '41

KELIHER, ALICE VIRGINIA, ed. Household workers [by the] Picture fact associates. (Picture fact bks) 56p il $1 Harper

647.2 Servants. Home economics (W) 41-13145

Vocational study for those interested in household employment, showing how to prepare for and secure a job, the best methods to use for various parts of the work. Places emphasis on the dignity of the work. Illustrated.

Booklist 38:37 O 1 '41

"Attractive pictures and well-informed, sensible, up-to-date information."

+ J Home Econ 33:484 S '41 70w

"I know of no other book on this subject which gives the feeling that there is a dignity to work about the house." J. F. Carter

+ Library J 66:736 S 1 '41 60w

Wis Lib Bul 37:159 O '41

KELIHER, ALICE VIRGINIA, ed. Railroad workers [by the] Picture fact associates. (Picture fact bks) 56p il $1 Harper

656 Railroads—Juvenile literature (W) 41-14639

General information on the opportunities for young people in railroad work. Descriptions of round houses, yards, offices, and operating details are given.

Booklist 38:37 O 1 '41

Reviewed by J. F. Carter

Library J 66:736 S 1 '41 60w

Wis Lib Bul 37:159 O '41

KELLAND, CLARENCE BUDINGTON. Scattergood Baines pulls the strings. 305p $2 Harper

41-51633

"In these sixteen stories, Scattergood employs his good offices and his native good sense in characteristic fashion. He dabbles in politics and big business, solves a millionaire's problems, promotes romance, buys a church, exonerates a collier accused of sheep killing and foils a pair of bank robbers." Books

Booklist 37:387 Ap 15 '41

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p18 F 23 '41 240w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p18 Mr 9 '41 230w

Wis Lib Bul 37:93 My '41

KELLAND, CLARENCE BUDINGTON. Silver spoon. 294p $2.50 Harper

41-51909

Ogden Pieter van Stael had never done a stroke of work in his life, because he had always had money and to spare. The morning after his twenty-sixth birthday he awoke to find himself penniless, even his identity was lost to him. But as Peter Vann he made a new life for himself—with the assistance of one truck driver and his indomitable grandmother, and one small red-headed dancer.

Booklist 38:52 O 15 '41

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p16 S 21 '41 270w

"Whether you believe it or not, it makes a fast-moving, entertaining story. Romance with the pretty redhead and the clearing up of that little murder matter help to keep things lively in this sterling 'Silver Spoon' success story."

Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p26 S 28 '41 370w

"A first-rate Kelland yarn."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 21 '41 180w

Wis Lib Bul 37:202 D '41

KELLOGG, CHARLES EDWIN. The soils that support us. 370p il maps $3.50 Macmillan

631.4 Soils (W) 41-16797

"A simple and popular book for the layman by a government soils expert and author of several scientific papers. Explains in interesting manner the origin of soils, their formation, chemical make-up, soil types, soil conservation, and classification of soils." (Library J) Glossary. Index.

Booklist 38:48 O 15 '41

Reviewed by E. D. Hart

+ Library J 66:614 J1 '41 80w

"The middle chapters deal with Kellogg's specialty, soil genealogy. Here the account at times may seem to the layman to become involved as a Virginian's account of a second cousinship; and for all of Kellogg's valiant seeking to avoid mere erudition, a good deal of many-jointed nomenclature gets in. They are fascinating words, however. This book is good writing, all of it—stimulating, strong. In most ways it is the best general book on soils that I have ever read and it grows as it goes along." Russell Lord

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:14 O 4 '41 650w

"The soils that support us are the products of different combinations of rock, climate, slope, vegetation, and time." And Mr. Kellogg, chief of the soil survey division of the Department of Agriculture, is the man to explain the soils and how they are used. In a book filled with useful knowledge, he undertakes this task."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:4 S '41 360w

Wis Lib Bul 37:174 N '41

KELLY, JUDITH. Marriage is a private affair. 359p $2.50 Harper

(W) 41-14433

When Theo Scofield married Tom West, tho she had seen unhappy marriages enough, she believed that theirs would be ideally happy. But the psychology of the times, and Tom's absorption in business, make Theo restless and unhappy, she takes a lover, and then finds to her dismay that she has wrecked something very precious. It takes a near calamity to set things right in the end.

Reviewed by R. M. Gay
Atlantic O '41 200w

Booklist 38:35 O 1 '41

"Miss Kelly can write; there is no mistake about that. Her theme, the first difficult years of marriage, is interesting; her plot, the crisis in the lives of two young people, is honest and realistic; her characterization of the main actors in the drama, with small exception, is excellent. So good is the pattern and the craftsmanship that this, in fact, adds to the sense of disappointment which slowly rises as the book progresses. Subconsciously, in reading a book that has received a high award, one's critical demands are sharpened; one expects more than a good book. 'Marriage is a Private Affair' is good; it is not great." Rose Feld

+ — Books p5 Ag 24 '41 800w

"It is all done so convincingly, if unevenly, that one shudders for the future of the American family."

Commonweal 35:78 N 7 '41 130w

"'Marriage is a Private Affair' is the new Harper Prize Novel and carries on its jacket the endorsements of Clifton Fadiman and Josephine W. Johnson, who are appropriately Harper Prize judges ('precise,' 'searching,' 'distinguished,' 'warm,' 'absorbing,' and so on). Frankly, I think someone has sold them a dead pigeon. . . . Whatever the subjects touched upon, 'investigation' can go no deeper than the characters created; and the people of the book are standard-type at best, at worst purely convenient. As far as they go, the study is competent and sensible, though occasionally stuffy. As far as the reader goes, the writing has no felicity, the development is tedious, and its color is that of the Betterment book. The title is still right." Otis Ferguson

— + New Repub 105:284 S 1 '41 270w

"On the face of it, this story may seem a little hackneyed and more than a little naive. It is such an old, old tale and such a familiar one. Miss Kelly, however, has told it in terms which are so completely contemporary, has endowed it with so much freshness and sensitiveness and genuine intuition that it has the shock of truth and novelty." E. H. Walton

— + N Y Times p7 Ag 24 '41 950w

"Miss Kelly comes to no sensational conclusions about marriage and love and adultery and rounds off her story with a stock ladies'-magazine happy ending. Except for this sentimental finish, however, she writes with warmth, precision, and even elegance." Clifton Fadiman

— + New Yorker 17:64 Ag 23 '41 200w

"The overtones of 'Marriage Is a Private Affair' are those of intelligent and adult fiction. The background of Boston with its Marquands and Rover Boys, its Italians and Poles, its labor racketeers and idealists, its Back Bay and slums is correctly drawn. . . . The ludicrous ritual and pageantry of fashionable weddings are described with playful irreverence; cocktail hours and talky dinners among the intellectuals result in delightful stretches of Behrman-like patter." E. A. Cordell

— + Sat R of Lit 24:10 Ag 23 '41 400w

— Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 24 '41 500w

Time 38:79 Ag 25 '41 400w

Wis Lib Bul 37:156 O '41

KELLY, THOMAS RAYMOND. A testament of devotion; with a biographical memoir by Douglas V. Steere. 124p $1 Harper

242 Spiritual life, Friends, Society of

41-11385

The author of this book was a Quaker philosopher and teacher who held posts at Earlham College, the University of Hawaii, and Haverford. He died early in the winter of 1941. This book contains five essays on religious themes. There is a biographical memoir by Douglas V. Steere.

"If this does not ultimately rank among the few great and undying books of devotion, it will be only because it is lost to view among the multitude of good but lesser books. That should not be allowed to happen."

— + Christian Century 58:807 Je 18 '41 110w

"Five very excellent addresses of a devotional character by a young Quaker, deceased. Half of the little book is taken up by a biographical memoir, needless in character or place, for the excellence of the essays should speak for themselves." A. L. B.-C.

— + Churchman 155:34 S 1 '41 30w

Reviewed by R. E. Keighton

Crozer Q 18:349 O '41 400w

KELLY, WALLACE MCELROY. Days are as grass. 483p $2.75 Knopf

41-19191

Character study of Flora Evans, who began her life as a pampered Kentucky belle, and ended as the wife of the Evans' caretaker, Pick Hayden. The intervening years were filled with hardship and heartbreak—the suicide of her beloved father, the death of her only sister, her mother's insanity, and the loss of most of her friends. The time is the years following the Civil war.

"'Days Are As Grass,' has a great deal to recommend it as a first novel. . . . While the essentials of Mr. Kelly's story come clear, the book as a whole suffers from irregularity in technique and direction. The fault lies not so much in Mr. Kelly's abilities as in the ambition of his effort. A much more mature novelist would find himself challenged by the breadth of scene and the complexity and number of human relationships Mr. Kelly has assayed. And one does not forget his portrait of Pick Hayden." Rose Feld

— + Books p7 N 9 '41 600w

"Well written. Recommended." Katharine Shorey

— + Library J 66:904 O 15 '41 70w

"While I believe the general story to be accurate in relation to the general trend, the long list of people who were born mean or turned mean provides a monotony of darkness which the few actual happenings of the story cannot dispel. The background stuff is good, when there isn't too much of it; and the book was planned and written with every care save for the reader. For the reader, it doesn't come to life and takes forever doing it." Otis Ferguson

— + New Repub 105:898 D 29 '41 220w

"'Days Are As Grass' strikes me as an overlong, slow-moving and not wholly convincing book, which is undeniably well written but which promises rather more than it performs." E. H. Walton

— + N Y Times p6 N 30 '41 750w

"The whole story is romantic and ably done."

— + New Yorker 17:95 N 8 '41 90w

"If Mr. Kelly's future is as bright as this book makes it seem, my guess is that biographers and reviewers in years to come will say his finest mastery was of the element of time. For in this first book it passes in a most convincing way, not marching, but accumulating, not in inconceivable centuries or in the smothering seconds of the stream-of-consciousness style, but in measures best described as monthly. Months that make seasons of which the author is finely aware both indoors and out." J. T. Graves

— + Sat R of Lit 24:14 N 29 '41 500w

"If the purpose of a book review is to lead the gentle reader into green pastures, then may this one send you at once to whatever bookshop you are wont to frequent or to that library where you browse for reading matter in search of 'Days Are as Grass.' . . . If it does not lead you in the paths of righteousness at least it will restore your soul. Few of the recent novels afford the reader the keen sense of catharsis that comes as one closes the pages of this first novel by a young man in his thirties." E. Y. M.

— + Springf'd Republican p7e N 16 '41 360w

KELSEY, ERWIN BURR, and DIETRICH, HAROLD GLENN. Fundamentals of semi-micro qualitative analysis. 350p il $2.75 Macmillan

544.8 Chemistry, Analytic—Qualitative. Microchemistry 40-10506

"A technical treatise designed to illustrate experimentally the principles of solution equilibria and the properties of ions. The technique employed differs from macro procedures by a reduction in size of apparatus and the use of centrifuge to replace filtration. The authors presuppose a knowledge of general chemistry. The work contains an appendix of useful information as reagents and test solutions, list of apparatus, solubility chart, and logarithms of numbers." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

KELSEY, E. B.—Continued

"This book definitely smooths the way for the teacher who wants to adopt the semimicro method without benefit of much experience."

D. H. Andrews

+ Am Chem Soc J 63:884 Mr '41 430w
N Y New Tech Bks 25:33 Jl '40

KELSEY, VERA. The owl sang three times.
274p $2 Doubleday

41-5980

Detective story.

"Readers may well concentrate upon the tropical background as they absorb this so-so story of murder in the stylish foreign colony of Rio de Janeiro." Will Cuppy

Books p20 Ap 20 '41 120w

"The setting of this tale is beautifully done, but the plot is much too confused." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p23 Ap 20 '41 200w

"A beautiful woman from Wisconsin brings murder to the foreign colony in Rio de Janeiro in this story of emotional conflicts and quarrels in the coffee industry. Recommended."

+ New Yorker 17:91 Ap 19 '41 50w

"Commendable."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 My 3 '41 20w

KEMLER, EDGAR. The deflation of American ideals; an ethical guide for new dealers. 184p $2; pa $1.50 Am. council on public affairs

973.917 U.S.—Politics and government. U.S.—Economic policy. U.S.—Foreign relations 41-6585

"The three main sections of this rather original book, described as 'An Ethical Guide for New Dealers,' deal with deflation in moral content, economic policy, and foreign policy. The author's belief is that we have a great advantage over the generation which undertook to make the world safe for democracy in that New Deal reform and New Deal foreign policy, in a pretty thoroughly debunked world, rest their case 'not . . . on man's concern for his moral virtue, but on the selfish interests of millions of organized workers and less organized farmers and consumers.' We thus have a good chance of avoiding the emotional reaction which led us back to 'normalcy' and isolation." Nation

"This sprightly volume of stark realism will probably meet with considerable favor among the more intellectual supporters of the New Deal Administration. At the same time, it may be quoted in the hinterlands as proof of the amorality of the New Dealers. Although students of American politics and political theory may object to some of the author's generalizations and question his low estimate of the weight of moral forces in public affairs, they will read his stimulating volume with profit." C. O. Johnson

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1005 O '41 450w

"Unfortunately the author's superior, smart-alecky manner alienates sympathy. It suggests a lack of psychological wisdom, of an adequate understanding of the character and function of 'inflation' in the mental life, and of its dynamic import in morale." H. M. Kallen

Ann Am Acad 217:172 S '41 400w

Nation 153:126 Ag 9 '41 120w

KEMMERER, EDWIN WALTER. Inflation and revolution; Mexico's experience of 1912-1917. 173p $2.50 Princeton univ. press [11s 6d Oxford]

332.5 Money—Mexico

40-9995

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"The latter part of the book reviews the effect of the confusion in the exchange medium on the economic life of the republic. Satisfactory statistics are seldom at hand for periods of economic confusion such as these, and they were not available in this case. Dr. Kemmerer has succeeded nevertheless in assembling materials which demonstrate again the highly irregular rise in commodity prices which accompanies inflation, the lag in adjustment of wage levels, falling of tax yields and the difficulties of adjustments in long-time contracts. These reviews make his volume a valuable case study of the far-reaching damage to economic life which accompanies increasing reliance on paper currencies." C. L. Jones

+ Am Econ R 31:178 Mr '41 600w

"Although Professor Kemmerer describes a troubled period when many records were destroyed and others not compiled, he has constructed a clear, concise, and authoritative account of interesting attempts to finance government by means of the printing press. The book should contribute to a better understanding of the dangers of inflation in this country." E. L. Bogart

+ Am Hist R 46:734 Ap '41 210w

"In this work Professor Kemmerer makes another addition to his already imposing list of studies of monetary systems. His task in this case is an especially difficult one. Few financial records were kept, and many of these were lost or destroyed in the course of the revolution. Reliance must be placed upon the observations of people living in Mexico at the time. Almost no price data are available, and figures for the supply of money are fragmentary. Thus there is little definite evidence to guide the interpreter through the confusion created by the revolution. Nevertheless, Professor Kemmerer presents a fairly clear and rather interesting narrative of the period. . . . Professor Kemmerer's book is replete with points fairly begging for analysis. Almost every page calls attention to a problem which might be investigated and some relevant information for monetary theory extracted. But aside from a brief mention that the inflation of price is explained by the demand and supply of money, the book is almost devoid of explanations. This neglect seriously detracts from the usefulness of the book for students of monetary affairs." Earl Rolph

+ — J Pol Econ 49:296 Ap '41 650w

KEMPTON, KENNETH PAYSON. So dream all night. 296p $2.50 Putnam

41-5221

Oliver Richmond, an English instructor at Harvard, and his attractive wife, Kent, are the central characters. The story is of their struggle, with a small salary and a growing family, to make ends meet during the 'twenties and 'thirties.

"'So Dream All Night' is primarily the story of a man's reluctant surrender of youthful ideals and enthusiasms, and his eventual acceptance of whatever middle-aged compensations life portions out for him. It is written with quiet sincerity and a certain wry humor." Lisle Bell

+ Books p11 Ap 20 '41 440w

"Just where this tale leaves us and just how successful Mr. Kempton's novel is, are difficult things to decide. Mr. Kempton does very well with Oliver and Kent and Carol so far as he goes. The one trait that Oliver seems to possess above all others is a kind of weak tolerance. . . . Such a book may not satisfy many of the alleged victims of the alleged axe at Harvard, but it is such a book—rather sad and rather meek—that Mr. Kempton has written." G. K. Smart

+ — Boston Transcript pl Ap 26 '41 550w

"The naturalness and homeliness of the incidents, the quiet humor and gentle irony of many of the situations, and the excellence of the dialogue which individualizes the characters mark this as a story that will appeal to readers whose taste runs to fiction that faithfully reflects some aspect of the contemporary scene." Drake De Kay

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 13 '41 600w

"A familiar enough situation. Mr. Kempton is frank about it and also friendly and readable."

+ New Yorker 17:91 Ap 5 '41 50w

KENDERDINE, JOHN DONALD. Your year in the army; what every new soldier should know. 204p $1 Simon & Schuster 355.12 U.S.—Army—Military life

(W) 40-27809

This book attempts to give "a glimpse of army life as an infantryman sees it. . . This book is an informal and unofficial footnote to [certain official] publications [of the War department]. It describes for the civilian soldier in everyday language the homely details which no textbook contains, but which are important because they form the pattern of army life from day to day." (Pref)

Booklist 37:148 D 15 '40

Spring'd Republican p7e My 11 '41
170w

KENDRICK, BAYNARD H. The odor of violets. 310p $2 Little 40-31631

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p13 F 2 '41 90w

"Herein, Baynard Kendrick has managed the first really convincing story of spies in the United States to appear since goodness knows when. Captain Duncan MacLain is a super-detective in spite of (or maybe because of) the fact that he is blind. The chase, which moves from New York to Connecticut is awfully exciting and at the same time very clear. Good stuff." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 8 '41 60w

Reviewed by Mort. Post

New Repub 104:350 Mr 10 '41 60w

"The bafflement in this tale is enhanced by the difficulty that the reader will find in deciding which of the characters are foreign agents and which are working in the interest of world sanity. Most readers will probably find the plot just a little too complicated." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p24 Mr 23 '41 140w

"Judged either as detective story or spy thriller this has everything it takes to make gorgeously shiversome entertainment."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:19 Ja 25 '41 40w

KENNARD, JOSEPH SPENCER. Literary history of the Italian people. 418p $5 Macmillan 850.9 Italian literature—History and criticism. Italy—Civilization 41-8097

Survey of the history and literature of the Italian people, from the eleventh century to the present. The author attempts to reconstruct the story of the rise of modern Italy from the various elements which made up ancient Rome. No index.

"Mr. Kennard insists that his Literary History of the Italian People is to be taken as exactly what the title implies—a history of the people as revealed in their literature, not a history of Italian literature. Insofar as the distinction is valid—and the more one thinks of it the more tenuous it becomes—it appears to this reviewer that the author might more properly make the opposite claim. His book has great merit as a history of Italian literature. . . As a history of the Italian people, however, it leaves much to be desired. There are too many unsupported opinions on controversial points, too many sweeping generalizations without citation of confirmatory data, and too many statements of alleged fact which are open to question on the basis of modern investigations. Fortunately the organization of Mr. Kennard's book is such that its usefulness is by no means destroyed by this characteristic." W. E. Garrison

+ — Christian Century 58:563 Ap 23 '41
400w

"Unfortunately the book presents a melodramatic and not reliable treatment of this important and serious matter; the author opin-ionated and partisan; the book written with an air of conscious animosity toward the Church and with favor toward the fascist régime. Has practically nothing on the twentieth century; fails to mention Croce, Gentile, Varisco, Aliotta, Pareto, Mosca, Gemelli, De Sarlo, Sturzo—just to name a few who have greatly influenced twentieth century Italian life. His discussion of some of the authors, makes one wonder if he has read their works."

— Commonweal 33:549 Mr 21 '41 240w

"It is a job well done—even if some of the chief intellectual actors of later days, like Croce, Orian, Gentile, Mosca, Pareto and Pirandello, are not allowed to make any appearance or play their part on this vast historical stage. Other great names are also missing from these pages, or are barely mentioned. . . It is a pity that this otherwise commendable and valuable study was not supplied with an index to proper names and works cited in the text—an omission which we hope will be remedied in subsequent editions, since it seriously impairs the book's worth as a reference work." Dino Ferrari

+ — N Y Times p8 Ap 20 '41 1000w

KENNEDY, EDWARD D. The automobile industry; the coming of age of capitalism's favorite child. 333p $3.50 Reynal

338.4 Automobile industry and trade

(W) 41-9622

With emphasis on the business and economic aspects of the story the author tells in semi-popular style the story of the development of the automobile industry from 1900 to 1940. Index.

Booklist 37:510 Jl 1 '41

"If Mr. Kennedy had emphasized the hazards to our liberties of great economic power with consequent political power concentrated in the hands of a few men, he might have produced a thoughtful, arresting, perhaps even disturbing book. But Mr. Kennedy has discussed the development of an industry over a period of fifty years, with a wealth of available source material and shown little understanding of the significance of the facts about which he writes. The only explanation this reviewer can find for Mr. Kennedy's attitude is that he didn't like capitalism and tried to prove that 'capitalism's favorite child' grew up to become a monopolistic hussy." Emmet Crozier

— Books p6 Jl 6 '41 900w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '41

"Despite anti-management bias, Mr. Kennedy's study of the growth of large-scale enterprise makes recommended reading."

Management R 30:235 Je '41 300w

"Mr. Kennedy's book is of most value in its depiction of the way in which American manufacturing genius was able to meet a demand for motorized transportation which, once tapped, expanded at a rate that might almost be termed magical. It is of least value in its discussion, from a strong ex parte labor angle, of the processes of unionization in the industry and the recent era of major strikes. Taken as a whole, however, the book is a distinct addition to the literature of the revolution in our way of life which has followed, as a necessary corollary, putting the nation awheel." R. M. Cleveland

+ — N Y Times p26 N 30 '41 750w

Pratt p15 D '41

Wis Lib Bul 37:135 Jl '41

KENNEDY, MARGARET (MRS DAVID DAVIES). Where stands a winged sentry. 251p $2 Yale univ. press

940.548 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, English (W) 41-61896

Journal kept by the English author of The Constant Nymph, from May 1940 to September of the same year. In it she recorded her way of life, her thoughts and anxieties, and the activities of those around her in those months of England's awakening to her peril. With her three children and the daughter of a friend the author went to stay in a Welsh village, while her London house was being used as a warden's post, and her husband was acting as one of London's air raid wardens. The diary closes with the beginning of the September storms, and the hope of a let-up in the raids.

KENNEDY, MARGARET—Continued

"Margaret Kennedy speaks not as specialist but as a typical sensitive and intensely English woman whose whole being is up in arms against the Nazis. Her journal is full of the color, the humor, and the indignation of the moment. You see the almost helpless fury of the parent and the naive courage of the very young. You feel the new force which is generated, the resolution, as Miss Kennedy puts it, which is 'simply terrific.' None of this shrill or hysterical; all of it set down in the very human terms of an affectionate household." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic O '41 350w

Booklist 38:33 O 1 '41

"For the first time, and with frankness founded on the principle that the truth is always the strongest argument, some one who lived through it tells us now what happened to the English between the surrender of the Belgian Army and the full force of heavy bombing. What happened was transformation. . . There have been times in history when men have transcended mankind. This journal, recording such a time, shows common courage become 'a kneeling angel holding faith's front line.'" M. L. Becker

+ Books p3 S 14 '41 850w

Christian Century 58:1242 O 8 '41 60w

Christian Science Monitor p10 O 25 '41 800w

"The author of The Constant Nymph always wondered what it felt like to live through 'history.' She is doing that now, and telling about it with the honesty of experienced fear, and bewildered anxiety. Everyday people move, talk, joke and sometimes pray, in the pages of this journal-extract, as naturally as human beings can." M. L. Eglinton

+ Churchman 155:19 N 1 '41 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '41

Reviewed by R. T. Manlove

Library J 66:730 S 1 '41 140w

"The romantic preciosity of the author of The Constant Nymph and Escape Me Never and the inverted snobbery of the between-wars English intellectual are discernible here and there, but the book is fundamentally sincere and enlightening. The author says that people in Britain 'have certainly taken life to pieces and found out what it is made of,' and she makes one understand what she means."

+ Nation 153:289 S 27 '41 130w

"Mrs. Kennedy speaks straight out in her diary, she tells of hopes and dreadful moments and faith born again, she hollers when it hurts, and in the end she is so plain honest that the discretions and reserve and Savoy of Mollie Panter-Downes (otherwise a swell reporter and writer) seem to have spared The New Yorker's audience the uncomfortable passion and horror which were the backbone of the whole thing. The title should not mislead anybody: this is a book. It is not thrilling; it is not meant to be. It is the record of someone with a generous concern for the world and its people who has also formed the habit of setting her thoughts in order at the end of each day, with care for the detail, the event, the general meaning." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub 105:482 O 13 '41 600w

"Where Stands a Winged Sentry' has a touch of the spirit in it, yet it is not heroic or 'noble.' It is very simply written, not having been intended for publication. The events it records are not highly dramatic, being, indeed, almost domestic in their quality. But whatever passes through Miss Kennedy's mind . . . is given an increment of richness." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:72 S 13 '41 550w

"The most exciting single incident in the journal is seen in backward glances toward what was almost certainly an attempt at invasion. For the most part, this book's revelation is of little things, quiet people. They are seen with sensitive penetration and thoughtfulness, set forth with reflective clarity, compassion and wit. And they become immeasurably significant and strong." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p9 S 21 '41 800w

Pratt p23 D '41

"This honest bread-and-butter book, without frills, without dramatics, without a single excursion into adventure, tells how a British family faced up to the dark realities of the war during the anxious summer of 1940. . . This is not an important book; it does not pretend to be. Much of it is very trivial. None of it is exciting. But it is human; in a few places it is moving, and in more than a few it shows genuine insight." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 S 20 '41 600w

"When people in the future want to know what Britain was really like between the Nazi invasion of the Low Countries and the great bombings of London, this slightly refurbished journal of Margaret Kennedy is one of the books they will read."

+ Time 38:86 S 22 '41 1200w

"[Miss] Kennedy has done something that every reader of history must with breathless gratitude applaud: she has put into her gracefully unpretentious account of the bitterest and most superb year in Great Britain's history virtually all of the things that most of the world's treasured eyewitnesses of the storied past have fretted posterity by neglecting to mention—that is, the important trivialities that keep body and soul together." Booth Tarkington

+ Yale R n s 31:176 autumn '41 1100w

KENNEDY, MARY. River secret. 203p $2 Dodd
(W) 41-16067

Mystery story for young readers.

"Here is a thriller in good English with good manners. Its basic mystery clears up by page 119, but surprises keep popping, and the last does not explode till almost the last minute." M. L. Becker

+ Books p3 S 28 '41 210w

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:382 D '41 70w

KENT, DAVID. Jason Burr's first case. 276p $2 Random house

41-9781

Detective story.

"We didn't quite gather Dr. Armitage's precise connection with the university or how he got his title—an honorary LL.D., doubtless. May be used for miscellaneous excitement." Will Cuppy

Books p11 Je 8 '41 160w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p13 Je 8 '41 200w

"Quite a lot of book learning in this one, but three corpses should help readers who don't know an atlantid dart from a grapefruit knife."

+ New Yorker 17:79 Je 7 '41 100w

"Archaeological patter novel and interesting. Brusque operative Kent after badly handicapped start does good deducing job. Grade A."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:20 Je 14 '41 40w

KENT, MRS LOUISE (ANDREWS). Mrs Appleyard's year. 195p $2 Houghton

(W) 41-23171

Character sketch of charming Mrs Appleyard, who spent her summers in Vermont and her winters in Boston. Devoted to her husband and four grown-up children, she took life with gentle, but witty understanding. The book follows the Appleyards thru one year, from a happy new year to late Christmas shopping.

"A family narrative which without ever being spectacular steadily enlarges our appreciation of the day-to-day existence, and which in its touches of tenderness and irony increasingly draws upon our affection. Refreshment can sometimes be had in a small container." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic D '41 90w

Booklist 38:131 D 15 '41

"Mrs. Kent may soon sympathize with Mrs. Maxtone Graham, who found her personal presence faintly resented by strangers because she got in the way of Mrs. Miniver. In this record, called a novel but more like the informal essays so well established in American literature, Mrs. Appleyard comes alive with the first sentence and keeps on going after the last page." M. L. Becker

+ Books p2 D 7 '41 480w

Cath World 154:503 Ja '42 180w

"A New Englander herself, Mrs. Kent writes with understanding and discrimination. Everyone will laugh over the Appleyards, and many will cherish the book, especially as containing an authentic bit of Vermont." Thelma Brackett

+ Library J 66:903 O 15 '41 110w

"The book gives a fairly complete picture of Susan Markham Appleyard. Its prime charm lies in its happy family atmosphere of quarrels and quibbling and private jokes, and its easy humor, not whimsical but affectionately sharp." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p7 N 30 '41 320w

"Sometimes witty, sometimes overcute, always domestic. Lavender and old lace, with a touch of salt, and rather agreeable."

+ New Yorker 17:110 N 15 '41 30w

"[Mrs Appleyard is] a charming woman blessed with a keen sense of humor, used to thinking and acting for herself, not the clinging vine but devoted to her family, especially Mr Appleyard. The unmalicious wit of Mrs Appleyard would save any community from stagnation and there is never a dull page in this rambling account."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e N 16 '41 750w

Wis Lib Bul 37:202 D '41

KENT, MRS LOUISE (ANDREWS), and TASHIS, MRS ELIZABETH (KENT). In good old colony times; a historical picture book [with ill. from paintings by Paul Hawthorne]. 100p $2.50 Houghton

974.46 Boston, Massachusetts—History. Boston, Massachusetts—Social life and customs (W) 41-12185

The history of Boston's first two centuries. Colored pictures and accompanying text describe such important firsts as: the first settler; wedding; Thanksgiving; meeting house; great fire; block of residences; theater; pipe organ; public school; fortification; etc. For older boys and girls.

Booklist 38:17 S '41

"It is like a swiftly rolling panorama of a city no one ever found uninteresting, past or present—partly, no doubt, because its past is so firmly integrated with its present. This neat, bright little book will not soon go out of use, and as long as it is used it will be enjoyed." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Ag 24 '41 280w

"Direct and lively in style and accompanied by reproductions of historically accurate pictures in full color, this book supplies a great deal of valuable information, hard to come by without much searching. Although its appeal may be strongest to Bostonians, the fine pictures make it of general interest. Colonial life everywhere had certain likenesses, so wherever children read and study American history such a book of important facts will be welcome for reading and reference purposes. There is nothing like it easily available." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:364 S '41 130w

"The book's appeal and use will be limited, more especially to New England and libraries having an Americana collection. There is no index and the information is scant. There is no mention or credit given to the illustrator except on the book jacket. Examine before buying." E. A. Groves

Library J 66:798 S 15 '41 160w

"Teachers will welcome 'In Good Old Colony Times' because of its accurate picturesque details and its frequent quotations from contemporary records, all of which will help young readers to grasp the problems which confronted the first settlers and their descendants, and to understand why they solved them as they did. . . . While primarily of interest to Massachusetts boys and girls, in other States as well 'In Good Old Colony Times' will prove a useful addition to school and public libraries, and to supplementary reading shelves." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 10 '41 390w

New Yorker 17:146 D 6 '41 60w

KERCHER, LEONARD CLAYTON; KEBKER, VANT W., and LELAND, WILFRED C. Consumers' cooperatives in the north central states; ed. by Roland S. Vaile. 431p maps $3.50 Univ. of Minn.

334.5 Cooperation

41-52611

"In this book, the work of three men who began their studies independently has been combined to produce a highly objective and comprehensive treatment. . . . Professor Kercher describes cooperative development in general, and the factors which give rise to the Finnish-initiated cooperatives of the North Central States. Kebker analyzes the regulative effect of cooperatives on private business and the future possibilities of cooperative societies. The case histories of fifteen typical retail cooperatives and three wholesale organizations are the contribution of Kercher and Leland." (Current Hist & Forum) Selected bibliography.

Reviewed by H. H. Bakken

Am Econ R 31:919 D '41 300w

Reviewed by Edward Skillin, Jr.

Commonweal 34:210 Je 20 '41 550w

Reviewed by Eleanor Van Alen

Current Hist & Forum 52:63 My '41

270w

Management R 30:354 S '41 70w

"Students of the cooperative movement will find in this treatment an interesting blending of the economic and social aspects of cooperation." L. M. Brooks

+ Social Forces 20:279 D '41 440w

"The volume will prove helpful to college and university professors and their classes, to ministers in their work, and to leaders in cooperatives. Though parts of the book are deep because thorough, other parts are not too difficult for use by advanced, superior highschool students." M. E. Mitchell

+ Survey 77:229 Jl '41 250w

Wis Lib Bul 37:134 Jl '41

KERNAN, THOMAS DICKENSON. France on Berlin time. 312p pl $2.75 Lippincott

940.5344 Germans in France. France—History—German occupation, 1940—. World war, 1939—France. France—Politics and government (W) 41-15356

The author was the publisher of the French edition of Vogue, and head of the Condé Nast publications in Europe. For nearly six months, after the occupation of Paris by the Nazis, he tried to get permission to reestablish Vogue, but finally gave up trying. He pictures the effects upon French industries of the German occupation, discussing the fiendish cleverness of the German advance planning, which made their infiltration into French business such an easy step.

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

Atlantic N '41 300w

Booklist 38:8 S '41

"It is a quiet, matter-of-fact book, without a real atrocity story in it, but it is more sensational, because of the big-scale looting it reports, than even the shouting with which the same looting was promised or predicted before it came to pass." Joseph Barnes

KERNAN, T. D.—Continued

+ Books p4 Ag 17 '41 1200w

"Keeping in mind the fact that the author undertakes nothing more than a summary account of an immense and complicated subject, or rather series of subjects, one may confidently present Mr. Kernan's book as, on the whole, the most enlightening and satisfying account of conquered France that has been thus far presented to the English reading public." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 154:113 O '41 1100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '41

"Among the already numerous and constantly increasing number of books written by actual eye-witnesses of the events in Europe, 'France on Berlin Time' is conspicuously useful for American readers, and perhaps especially so for Catholic Americans, for a number of important reasons. In the first place Mr. Kernan, unlike so many of the authors of such records and interpretations, was not a professional journalist or author, although as a writer his natural gift for clear and vivid expression, his literary and artistic and philosophical perceptions are obviously greater and superior in quality to those of the majority of foreign correspondents. Secondly, he knew his France and his Germany far more thoroughly and much more naturally, so to speak, than the great majority of the roving and usually superficial journalists. . . . It is all related calmly, as well as clearly." Michael Williams

+ Commonweal 34:445 Ag 29 '41 850w

Commonweal 34:474 S 5 '41 800w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:377 Ja '42 70w

"The book has a message for America of today. Recommended for larger public and college libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 66:668 Ag '41 110w

Reviewed by Justin O'Brien

Nation 153:228 S 13 '41 300w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 105:345 S 15 '41 320w

Reviewed by Shepard Stone

N Y Times p3 Ag 24 '41 1550w

"A thoughtful and grimly enlightening book."

+ New Yorker 17:55 Ag 30 '41 30w

"It is disappointing that with so much excellent material at his disposal, Mr. Kernan has not succeeded in giving a more living picture of conditions in Occupied France. In his desire to cover not only those subjects upon which he is evidently an authority, but also those of which his knowledge seems relatively limited, he has overreached himself. . . . For a serious book of reference, 'France on Berlin Time' is not documentary enough. For the lay reader its apparent lack of construction will prove annoying. The book contains a number of excellent photographs." D. H. Schneider

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 S 13 '41 850w

"It would, perhaps, be an exaggeration to say that this well-titled book is a 'must.' However, it may be said that one book by a competent individual, who has had direct, personal contact with the business aspects of the German New Order is a 'must' for all Americans, capitalists or workers. . . . There are now available, of course, several such books in addition to this by Kernan. Whether his is a little better or a little worse than the others is not important; it is a good book." George Woodbridge

+ Survey G 30:704 D '41 450w

Wis Lib Bul 37:176 N '41

KERNER, ROBERT JOSEPH, ed. Czechoslovakia: twenty years of independence; chapters by Gerald Druce [and others]. 504p 11 maps $5 Univ. of Calif.

(W) 41-52303

A panorama of the cultural, economic, political, and social development of the Czechoslovak republic. Contents: Czecho-Slovakia, a poem, by E. St V. Millay; The Czechoslovaks—anthropological notes, by Aleš Hrdlička; The Czechoslovaks to 1620, by S. H. Thomson; The Czechoslovaks from the battle of White Mountain to the World war, by R. J. Kerner; The World war, the revolution, and the Peace conference, by R. J. Kerner; What Woodrow Wilson and America meant to Czechoslovakia, by H. A. Miller; The historical roots of Czech democracy, by Hans Kohn; Constitutional and political structure, by M. W. Graham; Parties and politics, by M. W. Graham; Czechoslovakia and her minorities, by J. S. Roucek; The problem of sub-Carpathian Ruthenia, by Oscar Jászi; Agriculture and agrarian reform, by L. E. Textor; Czechoslovakia's economic development and achievements, by Gerhard Schacher; Social reform and social legislation, by Brackett Lewis; Humanitarian progress, by H. A. Miller; The religious situation in Czechoslovakia, by Matthew Spinka; Education in a democracy, by F. H. Stuermer; Czechoslovakia's contributions to science, by Gerald Druce; Czechoslovak music, art, and literature, by J. E. Vojan; Diplomatic origins and foreign policy, by F. J. Vondracek; The Little Entente and the Balkan entente, by H. N. Howard; Hitler and Hitlerism, by H. W. Stead; The road to Munich and beyond, by B. E. Schmitt; Czechoslovak democracy: was it worth while? by J. T. Shotwell; A prayer for tonight, by Karel Capek. Chronology. Index.

Reviewed by Josef Hanč

Am Hist R 47:336 Ja '42 700w

"A tribute of scholarship to a country that has suffered tragedy." A. K. Weinberg

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:385 Ap '41 400w

"It would require cynicism, lack of culture, or bias to read this symposium on Czechoslovakia without recognizing and accepting, at least in principle, that the republic fully justified its existence. The discerning reader, moreover, cannot fail to appreciate the attainments reached despite adverse odds, and to respect the industry, intelligence, and thrift of the nation. While it admittedly remains for the future to evaluate the lesson and to deduce the moral of the case of Czechoslovakia, the present book offers much fruitful ground to the objective thinker." V. J. Fewkes

+ Ann Am Acad 214:227 Mr '41 900w

"Besides being scholarly and useful, the volume is very well written and exceptionally beautifully printed. Thus it will be a pleasure to own this book." Hans Kohn

+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 22 '41 240w

"This excellent compendium on Czechoslovakia, edited by Dr. Kerner of the University of California, is of practical value to us today. Here is a book which sets forth vividly the story of a great little people." E. B. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 F 8 '41 850w

Reviewed by Eleanor Van Allen

Current Hist & Forum 52:62 My '41 300w

Foreign Affairs 19:684 Ap '41 20w

Reviewed by Nicholas Mirkowich

Geog R 31:345 Ap '41 500w

Manchester Guardian p3 My 16 '41 550w

Reviewed by Rustem Vambery

Nation 152:387 Mr 29 '41 1000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p186 Ap 19 '41 850w

"Those who are prejudiced against symposia should not be discouraged from reading this book by the large number of collaborators. The editor has done a remarkable piece of work in planning the volume and in harmonizing the contributions." Otakar Odložilik

+ Yale R n s 30:632 spring '41 1600w

KESSELRING, JOSEPH. Arsenic and old lace; a comedy. 187p $2 Random house

812

(W) 41-51666

Comedy in which a couple of gentle spinster sisters living in Brooklyn advertise for roomers and then quietly murder all the homeless old gentlemen who apply. Their nephew, who imagines himself Theodore Roosevelt, digs the Panama canal in the cellar, and inters the victims of his gentle aunts.

Booklist 37:384 Ap 15 '41

"Nobody should read 'Arsenic and Old Lace' until he has seen the play performed. Then he may read it to recall his happy laughter. It is pure farce, dependent on the unfolding of absurd situations by skilled actors, and its place is on the stage." W. P. Eaton
+ Books p14 Je 1 '41 70w

"Delightful lines and extremely funny. Will likely be in demand. Recommended for general purchase." George Freedley
+ Library J 66:304 Ap 1 '41 80w

"Very funny, all of this, if you weather the initial jolt of finding murder as one of the comic arts." Lewis Nichols
N Y Times p16 Ap 20 '41 120w
Pratt p16 autumn '41

KETTUNEN, MARIETTA. Fundamentals of dress; il. by the author. 533p $3 McGraw 646 Clothing and dress. Beauty, Personal (W) 41-9144

"The author discusses design, line, color, and fabrics, tells something about the evolution of clothing and present-day tendencies in dress, and, finally, gives practical suggestions for making one's clothes fit one's personality, income, activities, and all the rest—not overlooking the relation of nutrition and personal hygiene to appearance 'from top to toe.' Written primarily for college girls, but interesting and suggestive to any educated woman." (J Home Econ) Index.

Booklist 37:541 Jl 15 '41

J Home Econ 33:486 S '41 130w

Pratt p14 autumn '41

KEY, ALEXANDER. With Daniel Boone on the Caroling trail; il. by [author]. 223p $2 Winston

Boone, Daniel—Juvenile literature (W) 41-1126

Story of the boyhood of Daniel Boone, when he and the youthful George Washington met in the Yadkin River section of Pennsylvania. When Daniel found George he lost his father, and the two youths played an exciting game thru the wilderness, in which their own safety and that of all the English settlers on the border were involved.

Booklist 37:363 Ap 1 '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p16 My 11 '41 250w

"Swift action, strong characterization, and lively style make this story very readable. The meeting between Boone and Washington is pure fiction, the author admits. But it could have happened. Recommended for teen age boys." Marguerite Nahigian
+ Library J 66:143 F 1 '41 140w

"A tale full of suspense and vitality. We don't, as a matter of fact, learn very much about the young Washington here. There are no intimations of his immortality in this slight sketch of a pleasant young man, but we do see Daniel Boone in the making. We see him perfecting his amazing gift of woodcraft, finding his way by instinct, holding to it by superlative hardihood, and we see him falling under the spell of the wilderness, a spell which was to send him up over 'the blue wall' of the Appalachians to leave his mark forever on the frontier." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 Mr 30 '41 400w

KEYES, MRS FRANCES PARKINSON (WHEELER). All that glitters. 820p $2.75 Messner

(W) 41-22518

"The framework of this long and readable novel is Washington, D.C., Paris, Mexico City, and the international scene of the past 15 years. It is peopled with senators, diplomats, newspapermen, débutantes and dowagers. From time to time leading characters keep the story straight by commenting on the current headlines. But [the book] is not at all a political novel. . . . It concerns itself primarily with people rather than with ideas or environment. It is a study of individual loves and misunderstandings, of family and marriage. Particularly of marriage. The domestic scenes are far more important than the numerous social functions." Commonweal

Booklist 38:189 F 1 '42

"Mrs. Keyes's long and close acquaintance with some aspects of Washington life has given her a fund of anecdotes which enliven the story; in an appended author's note she scrupulously acknowledges what fictional use she has made, with appropriately altered circumstances, of actual places, remarks and events. Her pictures of great houses in Mexico, England and Virginia and her descriptions of the hospital at Lourdes and the other glimpses of France all mirror interestingly the wide travels she has incorporated sympathetically in others of her books. Some Washington and home-town circles, particularly any that take the D. A. R. seriously, may find ground for wincing or even outright indignation. If, however, the indignation is at the thought that Washington is like that, the reader should be warned not to take the story with round-eyed wonder. Maybe some of it is, but it doesn't matter." Mary Ross

Books p10 N 16 '41 480w

"Mrs. Keyes manifests all the skill of a born narrator to carry her heroines and the numerous male members of the cast through years of hope and disillusionment, sacrifice and deep satisfaction. It is difficult not to share her interest in her characters, hard not to keep on reading to discover how things turn out for them. 'All That Glitters' is that kind of a novel." Edward Skillin, Jr.

+ Commonweal 35:146 N 28 '41 310w

"Except for an occasional excursion to the American point of view to the continent, and to the exotic medievalism of modern Mexico, the story is set in Washington and the adjoining countryside. There Mrs. Keyes's vital people illustrate the lesson of their epic background: unless golden glitter has a spiritual solvency it is bound to deteriorate. . . . Mrs. Keyes knows how to tell a story, withholding a dynamic alternative to every situation, which creates through 800 pages that suspense which is the paramount need of the largest audience." N. S. Colby

+ N Y Times p32 N 23 '41 650w

"'All That Glitters' is somewhat disappointing. Those who have read and liked her 'Queen Ann's Lace' have anticipated this new novel, especially as it was said to picture Washington social life during the prosperous days and down to the beginning of the present war. But, while the atmosphere of Washington society is given, it is, in truth, a romantic novel much concerned with love affairs of the ordinary sort. . . . If one likes old-fashioned romance, he will like this book. If he is looking for something pertinent about Washington social life, he will be disappointed." M. D.

+ — Springfield Republican p7e N 23 '41 360w

"In spite of its great length and complexity, and although it includes few startling incidents, the story has life and interest: its characters are real and sympathetic, neither blacker nor whiter than people have a right to be, and as they work towards a solution of their troubles they provide the reader with his money's worth of pleasant sentiment as well as solid entertainment."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p5 Ja 3 '42
360w

KEYES, MRS FRANCES PARKINSON (WHEELER). The grace of Guadalupe. 185p il $2 Messner

232.931 Guadalupe, Nuestra Señora de 41-51667

The story of the Virgin of Guadalupe, the patron saint of Spanish America. The author spent several months in Mexico studying old Spanish documents pertaining to the original story of Juan Diego, the poor Indian Christian who first saw the vision of the Virgin of Guadalupe. Bibliography.

Booklist 37:381 Ap 15 '41

"Intended for edification, its literary quality is slight: a simpler, less sentimentalized style would have widened its appeal."

Books p10 Jl 27 '41 220w

KIDDELL-MONROE, JOAN. His little black waistcoat to China; decorations by [the author]. unsp $2 (6s) Longmans

Tale of a Tibetan boy, a yak, and a panda, who went to China to seek the Emperor, but had to content themselves with a mandarin and a princess instead.

"The most artistic, intelligent panda book for the young. . . The large pages give room for great heights; the panda is as droll as he always is, and more dignified than he is often permitted to be. The Chinese costumes, Tibetan animals and scenery, are truthful as well as picturesque; a few droll glances by the animals are the only liberties they take with nature." M. L. Becker

+ Books p14 My 11 '41 240w

"The striking pictures give a genuine sense of place to this appealing and amusing story." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:291 Jl '41 70w

"Lacks distinction in presentation, although the illustrations by the author are interesting. Impractical make-up, recommended only for large collections." Marian Herr

Library J 66:522 Je 1 '41 80w

"The story is a trifle weak in construction, but it is finely phrased and told with the directness and matter-of-factness with which children think of talking animals in a country so strange and far away that it might almost be fairyland. A phrase or two indicate that this is part of a longer saga about the panda, and if so we are willing to hear and see more of him." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p12 S 21 '41 290w

KIDDLE, MARTIN, and ROSS, M. K. The revelation of St John. (Moffatt New Testament commentary) 509p $3.50 Harper [10s 6d Hodder]

228 Bible. New Testament—Revelation

"Mr. Kiddle is convinced that the key to the whole mystery [of the Book of Revelation] is to be found in the simple fact that the writer's interest was, from first to last, strictly pastoral. This is not to deny that John had a taste for the mysterious, or that his visions were marked by that freedom of expression which characterizes all psychic experiences. But it is to emphasize, and that quite rightly, that the author's first concern was to warn and encourage those Christians who belonged to his own day and generation. It is also to make clear, what indeed should never have been allowed to become obscure, that nothing was farther from the author's intention than to make his message meaningless for the sake of intrigue or impressiveness." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by W. P. Lemon

Christian Century 58:1375 N 5 '41 750w

"This latest addition to the Moffatt New Testament Commentary—now almost complete—suffers from an attempt to prove too much. Mr. Kiddle has done very thoroughly the basic work in preparation for his task. . . He has mastered the standard commentaries, in German as well as English. He writes clearly and attractively. And, as a parish clergyman, he never lets himself be absorbed in mere antiquarianism but keeps in constant view the practical needs of his people. But this last quality, admirable in itself, has been carried to excess." B. S. Easton

+ Churchman 155:18 D 1 '41 330w

"This present volume fills a real need. Its chief characteristic is sanity. The author knows all the problems (and most of the answers), but he steadfastly refuses to let himself become sidetracked as to who 'John' was or what '666' might have meant. It is not a controversial volume; never does he attack or ridicule an opponent. He simply disregards the irrelevant, and sets forth what he thinks the message and value of this apocalypse are." M. S. Enslin

+ Crozer Q 18:343 O '41 700w

"A brilliant piece of work of intense interest not only to scholars but to every thinking man and woman for whom the last book in the Bible has always been a mystery. Indeed, the commentary possesses all the advantages of being written by one who is not only himself an accomplished scholar but whose scholarship has been ripened and made serviceable, not by living in academic seclusion, but by the rough and tumble of a large and busy parish."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p112 Mr 8 '41 1600w

KIERAN, JOHN. The American sporting scene; with pictures by Joseph W. Golinkin. 212p $5 Macmillan

796 Sports (W) 41-52016

Articles and occasional verses by the well-known sports writer on the New York Times and star of "Information Please." Illustrations include black and white drawings, large and small, and color plates. Contents: Introduction and allegro scherzo; Boxing; Baseball; The ruler of courts; About horses; The curious game of golf; On the football field; Indoors and out.

Booklist 38:127 D 15 '41

"This book, though by no means even a reasonably complete picture of the American sporting scene, is in the main pleasant going. Words for the opus are supplied by the good gray bird lover and savant, John Kieran, who generally knows what he is talking about; the pictures, many of them excellent, are by J. W. Golinkin, an artist with naval leanings who, though no George Bellows, still has a feeling for the movement and color of sports. Not a bad team, this, though they have tackled a difficult proposition." Stanley Walker

+ Books p10 D 14 '41 450w

Reviewed by C. W. Thompson

Cath World 154:365 D '41 300w

Commonweal 35:275 Ja 2 '42 70w

"Perhaps one reason why this title remained so long available was that it was difficult to enlist a writer and an artist who were thoroughly familiar with many sports but not submerged in sport. If that was the problem it was solved when John Kieran and Joseph W. Golinkin went to work. . . Their book is handsome and well-balanced." Robert van Gelder

+ N Y Times p11 N 23 '41 480w

"A lively merger of art and athletics. . . First-rate gift book."

+ New Yorker 17:96 N 8 '41 70w

"Most people will like 'The American Sporting Scene.' They will smile at the quiet humor of Mr. Kieran's reminiscences and they will enjoy the dash and color of Mr. Golinkin's pictures. In them the painter shows a versatility rare in a sporting artist." D. C. Fox

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 D 13 '41 600w

"This is a stunning book, packed with interest and beauty; a book which may well occupy a place of honor in the library of every lover of sports and of the American scene."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 9 '41 240w

KIERAN, JOHN. Nature notes; il. by Fritz Kredel. 112p $1.50 Doubleday

574.04 Nature (W) 41-4825

Notes on a variety of natural history subjects—birds, beasts, and flowers—by the editor of the New York Times sports column.

"Whether it be prairie dogs, owls and rattlesnakes or the painted lady, the old squaw duck or the wild mandrake, Mr. Kieran's cuff notes hold us with their guileless simplicity. His is a good book for the bedside table—and even a better one for the pocket." Richardson Wright

+ Books p10 Mr 16 '41 400w

"If you like nature, if you have a curious mind, or if you just like John Kieran, you'll enjoy these delightfully informal essays." H. B. Kane

+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 29 '41 230w
Cleveland Open Shelf p22 D '41

"The language is simple, the approach sentimental and occasionally trite, and the information contributes nothing to the knowledge of even the most casual observer." L. M. Kinloch

Library J 66:139 F 1 '41 70w

New Yorker 17:60 Mr 1 '41 20w

"In this collection of fifty 'nature notes' there is oddity aplenty. But most of all, in every one, there is freshness and true delight."

+ N Y Times p8 Mr 16 '41 550w

KIERKEGAARD, SOREN AABYE (JOHANNES CLIMACUS, JOHANNES DE SILENTIO, pseud). Concluding unscientific postscript; tr. from the Danish by David F. Swenson, completed after his death and provided with introd. and notes by Walter Lowrie. 579p $6 Am.-Scandinavian foundation; Princeton univ. press

230 Christianity

"The Postscript is a sequel to Philosophical Fragments by 'Johannes Climacus,' written while S.K. was still in his pseudonymous period. In it he attempts to render concrete what was expressed in abstract terms in the earlier work. More explicitly, it faces the question, 'How am I to become a Christian?'" (Christian Century) Indexes.

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr

Books p33 N 30 '41 1150w

"The lamented death of Dr. Swenson left the translation of the Postscript incomplete. It was inevitable that the task of finishing it and adding the necessary apparatus for students should have been put into the hands of Dr. Lowrie, and it is fortunate that such competent hands were ready to receive it."

W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 58:1006 Ag 13 '41 210w

KIERKEGAARD, SOREN AABYE (JOHANNES CLIMACUS, JOHANNES DE SILENTIO, pseud). The present age, and two minor ethico-religious treatises; tr. by Alexander Dru and Walter Lowrie. 163p $2.50 (7s 6d) Oxford

204 41-2050

"This is the only formal statement by Kierkegaard of the historical setting of his mission. His analysis of the moral values of the social and political movements of his day offers remarkable parallels, as well as striking contrasts, with the work of Nietzsche, and his attitude has, in some respects, affinities with that of Dostoevski. It is the one work in which Kierkegaard emerges from the isolation of his poetic and philosophic pattern, and as such, it completes the work of The Point of View and of The Journals in introducing him to his readers." Publisher's note

"While only Kierkegaard enthusiasts will savor fully this attack on Danish mediocrity (written in 1846), its brevity makes it a good introduction to the master's point of view. It abounds, moreover, in pungent aphorisms and here and there shows a keen sense of humor." B. S. Easton

+ Churchman 155:20 Ja 1 '41 190w

"This little book is still of interest; for two reasons: it provides a sidelight on the conventional religious position of Protestant Europe in the 'forties (we have plenty of direct lights on this subject, but fewer side ones), and it contains—like all Kierkegaard's books—surreptitious information about his own most peculiar state of mind at that time." Edward Sackville West

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:498 N 16 '40 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p516 O 12 '40 330w

KIERKEGAARD, SOREN AABYE (JOHANNES CLIMACUS, JOHANNES DE SILENTIO, pseud). Stages on life's way; tr. by Walter Lowrie. 472p $6 Princeton univ. press 199.489 41-3527

This translation of one of the works of the Danish philosopher and mystic is divided into three parts. Part one is a memoir of a gay banquet where a seducer, a fashion stylist, a cynic, and others discuss the follies of woman and love. In Part two a happily married essayist explores the ethical side of marriage. Part three is supposedly a manuscript discovered in a lake; in reality it is a diary of Kierkegaard's own unhappy love affair. Index.

"One might wish that Dr. Lowrie could preside over a comprehensive translation undertaking which would make the works of Kierkegaard available to us according to the importance of the various volumes. But piecemeal translations by various authors in various parts of the English-speaking world seem to make such a comprehensive undertaking impossible." Reinhold Niebuhr

Books p17 Ja 26 '41 700w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 58:1006 Ag 13 '41 390w

Reviewed by Wilhelm Pauck
J Religion 21:483 O '41 430w

"This work forms an important milestone on the course of presenting Soren Kierkegaard to the English reading public. Its editor, an acknowledged 'lover' of Kierkegaard, calls it an undoubted work of genius, and even the less enthusiastic must count it among its author's most monumental works; monumental not only in thickness but in dullness, and therefore to a high degree revelatory of the essence of the man." Marjorie Grene

New Repub 104:283 F 24 '41 600w

"Stages on Life's Way is not only one of Kierkegaard's best books but luckily his most interesting to ordinary, unmythical readers. And because his musings on the erotic are so lucid, irreligious mankind will respect this essentially religious thinker."

+ Time 36:88 D 9 '40 550w

KILBOURNE, FANNIE (MRS HENRY ALLEN SCHUBART). But never be denied. 281p $2 Putnam 41-19192

Susan Hewett, a pretty young nurse, had always vowed she did not like easy cases, but she undertook one when she went to care for Margaret Woodward, a wealthy, neurotic, semi-invalid, subject to choking fits. Susan tried to discover what was behind the choking, but it was not until the girl herself was deeply involved with Margaret's attractive husband that the trouble came out.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p16 O 12 '41 260w

KILBOURNE, FANNIE—Continued

"Fannie Kilbourne's insight is keen, and she writes observingly, sometimes with malicious humor, but mostly with warmth and sympathy." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p32 N 2 '41 310w

KILDUFF, EDWARD JONES. Words and human nature: how to choose and use effective words. 171p $1.50 Harper

423 English language—Words. Vocabulary 41-1091

The book's approach is largely psychological. In selecting words to bring about a desired reaction in the minds of readers or listeners, the writer or speaker must make use of his knowledge of human nature. The aim of the book is to show how one may develop skill in the choice of effective words to be used for the accomplishment of utilitarian, rather than literary, purposes.

Booklist 37:319 Mr 15 '41

Books p19 Mr 9 '41 170w

Boston Transcript p1 Ja 4 '41 30w

"Mr. Kilduff has successfully and interestingly presented a brief course of instruction. Numerous examples brighten the text."

+ Springfield Republican p6 F 3 '41 250w

KIM, SAN, pseud. See San, K.

KIMBROUGH, EDWARD. From hell to breakfast. 384p $2.50 Lippincott

41-4263

A Mississippi political campaign in all its phases provides the background for this novel. The chief characters are the boss senator; his wife, who wants a divorce, no matter what it does to the campaign; and his daughter's reforming admirer.

"I do not know that Edward Kimbrough, of Mississippi, is related to John Kimbrough, of Texas, the football phenomenon. . . Edward's raucous, gaudy, bold and bawdy yarn of politics has the vim, verve and vehemence, if lacking the expertness, grace and discipline, of John's play at fullback. Edward is slapdash, a lot of slap and a lot of dash; but he would give a coach the creeps. His title, however, is not slapdash, neither one of those publishers' unhappy inspirations for stimulating trade, but the just, the perfect choice."

F. T. Marsh

+ — Books p2 Mr 16 '41 750w

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 22 '41 400w

"There is a great deal of fresh and vigorous talent in this novel, in spite of its faults of youth and inexperience." Herschel Brickell

+ — N Y Times p7 Mr 16 '41 750w

"First-rate color, and some thoughtful observations on human behavior and the rewards of political power."

+ New Yorker 17:86 Mr 15 '41 50w

"Mr. Kimbrough knows all this sordid business at first hand, and his story has an unmistakably authentic ring. . . There are too many places, however, where the writing is a static monotone. Partly responsible for this is an injudicious use of dialect which impedes the story's progress, and in any case, is neither consistent nor effective. The characterization, too, is weak, mainly because all attention is centered on Gus to the point where his portrait becomes a caricature. The others are sketched in flatly and far too simply to be convincing. Nevertheless, 'From Hell to Breakfast' is a good job of reporting, done with sincerity and vigor." W. J. Gold

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:12 Mr 22 '41 800w

KING, MRS CAROLINE BLANCHE (CAMPION). Victorian cakes. 275p $2.50 Caxton printers

641.631 Cake, Chicago—Social life and customs 41-21635

Imbedded in these sketches of home life in Chicago in the 80's and 90's are recipes for the cakes baked in the family fragrant, spicy kitchen. The recipes have been slightly modernized to take account of the fact that eggs are no longer fifteen cents a dozen, and butter seldom so cheap as thirty cents a pound. Index.

Booklist 38:91 N 15 '41

"A cozy, spicy newcomer to the super-cook-books introduced by Della Lutes. . . This is told affectionately, introducing the dramatic personae of a household of the time."

+ Books p12 O 12 '41 120w

"'Victorian Cakes' is worth reading for the recipes of the forgotten dishes alone, but the easy style, the nostalgic atmosphere, and the gentle humor interest even the reader with no taste for the working side of cooking." R. G.

+ Canadian Forum 21:286 D '41 140w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 D '41

KING, CHARLES DALY. Bermuda burial. 317p $2 Funk, W. [8s Collins]

41-4264

Detective story.

Reviewed by Marian Wiggins

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 1 '41 40w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 19:680 My 25 '40 70w

"The author of this book obviously loves Bermuda, and he has spun a romantic, if not exactly credible, yarn whose action moves up and down and about on that charming isle. It isn't a top-flight thriller, but it can promise smooth enjoyment and clever surprise." Kay Irvin

+ — N Y Times p20 Mr 9 '41 160w

Sat R of Lit 23:18 Mr 22 '41 30w

"Mr. Daly King is one of the few really intelligent American authors of detective stories. Not only does he take trouble over his plots and settings but he avoids the horribly pretentious prose of some of his contemporaries. Not that Mr. Daly King is faultless; his incursions into the realms of psychology sometimes savour of the pretentious, while he shares with most of his fellow-writers of detective stories an inability to write convincing romantic dialogue."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p269 Je 1 '40 280w

KING, DOROTHY N. Find the animals; pictures by Joseph Sica. [24p] $1.50 Harcourt

41-16073

Toy-book with very little text. It shows the animals in their cages at the zoo, and the forgetful keeper who neglected to lock the cages. Then the animals come out one by one, and evidently go into an envelope in the back of the book, from which they may be fitted back into their cages by the very young.

"This is a trick book, a toy with little reading matter, but the trick is so good and so intelligently carried out—and I must emphasize, the book is so durable—that it makes a good investment. . . The animals are strong to stand hard play; they will be used also for circuses, jungles and other plays outside the book." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 S 7 '41 120w

Churchman 155:4 D 15 '41 40w

"An engaging novelty." H. L. Blinse

+ Commonweal 35:111 N 21 '41 20w

"This book should be good for hours of leisure for busy mothers after the first reading if they themselves can keep their hands off

it. . . Sturdily made and with a minimum of text, this book, like Dorothy Kunhardt's 'Pat the Bunny,' is one of those brilliantly simple inspirations which apparently no one ever thought of before. Any one who has ever watched the absorbed passion with which the very young fit things into their proper places can scarcely overestimate its entertainment value for small fingers and eyes; that is, if the adults don't commandeer it first." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p10 S 14 '41 210w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 5 '41 60w

KING, MRS ELEANOR (ANTHONY). Bible plants for American gardens. 203p il $2 Macmillan

634 Gardening. Bible. Whole—Botany 41-21598

Chapters on trees, herbs, reeds and rushes, flowers, fruits and grains, which are mentioned in the Bible, and grow in this country, as well as in Bible lands. Contents: The fig, the olive and the vine; Fruit of the land; Trees of the Lord; A garden of herbs; Flowers of the field; Land of corn; Perfumes and precious woods; Reeds and rushes; Thorns and thistles; To everything there is a season. Index.

"At one of New York's recent great flower shows there was a large exhibit of plants of one kind and another whose names appear in the Bible, and the interest it evoked seems adequate justification for this thoroughly authentic volume. Gardeners with a flair for historical associations will find in Miss King's pages a wealth of enlightenment as varied as it is sometimes unexpected." R. S. Lemmon
+ Books p32 D 7 '41 180w

"Even those who do not contemplate any actual planting will find, in the descriptions and pictures supplied by this well known garden expert, an interesting survey of biblical botany."
+ Christian Century 58:1275 O 15 '41 50w

"This book should be a joyous rest for war-sickened minds. Any ardent garden-lover will find the table of contents as alluring as the most extravagant seedsman's catalogue." M. L. Eglinton

+ Churchman 155:17 N 1 '41 110w
Springf'd Republican p6 Ja 5 '42 420w

KING, GEORGIANA GODDARD. Heart of Spain; ed. by Agnes Mongan. 179p i $3 Harvard univ. press

914.6 Spain A41-4486

"Georgiana Goddard King, distinguished Hispanic scholar, poet and teacher, was working on a book on the little-known architecture of Portugal at the time of her death in 1939; but among her papers was found also the finished manuscript now published as 'Heart of Spain.' The book has been edited and brought out as, in a sense, a memorial to a woman who was a pioneer in her special field of learning. . . . Published now, as written some years ago, it becomes a kind of memorial to Spain as well: not merely a loving monument to the past, however, but a guide to lasting knowledge." N Y Times

"It is a book of exquisite quality, as erudition and insight flow naturally through the channel of a rare mind. One hopes that it may find many appreciative readers at this time."
+ N Y Times p37 N 2 '41 400w

Springf'd Republican p12 O 2 '41 650w

KING, MARY PAULA. Quincie Bolliver. 425p $2.50 Houghton

(W) 41-13060

A Texas oil town is the scene of this story. Quincie Bolliver was twelve when she arrived in Good Union, with her father, an itinerant mule-skinner out of a job. The story is of Quincie's life for the next six years, of her father's second marriage, and of her own marriage to an oil man, altho she herself longed to have a farm and live on her own land.

"The characters in Miss King's fine novel emerge with the essential integrity that is theirs, steeped in the peculiarities of their individual responses to life. Not one of them is a creature designed to be placed on a pedestal of virtue; all of them, from Curtin down to the Mexican woman, have the attributes of splendid humanness." Rose Feld
+ Books p2 Je 29 '41 700w

"Character drawing is excellent and one comes to know well these men who work out among the derricks in Good Union Field and come home at night to the drab life of Judith Paradise's boarding house. The child Quincie Bolliver is more of a person than the young woman who marries Tip Morgan, but her story is readable all the way through. For adults. Recommended." E. S. Brown
+ Library J 66:520 Je 1 '41 60w

"To say that 'Quincie Bolliver' gives an extraordinarily vivid picture of the Texas oil fields is only to hint at its distinction and to make a tepid generalization. Actually, this first novel of Miss King's has a most unusual quality which it is difficult to crystalize or define. For all that it is so real, so detailed, so full of rough vigor, there is something fey and poetic about it which is intimately a part of Quincie's complex character." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p4 J1 6 '41 850w

"If Miss King had given us more talk of such old-time drillers as her reminiscing Nat Patch; if she were more generous with her interesting side excursions into the mysteries of petroleum geology; if there were more scenes like the one in which an oil-well fire is described; in other words, if the author had kept her eye mainly on the oil, she would have written a better, less pretentious novel. The trouble is that her two focuses—oil and her heroine, Quincie Bolliver—are out of relation to each other." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:53 J1 5 '41 600w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét
Sat R of Lit 24:15 J1 26 '41 450w

"Miss King has taken a new field for her novel and she has written about it with simplicity and naturalness. There are no heroics. There is nothing melodramatic. It is rather the almost sordid life of a run-down Texas oil town, and its characters blend with the picture. The book has perhaps no great popular appeal, but it has a distinct literary flavor and is a real achievement as a 'first novel.'" M. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 29 '41 750w

Wis Lib Bul 37:156 O '41

Reviewed by Robert Littell
Yale R n s 31:xiv autumn '41 50w

KING, RUFUS. Diagnosis: murder. 272p $2 Doubleday

(W) 41-726

Six short stories and one novelette, all dealing with cases solved by Dr Colin Starr, physician and criminologist.

"Well provided with shudders and polite bafflement." Will Cuppy
+ Books p15 Ja 19 '41 120w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin
Boston Transcript p2 Ja 18 '41 80w

"All seven of these stories are good examples of the medico-legal type of mystery tale. The novelette is more complex than any of the others and, naturally, the element of suspense plays a more dominant part." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p14 Ja 19 '41 160w

"High grade."
+ Sat R of Lit 23:19 Ja 25 '41 30w
Time 37:76 F 3 '41 30w

KING, WILLIAM PETER. Adventism; the second coming of Christ; with an introd. by Halford E. Luccock. 134p $1 Abingdon-Cokesbury

232.6 Second advent

Study of the theory of the second coming of Christ as evidenced in the various sects which believe in it. "The author uses many scriptural quotations in his arguments against the Adventists, though injecting some philosophy of his own." (Churchman) Bibliography.

"This book has been greatly needed as an antidote to the crude literalism and frantic apocalypticism that are flourishing today as they always do in a turbulent age. And it needed to be written by a man like Dr. King who, together with an ample knowledge of Scripture and history, has the courage to criticize the errors even of the pious and the constructive spirit to make his work a bulwark of intelligent faith. . . . Those who are dogmatically attached to the doctrine of a spectacular and imminent appearance of a vengeful Christ will probably continue in their ways, but Dr. King's book will give comfort to many troubled minds who can scarcely believe these terrible things but don't know what to say when irrelevant texts are quoted in a loud and confident tone."

+ Christian Century 58:1274 O 15 '41 260w

"The book will give the Adventists something more to argue about and the other sectarians a fresh stick in their orthodox hands to best their opponents with." A. L. B.-C. Churchman 155:35 N 15 '41 100w

KINGSMILL, HUGH, pseud. See Lunn, H. K.

KIRKPATRICK, ELLIS LORE. Guideposts for rural youth; prepared for the Am. youth commission. 167p il pa $1 Am. council on educ.

362.7 Youth. Country life. Sociology, Rural 41-51512

"This book suggests steps that communities can take to improve the situation of rural youth. For convenience, the different considerations are presented in the following order: employment, vocational education, general education, recreation, religion, health, home and family, unique older youth programs, and young people's cooperation in well-balanced community activities." (Foreword) Selected bibliography on youth activities.

Reviewed by Read Bain

Am Soc R 6:432 Je '41 500w

Booklist 37:236 F 1 '41

School & Society 52:600 D 7 '40 40w

"Mr. Kirkpatrick should be credited with having assembled a rich and varied selection of examples covering what communities throughout the United States (really the North and West for the South is mentioned only incidentally) have done to solve the youth problem. These examples are presented simply and concisely in that carefully lucid literary style which characterizes the reports prepared for the American Youth Commission. On the debit side of the ledger, it should be mentioned that the usefulness of Guideposts for Rural Youth is limited, perhaps seriously, by the author's failure to provide an index." G. W. Lovejoy

+ Social Forces 20:288 D '41 400w

Reviewed by L. B. Tate

Social Studies 32:189 Ap '41 280w

Wis Lib Bul 37:70 Ap '41

KIRSHBAUM, LOUIS. America's labor dictators. 158p $1 Industrial forum publications, 26 Clinton pl, N.Y.

331.88 Trade unions—U.S. 40-33344

"A biting indictment by a unionist of the management of labor unions. Advocates government control of unions." Social Studies

Reviewed by F. L. Ryan

Ann Am Acad 214:249 Mr '41 450w

Social Studies 32:43 Ja '41 10w

KISCH, EGON ERWIN. Sensation fair; tr. by Guy Endore. 376p $2.75 Modern age

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 42-287

"Memoirs of a rather literary Czech newspaperman who became a specialist in the more recherché crimes of Central Europe (and some very pretty ones, too), broke a half-dozen resounding political stories, and served with the Austrian Army in the first World War, at which point the book ends." New Yorker

"An excellent volume of journalistic memoirs." Beach Conger

+ Books p3 D 14 '41 1200w

"Egon Erwin Kisch can see life and write of it with incisive concentration and romantic allusiveness, tenderness and ribaldry, humor and candor and scorn. In 'Sensation Fair' these qualities are canalized in the presentation of a mind, an ambition, a career, in which contradictory qualities were an asset and wildly diverse incidents a component of professional routine. It is as a whole, thus, that this book is to be read and enjoyed."

+ N Y Times p22 D 14 '41 400w

"A thoroughly delightful job, brightened by the author's sly Czech humor and tender fantasy. Expertly translated."

+ New Yorker 17:106 N 29 '41 70w

"'Sensation Fair' should find many readers in a country which appreciates highly outstanding literary reportage, sharp wit, colorful style, and an untiring eagerness for human-interest material. Mr. Endore's translation can be praised without restriction." H. B. Kranz

+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 D 13 '41 600w

KITCH, KENNETH HAUN (VICTOR HOLMES, pseud). Salt of the earth; with an introd. by William Allen White. 311p $2.50 Macmillan

(W) 41-4265

A story of life in a small American town in the midwest, of the country doctor, the country lawyer, their wives, children and neighbors, of their joys and sorrows and their excitements, and also and chiefly of the experiences of the newspaper man who bought a country weekly and became the country editor who set down these stories of his neighbors.

Booklist 37:387 Ap 15 '41

"This is hardly a profound volume, but it has its moments of unusually sound insight." Stanley Walker

+ Books p6 F 23 '41 600w

"William Allen White, who contributes a foreword, truly says that it might be profitably read by foreigners who want to know what America is like behind the façade of the Atlantic seaboard. It may just as profitably be read by Americans with the same end in view. Besides, it is thoroughly entertaining."

+ Christian Century 58:259 F 19 '41 90w

Christian Science Monitor p18 F 19 '41 490w

Current Hist & Forum 52:69 Ap '41 60w

"Salt of the Earth will be read and enjoyed by numerous city dwellers who remember small towns, and by all who are interested in real people." H. F. Bolman

+ Library J 66:79 Ja 15 '41 190w

Reviewed by R. G. Doyle

N Y Times p4 Mr 2 '41 1700w

"In this fact and fiction combination of a small town editor's story, Victor Holmes, who is both the hero of the tale and its author operating under a pseudonym, has written a warm human story which is not merely another version of the now familiar Country Editor but a vivid report on country town. . . Occasionally the book lapses into a too smart piece of writing, as in the last chapter. . . It does not ring true and ends the book on a false note." Jonathan Daniels

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:10 Mr 8 '41 500w
Spring'd Republican p7e Mr 2 '41 600w

"'Mythical' is the word for the Grand City (pop. 2,000) where the author 'groups' his people. The town itself simply isn't there in terms of substance or color or temper of its own. The people are 'salt of the earth' indeed, but without background or setting they and their stories become curiously synthetic, as though tailored to meet literary expectations." Gertrude Springer

— Survey 77:198 Je '41 250w
Wis Lib Bul 37:93 My '41

KJELGAARD, JAMES ARTHUR. Forest patrol; il. by Tony Palazzo. 293p $2 Holiday

(W) 42-111

"Alleghany back country is the scene of this unusual story of career and character; the hero, a young man, who could not go to forestry school because he was an orphan and poor, but was saving the money he made in trapping, to take at least the one-year course at the Ranger School. His old friend, Ranger of the Rasca district, unexpectedly offers a chance; he is taking a year's leave, and if John can pass the examination, the job of substitute is his. . . It is with game conservation and the balance of nature in the woods that the story is chiefly concerned." Books

Booklist 38:194 F 1 '42

"There is not much quiet in the story, of course; it comes from a convinced conservationist with first-hand experience in work of a state forest ranger, and it gets a great deal of that work into action." M. L. Becker

+ Books p18 N 2 '41 240w

"Good vocational fiction whose forest lore is intrinsic and unforced. For boys thirteen to twenty." Maude Adams

+ Library J 66:954 N 1 '41 80w

"'Forest Patrol' is an excellent story, fresh and unhackneyed in setting and incident, with characters that convince, and so much genuine outdoor atmosphere that it is likely to give any lover of wild, unspoiled country a touch of homesickness." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p9 D 28 '41 440w

KLEFFENS, EELCO NICOLAAS VAN. Juggernaut over Holland; the Dutch foreign minister's personal story of the invasion of the Netherlands [Eng title: Rape of the Netherlands]. 195p $2 Columbia univ. press [7s 6d Hodder]

940.53492 World war, 1939—Netherlands
(W) 40-29985

The foreign minister of the Netherlands, when the Nazi invasion began, describes Dutch policy before, during and after the invasion. The steps which his country took to preserve absolute neutrality, the betrayal, the landing of parachute troops dressed in Dutch uniforms, the five days' struggle, the capitulation, the flight of the royal family and the government officials are all recorded. Includes a chapter on the future of the Netherlands. Index.

"Few men have found a more difficult task; few men, after having gone through such a tragedy, could write about it with such calmness and dignity. Here speaks the typical Dutchman, who did his duty against overwhelming odds and against an opponent who broke all rules of the diplomatic game." S. Van Valkenburg

+ Ann Am Acad 215:191 My '41 360w

"Dr. van Kleffens brings order and clarity into the picture which was conveyed by the confused and sometimes inevitably inaccurate press dispatches of the time." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic F '41 140w

Booklist 37:267 F 15 '41

Bookmark 2:8 Mr '41

Reviewed by Beach Conger
Books p3 Ja 12 '41 1000w

"With characteristic Dutch understatement, he summarizes the record of scrupulous Dutch neutrality and of unscrupulous German invasion. He writes with an almost inhuman control of his emotions, and with resolute abhorrence of sensationalism." Lewis Gannett

+ Boston Transcript p9 Ja 15 '41 230w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Boston Transcript p1 Mr 22 '41 200w

Reviewed by G. M. A. Grube
Canadian Forum 20:354 F '41 360w

"Supposed to be one of the most restrained spokesmen of a people the headline writers like to call 'phlegmatic,' the Dutch foreign minister has produced a dramatic narrative of the Nazi conquest which is at the same time a diplomatic document of first-rate importance." Devere Allen

+ Christian Century 58:186 F 5 '41 1200w

"It is a somber story that Dr. van Kleffens tells with the Netherlands qualities of sobriety, precision, and objectivity. Along with his recital of the facts there is a deep note of moral indignation at the German aggression and the misstatements and false accusations which were invented to justify it. But the note of faith in the final liberation of his country is not lacking." W. H. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 18 '41 550w

Reviewed by J. B. Parrish
Churchman 155:19 Mr 15 '41 150w

"In common with many eye-witness accounts, Juggernaut Over Holland is more or less superficial reporting of the facts, eloquent in themselves to be sure, and it even preserves something of Dutch neutrality. But in a work of this kind, the question nearly always arises as to whether the author is not too close to the actual events to be really impartial. It is somewhat disappointing also not to find a less conventional approach to Europe's crisis on the part of one who has, for a moment, touched its very heart." Margaret Stern

Commonweal 33:426 F 14 '41 350w

"Those who believe that the Nazis and civilized people can live peacefully together in the same world should read this book."

+ Foreign Affairs 19:678 Ap '41 30w

"The author writes dispassionately, admitting mistakes on both sides, but is intensely bitter, naturally, toward the Germans to whom the Dutch have always shown a deep friendship." L. R. Eitzkorn

+ Library J 66:80 Ja 15 '41 240w

"Mr. van Kleffens writes with disarming simplicity and directness. In fact, at times he seems almost too naive to be a statesman. But I believe that this appearance of naïveté arises from his overanxiety to present his story without hysteria or the coloration of propaganda. It achieves the effect of arousing impatience with the apparently blind refusal of the Netherlands government to perceive the real danger." L. B. Bloch

+ Living Age 359:589 F '41 900w

"This book by the Netherlands Minister of Foreign Affairs is important for the authority with which it is written, though on the whole it brings little of what was hidden to light." A. W. J.

Manchester Guardian p7 O 29 '40 490w

"This is the first authentic and comprehensive account of the Nazi invasion of Holland. . . It is authoritative because Mr. van Kleffens has been Dutch Foreign Minister since the summer of 1939 and was a high official of the Dutch Foreign Office for many years before that. But it does not read like an official account. Anybody who has met Mr. van Klef-fens and experienced the extraordinary reserve of this Dutch statesman will be doubly surprised. He tells a vivid story." Bjarne Braatoy

KLEFFENS, E. N. V.—Continued

+ Nation 152:79 Ja 18 '41 1200w

New Repub 104:414 Mr 24 '41 60w

"Here is the story of what happened to a prosperous, peaceful country that tried to live and let live. Here is one of the few important books that has thus far come out of the war." Shepard Stone

+ N Y Times p4 Ja 12 '41 1500w

New Yorker 16:80 Ja 18 '41 60w

"When the historian of the future attempts to write a factual account of the European war which broke out in 1939, he may well find the volume under review to be one of his most valuable sources. Written with feeling but also with admirable restraint, the book covers the international relations and hopes and fears of the Netherlands government from August 1939 through May 1940." W. C. Langsam

+ Pol Sci Q 56:301 Je '41 850w

Pratt p24 spring '41

"The book is a document from which history must gather the makings of its own report for the future. It is drama of the very first order. It moves with the austere fatality of a Greek tragedy... I don't see how anyone who thinks it worthwhile to have a clear picture of what happened in Holland can fail to read this book." Lawrence Farnsworth

+ Sat R of Lit 23:13 Ja 18 '41 750w

Social Studies 32:144 Mr '41 20w

"Of manifest importance as history, and history written with admirable balance and restraint on the basis of intimate first-hand knowledge, this is a narrative of engrossing interest, moving as a record of the tragic sufferings of a peaceful and courageous people, inspiring in the faith it evinces in the future both of Holland and of the democracies on whose fortunes hers depend." Wilson Harris

+ Spec 165:420 O 25 '40 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p538 O 26 '40 900w

"It is a very readable book, and it is the sort of thing you should read for yourself. Not to bewail the fate of the Netherlands but rather to understand what will happen to us over here if we continue to fight the Devil with pretty words and refuse to face certain facts which are being shouted at us from the ruins of every despoiled European city—because 'it never can happen here!'" H. W. van Loon

+ Yale R n s 30:617 spring '41 1050w

KLEIN, ABRAHAM MOSES. Hath not a Jew. . . foreword by Ludwig Lewisohn. 116p $1.50 Behrman's

811

40-12467

"The poetry of Abraham Moses Klein springs from the roots of a consciousness where Hebrew and legal lore have become strangely and exotically intermingled with Shakespeare and T. S. Eliot. Mr. Ludwig Lewisohn, in a preface to these verses, calls him 'the first Jew to contribute authentic poetry to the literature of English speech.'" Poetry

"Mr. Lewisohn does well to praise 'Hath Not A Jew,' but he praises it for the wrong things. In polished and mordant satire, dancing wit, metrical versatility and originality of metaphor, this is one of the finest volumes of verse ever written by a Canadian of whatever race. But it is where Mr. Klein is striving most to be 'Jewish' that he is least poetical and most turgid. Having tried 'Hath Not A Jew' on some of my Jewish friends tutored in an orthodox Schule, I find that much of Mr. Klein's obscurity is equally impenetrable to them." Earle Birney

+ Canadian Forum 20:354 F '41 600w

"The collection does Klein a distinct disservice in that it is not sufficiently representative of his remarkable gifts, the gift above all of eloquent rebellion. He quotes Shylock: 'Hath not a Jew eyes? hath not a Jew hands?' without Shylock's fierce defiance, closing his eyes and folding his hands and dreaming sweet dreams of a glamorous ghetto. He forgets that in Shylock there was no 'frozen patience,' for his passion and pride of race burned with a clear, angry, consuming flame. And yet, despite their flaws, these poems are a poetic key to an ancient, deep-rooted, emotional and intellectual tradition. As such they can lay claim to vitality and importance." Leon Edel + Poetry 58:51 Ap '41 700w

KLEINSORGE, PAUL LINCOLN. The Boulder Canyon project; historical and economic aspects; with a foreword by Eliot Jones. 330p maps $3.50 Stanford univ. Press

627.1 Boulder dam. Colorado river 41-6850

"This book deals with the Boulder Canyon Project, the most important step yet taken toward the development of the Colorado River and the economic utilization of the great natural resources of that river's lower basin. . . . Special emphasis is placed here upon the historical and economic aspects in order to appraise the project from an economic point of view." (Pref) The author is assistant professor of economics and business administration at Oregon State College, Bibliography, Index.

"The factual material is well organized to present a general survey of the project with its prospective results rather than a critical analysis of the operating policies now in effect. The book is documented throughout and contains a complete bibliography." C. E. McNeill
+ Am Econ R 31:662 S '41 700w

Booklist 38:4 S '41

Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 14 '41 450w

"Professor Kleinsorge's subject is so rich in incident of national importance that every student of resource development will want to read and refer to the present book."

+ Eng N 127:96 N 20 '41 400w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:38 Jl '41

KLEM, GRACE. Mike and his neighbors [il. by the author]. [28p] 75c Doubleday

41-19431

Story of a little black and white spaniel who made himself very unpopular in his native village, until the arrival of a baby in the family. Then he reformed.

"Turning these pages of cozy pictures in bright colors, what looks like a toy village comes to life. Read the words aloud to a little child as he follows the action in familiar scenes, taking place in just such a small town or suburb as you find anywhere in America. In such a town there is always at least one dog like Mike." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 S 21 '41 130w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '41

KLEMMER, HARVEY. They'll never quit. 321p $2.50 Funk, W.

940.5342 World war, 1939—Great Britain 41-4767

"These Englishmen are tough babies, and don't let any one tell you otherwise." Such is the opinion of Harvey Klemmer, attaché of the American Embassy in London from 1938 to 1941. . . . Here is a graphic and stirring description of what the tight little isle is undergoing and the manner in which its population is coping with a situation that is unparalleled in the history of the world. With all its drama, real and implied, it is yet a heartening picture, and Mr. Klemmer makes the assertion of his title seem entirely credible." N Y Times

"His style is staccato and his book is as swiftly paced as the war of which he writes. It bears evidence of having been hammered into shape against a deadline but that does not blur the picture of Britain at bay or distort the lesson that America must learn from these pages." Frank Kelley

+ Books p2 Mr 2 '41 650w

"Every American will do well to read this book, not only to find out what is going on in Great Britain, but to draw the necessary conclusions for American attitude which are contained in this picture of a war-torn country. The author's own conclusions are set forth with great moderation and with a restraint in style which makes them particularly convincing." Hans Kohn

+ Boston Transcript p1 Mr 8 '41 280w

"'They'll Never Quit' is a good piece of direct, unintellectual reporting. Harvey Klemmer, attached to the US Embassy in London, has the peculiarly American habit of hitting the reader with facts." W. J. Grace

+ Commonweal 34:18 Ap 25 '41 430w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:197 O '41 20w

Living Age 360:199 Ap '41 90w

"The interest of the book for us lies in the fact that its extremely comprehensive and accurate account of what we have done and suffered since September, 1940, is an objective one. It gives us a chance to see what an intelligent outsider thinks of our civil defence, our mental attitude, the social changes which are happening to us, and our chances of victory. The effect on a British reader is stimulating." E. A. M.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 4 '41 150w

Reviewed by E. F. Allen

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 9 '41 750w

Reviewed by Cecil Roberts

Sat R of Lit 24:12 My 10 '41 250w

Reviewed by Francis Williamson

Survey G 30:482 S '41 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p503 O 11 '41 100w

"In these graphic pages yet another American writer pays his tribute to British Fortitude—and as an attaché at his Embassy in London Mr. Klemmer writes with authority on that stormy period when the full power of the Luftwaffe was unleashed against our cities."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p515 O 18 '41 380w

KLEMPNER, JOHN. Another night—another day. 355p $2.50 Scribner

41-5109

The chief characters in this story of modern marriage are Connie Rawlings, a fashion-copy writer with high ideals of marriage, and Dale Edwin, the struggling playwright she married. Dale had as few ideals and morals as any mortal can have and live, and all Connie's efforts could not save their marriage.

"'Another Night, Another Day' is John Klemmer's third novel and his best one. It has his special brand of humor which is good, it has tenderness and sympathy and it carries a four-tiered love story with masterly ease. All his characters are real and all have a spark of individuality which gives force and color to their relationships." Rose Feld

+ Books p2 Mr 9 '41 550w

Reviewed by Ruth Blodgett

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 22 '41 400w

"The Klemmer brand of humor ripples through all the crisp, lively conversation of the story. It is characterized by unexpected twists and the rude bluntness that often develops as a sort of family-talk in a group. You can talk it or you can't, and the Klemmer characters do a good job of it that makes lively reading. . . In the second half the grief seems to be piled on a little too thick for credence and the admirable Hank goes a touch too noble. . . Those who enjoyed 'No Stork at Nine' and 'Once Around the Block' will welcome heartily the latest Klemmer book." Beatrice Sherman

+ — N Y Times p6 Mr 9 '41 950w

"Well-written novel of modern marriage. . . The philandering husband and some of the other characters are interestingly done and the conversation is entertaining and up to date."

+ New Yorker 17:86 Mr 15 '41 30w

"Connie herself, her sister Martha, Martha's husband, Hank Brady, and even Dale's literary agent are warm, believable, likeable people: a little implausibly articulate, but genuine in their hopes and fears and in their behavior toward one another. Dale Edwin, however, the 'creative artist,' is a ludicrously distorted caricature, and one whose falseness does violence to Mr. Klemmer's entire book." Frances Smyth

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:12 Mr 15 '41 550w

KLINEBERG, OTTO. Social psychology. 570p $3 Holt

301.15 Social psychology 40-9846

"The author of this textbook proposes an integration between psychology and social anthropology, with the view 'to effect at least a partial synthesis of the science which deals with culture and the science which deals with the individual' (p.7). He draws from a remarkably wide area of experimental studies in general and social psychology. Throughout this treatise it is abundantly clear that the author, while operating within the framework of physiological and behavioristic psychology, transcending from the animal to the human realm, is nevertheless keenly aware of his proposed task, namely, of dealing with the cultural aspect." (Ethics) Chapter references. Indexes.

"Entertaining textbook which will be welcomed by many instructors as a useful source of ethnological material relevant to social psychology. The extensive references following each chapter will also prove valuable in this connection. As a result of the generous use of facts regarding the manner in which people of different cultures satisfy their motives, express their emotions, use language, perceive and remember events, develop personalities, and come into possession of notions regarding what is normal and abnormal, the book possesses a freshness of approach that is often lacking in texts which confine themselves more strictly to conventional psychological subject matter." Helen Peak

+ Am J Psychol 54:465 Jl '41 700w

"Not only because of its balanced point of view, but because it is one of the simplest, most factual, and most interesting texts available, many teachers will adopt Klineberg as the best didactic guide for their students." G. W. Allport

+ Am J Soc 46:741 Mr '41 700w

Reviewed by T. D. Eliot

Am Soc R 6:451 Je '41 270w

"On the negative side it must be said that this work contributes very little to the development of a more adequate social psychological theory of human personality organization and its functioning in collective life. The treatment is weak and inadequate in many points. . . On the positive side, it must be said that the book brings together for convenient reference more recent materials which support the emphasis on social interaction and cultural patterning. It will be a useful introduction for students who have not had introductory courses covering this material. It is symptomatic of a highly desirable convergence of important frames of reference." L. S. Cottrell, Jr.

+ — Ann Am Acad 216:215 Jl '41 550w

"While there are serious omissions of fruitful areas of knowledge relevant to the problems dealt with in this textbook, it nevertheless presents a suggestive and useful survey of the contemporary literature in the fields of psychology, social anthropology, and ethnology." S. M. Strong

KLINEBERG, OTTO—Continued

+ — Ethics 51:120 O '40 750w

"In this venture Klineberg has succeeded as well as anyone could in the present stage of this developing science. His book is interesting, clear, informing, and challenging. He presents both conclusions and supporting evidence; safeguards his generalizations with scientific caution; states their implications with courage and vigor." S. A. Queen

+ Survey 76:247 Ag '40 300w

KLINGBERG, FRANK JOSEPH. The morning of America. 479p il $3 Appleton-Century
973 U.S.—History 41-6874

A popularly written survey of American history from the time of the French and Indian War to the inauguration of President Jackson. The author is professor of history at the University of California at Los Angeles. Index.

"On the whole the book maintains a high level of accuracy. There is much excellent writing, and the interest of the reader is enlisted and well sustained, in spite of an occasional careless, ambiguous, or obscure sentence. The volume is evidently addressed to the general reader, especially the young one. It will undoubtedly whet the appetite of its constituents for more substantial food." H. C. Hockett

+ Am Hist R 41:423 Ja '42 220w

"Scholarly accuracy of details seems needlessly neglected and vague statements sacrifice exactness without aiding brevity. With no attempt at giving a new emphasis or at including material previously unused, this text will be excellent as collateral reading and probably will have a wider popular appeal than Lundin's or Knollenberg's recent well-documented studies of the Revolutionary period." D. F. Lucas

+ — Library J 66:356 Ap 15 '41 130w

"The breezy, colorful style and apt use of source material will appeal to the young reader, for whom the volume was presumably written. He will enjoy the adventure stories, the apocrypha about our 'great,' and the detailed descriptions of battles. But he will probably be puzzled by the army of names, events, and things that passes in review without adequate identification." S. L. J.

+ — New Eng Q 14:600 S '41 280w

Reviewed by T. R. Hay
N Y Times p16 My 11 '41 480w
Wis Lib Bul 37:153 O '41

KLITGAARD, KAJ. The deep. 365p $2.75
Doubleday 41-5694

Long, romantic tale, told in the second person. It traces the life of a Danish sailor on land and sea during the years 1910 to 1918.

"The Deep' is a singular book, a sad book, but an unusually true and competent book. It reflects with grim reality the chaos in which the world lives today, with multitudes of its finest souls unadjusted to life." Lincoln Colcord

+ Books p7 Ap 20 '41 1100w

"It is a leisurely, sometimes rambling, but always mature and sensitive story that should charm many readers with its humane tolerance and its all-permeating savor of salt, rum, and pitch."

+ Nation 152:648 My 31 '41 90w

New Repub 105:230 Ag 18 '41 60w

"Another novel of the sea, but an original one, a tale of unusual theme and remarkable technique. . . For the novel is written in the second person, an autobiography in which the narrator addresses himself as 'You' and in which his name is never given. It seems incredible, but it is true that the manner becomes easy and natural, is perfectly sustained throughout the long novel; the reader scarcely gives it a thought. The story holds the attention from the start for its easy narrative quality, its variety of characters, its action in incident and episode, its humor and sensibility. But the technique helps in the way of making one conscious of something rather remarkable in the effect as a whole." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 27 '41 1050w

"Though it lacks coherence, it has freshness and is full of wild fo'c'sle tales and heady conversations. It is in the second person plural, which doesn't make for easy reading. Odd stuff."

+ — New Yorker 17:91 Ap 19 '41 40w

"Mr. Klitgaard's story, told in the autobiographical second person—a device annoying at first but cumulatively effective—is round, solid, easy-going, full of a robust friendliness and zest for life." Robert Littell

+ Yale R n s 30:xii summer '41 60w

KLITGAARD, KAJ. Through the American landscape. 323p pl $3.50 Univ. of N.C. press 917.3 U.S.—Description and travel. Artists, American. Landscape painting

The story of a pilgrimage across the United States and back again, in search of regional landscapes and the painters who have put them on canvas. Index.

Booklist 38:176 Ja 15 '42

"Mr. Klitgaard is an excellent raconteur, and he has the eye of an artist for the subtle differentiations in the color and form of landscape. He has written a first-rate introduction to the richness and variety of America; or more precisely, to the numerous little Americas comprising the national unit. But he comes to no definite conclusions, and the major purpose of his expedition—to confirm or disprove the indigenous quality of our paintings—is left in suspension." Thomas Craven

+ Books p22 N 16 '41 600w

"Through the American Landscape is an art book with much quiet humor, philosophy, and human interest to interest those who never read art books." E. P. Potter

+ Library J 66:902 O 15 '41 110w

"There is much in Mr. Klitgaard's book that any one interested in the United States will like. Primarily it is a book for artists, including those artists who paint the earth for themselves with the brush of a clear vision and never put their dreams on canvas or paper." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p6 D 14 '41 1300w

"The truth is that this is a delightful travel-narrative about Kaj Klitgaard, and in it both art and nature serve largely as scenery unrolling behind a swiftly-moving gentleman interested in every aspect of American life. . . We should have a richer American art if all those who paint its varied landscapes should see it with as honest and as lively an appreciation as this Swedish seaman shows." Jonathan Daniels

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 D 27 '41 400w

"Landscapes, natural and painted, occupy less of the book than its title suggests. Mr. Klitgaard visited the art museums and art schools, studios of his fellow artists, public buildings with WPA and other murals and talked with the natives, learned and otherwise, and makes a note of it all. In the course of the book many contemporary artists of the regions traveled, and their work are introduced with suggestive comment, but the author is rather chary of positive criticism."

Springf'd Republican p6 N 10 '41 600w

KNAPP, SHEPHERD, comp. Liberated Bible: the Old Testament. 286p $2.50 Revell
221 Bible. Old Testament—Selections 41-23094

A topical arrangement of selections from the Old Testament. The King James version is used with some changes in names, phrases and illusions intended to make the texts more general in character and not limited to one country and time. The volume is divided into five "books": Human raw material for religion to shape; The happiness of unquestioning faith; An Old Testament wonder book; Groping in the dark; The emergence of a deeper faith. Indexes.

"Such a volume in the hands of the people would go far to create sound and healthful ideas about the Bible, and at the same time to enhance a genuine appreciation." W. R. McNutt

+ Crozer Q 19:86 Ja '42 130w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 11 '42 190w

KNELLER, GEORGE FREDERICK. The educational philosophy of national socialism; pub. for the Dept. of educ. in Yale university. 299p $3.50 Yale univ. press

370.10943 Education—Germany. Education—Philosophy 41-6385

Study of national socialist education in theory and practise, based upon thoro investigation of German documentary sources. It shows that the whole German education system is being warped by a distorted interpretation of the older idealistic educational teachings of the German philosophers who struggled for national unity. Bibliography. Index.

"In its original form, this volume was presented as a Ph. D. thesis to the department of education at Yale University. The result of six years' study, it constitutes a comprehensive and detailed examination of the educational theories of National Socialist leaders—a carefully documented anthology of original source material. It is an unusually competent and much needed contribution to an understanding of the issues involved in this world conflict. Dr. Kneller has not . . . attempted to show how the educational theories actually work in practice. What he has done is 'to present the situation as it is, seen in its own light, and from its own point of view.'" H. L. Childs

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:775 Ag '41 750w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Ann Am Acad 217:170 S '41 440w

Booklist 37:510 Jl 1 '41

Cath World 154:126 O '41 180w

Reviewed by S. B. Barnes
Christian Century 53:861 Jl 2 '41 650w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:201 O '41 20w

"Masterly and enlightening book. . . Should be in the larger public and college libraries." G. O. Kelley

+ Library J 66:263 Mr 15 '41 90w

"Dr. Kneller tries manfully for an objective approach to the educational tenets expounded by the Nazi schoolmen, in this first book of its kind, and has succeeded amazingly well. He has given us a valuable source-book and an irritating reminder of the constitution of the Nazi mind." Pierre Loving

+ Living Age 360:494 Jl '41 450w

Reviewed by Sir Michael Sadler
Manchester Guardian p3 N 14 '41 450w

Reviewed by Guenter Reimann
New Repub 105:29 Jl 7 '41 170w

"There is little effort at dramatization or popularization of the very interesting material which the author has gathered from diligent research in the educational literature of the Third Reich, supplemented by observation of German schools in action. Yet the book is more valuable and informative than many which have enjoyed a wider circulation than this study seems likely to achieve. . . Dr. Kneller has gone about his task with extraordinary and commendable thoroughness."

W. H. Chamberlin

+ Sat R of Lit 23:18 Ap 5 '41 1000w

School & Society 53:424 Mr 29 '41 10w

"One of the great merits of the book is that it is almost exclusively based on original German sources. This is also one of its major weaknesses. The author is led to accept as fact what can only be described as propaganda."

W. M. Kotschnig

+ Social Educ 6:46 Ja '42 600w

Social Studies 32:287 O '41

"The work is heavily documented throughout and there is an extensive bibliography. The latter, nonetheless, shows some surprising omissions for a book published in 1941. Henri Lichtenberger's fine treatise 'The Third Reich' (1937), is not listed among general books on Nazism. Even worse is the neglect of Clifford Kirkpatrick's 'Nazi Germany' (1938), which is one of the more important studies in print on the status of women in the National Socialist system, and which includes much material as to their educational opportunities." D. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p12 My 28 '41 500w

KNERR, HUGH J. The student pilot's training primer; il. by S. F. Knerr. 172p $2 Van Nostrand

629.1325 Aeronautics (W) 41-7736

"This book is designed to present the elements of practical flying to students to the end that they may develop into reliable pilots in the minimum time . . . [and] give the student as much information as possible in the art of flying before it is necessary for him even to get into an airplane." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 37:541 Jl 15 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:35 Jl '41

KNICKERBOCKER, HUBERT RENFRO. Is tomorrow Hitler's? 200 questions on the battle of mankind [foreword by John Gunther]. 382p $2.50 Reynal

940.53 World war, 1939-. Europe—Politics. World war, 1939—U.S. (W) 41-51976

During recent months Mr Knickerbocker has given a series of lectures on the war and international politics in many cities and towns in the United States. After these lectures the audiences asked him questions. This book is composed of a selection from the questions asked and Mr Knickerbocker's answers to them. Index.

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin

Atlantic Ja '42 150w

Booklist 38:93 N 15 '41

"The question and answer form of this book makes for lively reading. Knickerbocker is never pompous. Sometimes he is angry; he thinks the British found themselves only after they became mad—but more often he is full of good humor and friendliness and a sincere desire to inform. For those millions of Americans in whose hearts and minds there are still questions and doubts, this book should be recommended reading." W. L. Shirer

+ Books p5 N 9 '41 1500w

"Mr. Knickerbocker has written a superb book, tough minded, realistic, factual, simple as a primer, passionate and very American in its faith that, if we can be made to understand, we shall act, in time." Eleanor Kittredge

+ N Y Times p9 D 14 '41 1300w

"In 1923 Knickerbocker went to Munich to study psychiatry, and something of a psychiatrist's skill is utilized in writing the book." L. S. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p6 D 22 '41 550w

KNIGHT, BRIGID (MRS H. C. SINCLAIR). Walking the whirlwind. 543p map $2.75 Crowell [8s 6d Cassell]

(W) 41-3333

Traces the story of three generations of a South African family, of mixed French and

KNIGHT, BRIGID—Continued

English ancestry, during the years 1808 to 1881. The action centers about the family estate, founded during the Huguenot immigration of 1688, and later made as nearly as possible like an English country place by the first Englishman to marry into the de la Rocque family.

Booklist 37:409 My 1 '41

"The author's inventiveness is great within the field of her interests and her long—over-long—story has an impressive vitality. If you found this volume with a broken cover in a second-hand store and saw on the flyleaf a date, say of 1869, you might settle down to a refreshing escape from all your present engrossments. You might say, what delightful naïveté, what delicious sentimentalities our ancestors possessed. It might amuse you also to observe how blandly the author subordinates the realities of the tragic struggle between the Dutch settlers and the English colonists. . . . Because of this shift in fashions 'Walking the Whirlwind' has a quaintness for the modern reader, despite its perennially appealing love scenes and family crises." Lorine Pruette

+ — Books p12 Ap 13 '41 460w

"It is an interesting study of heredity and evolution as well as being a capital story in itself. . . . But the great charm of the book lies in the people whose traits and foibles are set out so clearly." F. S. Ambrose

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ap 12 '41 440w

"In her brief preface Miss Knight disclaims any pretension to historical accuracy, since she has used history 'merely as a setting for the characters.' By and large, however, the history is far from negligible. . . . A fine story in itself. . . . Good strong characters, fundamentally, every one of them; but lacking the decisive, iron touch of creative criticism; overlaid with what, in an earlier day, one might, not unfairly, have called womanish veneer." J. S. Southron

+ — N Y Times p25 Ap 13 '41 800w

"All right if you aren't fed up with history romance."

New Yorker 17:86 Ap 12 '41 40w

"This complicated saga is Mrs. Knight's first published novel. It is too long, too inclusive, too uneconomical both of character and incident. It has all the marks of the amateur: formless construction, loose writing, painful anachronisms. But it is far from dull. Its characters rise from its chaotic pages to live on in memory. They are real people, born of love and understanding. She has power and insight. Experience may make her an artist." C. D. A.

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:19 My 24 '41 270w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p353 Jl 20 '40 40w

KNIGHT, CLIFFORD. The affair of the crimson gull. 262p $2 Dodd

41-5437

Detective story.

Booklist 37:410 My 1 '41

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p25 Ap 6 '41 120w

"It takes a lot of Huntton Rogers' ingenuity to prove that a murder and an accidental death were the work of one hand. The Lake Tahoe setting is lovely, the people are as nice as the nicest of Knight's characters and the problem is a neat one." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p8 Ap 12 '41 50w

"This is Clifford Knight at his best." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p20 Ap 13 '41 200w

"Old Indian curse plays shivery part in deftly characterized, straight-forward and satisfactorily baffling tale of smoldering hate that flamed murderously. Laudable."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ap 12 '41 40w

"The plot will provide a keen contest of wits between the author and the reader until all the mysterious doings are finally explained. It is not unethical to announce at this time that Huntton Rogers's shrewd hunches solve the mystery that couples amusement with suspense."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 27 '41 210w

KNIGHT, CLIFFORD. The affair of the skiing clown. 256p $2 Dodd

41-18112

Detective story.

"This time a job lot of medium characters get in the way of the plot, but the professor manages to turn in an answer based largely upon alibis or the lack of them. Better concentrate on the snow and the puzzle interest." Will Cuppy

+ — Books p10 D 28 '41 200w

"As all readers of crime fiction know, alibis are not always what they seem. The one upon which this case hinges has been used so many times before that little credit is due to Professor Rogers for discovering the trick. Another fault with this story is that the motivation is weak. In brief, neither Clifford Knight nor his professional sleuth is at his best." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p22 O 5 '41 140w

"Bizarre nature of first crime, thrilling ski episodes, extremely well concealed killer, and effective sleuthing hold the attention. Effective."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:21 O 4 '41 40w

KNIGHT, ERIC (RICHARD HALLAS, pseud). This above all. 473p $2.50 Harper

(W) 41-51668

A story of England in the fall of 1940. The protagonist is Clive Briggs, an Englishman of the lower classes, self-educated and thoughtful. Clive has fought and fought well for England but doubts have arisen in his mind as to whether England is worth fighting for. Then he meets Prue Cathaway, daughter of well-to-do parents, and as their love affair develops she attempts to win him over to her point of view. Clive is fatally injured in an air raid but not before Prue has won her battle.

"The almost up-to-the-minute timeliness of the book in no way detracts from its representative quality, because the problems of these young persons are those of all high-minded youth in any period of peril." R. M. Gay

+ Atlantic Je '41 150w

Bookmark 2:14 My '41

"We had to wait until several years after the last war for novels embodying its meaning and impact. Today it is different. Men are writing their hearts out already. 'This Above All' is a passionate and moving story and, although in many ways pronouncedly British, capable of rising above nationality, of talking finely in terms of human beings as well as nations. It articulates completely, in all the intensity of first-rate narrative, the many attitudes of Englishmen at war." Milton Rugoff

+ Books p3 Ap 13 '41 900w

"You cannot say, any longer, that no great novel has come out of the second World War. Eric Knight has written one. The man who played 'A Song On Your Bugles,' who made you laugh at 'The Flying Yorkshireman' and cry at 'Lassie Come Home,' has concentrated his best qualities in 'This Above All.'" Olga Owens

+ Boston Transcript p7 Ap 12 '41 700w

"Mr. Knight is one of England's maturing novelists. He began four years ago with an honest and readable proletarian novel, 'Song on Your Bugle,' and followed it by the most amusing novelette of the decade, 'The Flying Yorkshirer.' 'This Above All' shows great advance in style, dramatic power, and subtlety of characterization. For sheer writing, the opening chapter is as good as anything in Hemingway or Steinbeck, with the reservation that the Americans preceded Mr. Knight."

Earle Birney

+ Canadian Forum 21:88 Je '41 650w

Manchester Guardian p3 N 7 '41 170w

Reviewed by Nigel Dennis

New Repub 104:800 Je 9 '41 350w

"This is one of the very few interesting novels that have yet come out of this war. It is long, and very readable; it discusses with sincerity the sort of questions which many people ask themselves privately and scarcely dare to discuss in public." Tom Paine

+ New Statesman & Nation 22:498 D 13 '41 800w

"'This Above All' is no propagandist book. It is the gripping, unforgettable story of England's battle and of a man's inner battle both fighting with their backs to the wall. It is a novel packed with dramatic action, high-strung with suspense. And there is a love story in it of strong, wonderful tenderness." Marianne Hauser

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 13 '41 1150w

"Whatever the book's weaknesses, nobody can take from Mr. Knight the credit for being the first to attack a big Second World War theme in the pages of a long and serious novel. 'This Above All' deserves your attention. It is the best writing to date by a young writer who should, if luck is with him, do important work in the future." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:82 Ap 12 '41 500w

Pratt p11 autumn '41

"On the whole, 'This Above All' is a much better book, as a novel, than we have any reason to expect, coming as it does so early in the war. It is difficult to judge it as a work of art, yet it is not propaganda. It seems to me to be a sincere, but hurried piece of work by an admirable writer, and a British patriot." R. B. West, Jr.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:6 Ap 5 '41 700w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 18 '41 300w

"Many people are going to be angry with Mr. Knight, but they must still admit, however grudgingly, that he has written one of the outstanding novels of the war—a novel full of realism and reforming fire. . . . Some of the most vivid passages are scenes from Flanders in this war and the last or descriptions of London air raids; and it is upon their horror that Mr. Knight dwells. He has written a challenging book, which in itself is a tribute to the continued liberty of thought and speech that makes its appearance possible."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p565 N 15 '41 400w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 30:viii summer '41 800w

KNIGHT, KATHLEEN MOORE. Exit a star. 306p $2 Doubleday

41-25824

Detective story.

Booklist 38:160 Ja 1 '42

"Swift and smooth detecting by Chief Carmody, Margot Blair, Aunt Abby and Bill Kelsey, reporter. Miss Knight's story picks up nicely with new material on the home stretch. It might have been more effective if some dozens of grins, chuckles and so forth had been omitted. Where this author is concerned, the grimmer the better, say we." Will Cuppy

+ Books p24 N 9 '41 160w

"This is one of Kathleen Moore Knight's best stories." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p22 N 16 '41 220w

"Very fine reading, with suspense running rampant right up to the rather astounding climax."

+ New Yorker 17:112 N 15 '41 40w

Sat R of Lit 24:24 N 15 '41 40w

"Miss Knight has provided three deaths by violence, a couple of unsuccessful murder attempts, and a crashing climax. The participants are cleverly drawn."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 23 '41 240w

KNIGHT, PEARLE E., and TRAXLER, ARTHUR EDWIN. Develop your reading. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 376p il $1.36 Little

820.8 Reading

41-4958

"On the assumption that the most effective approach to any reading program lies in the pleasure to be found in leisure-time reading, chapter i whets the appetite of the young reader with tempting samples selected for the express purpose of helping him to find fun in books. . . . The book then moves on to attack two fundamental phases of adapting methods of reading to the material and to the reader's immediate purpose, 'Rapid Reading' and 'Close Reading,' with the basic skills essential to development in both. Through pretests, exercises, and achievement tests, all self-administered, the pupil is helped to accelerate his rate of reading, to develop speed and accuracy in practical applications of the skimming process, to find help in a dictionary, and to increase his knowledge and use of words. . . . Finally, his ability to appreciate is quickened by directed visualization of what he reads and by stimulated participation in the emotional experiences of the writers." (School R) Index.

School & Society 53:128 Ja 25 '41 20w

"In an attractive, compact textbook, between the covers of which is compiled a reference library of suitable work materials for pupil and teacher, Knight and Traxler have made a unique contribution to the teaching of reading at the secondary-school level. Through careful study, supported by sound experience, they now turn the attention of the teacher toward a program of developmental rather than remedial procedures and thus offer to each young reader of high-school age opportunities for growth in those basic skills closely related to the many interests and activities of daily living." M. E. Courtenay

+ School R 49:469 Je '41 370w

KNIGHT, MRS RUTH (ADAMS). Women must weep. 256p $2.50 Hale

41-22358

While still a school girl Amber was encouraged to seek a writing career by a young and inspiring high school teacher of English. But Amber instead of going to college married a classmate at seventeen and later repented. Followed years of working her way thru college, years of growing success, a love affair with a young artist, and then a renewed acquaintance with the former high school teacher now a successful writer. And when once more Amber is faced with a choice between marriage and career, she finds love in the balance.

"'Women Must Weep' is hampered by its adherence to a thesis. The story moves according to schedule, the characters always under didactic control." George Conrad

Books p10 N 30 '41 280w

"Soft on the sentimental side but with a hard undercurrent of practicality, the novel is readable and mildly historic." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p30 N 30 '41 400w

"This is a very, very light, but well-written novel."

Springf'd Republican p7e N 23 '41 130w

KNOWLES, DAVID. The monastic order in England; a history of its development from the times of St Dunstan to the Fourth Lateran council, 943-1216. 764p $9.50 Macmillan [45s Cambridge]

271.0942 Monasticism

[40-32853]

"The book falls into two parts, historical and institutional. The first contains a narrative history of the monastic order in England from the revival under Dunstan and King Edgar to 1216. . . The character sketches with which this section is studded deserve particular mention, for Dom Knowles has a happy knack of making saints and scoundrels and men of action live again. The second part of the book is more analytical in form. A study of the interior polity of the black monks and the daily routine of the monastery leads to some excellent chapters on their intellectual activities, with a particularly interesting section on the development of the liturgy and chant. The external relations of the monastic houses are then considered and their place in the fabric of Church and society defined, while two concluding chapters deal with the maintenance of discipline and the critics of the monks." New Statesman & Nation

"This is a book of unusual importance, not solely because of the very considerable quantity of information on the history and interpretation of medieval monachism that is to be found within its covers but even more because the author, who gives ample evidence of sound learning and good judgment, is objective in his treatment of his subject and at the same time shows a sympathetic insight regarding it that no outsider could fairly hope to acquire. . . Even in so admirable a volume as this there will be found mention only, or a treatment that seems inadequate, of some relevant topics; and there are some questions to which one may not be certain that Dom Knowles has given the right answers." A. H. Sweet

+ Am Hist R 47:99 O '41 850w

"The book will find its place in every public library and in such private collections as boast of a representative selection of the best volumes on medieval history. But since the author does not condescend to write romantically or picturesquely it is doubtful whether it will appeal to the generality of readers. Certainly Dom Knowles makes no such appeal. . . Dom Knowles writes from the vantage-point of one who has been for many years a member of the Benedictine order; he sees his subject from within. Yet he remains singularly objective and dispassionate, recognizing the shortcomings and defects of the institution just as clearly as he recognizes the ideal which, by reason of the frailty of human nature, was seldom reached." S. C. Chew

+ Books p20 F 23 '41 500w

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley
Cath World 153:626 Ag '41 1100w

"It is not often that it falls to the historian to find before him for review a book of really outstanding importance. It may be said at once that Dom David Knowles' study of the early centuries of monasticism in England is such a book. It is in the best tradition of Benedictine scholarship, which is a very great tradition indeed." Eileen Power

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:190 Ag 24 '40 1250w

"Dom David Knowles writes as a son of St. Benedict, and this has given actuality to his work. His book is objective not tendentious; his exposition scholarly not facile. This volume lacks the charm of Dom Cuthbert Butler's Benedictine Monachism, but it is interesting throughout. Though it will be subjected to criticism on points of detail there can be little doubt that for a long time it will remain one of the standard works on the subject with which it deals."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p425 Ag 31 '40 700w

KNOX, JOHN. The man, Christ Jesus. 100p $1 Willett

232.9 Jesus Christ—Character. Jesus Christ
—Humanity 41-51780

"The author is concerned, not with the historicity of Jesus, but with the historicity of Jesus, the Jesus whom the church has worshipped as Lord and Master. He accepts the results of critical scholarship, insists upon the absolute humanity of Jesus, but asserts that 'the theological interpretation of Christ is not so divorced from the historical Jesus as is often supposed' . . . that, in fact, we cannot begin to understand how unique Jesus was unless we take into account the theological terms in which the community found itself describing him." Churchman

Booklist 37:457 Je 1 '41

"This little volume is as good an introduction as can be found to our knowledge about Jesus and its significance. Here is the heart of Christianity, an evaluation of the historic fact of Jesus." C. T. Craig

+ Christian Century 58:752 Je 4 '41 700w

"In an age of doubt and disillusionment this book is a convincing appeal for a rational faith." W. L. C.

+ Churchman 155:34 Ap 15 '41 90w

"In a real sense it is a dated book. It could scarcely have been written fifteen years ago; I doubt if even Knox himself would be able to write the same volume were he to attempt it, say in 1955. Nevertheless, while it has a distinct purpose, and that to warn against a loose and to his mind unjustified overskepticism, it is so totally different from many such volumes which have been merrily tumbling off the printing presses in these recent days that it can be confidently recommended for thoughtful reading and reflection." M. S. Enslin

+ Crozer Q 18:259 J1 '41 700w

"This is a beautiful book and ought to be widely read, especially by those who have wearied of the bare bones of literary and historical criticism and yearn for the warm, human, compelling tones of that voice once heard in Galilee and still to be caught, in echoes and in direct address, in his words recorded in the Book, and in the devout study which does not ignore criticism but goes beyond it." F. C. Grant

+ J Religion 21:486 O '41 350w

KNOX, SARAH TAYLOR. The family and the law. 199p $2 Univ. of N.C. press

347.6 Domestic relations 41-8652

A summary of those portions of the law which directly affect the family, written for the social worker and the "interested layman." Partial contents: Development of law; Marriage and divorce; Rights and obligations of parent and child; Adoption; Security legislation; A home for the family; Criminal law; Selected bibliography; Index.

Reviewed by B. H. Levy

Books p8 Ag 17 '41 120w

Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 4 '41 450w

Reviewed by E. A. Brownell

Survey 77:276 S '41 300w

KOBBE, HERMAN. Housing and regional planning; il. by the author. 233p $3 Dutton 711 Regional planning. Housing. Cities and towns—U.S. 41-51634

Study of the regional housing plan for New York and vicinity. Subjects considered include: Needs of the region; Outline of legislation; Regional plan; Transportation; Slum clearance and urban housing; Planning the village; House and garden plans; Community centers; Seaside and mountain housing; Art of gardening; Rural parks; Economics; Housing needs of rich and poor. No index.

"People will enjoy reading Mr. Kobbe's little book, with its practical details and its trenchant criticism of current practices. Even its more or less utopian suggestions for reform of our living patterns will stimulate the imagination and perhaps broaden the perspective of planners, if only they had something to use for money." C. C. Ludwig

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:584 Je '41 380w

Reviewed by M. L. Colean

Ann Am Acad 215:226 My '41 480w

Booklist 37:354 Ap 1 '41

J Home Econ 33:746 D '41 80w

"The author's plans are on a grand scale, and the vastness of his conception stirs the imagination. However, it is a bit unrealistic to assume the scrapping or abandonment of great thoroughfares like Seventh Avenue and the outlying branches of the subway and the wrecking of buildings that represent a capital investment of billions of dollars. While a master-plan for a gradual rebuilding of our cities, beginning with the most decayed parts, is more prosaic, it is a goal more likely to be achieved under our present organization of society." Homer Hoyt

J Pol Econ 49:926 D '41 260w

KOBER, ARTHUR. My dear Bella; with il. by Hoff. 239p $2 Random house

(W) 41-8922

Selection of the short stories from the New Yorker, featuring Bella Gross, her family, and her intimates, in their Bronx habitat.

Booklist 37:546 J 15 '41

Bookmark 2:17 N '41

"A lot of people have read these sketches in the 'New Yorker,' but they demand re-reading, and they well deserve a permanent form for their shy genius." Thomas Sugrue

+ Books p2 Je 8 '41 900w

"If the present set of sketches seems to lack something of the interest of 'Thunder Over the Bronx,' it is perhaps owing to familiarity; certainly Mr. Kober has lost none of his skill in getting down on paper the exact nuances of the Bronx accent, nor has he failed to transmit with full effect the ironic bite of Bronx humor." J. G. E. Hopkins

+ Commonweal 34:212 Je 20 '41 180w

Nation 152:705 Je 14 '41 30w

"Here is a two-dollar ticket to the heart of the Bronx. Forty times the price of the subway ride, but more than forty times as much fun. These twenty-two short and peppery sketches are just as entertaining and Bronxish now as when they first appeared in the New Yorker." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p7 Je 8 '41 700w

New Yorker 17:71 My 31 '41 30w

"All the stories achieve the distinction of being not only funny but sympathetic."

+ Time 37:96 Je 9 '41 400w

KOCH, FREDERICK HENRY, ed. Carolina folk-plays; first-third series; foreword by Paul Green. 1 v ed 493p il $3.50 Holt

812.08 Folk drama 41-15736

Collection of all the one-act plays formerly published in three volumes, with one new play The Third Night, by Thomas Wolfe. Contains an introductory chapter on the history of the Carolina and Dakota play makers; a foreword by Paul Green; and bibliography of the production and publication of the Chapel Hill group.

Booklist 38:56 O 15 '41

Springf'd Republican p6 N 21 '41 300w

Wis Lib Bul 37:175 N '41

KOEHLER, ROBERT PORTNER. Sing a song of murder. 255p $2 Phoenix

41-5497

Detective story.

"The unusual setting gives the story a special interest." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p20 Ap 27 '41 210w

"Murder plot involving missing will and rich inheritance pleasantly dolled up with Navajo folk-lore and quizzical sleuthing. Readable."

Sat R of Lit 23:20 My 3 '41 40w

KOESTLER, ARTHUR. Darkness at noon. 254p $2 Macmillan [8s Cape, J]

41-51809

"This novel, fruit of [the author's] own experiences, is a tale of the imprisonment, confession and death of one of the Old Bolsheviks, a composite picture having resemblances to both Bukharin and Trotsky. The events in it follow the normal course. Rubashov, one of the last survivors of the original Central Committee of the Communist Party, is arrested, is charged with incredible crimes, denies everything, is tortured by means of deprivation of sleep, etc., confesses everything, and is shot in the back of the neck. The story ends with a young girl in whose house Rubashov has once lodged wondering whether to denounce her father to the Secret Police as a way of securing a flat for herself and her future husband." New Statesman & Nation

Booklist 37:491 Je 15 '41

"'Darkness at Noon' is a rare and beautifully executed novel. One reads it with respect for its masterly craftsmanship, its restrained power, its profound drama. With seeming coldness of approach, Koestler tells a story which is warm with human sympathy. Not the least impressive pages in this excellent work are the scenes in Rubashov's cell when he is in tapping communication with the White Russian next door." Rose Feld

+ Books p3 My 25 '41 1050w

"The book is long drawn out, full of repetitions, and marred throughout by its obscenity and irrelligion."

— Cath World 153:635 Ag '41 300w

"Readers of Koestler's earlier novel, The Gladiators, will discover in this one the same superb craftsmanship. Though it deals so largely with abstract questions, it creates an electric atmosphere and a number of characters that are not likely to be soon forgotten. But its particular importance derives from its clear statement of the problem of government. Lovers of democracy will do well to ponder it."

+ Christian Century 58:806 Je 18 '41 320w

"I feel unable to agree with those who call this book a good novel. It lacks in epic style, in poetry, in abundance of vision. I don't even like to accept the assumption of the author that he was writing a novel. This is just a psychological study of the strange Moscow trials. Only instead of the real characters who were victims to Stalin's propaganda condemnations, Koestler for reasons of simplification presents one fictitious figure, a typical old revolutionary, persecuted by Stalin and his GPU. This study is done with a clever mind, fond of sophistry and intellectual subtlety. In this respect it is a noteworthy commentary to the politics of our times and should not be neglected by future historians." Max Fischer

+ Commonweal 34:186 Je 13 '41 450w

Reviewed by E. P. Potter

Library J 66:400 My 1 '41 60w

Living Age 360:494 J 1 '41 450w

"As an anatomy of totalitarianism 'Darkness at Noon,' which appears to have been perfectly translated, goes a lot deeper than most books on the subject, novels or other. That it deals with the disease in Russia and not in Germany does not affect its truth, and gives it

KOESTLER, ARTHUR—Continued
the advantage of more sensitive and intelligent people to be examined." Charles Marriott
+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 3 '41 330w

"The most amazing thing about the book is the austere economy with which Mr. Koestler has compressed one of the most crucial dilemmas of totalitarian political philosophy into a compact, meaty novel of less than 270 pages, presenting at once a vividly conceived personal tragedy and an ideological conflict of the first magnitude." L. B. Salomon
+ Nation 152:620 My 24 '41 600w

"As a political document, the book is not particularly impressive. Mr. Koestler is repeating explanations that others have given already, though he repeats them at greater length and with more psychological subtlety and depth. He fails to consider a possibility for which there is at least circumstantial evidence, that an actual plot against Stalin came close to being successful. Moreover, he makes the worse mistake—from the novelist's point of view—of using statistical arguments. . . His novel is best when it is moral and personal rather than political. It is best when it tells the story, not of Russia as a collectivity, but of a Russian individual who was punished for crimes he never committed while admitting to himself that he was guilty of other crimes, and who in punishment found a sort of freedom or even salvation. From this point of view, 'Darkness at Noon' bears a curious resemblance to 'Native Son,' a book that sets out to express quite the opposite political opinions." Malcolm Cowley
— + New Repub 104:766 Je 2 '41 1200w

"Brilliant as this book is as a novel, and a piece of prison literature, it is probably most valuable as an interpretation of the Moscow 'confessions' by someone with an inner knowledge of totalitarian methods." George Orwell
+ New Statesman & Nation 21:15 Ja 4 '41 1000w

"Here, in a splendid novel, is an effective explanation of the riddle of the Moscow treason trials. It is the sort of novel that transcends ordinary limitations, and that may be read as a primary discourse in political philosophy. But this observation should frighten no one from the book, for it is written with such dramatic power, with such warmth of feeling, and with such persuasive simplicity that it is as absorbing as melodrama. It is a far cry from the bleak topical commentaries that sometimes pass as novels." Harold Strauss
+ N Y Times p1 My 25 '41 1100w

Reviewed by Vincent McHugh
+ New Yorker 17:69 My 31 '41 490w

"The situation is of course real enough, and the book serves to document whatever suspicions we may have concerning the Moscow confessions. Yet the whole thing has about it an air of allegory. . . Even Rubashov's solitary musings upon his past do not move us to regard him as a vital, suffering, repentant man to whom we may attach our interest. As a matter of fact, here exactly is the book's vulnerable point. For if Mr. Koestler intends, as he seems to, that we admire, or sympathize with, Rubashov, he fails. . . 'Darkness at Noon' gives us, then, a skillful analysis of three stages of the Soviet Communist mind, without offering anywhere in its pages even one admirable character." N. L. Rothman
— + Sat R of Lit 24:7 My 24 '41 600w

"It is a stern and pitiable story, profoundly interesting and superbly done, with a mixture of cold terror, humour, and psychological insight which is altogether convincing." Bonamy Dobrée
+ Spec 166:20 Ja 3 '41 700w

Time 37:98 My 26 '41 1650w

"'Darkness at Noon' is, in its way, a remarkable book, a grimly fascinating interpretation of the logic of the Russian Revolution, indeed of all revolutionary dictatorships, and at the same time a tense and subtly intellectualized drama of prison psychology." — Times [London] Lit Sup p641 D 21 '40 750w

"This is a novel that keeps turning over in one's mind long after one has finished it, as one looks for some simpler reason for it all than ever existed or can exist, and finds oneself only getting deeper into the cavern where men slay and torture one another for ideologies in which they have already begun to disbelieve. And so this curious, crushing, absorbing book leaves one with a sense of some collective monster, existing only in their common mind, to which men willingly become slaves and immolate themselves." Robert Littell
+ Yale R n s 30:xii summer '41 400w

KOESTLER, ARTHUR. Scum of the earth. 287p $2.50 Macmillan

940.547 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, Hungarian. World war, 1939—Prisoners and prisons. Refugees, Political (W) 41-19495

"The author, a former Communist, was sentenced to death by Franco while writing for an English liberal newspaper during the Spanish Civil War. Friends rescued him. In 1937 he published Spanish Testament. The present volume, memoirs covering the period from the beginning of the present war until the fall of France, describes the roundup of aliens, left-wingers, and Communists, 'scum of the earth,' in France and their detention in concentration camps—the world's worst. He was himself imprisoned several times, but finally escaped to England. He describes also the reasons for the fall of France, demobilization, general confusion, and the pitiful condition of the French people under Hitler." Library J

"Despite his personal sufferings, Mr. Koestler preserves the poise and insight of a trained journalistic observer and conveys an uncommonly accurate picture of how French men and women of different classes felt and acted in their country's supreme crisis." W. H. Chamberlin
+ Atlantic N '41 330w

Booklist 38:77 N 1 '41

"It is not a literary work of that finished quality we associate with Koestler's novels. Parts of it are in the form of extracts taken from his diaries. It has been hurried through, as have most of the best books—and this is one—dealing with immediate issues and events of these terribly inopportune times. I found it completely effective, as it is unaffected and profoundly absorbing all the way through." F. T. Marsh
+ Books p3 O 5 '41 850w

"Arthur Koestler is beginning to show signs of greatness in his writing. There was promise in his The Gladiators; his Darkness at Noon remains the only book which has cast a real light on the communist mentality as it operated in the Moscow trials. This is by no means so remarkable a book as that, but I regard it as the most thought-provoking of the narratives of personal experience in the war I have read. (And I have read a good many of them.) He writes with restraint, with humor and with infinite pity of treatment so harrowing that it might easily have driven to madness. To the reader who wishes not simply to know the facts concerning Europe's madness but to know what has brought this madness to pass, Koestler's account of the concentration camps of France can be unreservedly recommended." Paul Hutchinson
+ Christian Century 58:1374 N 5 '41 500w

"Mr. Koestler has some grim and terrible things to tell. . . But he preserves, along with a capacity for righteous indignation, a quality of philosophical irony, which lends mellowness to some of his pages. And there is authentic literary mastery in his many portraits of French and foreign refugees in this period of darkness and break-up." W. H. Chamberlin
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 N 8 '41 750w

"As a document of human shortcomings and misery, 'Scum of the Earth' is a good book. As a proof that France was ready for fascism it has no interest." C. H. Bishop
+ — Commonweal 35:99 N 14 '41 1250w

Reviewed by L. R. Etzkorn
Library J 66:730 S 1 '41 130w

"Far the best book to come out of the collapse of France." A. J. P. Taylor

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 7 '41 300w
Nation 153:356 O 11 '41 210w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley
New Repub 105:768 D 8 '41 500w

"A book so moving that it invites the use of the most extravagant adjectives. . . If the short historical perspective still dictates caution, we can, nevertheless, say with assurance that 'Scum of the Earth' deserves to supersede all that has hitherto been said about the fall of France." Harold Strauss

+ N Y Times p3 O 5 '41 1300w

"Despite the darkness of the tale Koestler tells, he brings to it grateful qualities of humor, sympathy, and even gentleness. His book reminded me, though it is inferior in artistry and depth of feeling, of that now forgotten masterpiece, Alader Kuncz's 'Black Monastery,' an internment-camp story of the first World war and one of the most extraordinary books of its kind ever written." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:84 O 4 '41 400w

"Arthur Koestler is not only a brilliant journalist; he is also an unusually gifted novelist. . . The hand of a great artist is shown in the way in which he brings to life his fellow prisoners, and the French officials, soldiers, officers, peasants, and bourgeois in dozens of portraits and many little scenes. As a psychologist he perceives what is in back of things and penetrates under the surface of events; and so this autobiographical report develops into a deeply moving analysis of our entire time." Leo Lania

+ Sat R of Lit 24:12 O 18 '41 550w

Reviewed by Herbert Read
Spec 167:312 S 26 '41 1000w

"The balance and shrewdness of Koestler's thinking, as well as his raw experiences, make his book stand out among the many of its general type."

+ Springfield Republican p7e O 5 '41 480w
Time 38:98 D 8 '41 500w

"It is a memorable story, vivid, powerful and deeply searching, in its own way as enlightening on the causes of the fall of France as anything that has yet appeared."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p466 S 20 '41 550w

Wis Lib Bul 37:200 D '41

KOEVES, TIBOR. Satan in top hat; the biography of Franz von Papen. 359p il $3 Alliance bk.

B or 92 Papen, Franz von

Biographical study of Franz von Papen, covering his career from the time of the first World war to the present. It is a story of intrigues furthered by the Junker military attache in many countries, beginning with Mexico, and continuing in the United States, Germany, Austria, and finally Turkey. Illustrated with photographs. Index.

Booklist 38:157 Ja 1 '42

"Unless a biographer possesses a very intimate knowledge of the person he sets out to portray he should not attempt a job which is difficult even when the objectivity of a few hundred years is placed between him and his literary hero. Mr. Koeves, unfortunately, lacks this intimate personal knowledge of Franz von Papen, in addition to which he has naturally had no access to the archives. . . When Mr. Koeves tells us the rather sickening story of Franz von Papen's career, he adds nothing that is new and repeats many facts that have been stated previously and more adequately." Ursula Wasserman

Books p30 N 2 '41 490w

"This book, insofar as it sets out to present Papen as a diplomatic devil succeeds only in showing him up as a political pawn, and insofar as it attempts to present a picture of Nazi diplomatic methods it strays too far from the author's field of information." G. C. Andrew

Canadian Forum 21:315 Ja '42 460w

"Some of the conversations that take place in the book between von Papen and others, Mr. Koeves points out, are based neither on documents nor eyewitness accounts. This makes dramatic reading, but it is a doubtful service to history. It is too bad that Mr. Koeves has not labeled these parts of his book more clearly. All in all, however, Mr. Koeves has turned out a useful volume." Shepard Stone

N Y Times p6 D 7 '41 1200w

"A very readable and dramatized portrayal of the man, in the colorful style of an imaginative biography after the fashion of Emil Ludwig. But the title of the book, flashy and striking as it is, gives too much weight to the scheming of an opportunist who, unprincipled, cunning and fearless as he well may be, has little in common with Machiavelli, Fouché and other great intriguers of history. . . Though the picture of the man is obviously overdrawn the book constitutes a valuable addition to our store of information." Prof Karl Loewenstein

+ — Springfield Republican p7e N 2 '41 650w
Time 38:102 O 20 '41 1600w

KOHN, HANS. Not by arms alone. 161p $1.75 Harvard univ. press

940.51 World politics. History. Modern 40-35828

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

Reviewed by D. F. Fleming

Am Pol Sci R 35:1024 O '41 230w

Reviewed by W. L. Kolb

Am Soc R 6:589 Ag '41 70w

"Brief and compact, this volume of essays probes deeply into the problems of a democratic society. It is a fitting companion to Professor Kohn's earlier volumes of essays and deserves a wide and careful reading." H. N. Howard

+ Ann Am Acad 214:224 Mr '41 500w

"The argument of the book is not cumulative and the author brings to the theme little of the originality and energy of thought which he has elsewhere displayed."

Christian Century 58:531 Ap 16 '41 130w

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek

Pol Sci Q 56:319 Je '41 230w

"The book should be in the hands of all teachers upon whom rests to-day the responsibility of transmitting to the younger generation an understanding of the ideals which it is their task to preserve." I. L. Kandel

+ School & Society 53:281 Mr 1 '41 700w

"In these difficult times, all public spirited citizens ought to read Kohn's work and appreciate the inspiration of his moral courage and intellectual integrity." J. S. Roucek

+ Social Educ 5:150 F '41 270w

KOHT, HALVDAN. Norway, neutral and invaded. 253p il $2.50 Macmillan [7s 6d Hutchinson]

940.53481 World war, 1939—Norway. World war, 1939—Diplomatic history. Norway—Politics and government 41-23342

"This is an account by the Minister of Foreign Affairs of the activities of his government during the eighteen months beginning September 1, 1939. It explains why Norway had to remain neutral until forced into war, the administrative policies adopted because of the invasion, the efforts of the Nazis to administer Norway as a German province, and the functioning of the legal government in exile." Library J

KOHT, HALVDAN—Continued

Booklist 38:156 Ja 1 '42

"Dr. Koht's story is not as dramatic as Carl Hambro's 'I Saw It Happen in Norway.' He writes drily, with a historian's objectivity; he eschews emotion almost too rigorously. He tries to be scrupulously fair; he can even put the most charitable interpretation on the motives of a Terboven. His book is the most authoritative account to date of one phase of the second world war, and its five appendices give it the source value of a White Paper." Ted Olson

+ Books p2 N 2 '41 800w

Christian Century 58:1443 N 19 '41 30w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 17 '42 1000w

"It is important for an understanding of the effect of the Nazi domination upon a freedom loving people." F. L. D. Goodrich

+ Library J 66:840 O 1 '41 80w

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 8 '41 150w

"Written with an almost unbelievable restraint and understatement, it is a calm recital of fantastic events, of treachery and courage, of panic and despair at the end of illusion." Eleanor Kittredge

+ N Y Times p3 N 30 '41 1450w

Reviewed by T. K. Derry

Spec 167:184 Ag 22 '41 950w

Springf'd Republican p14 N 28 '41 220w

"Dr. Koht, who was Foreign Minister of Norway during more than five crucial years, has written a straightforward and, within its limits, adequate account of his country's policy before and after the war."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p330 Jl 12 '41 700w

KOMAROVSKY, MIRRA. The unemployed man and his family; with an introd. by Paul Felix Lazarsfeld. (Institute of social research, Publication) 163p $1.75 Dryden

331.137973 Unemployment, Family 41-3593

A study of "the effect of unemployment upon the status of the man in fifty-nine families." (Subtitle) Contents: The families and the interviews; The breakdown of the husband's status; Predepression husband-wife relations and their effect upon the status of the unemployed man; Personality changes of the unemployed husband and his status; The unemployed father and the young child; The unemployed father and the adolescent child; Other effects of unemployment upon family life. Index. Selected bibliography.

"This is an important monograph, both substantively and methodologically. The reviewer believes it constitutes a milestone in the development of sound sociological research." R. C. Angell

+ Am J Soc 47:493 N '41 750w

"The book has considerable interest for sociologists as an exercise in method. The results probably are not worth much as a basis for generalization, but they suggest many problems for further research. The method used is intensive interviews. The difficulties and shortcomings are carefully set forth; the author shows a commendable critical-mindedness with reference both to procedures and findings." Read Bain

Am Soc R 6:434 Je '41 700w

"It is for the method of gathering and interpreting qualitative sociological evidence, which Miss Komarovsky terms the 'technique of discerning' that her book will be prized by the social worker who is concerned that the usual record of a personal interview, which may be the key to a difficult social problem, can contain only as much of the truth as the interviewer's intuitive common sense can draw out and as the person interviewed is willing and able to tell. Miss Komarovsky's pattern of thorough preparation for her study in the devising of questionnaires, criteria of attitudes, and critical checks, is helpful and suggestive." I. H. Nelson

+ Survey 77:131 Ap '41 350w

KOONTZ, HAROLD DAYTON. Government control of business [ed. by Edgar S. Furniss]. 937p $4.50 Houghton

380.16822 U.S.—Economic policy, Industry and state. Industry—Organization, control, etc. 41-9756

This discussion of government control of business begins with a brief resume of the history of the subject, the theories of individualism and collectivism as they relate to government and business. Other sections are: regulation of transport agencies; control of public utilities; regulation to enforce competition; regulation of financial and exchange institutions; regulation of the extractive industries; regulation for labor; government promotion and ownership of business. Index.

"The author is thorough, accurate, and objective. Within the limits of what he has attempted, he has done a competent job. . . One hesitates to criticize an author for not doing what he has not attempted to do. This can hardly be avoided, however, in the case of a textbook which omits or neglects a number of the most intriguing and significant aspects of its problem." H. L. Elsbree

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1187 D '41 650w

"This excellent text is increasing evidence that the relationship of government to business is fast becoming a well-recognized field for study. This book is also evidence that the general boundaries of this field, although still very nebulous, are gradually becoming fixed and the subject matter more or less uniform. . . Mr. Koontz has written a well-organized, logical, and comprehensive book, one which should not only be very usable as a class text but should also be of interest to the large number of persons who seek information on this increasingly important topic, government control of business." F. P. Hall

+ Ann Am Acad 218:223 N '41 550w

Booklist 37:540 Jl 15 '41

KOPF, CARL HEATH. Windows on life. 255p $2 Macmillan

252 Sermons 41-22814

Collection of radio addresses, filled with observations and reflections on life, which came to the author as he looked out of the windows of his Boston study. He is minister of the Mt Vernon Congregational church in Boston.

"Radio talks reduced to print but keeping the sparkle that made them popular on the air."

+ Christian Century 58:1443 N 19 '41 20w

"Pleasant, literary little papers." H. J. Simpson

+ Churchman 156:17 Ja 1 '42 60w

KORNGOLD, RALPH. Robespierre and the fourth estate; introd. by Crane Brinton. 417p il $3.75 Modern age

B or 92 Robespierre, Maximilien Marie Isidore de. France—History—Revolution 41-2853

"The author sets out to prove that 'the amazing sanguinary legend' of Robespierre has 'no basis in fact' and that he, perhaps more than any other leader of the French Revolution, devoted himself to the interests of the working class. A dramatic biography, in which the confused issues of the time are made clear." (New Yorker) Bibliography. Index. First published in England in 1937 with title: Robespierre, first modern dictator.

Reviewed by Crane Brinton

Am Hist R 43:935 Jl '38 250w

"The book is charmingly and vividly written and is based on considerable delving in the sources, though it seems absurd to include Plato merely because he is supposed to have influenced Rousseau, who in turn influenced Robespierre. Who influenced Plato? For that matter, the bibliography is poorly arranged, primary and secondary material jostling each other as each happens to come in the alphabet. But the author, who is a frank partisan of Robespierre, has given a lively and stirring narrative, which, as they say, reads like a novel. The only trouble is that it reads too much like a novel." E. N. Curtis

+ — Am Hist R 47:330 Ja '42 550w

"This book deserves all praise as the ablest, most searching, and most judicial treatment of its subject that we have ever seen." A. J. N.

+ Atlantic Mr '41 210w

"On the whole, Mr. Korngold's book is profoundly honest. So honest that it is hard to define. In the usual sense of the terms, it is not 'literary' like Carlyle or Michelet, nor popular like Sieburg or Zweig, nor scholarly like Aulard or Mathiez. It is a psychological and moral hypothesis which makes sense. It reads well, and it compels thought. It might carry conviction, even with me, if my prejudices had not grown so pachydermatous with the hardening of fifty years." Albert Guerard

+ — Books p21 F 23 '41 1300w

"The book is uneven, ill-arranged, and contains expressions which will be awkward or unfamiliar to an English reader (why should not publishers translate American, as they would French or German?), but it is always energetic and interesting, and sometimes illuminating; and above all, its judgement of Robespierre is well-balanced, reasonable and convincing—a fitting tribute of adult American democracy to its cradle-companion a century and a half ago." J. M. T.

+ — Eng Hist R 53:370 Ap '38 240w

Reviewed by A. J. P. Taylor

Manchester Guardian p7 Ap 16 '37 140w

"Mr. Korngold's clearly conceived, solidly grounded, and finely written biography is one of those really impartial books, concealing nothing on the one hand, condemning nothing on the other, which open a door in the mind. He seeks only to explain, and for one reader at any rate he is the first writer in English to present a Robespierre who is completely credible."

+ Nation 153:58 Jl 19 '41 240w

"In general this is a sound book, well thought out and well sprinkled with quotations and with cross-checks on the things that were thought and said in that time and of it later. Its only drawback as good reading is one inevitable to the subject: short of giving the complete portrait of the man and assuming an intimate knowledge of one of the most complicated studies in history, you must forsake your hero every other turn of the way for a hit-or-miss treatment of the French Revolution." Otis Ferguson

+ — New Repub 104:190 F 10 '41 700w

"[This] biography of Robespierre presents the stern little ascetic of Arras as a veritable hero indeed. Where there is praise and justification to give it is given in abundance, where there is fault to find it is found discreetly and almost with reluctance. Here is a Robespierre so cleaned up that he is hardly recognizable except for those addicts to Leftist literature who remember their Mathiez. Yet there is something salutary to this vehemence of defense that Mr. Korngold expresses, for it balances in some measure the equal vehemence of attack and vilification that has been heaped on Robespierre's neatly powdered little head for some hundred and fifty years." Herbert Gorman

+ — N Y Times p18 F 23 '41 1500w

Discussion by the author

N Y Times p2 Mr 23 '41 550w

New Yorker 16:56 F 1 '41 50w

Reviewed by B. F. Hyslop

Pol Sci Q 56:636 D '41 500w

"This book is well-written, original, and nicely put together." J. M. S. Allison

+ Sat R of Lit 23:6 Mr 1 '41 600w

Reviewed by E. L. Woodward

Spec 158:416 Mr 5 '37 150w

Springf'd Republican p18 F 7 '41 650w

Time 37:72 F 3 '41 900w

"Able, close-knit study. . . There is nothing new in Mr. Korngold's pages; but the arrangement of facts and hypotheses gives an impression of originality to which he can justly lay claim. Here and there, however, self-assurance and assertiveness slightly mar the work, and will be something of an irritant to students all too unhappily familiar with the endless complexities and the dark problems involved in the months that led to Robespierre's tragic end and the Thermidorian Reaction."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p144 F 27 '37 900w

Reviewed by Geoffrey Bruun

Yale R n s 30:837 summer '41 420w

KORNITZER, LOUIS. Jeweled trail. 280p il $2.75 Sheridan [8s 6d Bles]

553.8 Precious stones

41-6631

Anecdotes about gems and gem dealing, based on the author's experiences as "a fisher of gems, a scraper of gems, a trader in gems, and even a bit of a philosopher about gems." Among other tales he tells of his Viennese boyhood when he learned how to manipulate pearls, his near implication in dealing with some of the jewels of the Dowager Empress of Russia, and how the finest ruby he ever saw appeared in the harness of a mule in China.

"As in Mr. Kornitzer's previous books, the range of autobiographical narrative is abundant, the anecdotes and observations fascinating. The emphasis is always on the bizarre and the sensational, but behind the succession of tales of theft, fraud and sudden death there is always the authentic undertone of the reputable trader who has not had to rely upon invention or legend to find romance in his profession." Peter Schwed

+ Books p26 My 11 '41 350w

"'Fascinating' happens to be the right word for Mr. Kornitzer's experiences as a gem-dealer, and I can use no other about The Jeweled Trail. Oh yes, I can! Informative." Christopher St John

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:394 O 19

'40 220w

"'The Jeweled Trail' is a book well worth reading, even if one's taste for gems is as yet undeveloped." H. P. Whitlock

+ N Y Times p4 Je 15 '41 360w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 15 '41 270w

"Mr. Kornitzer's reminiscences are blunt, brief and businesslike. He whips at high speed through as many bizarre and sensational dramas as would provide the material for a whole series of books. 'The Jeweled Trail,' although the third or fourth volume of its kind by the author, betrays no signs of 'leavings.' There is hardly an episode in it which is not only worth double its space but, as we suggested, has not in it the plot of a full-length thriller. Almost every incident glitters with force, clarity and authenticity, with strange characters and sometimes stranger coincidences."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p504 O 5 '40 440w

KOTINSKY, RUTH. Adult education councils. 172p $1.25 Am. assn. for adult educ.

374 Education of adults

40-27533

"The adult education council is consistently viewed throughout the book as a significant aspect of the broader area of community organization. The author opens the book with a preliminary consideration of the nature of ancient and modern community councils and later returns to a more extended discussion of the topic. She also develops the point of view that councils of adult education are significant only insofar as they provide general centers for discussion and action concerning the problems and activities of the constituent agencies within the geographic area which the council encompasses. . . . The major part of the book is composed of three chapters in which attention is given to the practical difficulties of councils. . . . The book concludes with [a] discussion of the role of councils of adult education in a democracy." (Library Q) Index.

KOTINSKY, RUTH—Continued

Reviewed by P. H. Sheats

Am Soc R 6:615 Ag '41 60w

J Home Econ 32:477 S '40 20w

"A pioneer study, particularly one which intends to be only a general survey of the field and which has succeeded in this respect as admirably as this one has, should not be appraised so critically as one which builds on a body of previous literature and well-defined discussion and claims to be a definitive work. Nonetheless, this study seems inadequate in at least two respects. The most important of these is that Miss Kotinsky does not point out that only with the greatest difficulty can a council serve both as a means of co-ordinating specific programs and as a source of professional unity for all workers in adult education. . . . The second point on which the book might be criticized is that little specific or factual material has been included." C. O. Houle

+ — Library Q 11:220 Ap '41 1000w

KOVACS, FREDERIC W. L., pseud. The untamed Balkans. 248p maps $2 Modern age 949.6 Balkan states (W) 41-13350

This book is in three parts. Part one reviews the story of Germany's conquest of Yugoslavia and Greece in the spring of 1941. Part two summarizes the histories of the principal Balkan countries; part three attempts to prophesy concerning the future of these states. The author, a journalist, holds a Leftish point of view and sees a possible solution of the problem only in some relationship between the Balkans and Soviet Russia. Index.

Booklist 38:33 O 1 '41

Reviewed by Sonia Tomara

Books p8 JI 20 '41 500w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:384 Ja '42 20w

Reviewed by R. H. McDonough

Library J 66:614 JI '41 110w

Nation 153:289 S 27 '41 200w

"Mr. Kovacs writes about the Balkans with verve and imagination. His book is short but highly informative and gives a clear picture of recent events. It is full of picturesque details and colorful episodes, a sort of political Baedeker of Southeastern Europe, always fresh and stimulating." H. B. Kranz

+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 JI 26 '41 750w

KOZLENKO, WILLIAM, ed. American scenes; with an introduction. 269p $2.50 Day

812.08 American drama—Collections

(W) 41-10666

Twelve one-act plays about regional life in the United States. Contents: Virginia overture, by Arnold Sundgaard; Fire and cloud, by Richard Wright; Death of an outcast, by Manuel Komroff; The shy and lonely, by Irwin Shaw; The love of Annunziata, by Pietro di Donato; Saturday night, by Paul Green; Ask anybody in the neighborhood, by Benjamin Appel; Landscape with figures, by Tennessee Williams; The doorway to Limbo, by Oscar Saul and Lew Lantz; Wait and see, by Leane Zug-smith; The street attends a funeral, by William Kozlenko; Freedom is a trumpet, by William Merrick.

Booklist 38:49 O 15 '41

"Since the one-act play thrives in the little theaters and amateur groups scattered through the land, any collection of such plays coming honestly from the regional life ought to be of value. Not, perhaps, that the amateurs of Oklahoma wouldn't rather put on plays about Park Avenue; but Mr. Kozlenko isn't going to let them have the excuse of necessity for so doing." W. P. Eaton

Books p24 O 19 '41 90w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 JI '41

KOZLENKO, WILLIAM, comp. One hundred non-royalty one-act plays. 802p $3.75 Greenberg

812.08 Dramas—Collections (W) 41-51635

"Plays for children, young people, and adults, uneven in interest and quality; 10 are radio plays. A great variety is included; each play is briefly characterized as to its type or its cast requirements." Booklist

Booklist 37:355 Ap 1 '41

Pratt p16 D '41

Springf'd Republican p7e S 7 '41 240w

KOZLENKO, WILLIAM, comp. One hundred non-royalty radio plays; with an introd. by Sherman H. Dryer. 683p $4.25 Greenberg

792 Radio plays (W) 41-12801

Anthology of radio plays, of from fifteen to thirty minutes in length. Can be used for radio clubs, elementary and high schools, colleges, radio workshops, camps, and radio stations. All are non-royalty plays.

Booklist 38:31 O 1 '41

"Excellent anthology of first-class radio plays which fills a real need for library collections. Many of the finest talents writing regularly for the air are included. . . . Recommended for general purchase." George Freedley

+ Library J 66:462 My 15 '41 50w

Reviewed by W. H. Latham

Springf'd Republican p7e JI 27 '41 290w

KRAUS, RENE. The men around Churchill. 339p $3 Lippincott

923.2 Statesmen, British. Great Britain—Biography (W) 41-15119

Portraits of fourteen men prominent in Great Britain's present war policies. They are: Lord Halifax, Anthony Eden, Sir Archibald Sinclair, Sir Kingsley Wood, Ernest Bevin, Herbert Morrison, Clement Attlee, Albert Victor Alexander, Arthur Greenwood, Sir John Greer Dill, General Sir Archibald Wavell, Lord Beaverbrook, Sir Stafford Cripps, George VI. Index.

"Some of the sketches, like the personalities, are fuller and more vivid than others. But Mr. Kraus commands and holds the reader's attention by a judicious combination of information, anecdote, and paradox." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic N '41 200w

Booklist 38:34 O 1 '41

"Mr. Kraus has assembled a wealth of information, a vast amount of detail and the requisite number of chatty anecdotes. In the case of Beaverbrook and Cripps he uses these skillfully to present striking and revealing pictures." J. M. Minifie

+ Books p4 S 7 '41 1000w

Cath World 154:252 N '41 350w

Commonweal 34:500 S 12 '41 50w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:385 Ja '42 10w

"The book gives excellent backflashes of English prewar party politics and foreign policy. Interesting, timely, and recommended." G. W. Hill

+ Library J 66:668 Ag '41 110w

"This book is an excellent piece of journalism, marred only now and then by an unfortunate propensity to wisecracks and even puns. Thus, we learn that Greenwood 'is a prophet minus a beard,' and that Alexander 'did not confine himself, to ruling the waves'—he waived the rules.'" John Cournos

+ — N Y Times p3 Ag 31 '41 430w

"Shrewd, crisp, up to date, and loaded with facts."

+ New Yorker 17:56 Ag 30 '41 40w

"Mr. Kraus's sketches are not so incisively biting, not so critically balanced, as those which that consummate journalist, A. G. Gardiner, used to write. They are uniformly favorable and in part flattering. But then this is no time for criticism. . . . The book is one to hearten all believers in Britain and all lovers of democracy, and it deserves a wide circulation among the faint-spirited and doubting." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 S 6 '41 850w

Time 38:76 Ag 25 '41 1750w

Wis Lib Bul 37:155 O '41

KREBS, RICHARD JULIUS HERMAN. See Valtin, J.

KREIS, HANS. Picture puzzle story book; introd. by Wilma McFarland. 95p il $2 Barnes, A.S.

Puzzles 41-21883

"Short stories, many historical, each with one of those pictures in which there are concealed figures to be discovered only by turning the book sideways or wrong side up." Christian Century

Christian Century 58:1546 D 10 '41 30w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 16 '41 80w

KRESS, ANDREW JOHN, ed. Introduction to the cooperative movement. 370p $3 Harper

334 Cooperation 41-6840

"This book presents a comprehensive survey of the consumer cooperative movement, from Robert Owen on, in a carefully sifted collection of readings covering virtually every phase of consumer cooperation the world over. . . . Here will be found the writings of prominent authorities living and dead on numerous types of cooperative experience. Here will be found historic data, critical appraisals of various schools of cooperative thought, and full descriptions of cooperative activities in many fields, including: cooperative medicine; industrial cooperatives; credit unions; agricultural cooperatives; etc." (Publisher's note) Index.

"Professor Kress's book has many of the advantages and disadvantages of any collection of readings. The writers are not uniformly interesting and one occasionally wishes the editor had rewritten some of the selections. Likewise the readings must of necessity have been taken from their context, thus losing some of their value. On the other hand the selections enable the reader to obtain ideas, facts and opinions from those actually in the movement rather than read the pedantic interpretations of an onlooker. At the end of each division is a select bibliography for those desiring further study. For a person wishing to get a working knowledge of an important movement, this book is recommended." F. T. de Vyver

+ — Am Econ R 31:676 S '41 370w

Booklist 37:432 My 15 '41

"The authors quoted range from Robert Owen and Fourier down to George Russell (AE) and Toyohiko Kagawa. This wide range is further extended by a generous bibliography. This 350-page book is a one-volume reference library, better for browsing or consulting on specific points than for reading from cover to cover, except for those who can adjust themselves repeatedly to rapid changes of style and treatment." Edward Skillin, Jr.

+ Commonweal 34:67 My 9 '41 600w

J Home Econ 33:485 S '41 50w

"Mr. Kress has produced a commendable work which here and there might be made more readable with greater clarity of inner reference. Also it would have been improved by more synoptic or overview comment." L. M. Brooks

+ — Social Forces 20:280 D '41 280w

Springf'd Republican p10 J1 16 '41 380w

Wis Lib Bul 37:134 J1 '41

KREYMBORG, ALFRED, ed. Poetic drama. 855p $5 Modern age

808.82 Dramas—Collections 41-27677

"Useful and reasonably comprehensive anthology of plays in verse, from the Agamemnon of Aeschylus to Shenandoah, by Delmore Schwartz. The complete texts of thirty-three plays are given." New Yorker

"Excellent introduction and study helps."

+ New Yorker 17:60 D 27 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 28 '41 330w

KROGH, AUGUST. Comparative physiology of respiratory mechanisms. 172p il $3 Univ. of Pa. press

612.2 Respiration 41-5690

"Dr. Krogh, Professor of Zoophysiology at Copenhagen University, Denmark . . . delivered the William J. Cooper Foundation lectures at Swarthmore College in the spring of 1939. This book contains the substance of those lectures. However, the delay in publication, caused by difficulties in communication, made numerous corrections and revisions of the literature necessary. The theme of the treatise is the adaptation of the respiratory mechanisms of animals to the widely divergent differences in the 'call for oxygen' and in the accessibility of oxygen encountered in nature. The subjects discussed, after a brief introduction, are: the call for oxygen; the access to oxygen; the forces acting in the transport of oxygen; (and carbon dioxide) through living tissues; respiration in water; emergency respiration (the transition to air breathing); respiration in air; the respiratory functions of blood; tracheal respiration; and a brief discussion of important problems yet to be solved." (J Phys Chem) Contains a list of over two hundred references; a list of nearly three hundred animals with the pages on which their respiratory mechanisms are mentioned; and an index.

"Physical chemists who are interested in problems of diffusion and membrane permeability will find much interesting factual and theoretical material in this monograph. Physiologists and biochemists will find an amazingly large compilation of data for so short a book, as well as numerous fruitful suggestions for future research. All scientists will appreciate the efficient manner in which Professor Krogh has applied physical and chemical laws to one of the fundamental problems of biology." L. E. Arnow

+ J Phys Chem 45:1050 Je '41 390w

Scientific Bk Club R 12:4 F '41 230w

KROLL, HARRY HARRISON. The usurper. 450p $2.50 Bobbs

(W) 41-51636

Stan Butterworth, an uncultured Southerner, loved above his station and when he was filted by Lacey, retired to keep store at Barlow Bend and brood over his sorrow. People said he was so mean that he lived on water moccasins meat, but at any rate he saved money. Then after eighteen years he met Lacey again, and tho she had married a cotton planter of her own class, for her sake Stan was drawn into the life of the Mississippi delta country. Because of his money he became a power to be reckoned with, but it was not Lacey who captured him.

KROLL, H. H.—Continued

Booklist 37:360 Ap 1 '41

"The fast living, improvident planters are clearly and truly drawn. The small Delta town and its people, with their inimitable civic pride, their cotton festivals and band concerts, might pass for any one of a hundred such towns. 'The Usurper' is not an outstanding book, but it is a good one, and its author writes penetratingly of the present-day deep South in a natural, interesting and refreshing manner." Lawrence Olson

+ Books p4 Mr 23 '41 700w

Reviewed by Harvey Breit

New Repub 104:703 My 19 '41 650w

"Mr. Kroll is some one to read. He is some one to watch, I think. His seriousness and intensity dominate his prose, which is increasingly better. Also he can tell a story and this is his best." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 30 '41 700w

Reviewed by Bess Jones

Sat R of Lit 24:10 My 24 '41 650w

Wis Lib Bul 37:77 Ap '41

KRYNINE, DIMITRI PAVLOVITCH. Soil mechanics; its principles and structural applications. 451p il $5 McGraw

620.19 Soils (engineering) 41-10275

"The principal aim of the author has been to present a discussion of the fundamentals of soil mechanics in a rather simple and readable form. The book has been written primarily for civil engineering students and for civil engineers in practice—designers and construction and maintenance engineers—who wish to have a general outlook on the present state of this branch of engineering knowledge. Particular attention has been given to answering possible queries, such as what can soil mechanics do for the practicing engineer and particularly what kind of information can be expected from the laboratory? Since the book is not addressed to soil-mechanics specialists and laboratory technicians, the laboratory side of the subject has been described in a concise form. . . . Very little mathematics has been used throughout the book." (Pref) Indexes.

"This important new text on soil mechanics presents in clear and understandable form the fundamental principles and concepts of the science. . . . This text should prove of great value not only to the student but also to the engineer who wishes to acquaint himself with the fundamental principles and concepts of soil mechanics and their practical applications to foundation engineering." D. M. Burmister

+ Eng N 126:80 Je 19 '41 320w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:47 Jl '41

KUEHN, MARTIN H. Mathematics for electricians. 2d ed 254p il $1.75 McGraw

510 Mathematics. Electricity—Problems, exercises, etc. 41-9038

"The principal change made in this edition is the addition of several chapters on alternating-current problems. A considerable variety of alternating-current problems has now been provided. Several chapters of the original text have been completely rewritten, and minor changes have been made in others. The number of problems taken from, or adaptable to, the field of radio electricity has been increased considerably." (Pref. to the 2d ed) For earlier edition see Book Review Digest, 1931, Index.

Booklist 37:549 Jl 15 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:44 Jl '41

KUHL, ARTHUR. Royal road. 189p $1.75 Sheed 41-19416

Story of a good, simple colored man, who came North from Kentucky to seek work in order to support himself and his mother. As the result of one evening spent with two cleverer friends Jesse was accused of a crime he did not commit, and paid for another's sin with his own life.

"By any standard of craftsmanship, 'Royal Road' is a good performance. Arthur Kuhl's style has the simplicity of a seasoned writer, and he has the skill of presenting characters through the medium of their own speech and actions." Clare Godfrey

+ Books p14 N 16 '41 700w

"This story . . . is well planned, swift, and dramatic in movement; it should leave every apathetic white American stricken with a sense of our common guilt, and leave every sincere Catholic determined to aid the cause of organized reform."

+ Cath World 154:507 Ja '42 90w

"A first novel by a young writer, we are told. He should have a future."

Christian Century 58:1276 O 15 '41 30w

"Under a less sensitive hand it might have been offensive, but as Kuhl tells the story it is a simple, heart-breaking tale of a gentle Negro whose doom was written in the color of his skin." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p6 O 19 '41 650w

KUNO, YOSHI SABURO. Japanese expansion on the Asiatic continent; a study in the history of Japan, with special reference to her international relations with China, Korea, and Russia. 3v v 2 416p il map $4 Univ. of Calif. [24s Cambridge]

952 Japan—History. Japan—Foreign relations (37-28606)

"This [is] the second volume of Professor Kuno's proposed three-volume work on the history of Japanese expansion. . . . Volume I [Book Review Digest, 1937] presented the story of Japan's continental expansion from earliest times to the collapse of Hideyoshi's Korean campaigns at the close of the sixteenth century. Volume II covers the Tokugawa period from the beginning of the seventeenth to the middle years of the nineteenth century. The organization is similar to that of Volume I. Seven chapters of text [are followed by] . . . an appendix covering one hundred pages . . . [in which] the author has reproduced in translation a selected group of significant documents, illustrative of many aspects of the subject." (Pol Sci Q) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Ryusaku Tsunoda

Am Hist R 46:858 Jl '41 850w

"Minor errors are to be noted. . . . There is a good deal of verbosity and a great deal of reiteration. Nevertheless, as indicated above, all students of Nipponese history are further and permanently indebted to Professor Kuno for the publication of this second volume." H. F. MacNair

+ Ann Am Acad 215:185 My '41 700w

"The great value of Professor Kuno's work, apart from its technical excellence, lies in his impartiality and objectiveness—qualities which are all too rare amongst contemporary Japanese historians. The appendices, which contain translations of pertinent documents, are particularly useful." H. J. Timperley

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:568 D 7 '40 1150w

Reviewed by G. N. Steiger

Pacific Affairs 14:477 D '41 950w

"[This volume] will be welcomed by all Western students of modern Japan. . . . But although Professor Kuno has brought together for the period 1600 to 1860 the findings of much of Japan's ablest scholarship, a major adverse criticism appears to be justified. This criticism applied with equal force to Volume I, and no attempt seems to have been made by the editor of the series to avoid similar failings in Volume II. Since Professor Kuno was writing in English, a language admittedly of great difficulty even for scholars among the Japanese, the editor of the series should have eliminated the wordiness, the needless repetitions and the pronounced ambiguity which mark the style. There are minor errors of fact." P. H. Ciyde

+ — Pol Sci Q 56:303 Je '41 600w

L

LA FARGE, CHRISTOPHER. The Wilsons; il. by Robert Ball. 246p $2 Coward-McCann

(W) 41-51897

The chapters of this novel appeared separately in the New Yorker. In their present form they show the slow but sure attempts of Fairlie Wilson to break into high society in Providence, Rhode Island, followed more reluctantly by her husband and family.

Reviewed by R. M. Gay
Atlantic O '41 170w

Booklist 38:36 O '41 41

"The Wilsons' is a radical departure from Mr. La Farge's poetical works. It is slight but readable and amusing." Rose Feld

+ Books p8 Ag 31 '41 410w

Cath World 154:124 O '41 270w

"Wicked and graceful—one might almost say feline—study of American snobism. Individually these sketches were very deft and amusing. But they appeared, nevertheless, somewhat disembodied. We could not have been expected to see how good they really were, how much Christopher La Farge has put into them, how an apparently trivial and inconsequent reference in one is picked up again and illuminated in another. Now the study is rounded out." M. W.

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 24 '41 700w

New Yorker 17:78 S 6 '41 40w

"There is nothing bitter in Mr. La Farge's delineation, but, in a quiet way, he manages to take off a good deal of skin. And the skinning is quite impartial—it isn't only the Wilsons who suffer. Not all sketches look well in a book—these gain by collection." S. V. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 24:10 S 13 '41 450w

"There is very little acid in these episodic portraits. The author seems to feel that the Wilson social climbing really injures no one and gratifies a forgivable vanity. The old families whom Fairlie cultivates are amused, but since neither Joe nor Fairlie have designs on others' happiness and are content in their own marriage, Providence is not the worse for their tactics."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 24 '41 230w

Wis Lib Bul 37:156 O '41

LAING, DILYS (BENNETT) (MRS ALEXANDER KINNAN LAING). Another England; poems. 67p $2 Duell

821 (W) 41-52017

"A first book of sensitive and often incisive verse, some of which has been published in this magazine." New Yorker

Booklist 38:128 D 15 '41

"This book is an important representative of a new race of thinkers—call them English-Americans, or American-Englishmen, what you will—who are at the root of an invigorating and fresh school of literature. Its author's attitude toward the land of her adoption is revealed in the lines: Three centuries I sailed behind the free forefathers of my thought, and while she found, to her astonishment, that in that land 'time had warped a chain of custom and of compromise,' she appears to have discovered also an atmosphere conducive to production." Pearl Strachan

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 10 '42 450w

"She has the ingenuity to bind incompatibles with a single voice of miracle. Miracle is its only explanation. By the grace of this unusually perceptive modern Cassandra we displace the ennui in the sense toward phenomena with a sparkling sensation. Especially in poems like 'I Crucified My Brother,' a direct influence from Elinor Wylie, she bends into splendor in a spirit that is her own. Her lyricism sings with fire in the image by whose volcanic power we are sometimes shaken in our senses to be revived back in our innocence, and a sense of guilt, of our entire heritage. I expect that Dilys Bennett Laing will take a prominent place in American literature some day. Her work has scope." Maurice Swan

+ N Y Times p5 D 7 '41 700w

New Yorker 17:135 D 6 '41 10w

"I know nothing about the poet, save what I read here. But that she is a very fine poet I have not the slightest doubt, that she possesses that gift greater than rubies and infinitely rare among versifiers of the day, a true ear and a native genius for the precise word—of this I have no doubt either. Whether she writes gravely, gripping the heart, or lightly of cat, pheasant, squirrel, or skier, her pen is impelled by the wrist of an artist, she knows the ways of words. . . This book is distinguished. There is not the slightest doubt about it. Its rare virtue should not go unrecognized." W. R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 24:8 N 29 '41 350w

LAING, J., and ROLFE, ROBERT THATCHER. Non-ferrous foundry practice. 336p il $6 Van Nostrand [21s Chapman]

621.74 Foundry practice. Alloys. Metallurgy 41-1709

"A comprehensive survey of foundry practice, including a detailed study of the metallurgy of the alloys in use. There is a special chapter on moulding sands and a well-illustrated one on foundry furnaces. The book is suitable only for the practical worker and the technician." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"Excellent written, this volume is a welcome and useful addition to the rather short list of up-to-date books on foundry practice." V. P. Weaver

+ Chem & Met Eng 48:173 F '41 160w

N Y New Tech Bks 25:47 O '40

LAMBERT, JANET. Star-spangled summer; il. by Sandra James. 281p $2 Dutton

41-1239

Carrol Houghton lived with her grandmother; her mother was dead and her father she seldom saw. When a school friend invited her to visit her home at a Kansas army post, Carrol had her first glimpse of a hearty, happy, affectionate family and it was the beginning of new life for both Carrol and her father. For older girls.

"General happiness is not forced, and nobody is too good to be true. The book leaves a good taste." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 My 18 '41 330w

"This is a thoroughly pleasant story for girls of the early 'teen age. There is no artificial glamour of military life about it—just a friendly account of young people who grew up in a special tradition, but of young people whose activities, reactions and conversation are, save for an occasional lapse into sentimentality, recorded with so much knowledge of present-day youth that they seem to have been described by one of their own contemporaries." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 F 16 '41 320w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 16 '41 120w

LAMBERT, REITA (MRS A. F. NEVIN). Yesterday's daughter. 268p $2 Macrae Smith co. 41-5110

Pretty Sara-Maud (Sammy for short) worked in a New York department store, lived with her mother over a notion store, and stepped out with Ed, a garage mechanic. And then without adequate explanation Sara-Maud's mother maneuvered her into a position as doing nothing companion to a wealthy young girl spending the summer in a New England resort. Sammy is unhappy and puzzled, but finally reaches a solution that seems right for everybody.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p15 Mr 30 '41 80w

"The mystery behind this Cinderella story is well worked out. Much of the tale is developed in dialogue fresh and unstrained. It is an entertaining fluff of a novel." Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p26 Mr 30 '41 120w

LAMBERT, SYLVESTER MAXWELL. Yankee doctor in paradise. 393p $3 Little

B or 92 Physicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. South Sea islands (W) 41-7383

In 1920 Dr Heiser, of the Rockefeller foundation, sent the author to Papua to help in the fight against the hookworm disease. In this book Dr Lambert recalls his experiences in fighting other diseases as well and in other islands of the South seas, during the years since his first assignment. Index.

"The book is delightfully written. The author has a keen sense of humor, is a philosopher, and a good deal of a poet. Some of his descriptions are beautiful. He confesses to a homesickness whenever he thinks of Fiji, which has the most perfect climate in the world. The book is a fit companion piece to Heiser's An American Doctor's Odyssey, and can be recommended to every class of reader." M. P. Ravenel

+ Am J Pub Health 31:1218 N '41 900w
Booklist 37:490 Je 15 '41

"These multitudinous experiences and adventures are thrilling; the pictures of native life and exotic lands are alluring, but the book's chief excitement is its record of progress toward triumph over disease." Percy Burgess

+ Books p1 My 18 '41 950w

"To call the message of the book solemn is not to say that the text is. The two best stories in the book cannot be quoted, for reasons which the chuckling reader may figure out for himself, but there is much good humor, notably in the account of Dr. Lambert's adventures with pidgin English." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p5 My 11 '41 1450w

"The good Doctor . . . has come back with a nice, fat book. . . . It's in the vein of Heiser's An American Doctor's Odyssey, rather slower and less dramatic, but satisfactory reading if the doctor books haven't downed you forever. The best parts are medical, even technical. Dr. Lambert's anthropological and ethnological speculations are no better than would be those of any other intelligent layman, but on his own beat he is solid." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:86 My 10 '41 900w

Reviewed by M. S. Ulrich

Sat R of Lit 24:16 Je 21 '41 600w

"There is a robustness and raciness to this book and evidences of Yankee ingenuity and humor. Over and above every other impression, however, lies that of the unyielding determination of a dynamic personality that health must be improved."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:4 Jl '41 420w
Springf'd Republican p7e My 25 '41 750w

Wis Lib Bul 37:139 Jl '41

LAMKEY, ROSEMARY. Skittles; designed by [the author]. unsp $1 Holt

40-33526

Fairy story for grades three to four. It is the story of Skittles, the son of a good fairy called Motherkin Goody. Skittles was utterly incapable of resisting his favorite pursuit—going wool-gathering—until the day he fell into the bog. Illustrated by the author.

"Distinguished."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:40 D 7 '40 10w

"Both in its text and its illustrations, the story of Skittles is even more charming and memorable than that of Grutchy in the author's first book, The Lonely Dwarf (Book Review Digest, 1939) which was written when she was only fourteen. Her books are like no others and they have the hallmark of a unique and delightful kind of imagination."

+ Wis Lib Bul 37:20 Ja '41

LAMPREY, LOUISE. Building an Empire; maps and decorations by Raymond Lufkin. 271p $2 Stokes

942 Great Britain—History—Juvenile literature. Great Britain—Colonies—Juvenile literature (W) 41-16294

Outlines the history of the British Empire from prehistoric days to the present, by means of interesting incidents and anecdotes. For readers of twelve to eighteen. Bibliography. Index.

"A strong anti-German feeling begins to show in the account of the Boer War, growing sharper in tone as modern events are discussed. British mistakes are omitted on the grounds that half the world is fighting to save the good for which Britain stands. . . . Should stimulate high school students with a taste for history and be entertaining supplementary reading for history classes. Recommended for limited purchase." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 66:679 Ag '41 150w

"Every high school student should have it." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 24:8 N 8 '41 40w

LAMSA, GEORGE MAMISHISHO, tr. See Bible. New Testament. The New Testament according to the Eastern text

LANDI, ELISSA. Women and Peter. 370p $2.50 Alliance bk.

41-22070

At seventeen Peter fell in love with Virginia Hollister, a married woman ten years older. Ten years later Peter became entangled in a love affair with Virginia's daughter, young, sure of herself, and equally sure that she could not be happy with Peter's work and Peter's friends in the theatrical world.

"Elissa Landi has shown her skill as a writer of novels on several occasions, but this is her most ambitious offering and decidedly her best. And it is not in the category of fiction turned out by Peter's mother, who was prolific and popular." Lisle Bell

+ Books p16 O 12 '41 160w

"Peter's loves and Peter's jobs in the theatre are the twin and intertwined themes of this alive and entertaining novel. Its most engaging quality is its youngness." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p6 O 5 '41 700w

"The sections dealing with the theatre are, as one might expect, authentic, and are handled with an agreeable lack of grease-paint romanticism."

New Yorker 17:87 O 4 '41 40w

"When the author is exploring the hectic ruthlessness of the commerce of the stage, she writes with brittle realism and honest insight. Miss Landi reveals a flair for characterization and an intuitive skill for analysis, but her people seem odd by-products, not always comprehensible to those of ordinary casting."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e O 12 '41 240w

LANDIS, PAUL HENRY. Rural life in process. 599p il maps $3.75 McGraw

323.354 Sociology, Rural. U.S.—Social conditions 40-31406

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"The book will undoubtedly be warmly welcomed by teachers of rural sociology and by students of rural social problems. It brings together between two covers a wealth of information not easily available; and it is well written." H. C. Milley

+ Am Econ R 31:187 Mr '41 750w

Reviewed by Merton Oylor

Am J Soc 47:258 S '41 100w

"Judged by the number and quality of books in the field, rural sociology has now come of age. Distinctive in point of view, this book would have been considered outstanding five years ago. Now it takes its place alongside the others." R. E. Wakeley

Am Soc R 6:586 Ag '41 320w

"The only native-born American social science, rural sociology, receives its latest systematization in this excellent text." C. C. Zimmerman

+ Ann Am Acad 214:242 Mr '41 400w

Reviewed by Mark Rich

Christian Century 58:1378 N 5 '41 700w

Reviewed by David Snedden

School & Society 53:283 Mr 1 '41 170w

"The author has succeeded admirably in organizing his materials in a logical and sociological frame of reference. His treatment of population movements as processes of social interaction are exceptionally well done. Throughout the book the psychological and cultural aspects are in evidence. Few modern sources have escaped the author's eye and he gives generous credit to a wide range of research workers. In conclusion, it must be said that Landis has set a new high standard of scholarship in the field of rural sociology." C. H. Hamilton

+ Social Forces 19:437 Mr '41 420w

LANDMAN, ISAAC, ed. See Universal Jewish encyclopedia

LANDON, KENNETH PERRY. The Chinese in Thailand. 321p $2.50 Inst. of Pacific relations. Am. council; Oxford

325.251 Chinese in Siam A41-3073

"This study deals with the relations between the natives and the 'Chinese' in Thailand during the Thai nationalist revival which has flourished increasingly since World War I. 'Chinese' are persons in Thailand who still cling almost entirely to Chinese native culture and sovereignty and have, at most, only a nominal interest in 'Thailand for the Thai.' This distinction between 'Chinese' and Chinese is important because through the centuries a good proportion of Thai blood has become, by admixture, the same as that of the Chinese. This is particularly true for the urban, industrial, commercial and ruling classes. The only exception is the priesthood." Pacific Affairs

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:386 Ja '42 10w

"Professor Landon's introductory chapter brings together a wealth of information not readily available elsewhere; and the book in its entirety is a significant and scholarly contribution to an understanding of population problems in Southeastern Asia. The book is well organized and easy to read. Although there are numerous lengthy quotations, they are well chosen and do not prove distracting.

The index, however, is annoyingly inadequate." J. L. Christian

+ — Geog R 31:695 O '41 430w

Reviewed by C. C. Zimmerman

Pacific Affairs 14:368 S '41 700w

LANE, CARL D. Boatowner's sheet anchor; il. by the author. 311p $2.75 Norton

623.8225 Yachts and yachting (W) 41-5838

"A practical guide to fitting out, upkeep and alteration of the small yacht." (Subtitle) "Concentrates on the boat itself rather than on how to run it. It covers such matters as the selection of a boat, either new or used; inspection of used boats; conversion of fishing or open boats to cruisers; arrangement of cabins and decks; maintenance and repair; motor installations and rigs." (Books) Index.

Booklist 37:404 My 1 '41

Reviewed by W. H. Taylor

+ Books p19 S 21 '41 80w

LANE, CARL D. What the citizen should know about the merchant marine; il. by the author. 201p $2 Norton

387.5 Merchant marine—U.S. (W) 41-51946

"Historical background introduces a manual of information on the American merchant marine of today, its vessels, seamen, officers, and masters. Chapters discuss the merchantmen in port and at sea, the building of a merchant ship, national defense, and the future." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:74 N 1 '41

"Carl Lane has for years made a special study of the merchant marine and in the present volume ably essays to tell what it is, of what it is composed and what it does. . . The volume is well illustrated by the author." P. J. Searles

+ Books p2 Ja 25 '42 320w

New Repub 106:94 Ja 19 '42 40w

"This is a finely comprehensive book—and finely interesting, as well."

+ N Y Times p39 N 23 '41 330w

"It's a handy, up-to-date reference book."

+ Springf'd Republican p14 O 17 '41 300w

LANE, ROBERT HILL. The teacher in the modern elementary school. 397p il $2.40 Houghton

371.3 Education of children. Education—

Experimental methods. Teaching 41-1484

"In The Progressive Elementary School [Book Review Digest, 1939] the writer made an attempt to outline a tenable and acceptable philosophy of education and to indicate in very general terms how that philosophy could be applied. That book dealt, in short, with the theory of the modern elementary school. The purpose of this book is to present good practice from the standpoint of the classroom teacher in the elementary school. It is hoped that a third book may present progressive school practices from the standpoint of the principal." (Foreword) Index.

Booklist 37:319 Mr 15 '41

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '41

LANG, PAUL HENRY. Music in western civilization. 1107p il maps $5 Norton

780.9 Music—History and criticism 41-9128

In his introduction to this history of music, the author says he has addressed himself "to those lovers of music who combine enjoyment of their art with a curiosity as to all that goes to form a part of their intellectual estate. The reader must not expect a technical or biographical essay, for this is a chronicle of the participation of music in the making of Western civilization." In carrying out his idea of music in its relationship to other arts, he has included twenty-five reproductions of musical paintings, sculptures, decorations, and three maps. Dr. Lang is associate professor of musicology at Columbia university. Bibliography. Index.

LANG, P. H.—Continued

Booklist 38:92 N 15 '41

"Paul Lang has broken a long, dry spell. Not since the appearance of two great histories of music by Dr. Charles Burney and Sir John Hawkins, back in 1776, has there been anything in the English language which can compare with Lang's colossal achievement. . . Old fallacies are attacked with the directness of the pugilist, but never below the belt. A treatise on music education is imbedded in the volume which might well be reprinted in a pamphlet for distribution to all teachers in music departments and conservatories. . . 'Perfect Wagnerites' will bristle, but in fairness will recognize that the composer receives his due. A better presentation of the evils of Wagnerism has not appeared." W. D. Allen

+ Books p23 O 26 '41 700w

"The ample scale of the work affords room for a vast amount of detail in the history of music. The industrious reader and the student who uses the volume for reference will alike find ample rewards. A bibliography of more than a thousand titles and a copious index are further boons for students."

+ Christian Century 58:1306 O 22 '41 260w

"This book is a colossal achievement, unrivalled in modern English literature. . . It is an invaluable treasury of musical knowledge." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 155:18 D 1 '41 170w

"When one contemplates the dreary rank of 'secondary source' works which are now being produced for students of history, it is with real pleasure that one reads Paul Lang's 'Music in Western Civilization.' It is not contrast alone which makes this work impressive. It is an important contribution to historical writing. It is the work of a philosopher, of a stylist and of an historian who deserves that much misused title. It is an original work in that it brings together vast areas of knowledge which have never been assembled before. It casts light on phases of musical history where understanding has not been easy. It adds new emphasis which will do much to reconstruct the current conception of the musical inheritance of the western world." Margaret Byard

+ Commonwealth 35:299 Ja 9 '42 1050w

"The most complete and in every way the finest thing of its kind, this book is indispensable to libraries interested in music. Dr. Lang's sympathies are broad; he sees his whole subject clearly and writes about it in an absorbingly readable style. Thoroughly indexed, the book is convenient for reference purposes. . . Not unnaturally, considering its 1,107 pages, this book is not free from errata; these will undoubtedly be corrected in subsequent editions." P. L. Miller

+ Library J 66:730 S 1 '41 110w

"The style is smooth, suave, and subtle, even if at times it verges on verbosity. There is a general tendency toward repetition of ideas, but it is frequently necessary to view the same idea from more than one angle, which would both explain and excuse this tendency. The most serious adverse criticism is the fact that the book is not well documented. Frequent quotations are given without book or page reference. To have included such information in every case, however, would have made the book unwieldy to handle, and it is a question whether it would have made it more usable since this is not a reference book." H. E. Bush

+ Library Q 12:141 Ja '42 800w

"Paul Henry Lang's new book is a tremendous achievement, product of comprehensive and comprehending scholarship. Mr. Lang's range of vision is vast, moving from ancient Greece to the beginning of the twentieth century. His preception is equal to the size of the undertaking, for he has the imaginative power that can transform erudition into a history of vivid, meaningful immediacy." Howard Taubman

+ N Y Times p3 D 21 '41 1300w

Pratt p18 D '41

"[The book] is solid and authoritative without being pedantic. It knows all sources and is virtually a compilation of them; on the other hand, even the expert is constantly taken by surprise by its flashes of insight, by what might almost be called historical discoveries, like its vindication of Baroque opera, the parallel it draws between Vivaldi and Bach, Corelli and Handel, or Lessing and Gluck. It is outstanding, too, in that it is not a nationalistic history of music. . . For all its comprehensiveness this is a very highly centralized work; for all its objectivity it is full of personalities. . . This is a disinterested book and a book of our times. It is an all embracing work, written by an American fully cognizant of the European tradition and aware of his responsibilities to it. Had it but a collection of examples of the great musical works to supplement its pictures and charts, America would possess a great history of music, one which would render it independent of European works." Alfred Einstein

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 S 27 '41 800w

Social Studies 33:48 Ja '42 30w

LANGDON, WILLIAM CHAUNCEY. Everyday things in American life, 1776-1876. [v 2] 398p il maps $3 Scribner

917.3 U.S.—Social life and customs. U.S.—
Civilization (W) (37-34608)

This second volume of a history of the development of "everyday things" in the United States covers the years 1776 to 1876. (For first volume see Book Review Digest, 1937). Contents: The Eastern river craft; Early roads and turnpikes; The directing power; Covered bridges; The Cumberland-National road; Great water highways into the West; When canals had their day; When trading was retail; What's new and the newspapers; Home-life: Downstairs; Home-life: Upstairs; The leading metals; Horse-power in agriculture; Steam in transportation. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:157 Ja 1 '42

"The telling is never breathless. [The author] doesn't give you glimpses and rush you along; in fact, this is a most leisurely book. It answers so many of those 'Where did it come from?' questions that one can scarcely glance around without finding the answer within these pages. And there's always the index to help." Richardson Wright

+ Books p7 N 30 '41 1150w

"Nicely illustrated and well indexed. A handy reference volume for the junior high school group. Recommended for public and school libraries." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 66:1049 D 1 '41 90w

Reviewed by Roger Burlingame

N Y Times p14 D 14 '41 800w

"Recommended for school libraries."

+ Social Studies 33:46 Ja '42 30w

"The subject matter is ably presented and consistently interesting, and there are more than 150 unusually good illustrations, one of the best collections of its type to be presented in one book."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 7 '41 420w

LANGDON-DAVIES, JOHN. Invasion in the snow; a study of mechanized war [Eng title: Finland; the first total war]. 202p il pl maps $2.50 Houghton [12s 6d Routledge]

947.1 Russo-Finnish war, 1939-1940
(W) 41-51604

"Strategy and tactics of the Finnish war as observed by an English correspondent, who analyzes in detail the now-familiar story: that the Russians unwisely sent columns of mechanized troops into snowbound forests, whereas the Finns, in war as in peace, knew how to adapt themselves to the environment." New Yorker

Reviewed by D. P. Barrows
Ann Am Acad 216:184 J1 '41 650w
Booklist 37:322 Mr 15 '41

"Mr. Langdon-Davies has produced a revealing, valuable and engrossing book which does equal credit to his qualities of heart and mind. . . In this book as in his books about Spain, Mr. Langdon-Davies somehow manages to get very close to the people of whom he writes. To read it is to know the Finns better and to like them and admire them. But there is something else as well: the underlying realization that even though defeat may seem inevitable it is better, when the alternative is submission or resistance, to fight even a hopeless fight." G. F. Eliot
+ Books p4 Mr 9 '41 700w

"A well-informed, sympathetic picture of this northern country whose people make friends of every foreigner who visits them. Mr. Langdon-Davies, who served as a British correspondent in Finland during the war, gives the best account this reviewer has seen of the military operations and also emphasizes the progressive social system, the working democracy in practice that gave the Finns their superb morale." W. H. Chamberlin
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 19 '41 380w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 19:875 J1 '41 10w

"Finland's defeat a year ago was soon tragically eclipsed by the humiliation of a continent and, in place of the urgency widely felt then, there is today only a rather selfish concern as to what embattled democracy can learn from that lonely war. Hence Mr. Langdon-Davies' subtitle for his account of it, 'A Study of Mechanized War,' correctly approximates our interest now, and we are satisfied with an abundance of details observed on the spot. . . Finland as a spearhead of aggression against the Soviet Union—a favorite Communist claim—the author calls a pure fancy that the Russians stupidly sacrificed 250,000 men belying. Unfortunately are the repeated references to D. N. Pritt, British M.P. and apologist for Moscow, whose errors Mr. Langdon-Davies is at pains to clear up. These echoes of internecine Leftist bickerings weary the general reader to whom this book is addressed." John Mitchell
+ Living Age 360:195 Ap '41 450w

Manchester Guardian p6 S 17 '40 220w

"The author went to Finland convinced that Soviet Russia could not be altogether bad. He would not believe that 'the Red Army could treat the common soldier precisely as the Tsar had treated him.' . . But he came back from the war completely disillusioned, despising the Russians, and earnestly determined to prove to those who had thought as he had that the Russia they had envisioned was wholly imaginary. To the latter project he devotes much of the book, and it should be required reading now, when we are inclined to overlook the Finnish war, the land-grabs in Poland, Rumania, and the Baltic states, and to welcome Russia into the fold." H. S. Ford
Nation 152:304 Mr 15 '41 500w

"One of the better war books. . . Much of it is obvious guesswork; some phases of the campaign are given disproportionate space merely because the author happened to know about those phases and obviously did not possess adequate facts about other and more important phases. Far too much of the book reads like a political treatise." H. W. Baldwin
+ N Y Times p5 Mr 23 '41 500w
New Yorker 17:82 F 15 '41 50w

Reviewed by Grace Fox
Social Studies 32:280 O '41 360w

"His accounts of the operations east of Kuhmo, of the battle of the isthmus, and of the general topography, are of interest and value. There are, too, many pages of description of his personal reactions which are of such patent sincerity that they command respect. But it is a little unfair of the publishers to associate his name with that of Mr. H. W. Nevins, who is one of the finest of our writers, and whose military judgements no one would challenge lightly. . . Mr. Langdon-Davies' military judgements are frequently unsound, and not even consistent. . . In fine, this is the strange rambling book of an over-ingenious and involved mind, and the reader will be well advised to take it all with caution."

+ Spec 165:296 S 20 '40 1000w

"A lucid study of a modern war fought on a scale small enough to permit, a complete appraisal of the factors involved."

+ Springfield Republican p8 Ap 1 '41 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p434 S 7 '40 380w

Wis Lib Bul 37:53 Mr '41

LANGHAM, JAMES R. A pocket full of clues. 309p $2 Simon & Schuster

41-5878

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p20 Ap 20 '41 110w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p8 Ap 12 '41 90w

"There's nothing like having a little fun along with your murders." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p20 Ap 13 '41 200w

Springfield Republican p7e Ap 27 '41 190w

Time 37:100 My 5 '41 40w

LANGNER, LAWRENCE, and LANGNER, MRS ARMINA (MARSHALL). Suzanna and the elders; an American comedy. 168p $2 Random house

812 41-2154

A play based on the idea of plural marriages and selective breeding, one of the chief tenets of a Socialist community established somewhere in New England during the nineteenth century.

"The play, on the stage, was found objectionably leering. It is, however, much more than that. It is a study of the break-down not only of the Oneida Community but of such communistic communities as Amana where plural marriage was not practiced. As such it is an interesting and essentially true picture of a phase of American life hitherto entirely neglected by our theater. The trouble with its treatment of the sex relations of Oneida is perhaps, inherent in the theme. . . To make the religious motivation convincing on the stage is extremely difficult, and with half a chance an audience will indulge in ribald laughter. The authors give their audience more than half a chance by treating their sex situations as comedy. It is rather a pity." W. P. Eaton
+ Books p12 F 9 '41 190w

Dramatic criticism by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 152:336 D '40 270w

"'Suzanna and the Elders' does not have the charm of the Langner earlier investigations into Americana, finding itself sometimes on the smirky side." Lewis Nichols
N Y Times p16 Ap 20 '41 80w

LANHAM, EDWIN MOULTRIE. Thunder in the earth. 570p $2.75 Harcourt

41-18113

This is the story of an oil boom town in Texas in the 1930s, and, particularly, the story of the rise and fall of Cobb Walters, an oil promoter.

LANHAM, E. M.—Continued

Booklist 38:96 N 15 '41

"Mr. Lanham handles the style he has perfected (out of Hemingway by way of James M. Cain) easily and expertly. His writing lacks the hidden lyricism, downright witchery, sheer artistry of Hemingway's. And it seemed to this reviewer that with its many brief, episodic conversations, its terseness and constraint, it was not entirely suited to giving the full flavor of a wild and flamboyant, gaudy, torrid and turbulent boom oil town. But one does not question the novel's authenticity." F. T. Marsh

+ — Books p8 S 23 '41 700w

Christian Century 58:1242 O 8 '41 40w

Reviewed by Charles Donahue

Commonweal 35:29 O 24 '41 260w

"This is real, and Cobb is a credible human being, a good guy. He has no more heroism or loyalty than your neighbor, but he holds you, nevertheless, for all his violence and lust and avarice, until, unregenerate, he begins all over again."

+ Nation 153:520 N 22 '41 150w

"In addition to being a swift, vibrant tale, full of action and suspense, 'Thunder in the Earth,' Edwin Lanham's new novel, is a kind of compendium of the history of oil. . . Edward Lanham is not a subtle writer, nor is his prose more than competent and workmanlike. In 'Thunder in the Earth,' however, he has explored every twist and facet of a really important theme, and has painted a brilliantly solid picture of the oil industry. This story of Cobb Walters is good Americana, with significance behind it. Though I do not wish to scare off any one, it is calculated to educate as well as entertain." E. H. Walton

+ N Y Times p7 O 5 '41 950w

"Mr. Lanham has perhaps learned too much about oil—how it is found, how wells are developed, how financial chicanery enters the picture—and he's more than eager to tell you everything he knows. But his locale is fresh, he's talking about something that concerns us vitally, and his characters are natural, if bare of any special originality. The first half of the book is excellent going. After that it bogs down in a mess of undigested romance and financial and legal detail." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 17:76 S 27 '41 250w

"This novel is a splendid addition to the accumulating works on what America is and what Americans are, as contrasted with the many volumes on what America was and what Americans probably never were." Phil Stong

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:14 S 27 '41 450w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 31:x winter '42 180w

LANIA, LEO, pseud. See Hermann, L.

LANKARD, FRANK GLENN. The Bible speaks to our generation. 201p $2 Oxford 220.6 Bible. Whole—Criticism, interpretation, etc. 41-1895

This book of guidance for the reading of the Bible is a presentation of the resources which it offers to meet the personal and social needs of our time. Questions and suggestions for further reading make the book specially adaptable to study groups. Bibliography. Index.

"Its appeal is to adults of mature mind, and it is especially adapted to those having no very close acquaintance with the Bible."

+ Christian Century 58:124 Ja 22 '41 80w

"The book is full of suggestive material for preachers." F. J. Moore

+ Churchman 155:19 F 1 '41 200w

LANNING, JOHN TATE. Academic culture in the Spanish colonies. 149p $1.75 Oxford

378.8 Colleges and universities—Latin America. Learning and scholarship, Spain—Colonies 41-5926

"For a number of years Doctor Lanning has been working on the problem of universities in the Spanish American colonies, their founding, organization, curriculum, influences, and other related subjects. He has now accumulated material for a two-volume study, but because of war in Spain, and now a general world war, he has been unable to check documents abroad. Hesitant to issue this work in final form before verification, he has set forth in this small book five topics from the larger work. Each of these essays has been prepared before, but they have not been printed exactly as they appear here." Social Studies

"No more important book on the Hispanic colonies has been produced in the United States in the last twenty years. The materials on which it is based are for the most part manuscripts preserved in the various archives of Spanish America—Latin manuscripts which only a scholar like Professor Lanning, thoroughly trained in the classics as well as in philosophy and political theory, can use to the best advantage. In view of the topics treated, the style of the volume is remarkably clear."

J. F. Rippey

+ Am Hist R 46:733 Ap '41 340w

"Doctor Lanning has penetrated virgin fields and he has produced a work of great value for the student of educational institutions in the western hemisphere. This brief work will make scholars eager for his final treatise." A. C. Wilgus

+ Social Studies 32:141 Mr '41 280w

LANSING, MRS ELISABETH HUBBARD. Cecily Drake, movie editor; il. by Richard Rose. 366p $2 Crowell 40-30962

Cecily Drake had always been interested in the movies, so when she was unable to finish her college course she became a reader on the staff of a film corporation. In two years she was transferred to Hollywood. The story closes with the critics giving a favorable verdict to a play written by a friend of Cecily's.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p7 F 23 '41 120w

"This side glimpse of filmdom is instructive and interesting, showing that glamour is found in working behind the scenes with authors, producers, and sometimes actors themselves. Recommended for ages twelve to sixteen." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 65:879 O 15 '40 90w

LANSING, MARION FLORENCE. Nicholas Arnold, toolmaker; il. by Armstrong Sperry. 277p $2 Doubleday

(W) 41-18122

Pawtucket, Rhode Island, in 1789, is the scene of this story for boys and girls. Nicholas Arnold, apprenticed to a blacksmith and toolmaker, takes his part as an inventor in this transition period when mills are beginning to take the place of hand workers. Eli Whitney plays a part in the story.

Booklist 38:99 N 15 '41

"It is a good story of the rise of industry in America, true to history and locality." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn BK M 17:365 S '41 100w

"The author has given us a fine story and the historical facts are well blended. Armstrong Sperry's full-page illustrations and many small sketches add a pleasing early American feeling to this excellent book. Boys and girls eleven and up will be interested." R. W. Stewart

+ Library J 66:908 O 15 '41 160w

"Well told and provides good historical background for understanding of the machine age." Jessie Stanton & E. W. Steele
+ New Repub 105:838 D 15 '41 30w

"There is exciting suspense in the plot and national breadth in the scope of this significant story, which Armstrong Sperry has illustrated with knowledge and skill. A book well worth the time of young readers 12 and up." I. S.
+ N Y Times p30 N 2 '41 240w

"Excellent." Phil Stong
+ Sat R of Lit 24:10 N 8 '41 40w

LA PIERE, RICHARD TRACY. When the living strive. 346p $2.50 Harper

41-7506

Story of more than fifty years in the life of a resident of San Francisco, a Chinese immigrant who had come to the land of Golden Mountains as a boy in 1875. During these years Lew Gan had small successes and reverses, visited his homeland, married and had children, saw the city nearly destroyed by fire and earthquake, went on again to win a fortune finally lost in 1929—but that loss could not affect Lew.

Booklist 37:491 Je 15 '41

Bookmark 2:17 N '41

"This is a common enough theme. Man is born, strives (if he is the striving kind) and dies. . . Mr. LaPiere's presentation of his theme is a good deal better than commonplace. For one thing, his setting has the virtue of newness; few novels have allowed the barbarian white reader to see a Chinatown from the inside out as Mr. LaPiere's does. For another, he is content to think about his story first and to let his theme take care of itself, which it does admirably, needing no underlining by the author. Finally, Mr. LaPiere writes, if not quite with distinction, at least adequately and sometimes very well indeed." J. H. Jackson

+ Books p6 My 11 '41 800w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '41

"This Chinatown story is informative for its insight into Chinese character and Chinese ways of living in the Inner City. It covers a long period of time, but never drags, leaping ahead from one phase to the next of Lew Gan's bouts with fortune. A well told tale, it uses pigeon English sparingly and straight translation of Chinese idiom for the most part. Lew Gan's story is a well filled scroll that continues to unroll to the end with never-flagging interest." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p6 My 11 '41 1000w

New Yorker 17:90 My 10 '41 60w

Sat R of Lit 24:20 My 31 '41 60w

Wis Lib Bul 37:156 O '41

LARGE, ERNEST CHARLES. The advance of the fungi. 488p il $4 Holt [18s Cape, J]

632.4 Fungi in agriculture. Plants—Diseases
A41-1260

Study of the development of the science of plant pathology, recording the course of the discovery of various plant diseases caused by fungi. The work of pioneer scientists and botanists is portrayed in detail. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:404 My 1 '41

Reviewed by H. M. Parshley
Books p26 My 11 '41 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '41

"Intensely interesting and highly dramatic story . . . historically accurate, written with keen understanding and subtle humor." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 66:218 Mr 1 '41 80w

Reviewed by J. G. Crowther
Nature 147:279 Mr 8 '41 1150w

Reviewed by Barrington Gates
New Statesman & Nation 20:656 D 21 '40 1200w

Reviewed by G. H. Copeland
N Y Times p15 Ag 24 '41 650w
New Yorker 17:86 Mr 22 '41 50w

"When one contemplates the amount of information contained in this book, it becomes easy to accept the author's statement, verified by his bibliography, that the material is based upon over five hundred scientific papers, books, and other published writings of the past and present. . . The book should prove of great interest to farmers and horticulturists and those others who are curious about the constant battle that must be waged against bacteria of all kinds."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:4 My '41 390w

"Mr. Large tells his tale extremely well: who did the work, and how it was done, the mistakes, the gradual corrections, the accumulation of much apparently irrelevant detail, and finally the sudden fitting of all these scattered pieces into their proper places, making a coherent and illuminating picture out of a mass of jig-saw puzzle scraps. . . The present book can be strongly commended both to scientific and to lay readers." E. J. Russell

+ Spec 165:679 D 20 '40 1350w

Reviewed by C. B. Moore

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 15 '41 950w

"One is tempted upon closing this book to wish that more scientists were novelists, and conversely, that novelists had a greater knowledge of science. Scientific text-books on the whole could well do with a little animation; and fiction might cease to be irritatingly inaccurate in detail. 'The Advance of the Fungi' is certainly a scientific text-book but its author, Mr. E. C. Large, already has a couple of highly original novels to his credit, and he writes with such exuberance and wit, as well as enthusiasm for his subject, that the general reader who knows little about fungi and cares less could hardly fail to be entertained. Nor would he put the book down after the first twenty pages."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p118 Mr 8 '41 700w

Wis Lib Bul 37:90 My '41

LARRIMORE, LIDA, pseud. See Turner, L. L.

LARSSON, GOSTA. The ordeal of the Falcon. 286p $2.50 Vanguard

41-3984

A Scandinavian sea story in which the old freighter Falcon on its last voyage puts every man aboard on his metal. The psychographs of each of the crew vie with the hurricane for first place in the novel.

Booklist 37:360 Ap 1 '41

"A novel which has much of the tone of an evocation of an indelible memory. That quality softens the outlines of people and places, results in the elimination of realistic detail, but has here, as always, an appeal of its own, an appeal that is universal, lending to this sea story a special touch of distinction." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p4 Mr 9 '41 950w

Churchman 155:35 My 15 '41 60w

New Repub 104:642 My 5 '41 20w

"The storm in its pictorial splendor and terror is described as witnessed from the deck. It is a long-drawn-out panorama of action and suspense, exceptionally well done. Indeed, 'The Ordeal of the Falcon' is an unusually well planned and well executed tale of the sea." Percy Hutchison

+ N Y Times p24 Mr 9 '41 650w

"The sea seems very real and full of salt water and the comradeship of the seamen is warm-hearted and credible. A good job."

+ New Yorker 17:75 Mr 8 '41 30w

"There is not one change in character or outlook on life in the whole volume; the people of the story do not even affect each other, save with an occasional punch in the eye."

LARSSON, GOSTA—Continued

Which is to say that nothing at all really happens in the course of the book. It is just an elaborate Saroyan sketch, a slice of life in the raw, which ought to be withdrawn and well cooked into a novel." F. P.

Sat R of Lit 24:17 Ag 9 '41 230w

LASHER, WILLARD K., and RICHARDS, EDWARD AMES. How you can get a better job. 175p il $1.50 Am. tech. soc.

174 Profession, Choice of. Success, Psychology, Applied (W) 41-51573

A book of advice for young people on how to get a job, a promotion or a raise. Sections are devoted to relations with others, self-improvement, and the actual procedure to follow in getting a job and holding it.

Booklist 37:351 Ap 1 '41

Management R 30:115 Mr '41 20w

Special Libraries 32:25 Ja '41 170w

LASKI, HAROLD JOSEPH. Strategy of freedom; an open letter to American youth. 144p $1.50 Harper

940.5315335 World war, 1939—U.S. World war, 1939—Great Britain. Socialism

41-23018

A British Socialist addresses the youth of America in this plea for help to Great Britain in the fight against Hitlerism. British victory, he says, will not bring about Utopia, but it will make possible a continuation of progress toward Utopia, a progress which would be impossible if Hitler won.

Booklist 38:175 Ja 15 '42

Reviewed by Spencer Klaw

Books p36 D 7 '41 400w

"Mr. Laski does not rave, he does not blink criticism, he does not use slogans. His book ought to be helpful, both to clearer thinking and to England's cause." F. T. Jones

+ Current Hist 1:467 Ja '42 110w

Reviewed by Patricia Strauss

Nation 153:582 D 6 '41 420w

New Yorker 17:96 N 8 '41 60w

"Because Professor Laski respects the intelligence of the student audience to whom his letter is addressed, he is careful not to assume that the defeat of Hitler automatically means a better social order. One cannot but be impressed with the frankness of his reservations on this score." J. P. Lash

+ Sat R of Lit 25:14 Ja 10 '42 400w

"Laski, aware of the fact that there exists in the United States a new type of anti-British sentiment, a feeling which has perhaps done more to retard our efforts toward defeating Herr Hitler than any other single factor, speaks directly and frankly to American youth. He speaks as a socialist, as an influential member of the British Labour Party and as an Englishman who knows the United States and its institutions better, so I believe, than any other living Englishman. He pleads with American youth to believe in the British cause and to see it as their cause as well." E. C. Lindeman

+ Survey G 31:37 Ja '42 160w

LASKI, HAROLD JOSEPH. Where do we go from here? 192p $1.75 Viking

940.53 Fascism. Democracy. Europe—Politics. Revolutions. World war, 1939—Influence and results. World war, 1939—Great Britain (W) 40-27811

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

Reviewed by C. A. Beard

Am Pol Sci R 35:155 F '41 300w

"In Laski's third section, entitled 'What Are We To Do Next?' he advocates a 'revolution by consent' as an answer to the problem he has raised. The author does not take this voluntary accommodation for granted as inevitable. He merely thinks that the capitalists have a chance to make this rapprochement. Judging from my own contacts with Professor Laski, I am certain that he must be skeptical of such a possibility. For this reason something seems to be lacking in this otherwise excellent book." Eric Estorick

+ Ann Am Acad 215:197 My '41 650w

Cath World 153:246 My '41 320w

"This most recent work of Professor Laski is essentially an application to the current situation of that Marxist analysis which has been the basis of all his recent work. Though he avoids the facile dogmatism so characteristic of popular Marxist writing, though he is aware of the complexity of human motives and of events, and though he recognizes the need for hard-headedness if enlightenment is to result, his analysis still leaves one with a sense of being unduly unilateral; while his solutions, though profound in their ethical appeal, seem unlikely of realization just because certain factors are omitted and others interpreted with fatal bias." T. I. Cook

+ Pol Sci Q 56:139 Mr '41 950w

"This is a book of revolutionary ideas and should be treated as such. It should only be read by those who are prepared and are willing to subject it to the analysis it deserves. Although its thesis is not likely to be universally accepted, it will prove stimulating reading to all who have given thought to the outcome of the present war." J. W. Miller

Social Educ 5:150 F '41 320w

"Mr. Laski's study, brilliantly written and highly stimulating, will be read with interest even by those who refuse to accept his theory of capitalist democracy and its inevitable doom. If his appeal promotes practical efforts for social reconstruction and reform which are acceptable to the British electorate and if it convinces the British that a revolt on the Continent, if it be needed, requires 'hope of genuine liberation,' it will have served a purpose to which everyone can readily subscribe." Arnold Wolfers

+ Yale R n s 30:603 spring '41 1550w

LASSWELL, HAROLD DWIGHT. Democracy through public opinion. 176p $1.50 Banta

301.154 Public opinion. Democracy 41-7248

"This is an eloquent statement of the nature of democracy, and some practical suggestions for making democracy work better. It shows that democracy in America is indigenous and that we always must be on the alert lest the forms of democracy pervert or destroy its substance. Private, intimate, experience (cf. the folk beliefs that 'politicians are all crooks or incompetents,' that legislators 'merely talk,' etc.) may sap the vitality of and eventually destroy democracy. Publics easily become crowds. There are three main results from public opinion: adjustment, catharsis, violence. Only the first is consistent with democracy. This leads to an incisive analysis of 'How to Think about What We Read, See, and Hear.'" Am Soc R

Reviewed by Read Bain

Am Soc R 6:596 Ag '41 600w

"Without indulging in excessive praise, it may be said that this volume, perhaps alone among many, investigates the relation of democracy and semantics, the place of 'communications' in democracy, and the problem of the psychological phases of the political process. It is a book, for example, that all interested in adult education should put on their 'must' list. It is a work which expresses better than others the correlation of the spirit of objectivity in social science and the statement of high social purpose. Dr. Lasswell sets out to be socially inventive, and the book offers on many a page new techniques for dealing with old questions." F. G. Wilson

+ Ann Am Acad 217:174 S '41 450w

Booklist 38:107 D 1 '41

LATANE, JOHN HOLLADAY, and WAINHOUSE, DAVID WALTER. A history of American foreign policy, 1776-1940. 2d ed rev 1023p maps $6 Doubleday; text ed $4.50 Odyssey

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations (W) 41-6330

New edition of a work first published in 1927 (Book Review Digest, 1927), and revised and enlarged by Mr Wainhouse in 1934 (Book Review Digest, 1934). In this second revision "the first 29 chapters remain, except for slight changes, as the first author wrote them; the remainder is revised, and six new chapters bring the history down to the outbreak of the present war." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 37:218 Ja 15 '41

Foreign Affairs 19:679 Ap '41 10w

"This valuable textbook and book of reference can also be read for pleasure."

+ Nation 153:289 S 27 '41 90w

LATHROP, DOROTHY PULIS. The colt from Moon mountain [il. by the author]. [62p] $1.75 Macmillan

(W) 41-22513

Charming story of a baby unicorn which suddenly appeared in a farm pasture, and became the pet of a guileless small farm girl for the whole of one unbelievably happy summer. Illustrated by the author.

Booklist 38:162 Ja 1 '42

"Follow the crowd at New York's rarest museum, 'The Cloisters,' and you come to its chief treasure, tapestries telling the medieval legend of the unicorn. They are never without a group of gazers; unicorn stories never lack an audience: the cult is compelling. The gentlest, most innocent modern version of the strange old myth is in Miss Lathrop's pictures and story." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 N 2 '41 230w

"A delightful fantasy which will appeal to imaginative little girls especially. It's beautifully illustrated, as well."

+ Churchman 155:4 D 15 '41 20w

"Miss Lathrop once again demonstrates her high talent in this story." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 35:111 N 21 '41 10w

"Here is a happy mingling of the real and the unreal for the children who love animals." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:460 N '41 100w

Reviewed by Florence O'Gara

Library J 67:42 Ja 1 '42 50w

"With a touch as light as the pearly fluff from a milkwood pod, or white mist over a mountain pasture, Dorothy Lathrop has put together a tale delicately balanced between the real and the unreal. This author is at her best when she writes of shy creatures seldom seen in broad day but at home in moonlit woods and fields. . . Into these pages Miss Lathrop has put her own deep feeling for out-of-doors and for the animals which she draws with such exquisite perfection." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 N 30 '41 390w

"An unusual book which mixes realism with magic convincingly. . . The story and the illustrations, in soft grays, should appeal to little girls with imaginative tastes."

+ New Yorker 17:141 D 6 '41 70w

LATOURETTE, KENNETH SCOTT. A history of the expansion of Christianity. v 4, The great century, A.D. 1800-A.D. 1914: Europe and the United States of America. 516p maps $3.50 Harper

270 Church history. Missions (37-20993)

"Professor Latourette of Yale gives us the fourth of a seven volume series which seeks to provide us with a world view of Christian expansion. Volume I reached to approximately 500 A.D.; Volume II the next thousand years to 1500; Volume III to 1800 [Book Review Digest, 1937-1939]. The nineteenth century is to require three volumes of which this is the first. This volume may be regarded as the story of home missions, since it treats principally of the Christian movement in Europe and the United States, in our land reviewing at length the work among the Indians and Negroes." (Commonweal) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Raymond Corrigan

America 64:693 Mr 29 '41 300w

Reviewed by G. N. Shuster

Books p20 Mr 23 '41 700w

"For most American readers and students who think they can afford to buy only one of the six volumes which this series will contain when completed, this is the one to get." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 58:594 Ap 30 '41 900w

"There is something about the author's style that holds the attention. He uses just enough names and places to make the reader seek for more detail and to open new roads for oneself." G. A. Cunningham

+ Churchman 155:16 My 15 '41 300w

"While Professor Latourette never seeks to be startling in his concepts, he achieves synthesis and balance. We sense that here is a scholarly gentleman who, regretting the divisions in Christendom and feeling that Christianity at its largest is all too small for the needs of the world, seeks to present the sum of Christian accomplishment in broad compass. The completed series promises to be a unique and notable triumph in historical writing and an invaluable manual for all who are world-minded." J. J. Considine

+ Commonweal 33:581 Mr 28 '41 480w

"In this, as in the other volumes, the author in many places is breaking new ground in a way that makes his hope that the data he has gathered will be of use for purposes of reference to both amateurs and specialists' seem likely to be fulfilled. The encyclopedic detail, the nearly 2,400 footnote citations, the extensive bibliography, and the index of twenty pages make the work an open pathway to all the chief secondary materials and also to some of the sources. It is invaluable to anyone interested in nineteenth century Christianity." S. E. Mead and W. W. Sweet

+ Crozer Q 18:265 Jl '41 600w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:195 O '41 40w

"The amount of factual material treated in the volume is astonishing. Repeatedly the author condenses the contents of a whole book into one sentence, for had he given more space to the subject it would mar the proportion of his work. The number of works utilized gives one the impression of tremendous industry on the author's part. . . But it is this very condensation of the vast array of material which is both the strength and the weakness of the book. One is so overwhelmed with the multiplicity of factual information that one can hardly grasp the movement as a whole. It is, of course, impossible for anyone actually to reduce the argument of a fair-sized book into a single sentence as the author has repeatedly attempted to do." Matthew Spinka

+ J Religion 21:316 Jl '41 550w

New Repub 104:770 Je 2 '41 80w

Reviewed by Crane Brinton

Sat R of Lit 23:16 Ap 19 '41 650w

Wis Lib Bul 37:133 Jl '41

LATTIMORE, OWEN. Mongol journeys. 324p il maps $4 Doubleday

915.17 Mongolia—Description and travel

(W) 41-3295

"The years in which my wife and I knew Inner Mongolia best were confused years. For a long time the life of the Mongols had swung lazily in an eddy of history, but in the nineteen thirties the full current of history was breaking in among them. Many old things were being swept away while we watched; many new things were happening which it was hard for either the Mongols or the onlooker to understand at once and clearly. This book is partly a record of a vanishing way of life, partly a footnote on the processes of decay and destruction, partly a glimpse of that which is coming to pass. I pieced this book together out of old notebooks kept while traveling." Intro.

LATTIMORE, OWEN—Continued

"Mr. Lattimore is perhaps too optimistic about the ultimate relaxation of a Soviet grip on Outer Mongolia which is perhaps tighter than he imagines; but in general his description of Mongol journeys is as informative as it is entertaining. And the entertainment value is very high indeed." W. H. C.

+ Atlantic Ap '41 280w

Booklist 37:357 Ap 1 '41

Reviewed by Rodney Gilbert
Books p4 F 9 '41 1300w

"Since Mr. Lattimore is a scholar by choice, his book is literally packed with folklore, shrewd political observations and historical odds and ends. Particularly noteworthy is his chapter which interprets Chinese frontier history. . . Not everyone will approve of Mr. Lattimore's frankness and humor." T. M. Avery, Jr.

+ Commonweal 34:68 My 9 '41 300w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 19:884 Jl '41 20w

Reviewed by Arthur Waley
New Statesman & Nation 22:142 Ag 9 '41 600w

"The greatest interest and the sure value of this fascinating book lie in the fact that it is a reflection of transition—that is of confusion as well as obvious progress. . . There is character as well as picturesqueness, too, in the book's photographs. We share a foreign traveler's adventures, in these loosely joined chapters, but most of all we come to feel that we ourselves know these Mongols and their remote immemorial steppes. For 'Mongol Journeys' is that rare but by no means contradictory achievement—an easily and sometimes beautifully written book which combines exploration with intimacy." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p9 Mr 2 '41 1300w

"There can be no doubt that Owen Lattimore has written several of the best books of Asiatic travel and ethnic exploration in our time; his 'Desert Road to Turkestan' is a classic of constructive adventure, and 'High Tartary' reduces Peter Fleming, by contrast, nearly to Halliburton stature. Better than Sven Hedin I believe, he can make both vivid and comprehensive the customs, folklore and aspirations of the Mongol nomads. . . There is less of travel in this book than in his others, but more sound reflection, humorously and gracefully recorded. It must not be overlooked by the broader student of Asiatic affairs." Hassold Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 23:18 F 22 '41 550w

"One would be doing an injustice to this book if one gave the impression that it is primarily concerned with politics. Primarily it is an account of the Mongols as human beings, and of their way of life, by a man who is much more than a clever traveller with a knack of seeing things and expressing them with sprightliness. Mr. Lattimore is an extremely conscientious student whose knowledge is wide and deep; who has been to infinite (albeit unboundedly happy) trouble to acquire what he knows; who speaks and reads Mongol, as he does Chinese (having recently learnt to read Russian as well, the better to pursue his Mongol studies); who never consciously sacrifices reality to picturesqueness, yet gives things of the spirit their rightful place, and who in this admirable book presents us with an extremely attractive human document packed with reliable information of an astonishingly miscellaneous and intriguing kind." E. M. Gull

+ Spec 167:42 Jl 11 '41 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p325 Jl 5 '41 700w

"This is a book of fine stories, intelligent comment, sound learning, and very good humor. It is thoroughly delightful." C. H. Leonard

+ Yale R n s 30:834 summer '41 350w

LAUFER, THOMAS. Musical ABC [pref. by Deems Taylor]. [32p] il $1 for sale by Farrar 781.91 Musical instruments—Juvenile literature 41-26617

"For beginners in musical knowledge, this book offers clear pictures of musical instruments alphabetically arranged." Library J

"Deems Taylor in a short Preface commends this introduction to musical instruments as sound pedagogy. . . The pictures are drawn with precision in every detail." A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 17:473 N '41 80w

"It will be a useful little text for quite young children. Older boys and girls will find it helpful, too, but may resent the extremely simple presentation and the frankly amateurish quality of the explanatory verses. Simple prose explanation would have lent dignity to the book." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 66:1096 D 15 '41 70w

LAUGHLIN, LEDLIE IRWIN. Pewter in America; its makers and their marks. de luxe ed 2v il $25 Houghton 739 Pewter. Hall marks 41-1939

"In two stately volumes, beautifully printed and beautifully illustrated, Mr. Laughlin has told the story of pewter in America as fully as it is now known. He gives brief biographies of the authenticated pewterers, and photographic reproductions of their marks, so far as possible. To do this he has had to scour most of the pewter collections in the country. And, of course, he presents innumerable illustrations of the various utensils they made, period by period. He even has a chapter on how to cure old pewter of the metal disease which so often has attacked it, and how to care for it after the cure." Books

"No collector of American pewter can now get along without Mr. Laughlin's book—or will want to." W. P. Eaton

+ Books p6 Ja 26 '41 600w

"The two volumes constitute unequivocally what must be termed the ideal for any type of collecting in this country. So long as there is an individual, a museum, or a library owning these books within reach, there can be little further excuse for uninformed or misdirected study or acquisition of early American pewter." W. G. Dooley

+ Boston Transcript p6 Ja 18 '41 1900w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 12 '41 70w

LAVER, JAMES. Adventures in monochrome. 128p il $3.75 (12s 6d) Studio 741 Drawings

"Mr. Laver has collected two hundred examples of contemporary draughtsmanship—mostly English and American—and provided his anthology with a brief, well-informed introduction on drawing in general and contemporary developments in particular." Manchester Guardian

"It makes a pleasant picture-book, though it rather overstates the slick 'commercial' artists and the light-weights. Mr. Laver might surely have found room for Henry Moore and Wyndham Lewis or even Picasso. Perhaps he will give us a sequel a little more carefully balanced."

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 9 '41 80w

"What a pity Mr. Laver did not ask Shell-Mex for a few names. In America there are excellent illustrators; and Mr. Laver has had the luck to discover two pieces by Gaston Lachaise and one—a very small one—by Thurber. This is poked away in the corner of a page which it shares with a Bemelmans, a Rea and a Skeaping; the whole of the opposite page is sacred to Fougasse. No room has been found for anything by Peter Arno. Illustrated books and albums are amongst the glories of modern France; and we are duly favoured with one Matisse and one Cocteau. On the other hand there is a surprise packet from Central Europe. . . . The bulk of the stuff is fit only to catch the eye of someone turning over the advertisement pages of a magazine. And even for that humble function much would be found inadequate by a tasteful business manager." Clive Bell

— + New Statesman & Nation 22:262 S 13 '41 500w

"In selection, and taking the welcome of the general public for granted, this anthology is eminently 'the stuff to give the troops,' and, after enjoyment, the book might well be included among those we are asked by authority to deposit on the counter of any post office for transmission to them. At a first glance, though Mr. Augustus John, R.A., is included, there might seem to be an absence of leading names in graphic art, but since several of them are mentioned in the introduction it may be supposed that representation of the rank and file is intentional."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p408 Ag 23 '41 470w

LAVES, WALTER HERMAN CARL, ed. The foundations of a more stable world order, by Ferdinand Schevill [and others]. 193p $2 Univ. of Chicago press

341 International law and relations 41-6333

Six lectures on international affairs, first delivered in the summer of 1940, by experts on history, economics, geography, political science and Latin-American affairs. Contents: Can our civilization achieve a more stable world order? by Ferdinand Schevill; International economic relations and the world order, by Jacob Viner; The role of shipping in the world order, by C. C. Colby; International law and the world order, by Quincy Wright; The United States and world order, by J. F. Rippey; The institutional requirements for a more stable world order, by W. H. C. Laves. Index.

Reviewed by Eugene Staley

Am Econ R 31:624 S '41 410w

Am Hist R 46:965 J1 '41 70w

Reviewed by H. B. Calderwood

Am Pol Sci R 35:780 Ag '41 550w

"As academic utterances at a more formal gathering, these lectures have all the marks of careful study, serious thinking, and sober reflection, even if the last lecturer strays far to the borders of a dreamland. The one criticism which the reviewer cannot suppress is that Professors Viner, Wright, and Laves are too severe in their criticism of our policy and not always ready to detect the flaws in European statesmanship and idealism." A. O. Sarkissian

+ — Ann Am Acad 216:180 J1 '41 360w

Christian Century 58:259 F 19 '41 140w

"The book is a good one to put into the hands of a general reader who desires background material concerning current issues, combined with some intelligent guesses about the future." H. A. Larrabee

+ Ethics 51:487 J1 '41 270w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:871 J1 '41 10w

LAVES, WALTER HERMAN CARL, ed. Inter-American solidarity, by Herminio Portell Vilá [and others]. 228p $1.50 Univ. of Chicago press

970 American republics. America—Defenses 41-52047

Seven lectures delivered in the summer of 1941 on the Harris foundation at the University of Chicago. They are considerations of plans for both immediate and long term inter-American solidarity. Contents: What have the Americas in common? by H. P. Vilá; The strategy of hemispheric defense, by G. F. Eliot; Inter-American trade and financial problems, by Eduardo Villaseñor; Raw materials and inter-American solidarity, by A. R. Upgren; Canada and hemispheric solidarity, by Frank Scott; Cultural relations among the American countries, by D. S. Ortega; Pan-Americanism and the world order, by J. F. Rippey. Index.

Booklist 38:152 Ja 1 '42

"As a discussion to follow the reading of some of those recent attractive books on Latin America, this is highly to be recommended. It may even precede them. . . . The authors are eminent authorities drawn from both continents of our Western hemisphere. They deal not with the froth and sentiment which so easily oozes from the consideration of pan-Americanism, but with the substantial realities of the situation, both historical and contemporary and they display no disposition to gloss over the more intractable elements."

+ Christian Century 58:1513 D 3 '41 100w

LAW, FREDERICK HOUK. He got the job; il. with phot. by John Hannan. 231p $1.40 Scribner

170 Conduct of life. Boys

41-9709

This book is introduced by a playlet, entitled He got the job, in which five boys try for a job which only the last one gets. The rest of the book amplifies on the points touched on in the play, appearance, manners, etc. and covers other phases of successful living, good health, play and study, friendships, etc. Index.

"The book deals with so many every-day and immediate problems and is written in such straightforward fashion that to many boys it will seem a very practical and friendly guide, providing answers to questions they might hesitate to ask and shedding light on many puzzling situations. For boys from 12 on; teachers and club workers will also find it useful. At the end of each discussion there is a set of questions for self-rating, and a list of books for further reading." A. T. E.

+ N Y Times p10 S 14 '41 250w

"Out of his experience with thousands of boys in a New York city high school the author talks like a kindly Dutch uncle on the best attitude for job-seeking, gives advice on various careers and offers some moral homilies."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e J1 6 '41 40w

LAWRENCE, ARTHUR STUART CLARK. The scientific photographer. 180p il $3.75 Macmillan [18s Cambridge]

770 Photography

[41-18909]

"This book attempts to give a short account of the possibilities and limitations of photography—primarily for the scientific worker but also for the serious amateur who has an elementary knowledge of chemistry and physics. For there is no special scientific photography for scientists. All the branches of the subject used by amateurs and professionals are used at some time in scientific work. The book has been kept short by omitting detailed instructions of the sort included with materials when bought and by giving basic information rather than detailed minor variations." (Pref) Short bibliography. Index.

"The physicist may find some sections elementary, and in one or two places statements may be found that will scarcely satisfy him. . . . The book is easy to read and well illustrated, and a great deal has been condensed into its pages. In attempting to cover such a wide field some subjects have inevitably received brief treatment, but the book provides a good groundwork for the thoughtful reader and should give the scientific worker all the information he requires to carry out any normal photographic operations."

+ Nature 148:70 J1 19 '41 240w

LAWRENCE, A. S. C.—Continued

"The illustrations are excellent, and very well printed, though 54a and b, appear to be transposed. There is a great deal of useful information, particularly in the sections dealing with the theory of photographic action, the function and characteristics of photographic lenses, and developing. Reference to other branches of the subject have been purposely kept short, but a little more about the use of artificial light would have been welcome."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p303 Je 21 '41
200w

LAWRENCE, JOSEPHINE. No stone unturned. 324p $2.50 Little

(W) 41-612

Character study of a dull, slightly pretentious American real estate man, whose main objects in life were never to do today what can be put off until tomorrow, and refusing to permit his children to grow up. Maltby Russell was good, moral, a devoted husband, who thought he left "no stone unturned" in his efforts to care for his family, but who was in reality too inefficient to keep them from growing away from him.

Atlantic Mr '41 150w

Booklist 37:241 F 1 '41

"Miss Lawrence is a shrewd, somewhat cynical observer of life. She is a scrupulous craftswoman and her limitation (if she has any considerable one, and I am inclined to feel that she has) is that she is industrious rather than inspired. Too often she conveys, in the tediously repeated details of Maltby's gradual descent into practical senility at fifty, the effect of giving us an over-generous sampling of the materials at hand rather than of skilful selection and suggestion. However, the stuff is here." F. H. Bullock

Books p3 Ja 5 '41 650w

"Josephine Lawrence is a superb realist whose art is sharpened to include the most vitalizing details, the most telling scenes and bits of dialogue. There is pathos in this vivid story, too, for Maltby becomes a pitiful sort of clucking old hen as his eldest and youngest all grow up and away from him. Miss Lawrence has never done a better piece of satiric characterization, though we take issue in comparing her hero to Micawber, as wisely advertised." Olga Owens

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ja 4 '41 600w

"Miss Lawrence would no doubt acknowledge that some imponderables are worth any sacrifice, she would understand the impulse which makes a poet eagerly compassionate toward those who prefer hyacinths to bread; but that requires a different story altogether. Her contest here is not with dreamers, but with day-dreamers; her weapon is common sense, lifted against shiftlessness, waste, and ignorance." M. W. S.

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 25 '41 440w

Reviewed by E. S. Hertell

Churchman 155:39 Mr '41 100w

"Miss Lawrence's picture of Maltby Russell suffers from overexposure and the reader becomes thoroughly tired of Maltby's self-complacency and incapacity long before the book ends." Recommended only for limited purchase." G. W. Hill

Library J 65:1087 D 15 '40 140w

"Maltby is almost as simplified as Jeeter Lester. Perhaps he is typical of many men, but that is difficult to take for granted. One sees this rather as the portrait of the undying Micawber done at full length—and that, for a Micawber—is over-size." Robert Van Gelder

N Y Times p6 Ja 5 '41 460w

New Yorker 16:66 Ja 4 '41 70w

"It is in the presentation of her thesis that Miss Lawrence's fairness becomes questionable. A short story would adequately have drawn Maltby and his family as individuals. But Miss Lawrence has not written a short story—the novel is actually a good deal too long for the reader's patience—nor does she mean Maltby's portrait to stand simply as the representation of one silly man. In Maltby she has obviously intended to assail a ruinous point of view and, possibly, even a generation: men of no strength or skill deluded into a high opinion of themselves by the magic of easy money. But Maltby Russell, as she has shown him, could not earn his living under any economy in any period. He is a touching laughable fool and, as such, far too flimsy a figure on which to pin a terrible and general indictment." Francis Smyth

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 F 8 '41 650w

LAWSON, ROBERT. I discover Columbus; il. by [the author]. 113p $1.50 Little

Columbus, Christopher—Juvenile literature

(W) 41-16483

Purports to be the true story of Christopher Columbus and the discovery of America. The narrator is one Aurelio, a parrot, who was blown from his native Carribean to Spain, via hurricane. In Spain he met Columbus, and inspired him to take the trip of discovery, for the simple reason that Aurelio missed his native foods, and couldn't think of any other way to get back to them.

Booklist 38:58 O 15 '41

"The good-natured burlesque is chiefly in crackling dialogue and in the unscrupulous parrot's frankly low opinion of man. The pictures are in Mr. Lawson's grand manner. They often grandly point low comedy." M. L. Becker

Books p7 N 2 '41 280w

"There is here the same kind of burlesque history as we find in Ben and Me [Book Review Digest, 1939], and the fun will appeal to adults even more than to children. Very little dignity is left in any of the notables of 1492 when Aurelio is done with them. Robert Lawson's drawings of the Spanish grandees and their court recall those for Ferdinand. The design and abundant detail are handled with his usual skill and humor." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:366 S '41 110w

Reviewed by Warren Chappell

Horn Bk M 17:453 N '41 20w

"Beautiful illustrations, full of romance and humor, and excellent print and margins. Recommended for children eight to twelve." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 66:908 O 15 '41 90w

Reviewed by Jessie Stanton & E. W. Steele

New Repub 105:837 D 15 '41 30w

"Hero-worshippers and sober-sided sticklers for facts may just as well leave this book unopened, but since the majority of Americans, young and old, have always enjoyed a bit of fun-poking at the great it will doubtless have the same warm reception as did 'Ben and Me,' for these acidly candid memoirs of a parrot of the great discoverer are in the same merrily irreverent vein. . . . This gay spoofing of the textbooks combines a robust slap-stick comedy with slyer and somewhat malicious touches of humor, and both kinds of fun are to be found in the illustrations, which are an absolutely necessary complement to the text, and as beautifully drawn as one would expect from Robert Lawson's distinguished pen." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p7 N 2 '41 270w

"Another irreverent and highly imaginative interpretation of history in the vein of the author's 'Ben and Me.' . . . Fine for family reading aloud, especially to children old enough to appreciate burlesque."

+ New Yorker 17:144 D 6 '41 110w

"Delightful." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 N 8 '41 40w

LEAF, MUNRO. Fables. See Aesop

LEAF, MUNRO. Fly away, watchbird! a picture book of behavior. 28p $1 Stokes

41-4799

Another group of this author-artist's Watchbirds. This time he includes such bores of the nursery as the pouter, the not-so, the flitter who never finishes anything, the won't-try, the know-it-all, the messy, and others. Simple line drawings and descriptive text.

"The drawings are in Mr. Leaf's unambiguous style: there can be no doubt what he means by a Snooty, even without the text, and his Know-It-All could be saying nothing else but 'Pooh-pooh!' as it walks into a coal-hole. Good luck to your manners, youngster: Mr. Leaf will do them good." M. L. Becker

+ Books p18 My 11 '41 190w

"Although educators doubt their effectiveness in teaching children desirable traits, the crude illustrations are, at least, entertaining." Miriam Snow

Library J 66:223 Mr 1 '41 80w

LEAF, MUNRO. Fun book; [il. by the author]. 44,40,48p $1.50 Stokes

(W) 41-51927

Three of the author-artist's books collected in one volume. Contents: Manners Can Be Fun; Grammar Can Be Fun; Safety Can Be Fun.

Booklist 38:84 N 1 '41

"Here is a bargain: an omnibus book containing 'Manners Can Be Fun,' 'Grammar Can Be Fun' and 'Safety Can Be Fun,' three guaranteed guides to the good life, whose effectiveness in the family circle has been praised by parents and, strange to say, even more enthusiastically by children." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 N 23 '41 120w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 35:111 N 21 '41 30w

LEAF, MUNRO. The story of Simpson and Sampson; il. by Robert Lawson, [61p] $1.50 Viking

(W) 41-23709

Tale of twin brothers, born to an aristocratic family in medieval times. One brother was very good, the other a terror, but they looked so much alike that no one could tell them apart, and so never knew which one to punish. The complications multiplied as they grew older, until suddenly they saw the error of their ways.

Booklist 38:178 Ja 15 '42

"The possibilities of such a yarn are great; droll turns in the text, sly humor in the pictures, make the most of them all. Gorgeous clothes and customs of chivalry contrast demurely with the tricks of the twins. It should be noted that this book puts into the hand of a parent a noble and legitimate means of resistance to the comics. They are run off the field by these intrepid champions." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 N 2 '41 130w

Reviewed by E. V. Wyatt

Cath World 154:372 D '41 30w

"Lawson's pictures are, as always, both decorative and comical, but nowadays he seems to do better when he writes his own text. Even so, if you know a pair of twins under ten, here's the book for them."

+ New Yorker 17:140 D 6 '41 50w

"Wholly delightful." Amy Loveman

+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 N 8 '41 40w

LEAF, LEWIS. That rascal Freneau; a study in literary failure. 501p $5 Rutgers univ. press

B or 92 Freneau, Philip Morin 41-11871

"A careful and sympathetic biography of the first important American poet, a political rebel who failed at everything he undertook but was nevertheless in part responsible for the fact that the Revolution did not degenerate into monarchy." New Yorker

"Mr. Leary has given us a biography intelligent, sympathetic, and quite merciless in its painstaking detail, and though the apparatus of scholarship is placed thoughtfully in the rear, it is suggested that over one thousand notes embellish the text." H. S. Commager

+ Books p4 J1 27 '41 800w

Christian Science Monitor p10 J1 5 '41 500w

Reviewed by Milton Ellis

New Eng Q 14:772 D '41 420w

"Mr. Leary's book is one of scholarship throughout and it is bulwarked by forty-odd pages of notes. The bibliography that follows these notes is exhaustive. Indeed, it would be astonishing if any material of value should turn up in the future, for the author appears to have run down every clue, however slight, that pointed even indirectly at Philip Freneau. So much labor is more than its own reward in this case, for a man of indubitable interest in the early annals of this Republic's history has been brought forth into the light and presented as he undoubtedly was in life." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p4 Je 29 '41 1350w

New Yorker 17:78 Je 7 '41 30w

LEE, GYPSY ROSE (ROSE LOUISE HOV-ICK). The G-string murders. 305p $2 Simon & Schuster

41-20725

Detective story.

"It's a pleasure to report that 'The G-String Murders,' any way you look at it—and there are several—is a high spot of the season, a book to read and to re-read when life seems dull and drab. It's a shocker in more ways than one. There are hard words in plenty, most of them extremely funny in their context, and part of the time you won't even know what hit you. The rest of the time, if you're the fan we think you are, you'll be straining the old diaphragm with loud, raucous laughter and reveling in the skill and address of a new and salty writer, to wit, Miss Gypsy Rose Lee." Will Cuppy

Books p30 O 5 '41 400w

"All spoofing aside, this book will probably amuse the patrons of the strip-tease shows—or such of them as are able to read." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p24 O 12 '41 150w

"The characters and the plot in this fresh, shrewdly written story by America's most famous strip-tease artist are adequate. Recommended for readers who feel better when their eyebrows are raised."

New Yorker 17:104 O 11 '41 50w

"'The G-string Murders' may not be a classic, but it has atmosphere, and it has a vocabulary which never came, entirely, out of that Thesaurus."

+ Springfield Republican p7e O 5 '41 300w

Time 38:100 O 13 '41 500w

LEE, HARRY. No measure danced. 466p $3 Macmillan

41-11194

"The story of a woman who makes a career for herself in a big department store—partly by hard work, partly by love affairs with her various bosses—but doesn't work out her private life satisfactorily." New Yorker

"Mr. Lee tells his story of Lily and the store ably and interestingly, with more fascinating and less tedious detail than Arnold Bennett, say, would have used, but with nothing like the lightness of touch that Christopher Morley manages with Kitty and the cosmetics business in 'Kitty Foyle.' Mr. Lee creates with an honest if somewhat heavy hand. His novel is of solid substance; stands four square. To borrow from both Mr. Lee and Mr. Nietzsche, its measure's not exactly danced. But there's rhythm here and movement, steady and deep." F. H. Bullock

LEE, HARRY—Continued

+ Books p8 Je 29 '41 600w

"'No Measure Danced' is a novel in the old school of fiction, which is to say that it has a good story to tell and an interesting central character to portray. Mr. Lee writes with a forceful drive that increasingly gathers momentum as his story progresses. He creates his effects with discriminating incident and dialogue rather than beauty of language. As far as the last is concerned, there are a few awkward spots in the book. But these are of less than minor importance. It is Lily who takes hold of the reader's mind. She is absolutely real; she stands in embryo behind counters in every department store in America." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p7 Je 29 '41 900w

"Mr. Lee advances certain conclusions about women in business, but in spite of a number of lively and readable scenes between his heroine and other characters, nothing much is proved."

New Yorker 17:62 Je 28 '41 60w

"'No Measure Danced' is the familiar story of the aggressive, ambitious person who gets what he wants from life, but discovers too late that the price exacted is too high. It is a story worth telling and retelling, and in this second novel by the young Atlanta painter Harry Lee it is told remarkably well."

"'No Measure Danced' is a superior novel not only for its sharp portraiture but also for a fascinating picture of a great department store." R. A. Cordell

+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 Je 28 '41 400w

Springf'd Republican p7e Jl 20 '41 300w

LEE, IRVING J. Language habits in human affairs; an introduction to general semantics; with a foreword by Alfred Korzybski. 278p il $1.75 Harper

412 Semantics. Thought and thinking. Language and languages. Meaning (psychology) (W) 42-1502

A textbook for the layman on the use and abuse of words in our everyday speech. Partial contents: Language for the living; The useful use of words; The many uses of a word; Facts first—then words; Descriptions and inferences. Index.

Reviewed by Hugh Walpole

Sat R of Lit 25:14 Ja 10 '42 650w

School & Society 54:572 D 13 '41 50w

"The book is delightfully documented with many cases, some humorous and some sad, of the misuse of words, and sets forth bravely the many difficulties in the pathway toward general improvement of our use of language. It is thoroughly practical, with many cogent suggestions that will prove helpful both in attempting to understand what others mean by what they say, and in striving to speak or write not so that one may be understood but so that one may not be misunderstood. There is even a chapter on when to keep still!"

+ Scientific Bk Club R 13:3 Ja '42 250w

LEE, WILLIAM STORRS. Stagecoach north; being an account of the first generation in the state of Vermont. 210p $2 Macmillan

917.435 Middlebury, Vermont. Vermont—Social life and customs (W) 41-10889

Symbolizing all the Vermont towns of the era between 1791 and 1841, the author chooses Middlebury, where his great-grandparents lived, and describes the daily life in intimate detail. He discusses the town, the home, the neighbors, politics, entertainment, education, medicine, reading, and religion. The work is based on research among original sources—old newspapers, almanacs, records, etc.

"Unfortunately, defects abound in what otherwise might have been a highly stimulating volume. Most obvious is the lack of breadth in the researches of the author, who frequently displays a lack of mastery of the general field and of acquaintance with readily available and useful material. The entire period is usually treated as a unit, with no indications of change, while at times ideas are introduced which do not properly come within the half century under consideration. The supposition that Middlebury is a typical New England town at least needs support. The general theme of the existence and desirability of sturdy independence and self-sufficiency is belied by much of the specific evidence. The reason for the title still remains a mystery to this reviewer." R. E. Riegel

+ Am Hist R 47:428 Ja '42 170w

"Although this book is based on Middlebury, which Mr. Lee knows and obviously loves, it could as well fit any of a hundred villages of the time. If you have an interest in how Great-Great-Grandfather and his wife lived, this is your meat. It's fine stuff, to be taken at one sitting and good for many returns to its pages. Entertaining and informative throughout, racy in spots, it is the soundest kind of social history." S. H. Holbrook

+ Books p2 Je 22 '41 850w

"A very considerable amount of research into contemporary documents is veiled behind a fluent and entertaining style. It is little wonder that Vermonters are proud of their stalwart and God-fearing ancestors."

+ Christian Century 58:832 Je 25 '41 30w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 12 '41 550w

"For those who think of New England in terms of covered bridges, stump fences, meetinghouse spires, and lilacs, Stagecoach North will be reanimating. The feel of the times and the people is in the book. It is a well-focused record of a typical self-supporting community whose economy was based upon the agricultural way of life." R. L. Cook

+ New Eng Q 14:581 S '41 1250w

"Fascinating stuff and much too short."

+ New Repub 105:318 S 8 '41 40w

"A clear re-creation, full of absorbing detail."

+ New Yorker 17:79 Je 14 '41 50w

Sat R of Lit 24:17 Je 28 '41 210w

"The Middlebury of Mr Lee's book comes out very clearly, but it is a New England Middlebury and not one easily identified with Vermont. It is possible, of course, that Mr. Lee's ancestors and their neighbors were not inoculated with the Vermont serum—a mysterious blend of hard cider, vinegar and maple sugar—but it is more than likely that they were. The Vermont of their day had just passed through one of the most fantastic adventures in history, as a belligerently independent republic within a republic, and the shade of Ethan Allen still roared in the pines. A strange and elusive super-Yankee quality remained, and it is this quality that old Middlebury did not have, or Mr Lee did not find."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Je 16 '41 360w

LEECH, MARGARET KERNOCHAN (MRS RALPH PULITZER). Reveille in Washington, 1860-1865. 483p il maps $3.50 Harper

973.7453 Washington, D.C. U.S.—History—Civil war. Lincoln, Abraham (W) 41-14492

Picture of life in the city of Washington during the Civil War years—facts about the people who lived there; the places; events; entertaining; Southern women prisoners; the streets; saloons; government offices; prisons; and hospitals. It contains an understanding portrait of the president; an unvarnished one of Mrs Lincoln; describes the elegant Southern widow, Mrs Greenhow, who was implicated in the defeat at the first battle of Bull Run; and Allan Pinkerton, forming his detective agency. Clara Barton, Andrew Carnegie, Walt Whitman, Louisa M. Alcott, and many others appear. Bibliography. Index.

"Miss Leech is eminently distinguished in her power to omit the irrelevant and to pick and choose the significant. Her book is fair and accurate. . . Her careful study of the social and political life at the time has extended over a term of years, but the accumulation of data has not lessened her lively and picturesque style. The book is well written throughout, and in places superbly so." R. E. Danielson

+ Atlantic S '41 250w
Booklist 38:33 O 1 '41
Bookmark 2:11 N '41

"There have been novels which read, to their own misfortune, something like histories. There have been all too few histories which embodied, along with faultless exactitude and respect for documentation, the power and excitement of a story in which living men perform. 'Reveille in Washington' is one of these. Despite its color and dramatic vigor, few other histories of any nation or period bear more hammer-marks of an implacable concern for the grim and bitter truth." MacKinlay Kantor

+ Books p1 Ag 31 '41 1750w
Cleveland Open Shelf p14 J1 '41

Reviewed by James van Zant
Churchman 155:21 O 15 '41 250w

"Miss Leech has written a useful book and a good book. Certainly it is readable—even exciting. One could quarrel with her over details. Her extensive use of newspapers as sources perhaps occasionally leads to sensationalism. Her ability as a narrator of military events (and the publishers' stinginess with maps) is far from satisfactory. But these are minor matters compared with the general quality of her achievement. For once I feel that I can without any hesitation or reserve recommend a book which is already on its way to being a best seller and express the hope that for the good of the country it will beat all records." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 34:548 S 26 '41 600w

"Packed with detail, crowded with characters as divergent as Louisa M. Alcott and John Wilkes Booth, Andrew Carnegie and Mrs. Rose Greenhow, the Confederate 'lady spy,' if such she can be called, 'Reveille in Washington' gives the reader some idea of the thousand small events which contributed to the generalizations of the history books. . . The defects of Miss Leech's book are those of its qualities. She has covered so much ground that inevitably she has not gone very deep. The book remains a panorama, a picture, something looked at rather than lived through." James Orrick

+ — Nation 153:206 S 6 '41 650w

"Usually I have a hard time reading a book like this, in which the author has spent more time on research than on reflection; but this time a pattern does emerge from all the separate items classified in chapters that are like the drawers in a filing cabinet. . . The lesson for the present seems to be that this is how democracy always fights and usually wins; it is a lesson of encouragement in the midst of our present indecision. Yet to me the book was scarcely reassuring. The war of 1861 was waged by the North against another self-governing republic with the same problems, the same divided counsels and with less than half the Northern resources. It would be hard to resist and impossible to defeat a totalitarian Europe by the same policy of muddle." Malcolm Cowley

+ — New Repub 105:282 S 1 '41 300w

"This book of the Civil War comes to us with enlightenment and wit, brilliance in scene and universality in insight. There could be no better time for it than now." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p1 Ag 31 '41 1400w

"I urge you to read 'Reveille in Washington' not so much because it is packed and running over with the anecdotes, scandals, personalities, and tragi-comedies of the time; I urge you to read it because its 450-odd pages throw out rays of light that slant our way. . . It's a wonderful story, most of it entirely fresh and new, I should think, except to very fervid students of the period. Miss Leech's only fault is her excessive detail; she might have left a few things out and no harm done. But on the whole this is a work both brilliant and solid. It places Miss Leech at once among the foremost contemporary historians of America." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:53 Ag 30 '41 1000w
Pratt p14 D '41

"It is the mingling of the deep current of history with all the bubbles of rumor and despair and hope that floated on its surface, of the great event with the small detail, that makes Miss Leech's book so fascinating, so alive, and so contemporaneous. . . Clearly and colorfully written, in a style that has plenty of edge but which does not go in for professional debunking, 'Reveille in Washington' is a faithful mirror of a great and critical time in our nation's history—and a time that seems nearer to us now than it has for many years." S. V. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 Ag 30 '41 1100w
Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 31 '41 1150w

"This is history as it was lived by a Washingtonian, history restored by immense research, and rich in intimate detail enlivened by a vigorous imagination. The book is long so you may want to pick out the parts that interest you, to begin with. It offers many gay or tragic episodes." Leon Whipple

+ Survey G 30:531 O '41 420w

"Some will read this book for the Hogarthian gusto of its descriptions, humor, writing. Some will read it for the great familiar story of the war with its almost too literary climax of Lincoln's death at the moment of victory. Others, in the mood of another great struggle for U.S. survival, will read it for its swarming picture of a people's energies, creating out of next to nothing the greatest armies and armaments the world has seen."

+ Time 38:88 S 1 '41 1750w

Wis Lib Bul 37:154 O '41

"For the historian, 'Reveille in Washington' is not documented at all, and the bibliography is merely an alphabetical list. It is impossible, therefore, in the wealth of detail to make sure, without long study, of its accuracy. But, on the whole, it has the ring of truth, and next to 'John Brown's Body' it is probably the best short presentation of the Civil War that has been done for the general public. It should be widely read at a time when Washington is again awakening to national crisis." H. P. Johnson

+ — Yale R n s 31:210 autumn '41 850w

LEEMING, JOSEPH. Brave ships of England and America; il. by Grattan Condon. 344p $2.50 Nelson

359 Ships. Warships 41-20317

"With all our handsome ship books, this one has a place of its own; one might say it had two places. It describes, one after another, the exploits of ships not of one country only, but of the English-speaking nations on both sides of the sea, from Edward III's flagship at Sluys to the Oregon at Santiago, winding up with the saga of the Jervis Bay and the avenging of the Hood. Its second distinction is that thus arranged in chronological order, with attention not only to thrills of voyage or battle but to reasons why it was made or fought, a progressive idea emerges of sea power and freedom of the seas, and of what they mean to civilization.

LEEMING, JOSEPH—Continued

Primarily a book for boys, one in which many a boy will lose himself, it goes into its subject seriously enough for many an adult." Books

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
+ Books p20 N 2 '41 200w

"These stirring stories of great ships that have carried the British and American flags around the world or into flaming battle at sea make thrilling reading. They ring with courage and daring and the spirit that built up the sea power of the English race." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:41 Ja '42 150w

Reviewed by Dorothy Lawson
Library J 66:951 N 1 '41 150w

LEEMING, JOSEPH. Card tricks anyone can do. 255p il $2 Appleton-Century

795.43 Card tricks (W) 41-5230

Contains two hundred card tricks ranging from the quite simple to the difficult. Contents: Card sleights; Methods of locating a chosen card; Methods of revealing a chosen card or cards; Tricks that do not require sleight of hand; Tricks that require a slight degree of skill; Tricks requiring special cards of simple preparation; Tricks done with a prearranged pack; Tricks with the four aces; Tricks requiring advanced sleight of hand.

Booklist 37:384 Ap 15 '41

Wis Lib Bul 37:72 Ap '41

LEEMING, JOSEPH. Fun with leather; il. by Charles E. Pont. 91p $2 Stokes

745 Leather work—Juvenile literature (W) 41-51865

"How to do decorative leatherwork of all kinds and how to make useful and decorative articles from leather." (Subtitle) Part one discusses materials, tools, and methods; part two contains detailed instructions on the making of some forty-five articles. For grades seven to nine. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 38:17 S '41

"If any library needs more material on this subject than is given in the chapters in Hamilton's Handicraft for Girls and Popular Crafts for Boys, this would be a valuable book." E. W. Turpin

+ Library J 66:878 Ag '41 60w

Wis Lib Bul 37:206 D '41

LEEPER, ALEXANDER WIGRAM ALLEN.

A history of medieval Austria; ed. by R. W. Seton-Watson and C. A. Macartney. 358p $6 (21s) Oxford

943.6 Austria—History [41-12960]

"The late Allan Leeper began to write this book when he was First Secretary to the British Legation in Vienna. . . His manuscript has been revised by two distinguished scholars, who have omitted the incomplete last chapter, which would have brought the narrative to the secure establishment in Austria of its first Habsburg duke, the Emperor-elect Rudolf (1278). The story ends, therefore, with the death of Frederick, the last of the great Babenberg line, on 15th June, 1246. It begins with the pre-Celtic inhabitants of the lands which we used to know, politically, as 'Austria.'" Manchester Guardian

"Mr. Leeper was too deeply immersed in his subject and was too busy to make things easy. His book is admirably planned, well arranged, clearly written. His enthusiastic understanding is apparent in the way in which he uses his knowledge of buildings, works of art, customs, and literature. But the array of names and facts has a stony effect." E. M. Powicke

+ Manchester Guardian p7 F 4 '41 750w

Social Studies 32:334 N '41 30w

"A book written in such circumstances might be expected to have the characteristics of the work of a dilettante; but Leeper's research and documentation are much too thorough to deserve such a name. He is evidently qualified to write professional history to satisfy any academic standard. On the other hand, there is something of the amateur, in no derogatory sense, in the strong archaeological bias with which he writes history. His scrupulous diligence in investigating concrete facts within the geographical limits he sets himself is not supported by a sufficient mastery of the broader issues of world history to give the facts discovered quite their full value."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p80 F 15 '41 1900w

LEES, MRS HANNAH. R: prescription for murder. 274p $2 Random house

42-102

Detective story.

"This is well written except for Cy's synthetic toughness, which is neither here nor there." Will Cuppy

+ Books p31 N 23 '41 160w

"The denouement will be a surprise to most, as it is even to Sally. The story has many good points, but the author could have improved it by omitting most of the mental theorizing indulged in by Harvey and Sally." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p22 N 16 '41 240w

"This is a fine mystery, skillfully handled and brought to a logical conclusion by an experienced writer."

+ New Yorker 17:112 N 15 '41 60w

"Rates well up with best as suspenseful mystery and has special interest for vivid treatment of hospital life—and loves. Full marks."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:24 N 15 '41 40w

Time 38:92 D 1 '41 60w

LEFF, DAVID NEAL. Uncle Sam's Pacific

islets. 71p maps pa $1 Stanford univ. press

990 Oceania. U.S.—Territorial expansion

40-29797

"This booklet presents an interesting and unfamiliar picture of America's rather casual imperialism in the Pacific. The story of the acquisition of the larger islands is not touched on here; Mr. Leff keeps to the 'islets' with which the vast expanse of the Pacific is dotted." Social Educ

Foreign Affairs 19:682 Ap '41 10w

Reviewed by Ruth West

Social Educ 5:235 Mr '41 500w

Social Studies 32:189 Ap '41 230w

LEFFINGWELL, ALBERT (DANA CHAMBERS, pseud). The blonde died first. 283p $2

Dial press

41-5111

Detective story.

"This struck us as a thoroughly readable example of the fleshly school of thought, plenty tough without being actually childish about it." Will Cuppy

Books p17 Mr 9 '41 160w

"Two innocent persons and three villains bite the dust before the story is ended, and Jim Steele himself has several uncomfortably narrow escapes. The plot is gaudy, but not particularly neat." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p24 Mr 23 '41 90w

"If you like Dana Chambers, try this one. It's good."

+ New Yorker 17:88 Mr 22 '41 40w

Sat R of Lit 23:20 Mr 15 '41 40w

LEFFINGWELL, ALBERT (DANA CHAMBERS, pseud). Nine against New York. 291p $2.50 Holt

41-9243

A mystery-adventure-international intrigue story which comes to its climax the night an attack is made on New York, an attack engineered by a mysterious "nine"—including lovely ladies, Nazi secret agents and American fifth columnists.

"Albert Leffingwell handles the sinister complications with the utmost facility. He has a pulse-quickenng style with a touch of the macabre, just right for his sizzling plot." Lisle Bell

+ Books p12 Je 8 '41 280w

"This is escape fiction all right. It certainly takes the mind off all other matters and it records a long series of Pope's escapes from the clutches of the enemy. The publisher promises more novels about the same character. This reader looks forward to them, but rather doubts whether even that stout fellow can stand the pace long." Beatrice Sherman

N Y Times p14 Je 22 '41 460w

"Extremely amusing story of international intrigue that is not the conventional thriller. Not only up to the minute but beyond it."

+ New Yorker 17:78 Je 21 '41 70w

"For those who seek reason in the midst of madness, Mr Leffingwell's story may be a timely warning, and in spite of stretched improbability it is fairly entertaining reading."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 29 '41 130w

LE GRAND, pseud. See Henderson, Le G.

LEHMANN-HAUPT, HELLMUT, ed. Book-binding in America; three essays. 293p il on rag pa $7.50 Southworth-Anthoensen

686 Bookbinding. Books—Conservation and restoration 41-11478

"Part one is a history of American binding from 1636 to 1820—the period of a hand craft—by Miss Hannah D. French of the Wellesley College Library. In part two, Mr. Joseph W. Rogers of the Milwaukee Public Library, carries the story on into the machine age, when binding becomes casing and edition work. . . The final portion, part three, by Mr. Lehmann-Haupt of Columbia, concerns the care and rebinding of old books." Sat R of Lit

"The literature of book production in the United States has received an enrichment of its resources through the recent publication of 'Bookbinding in America.' . . There is no doubt that the two strictly historical sections of the book meet a need long recognized by students of American book lore. More universal in its purpose and scope, Dr. Lehmann-Haupt's chapter on rebinding is an admirable discussion of theory and practice with present-day American conditions in the mind of the writer." L. C. Wroth

+ Books p13 Jl 27 '41 1200w

Reviewed by Karl Kùp

Library J 66:334 O 1 '41 1200w

"The first attempt to treat this subject in a complete and consecutive manner and, like all initial efforts in a virgin field, the amount of labor necessary to establish the facts was infinitely greater than the casual reader suspects. . . 'Bookbinding in America' is a volume primarily interesting to librarians, collectors and binders. Its format shows the excellent taste and scrupulous craftsmanship that characterize the work of the Southworth-Anthoensen Press. In design it is very satisfying, with the exception of the title page, whose varied subject-matter might have been organized in a more interesting manner." E. L. Tinker

+ N Y Times p20 O 12 '41 1550w

"The book is carefully and tastefully printed, and illustrated with seventy-three useful pictures of old and modern bindings. Of this readable and valuable book but one doubt remains: outward evidence being inconclusive, one wonders if it is itself bound adequately? . . 'Bookbinding in America' is as interesting as it is important, and can confidently be recommended to book lovers as well as to those professionally concerned." C. P. Rollins

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:12 Jl 12 '41 400w

LEHMANN-HAUPT, HELLMUT. Seventy books about bookmaking; a guide to the study and appreciation of printing. [2d ed rev and enl] [67p] $1 Columbia univ. press

016.655 Printing—Bibliography. Book industries and trade—Bibliography 41-6163

"The second edition, revised and enlarged, of a little volume called Fifty Books about Bookmaking, which appeared first on the occasion of the Twelfth Annual Conference on Printing Education, held at Columbia University, June 26 to 28, 1933. The book was issued as the catalogue of an exhibition which the Columbia University Library had organized for the benefit of the members of that conference. It contained a selection of fifty books on printing and the graphic arts which, we felt, would be of permanent value to teachers and students of printing." (Introd) Index.

Christian Century 58:564 Ap 23 '41 30w

"The list will provide printer, librarian, and amateur of good printing with the historical and aesthetic background needed not only for sound craftsmanship but for intelligent appreciation. Many of the books are expensive and some of them are out-of-print or hard to find, but it is a safe and sound guide for libraries of all types desirous of strengthening their store of good books about books and their making." C. F. McCombs

+ Library J 67:45 Ja 1 '42 400w

"The annotations are so full of sound comment on basic principles that even a mere reading of them is illuminative. . . The volume is an outstanding example of good taste and lucid, harmonious tailoring to subject and use. Indeed, it is so satisfying in format that the prophecy is hazarded that it will be included in next year's 'Fifty Books of the Year.'" E. L. Tinker

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 30 '41 330w

Pratt p7 autumn '41

LEIGH, RANDOLPH. Forgotten waters; adventure in the gulf of California. 324p il $3.50 Lippincott

917.22 California, Gulf of 41-23615

"To 'the heart of one of the wildest and richest regions in the whole fabulous span of Spanish glory'—so Randolph Leigh invites his readers to follow the course of his own journeying along the Gulf of California. . . In the Autumn of 1940 Mr. Leigh bought a thirty-five-ton schooner and set out with his wife and a crew of five on a varied program of exploration: they covered about 10,400 miles; they had an exceedingly interesting time." N Y Times

"The value of Forgotten Waters to the general reader lies in its straight-away narrative, a journalistic, always interesting, never consciously literary account of a portion of the world far less known than it should be." J. H. Jackson

+ Books p9 D 28 '41 1100w

"His book is illustrated with good photographs and offers clear detail in its maps. It is also well written; in short, an excellent book of its kind."

+ N Y Times p4 N 23 '41 270w

LEIGHTON, MRS MARGARET (CARVER). The secret of the old house; il. by Ruth King. 210p $2 Winston 41-9280

Mystery story for young readers.

"The pleasure of the book that lasts comes from taking part in a new life on seventeen acres of woodland, brook and garden. Mrs. Leighton, a Californian, of New England stock, and her four children lived in this house a year and reacted beautifully to Southern exposure." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 Je 29 '41 250w

"Nothing new about the book, but it will be popular. Wholesome, with a touch of Southern atmosphere." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 66:620 J1 '41 60w

"The mellow background of the old house and four lively children, intent on solving the puzzle for themselves and in saving their home, add vitality to a pleasant mystery story for the lighter moments of 8 to 12-year-olds who do not demand blood and terror." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p9 J1 6 '41 200w

LEISENRING, JAMES E. The art of tying the wet fly, as told to V. S. Hidy. 81p il $2 Dodd

799.12 Flies, Artificial

41-5595

"There are 81 pages and 16 pictures illustrating methods of tying, materials to use, and the finished flies. Thrown in to boot is sage advice from the veteran Pennsylvania fly-tying fisherman on how to manipulate a wet fly under the surface of different kinds of waters to make it intrigue a lusty trout." Boston Transcript

Boston Transcript p8 Ap 12 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 11 '41 130w

LEMCKE, PETER HENRY. Life and work of Prince Demetrius Augustine Gallitzin; tr. by Joseph C. Plümpe. 257p il $2.50 Longmans

B or 92 Gallitzin, Demetrius Augustine, prince 40-35360

Biography of Prince Gallitzin, born a Russian aristocrat, who came to America as a young man in 1792. After meeting Bishop Carroll, America's first Catholic bishop, he resolved to become a missionary and work among the poor Catholics of America. He was ordained priest in 1795, founded the Catholic colony at Loretto, Pennsylvania, and labored there for forty years. This book was first published in Münster in 1861. Index.

Reviewed by A. P. James

Am Hist R 47:143 O '41 550w

"Father Lemcke, who was his friend and co-worker, gives us an excellent portrait of Father Gallitzin—a pioneer priest, zealous for souls, charitable in the extreme, scornful of ecclesiastical honors, an ardent lover of poverty." B. L. C.

+ Cath World 152:755 Mr '41 310w

"At times charming, at times inspiring, biography. . . Father Plümpe's translation is as faithful to the original German as he can make it. This is a book with an inimitable flavor all its own." Edward Skillin, Jr.

Commonweal 33:184 D 6 '40 500w

LENGYEL, EMIL. Dakar; outpost of two hemispheres. 312p il maps $2 Random house 966.32 Dakar, French West Africa, France—Colonies (W) 41-52019

History and geography of a port and its environments in western Africa, which has lately assumed vastly increased significance in international affairs. Bibliography, Index.

Booklist 38:129 D 15 '41

Reviewed by Sonia Tomara

Books p16 N 23 '41 550w

"A highly informing book."

+ Christian Century 58:1610 D 24 '41 280w

Reviewed by F. A. Boyle

Library J 66:949 N 1 '41 60w

"Emil Lengyel's 'Dakar,' according to the author the first book in English on the city, fills a great need. For it pulls together much of the available, though limited, information about the strategically vital outpost on the west coast of Africa. . . The Nazis are usually shrewd and far-seeing in strategic matters. Their interest in Africa and Dakar should arouse our curiosity. Mr. Lengyel, in writing this handy guide to Dakar, helps us find our way around one of the most vital strategic areas in the world today." Shepard Stone

+ N Y Times p16 N 30 '41 1000w

"The author has used his shears and paste with a free hand, and the result is an encyclopedic and repetitious history of places, peoples, and power politics, utterly devoid of the color which intimacy with a subject automatically would have given it. Actually, 'Dakar,' the book, is as dry as Dakar itself during those eight months of the year when Senegal is a living hell. Nevertheless, it enables the reader to arrive at a better understanding of Dakar's importance, particularly as it affects the United States." Linton Wells

— + Sat R of Lit 24:8 D 20 '41 550w

LENGYEL, EMIL. Turkey. 474p il maps $3.75 Random house

949.6 Turkey—History

(W) 41-51669

A somewhat impressionistic account of Turkey's past history and her position in the present world conflict. The book was completed early in 1941. Index.

"This is not a history of Turkey, even though it pretends to be such. It abounds in flagrant inaccuracies, unfounded generalizations, and frequent perversions of fact. It would be unfair, therefore, to judge this volume, like most of Mr. Lengyel's books, according to historical standards; instead it ought to be evaluated with reference to romantic literary standards, and as such it possesses merit." S. G. Chaconas

+ — Am Hist R 47:176 O '41 220w

"A vivid and entertaining background of historical reminiscence and contemporary comment for an understanding of modern Turkey." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic My '41 200w

Booklist 37:385 Ap 15 '41

"The author paints a remarkably graphic portrait of the Turkish people, with a sound analysis of their national traits and character. He bursts the proverbial bubble about the indolence and apathy of the Turk. It is true that the Turks are sluggish and languorous in repose and rest, but when roused there is no people that equals them in zeal for action and in endurance and perseverance. . . In a work of such dimension errors are bound to creep in. And it is to Mr. Lengyel's credit that his book is surprisingly free of them. I find, however, that he has Selim III, the reform Sultan who was strangled by the Janizaries, succeeded by Mahmud II, the destroyer of the Janizaries and founder of the nizâm, the modern Turkish army. . . Also an occasional indulgence in 'smartness' mars an otherwise authoritative tone and style." Stoyan Christowe

+ — Books p3 Mr 30 '41 1350w

"We are inclined to agree with the author that the creation of present Turkey is a great miracle of the East and a matter of prime importance. Hence, we would have preferred to have seen the author concentrate upon just that story and not try to cram an encyclopaedic survey of the history, geography, ethnography, sociology, and philosophy of Asia Minor and its peoples since time immemorial into 474 pages. As it is, an intelligent reader hoping to get a good understanding of the rise of the Turkey of Kemal and Inonu would do better to consult a fine work like D. E. Webster's "The Turkey of Atatürk." R. M. Saunders

Canadian Forum 21:88 Je '41 320w

"The story of Turkey is one of the most tangled strands in the history of the Western world, and one of the most interesting. Under the author's skillful hand many of the tangles are unsnarled, but the color of the Ottoman pageant does not fade out in the white light of exact information about it. With Turkey standing now as guard of the Bosphorus gate upon which so much depends, perhaps it would be well to get better acquainted with her."

+ Christian Century 58:500 Ap 9 '41 150w

Reviewed by W. F. Thompson

Churchman 155:20 Je 15 '41 210w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '41

"There has never been a very readable volume on Turkey in modern times, and Dr. Lengyel's, while not a formal history of Turkey, is nevertheless the most valuable work thus far presented to American readers. Its style is literary, and its facts, in so far as they concern Turkish history itself, are sounder than one will find in most popular versions of modern history." L. W. Eshleman

+ Commonweal 34:66 My 9 '41 490w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:882 Jl '41 10w

"The author's knowledge of southeastern Europe is extensive, but his journalistic style is often irritating." G. E. Brown

Library J 66:264 Mr 15 '41 80w

"Doubtless, anyone undertaking a long-range history of Turkey is confronted with a thankless task. If the result is intelligible, the charge is made of over-simplification of a historical subject whose essence is confusion and convulsion. If the effect is confused, the criticism is made of disorderly writing. Perhaps Dr. Lengyel has performed the task about as well as it can be done."

Living Age 360:296 My '41 550w

"No matter how and why the new Turkey was born, there is a more alarming question: How is it going to stand the test of the new world conflagration? In the maze of this problem Lengyel's work will prove a most useful guide-book. It offers not merely bountiful factual information but an illuminating insight into the Oriental mind." Rustem Vambéry

+ Nation 152:507 Ap 26 '41 600w

"The style is choppy and the scholarship is weak. For all the ground it covers, this is definitely not a book for the serious reader."

— New Repub 105:230 Ag 18 '41 40w

"Mr. Lengyel seems at times to be more concerned with the death of the empire than with the birth of the republic. In his own good time, however, he does arrive at the beginnings of revolt in Anatolia in 1919, and from that point on we have a rapid and colorful account of the demonic Kemal and the miracle of modern Turkey. Whether Mr. Lengyel's story of Turkey would have gained by reducing its far-reaching antecedents to more manageable proportions is a question." Clair Price

+ — N Y Times p9 Mr 30 '41 1700w

"Mr. Lengyel's sense of structure is somewhat casual, his argument doubles back on itself, he tells the story of Mustafa Kemal twice (a great tale, and maybe the encore is deserved), and he has a fatal weakness for short declarative sentences averaging a dozen words each, which makes for monotony. Otherwise his book can be endorsed." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 17:82 Mr 22 '41 600w

"The author, writing with vigor and a foreign flavor that is quite impressive, looks at men and times with the eyes of a romanticist who fell in love with the exotic charms of the Turkish people. . . . Since Mr. Lengyel is not a historian but rather a story teller who spins a kind of oriental fairy tale, one is always fascinated, though sometimes rather bewildered at the richness of the tapestry. The full story of modern Turkey alone would need more space than is given here to the story of two thousand years of a nation's Asiatic and European history." H. B. Kranz

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:8 Ap 12 '41 590w

"An excellent book and the right book just at the right moment." Ernest Jackh

+ Survey G 30:306 My '41 240w

Reviewed by George Vernadsky

Vale R n s 30:854 summer '41 900w

LENNOX, WILLIAM GORDON. Science and seizures; new light on epilepsy and migraine. 258p il $2 Harper

616.85 Epilepsy. Headache 41-5316

History and study of epileptic so-called seizure, and the connection between epilepsy and migraine. The author, a practising physician, explains in detail the facts which a layman needs to know about the causes, extent, and cures of these two diseases. Bibliography. Indexes.

"Few men can speak so capably [of the condition] as the author and it is for that reason principally that the book can be considered completely authoritative. Without too great concession to the demand of popularization, the style and diction is suited for the intelligent layman but is sufficiently comprehensive to hold the interest of physicians." M. G. Gray, M. D.

+ Books p14 Je 8 '41 480w

"An excellent book that can be read with profit not only by the general public to which it is addressed but by physicians who are familiar only with the more evident forms of epilepsy. . . . Coming as it does from one of our foremost authorities it ought to make a deep impression." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ N Y Times p29 Mr 23 '41 800w

Wis Lib Bul 37:174 N '41

LENSKI, LOIS (MRS ARTHUR COVEY). Indian captive; the story of Mary Jemison; il. by [the author]. 273p $2 Stokes

Jemison, Mary—Juvenile literature

(W) 41-51956

Fictionized story of Mary Jemison, a white child of Scotch-Irish parentage, captured by the Indians in 1758, and taken from her Pennsylvania home to a Seneca village in New York state. All the remainder of her life—she lived to be over ninety—was spent among the Seneca Indians and she was known as 'The White Woman of the Genesee. This story is based on records and recounts for young readers her experiences in the early years of her captivity. Bibliography.

Booklist 38:99 N 15 '41

"Lois Lenski gives twelve-year-olds not only her best work here, but a story more than one generation can read. . . . The pictures are Miss Lenski's most successful; the mannerisms of her style are absorbed in a richer, more sympathetic manner, and her accuracy has been guaranteed by experts." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 N 2 '41 400w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 8 '42

130w

"The ways of living followed by the Seneca Indians in the Eighteenth Century have been carefully studied as background for this book and the drawings are not only attractive, but exact and authentic." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:466 N '41 110w

"Indian Captive would be invaluable if considered only for its authentic picture of Indian life, customs, and ideas; the addition of the charming yet realistic illustrations and the thrilling story make this a book which all libraries can well afford to purchase. The heartbreaking fight of a small girl of about twelve years with homesickness and her rebellion against adopting Indian ways place this book in a class for older readers than Ocean-Born Mary, but the story will be enjoyed by girls especially, from eleven years upward. The make-up of the book is attractive and the pictures are particularly interesting." A. M. Wetherell

LENSKI, LOIS—Continued

+ Library J 66:952 N 1 '41 150w

"Miss Lenski presents Indian life with accuracy and a fine detail. . . Though she did not forget her past or cease to feel herself a white girl, Molly Jemison emerges as a real and appealing personality. The attractive drawings portray Seneca Indian life with a fine authenticity." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p9 D 28 '41 320w

"Miss Lenski's fictional reconstruction of the facts is sensitive and well documented, both in the text and the drawings of life in a Seneca Indian village. The story of the little girl who gradually became so much an Indian that she refused to go back to the whites when she was 'rescued' is necessarily a rather sombre one, but for readers over twelve it will give that pleasurable thrill and chill of coming on the real thing for once."

+ New Yorker 17:143 D 6 '41 100w

"One of the best studies of Indian life for young people in print." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 24:8 N 8 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 23 '41 70w

LENT, HENRY BOLLES. Sixty acres, more or less; the diary of a week-end Vermonter [il. by the author]. 142p $2 Macmillan

818 Country life (W) 41-51533

For several years the author and his family had lived in rural Connecticut, while he commuted to New York for his work. Connecticut farms were too high-priced, so he decided to look for a place in southern Vermont, paying a small price and using the place for week-ends until it could be put into livable condition. This informal diary describes the search for the farm, how they found it, their reconstruction work on it, and their decision not to sell it. Prices for each step in the work are included.

Booklist 37:265 F 15 '41

Bookmark 2:8 My '41

"A dangerous book to put in the hands of city dwellers who never see clean snow."

+ Books p14 F 9 '41 240w

"The book is very readable; it tells just how much was spent on each separate job and makes the figures interesting. And when they had worked it over into something they were proud of they had a chance to sell but found that they had built their hearts into it and could not let it go. A good Vermonter could have told them that in the first place." F. S. Ambrose

+ Boston Transcript p1 F 15 '41 280w

Christian Century 58:227 F 12 '41 50w

"The author's blithe and informal account of his venture has a singular appeal which makes it a creditable addition to the scores of books written by exponents of the back-to-the-land movement. It is very brief and to the point—too brief, some may say. But a book which seems all too short is thereby paid a compliment that is only rarely bestowed." M. W. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 8 '41 550w

J Home Econ 33:412 Je '41 40w

"Slight, but well done and good reading." L. M. Kinloch

+ Library J 66:31 Ja 1 '41 90w

New Eng Q 14:415 Je '41 60w

"Sixty Acres More or Less' has no urgent contribution to make to the literature of Our-Home-in-the-Country, and its novelty is only in the individuality of its cast of characters and their particular adventures in house finding, house repairing and house furnishing. But individuals they are, and their adventures are related with gayety and charm."

+ N Y Times p3 F 16 '41 440w

Wis Lib Bul 37:72 Ap '41

LEON, MRS RUTH HOPE. Let's make a garden [il. by Pat Poock]. unp $1 Liveright

41-24258

Pictures and brief text explain how two little girls started gardens in their backyards, and later formed a garden club.

"The flowers they grow from seed are those I remember from my own earliest experiences as practically sure to come up and more than likely to bloom almost anywhere. The sentences are short, the type large, and the story easy for first readers." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 N 30 '41 80w

"Good guide for garden-minded tots." G. G. Bates

+ Sat R of Lit 24:11 N 8 '41 30w

LEOPOLD, RICHARD WILLIAM. Robert Dale Owen; a biography. 470p il $4.50 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Owen, Robert Dale 40-34930

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

Reviewed by D. O. Wagner

Am Hist R 47:150 O '41 700w

"The present biography, which is provided with excellent bibliographies and an index, appears to have been carefully prepared from abundant documentary sources and is, on the whole, interesting reading. Sociologists will perhaps find it useful chiefly as a longitudinal section of the social and intellectual history of the United States through the middle half of the nineteenth century." F. N. House

+ Am Soc R 6:753 O '41 190w

"Mr. Leopold, who performs his task with an admirable combination of thoroughness with selectiveness and of sympathy with perspective, has given the general reader some important and by no means unfamiliar chapters of the intellectual and social history of America in its most formative decades." Wilson Follett

+ Atlantic Ap '41 250w

"Mr. Leopold has soundly estimated Owen's services and his weaknesses as well. The work is notable for its completeness and its fine balance. There is little pleading in spite of what must have been great temptation. The style suggests the doctoral dissertation and a somewhat uncertain grip on the general background detracts from an otherwise excellent study. At least it can no longer be said that Robert Dale Owen lacks an adequate biography." Avery Craven

+ Books p10 Mr 16 '41 1300w

"The only weakness in Mr. Leopold's fine biography is that he has been unable to make Owen's curious, chameleon-like personality understandable or even very real. The problem may of course be insolvable, but because he has concentrated on giving us an extremely detailed picture of Owen's activities, of the external events of his life, the man himself tends to be swamped by the countless facts Mr. Leopold has assembled. One wonders, for example, what is really gained by the extremely detailed account of Owen's experiences in Indiana politics, his minor speeches, and his unimportant alliances or disagreements with local political cliques. Though we may grant Mr. Leopold's premise that Owen's life is really three lives, we cannot help feeling a certain disappointment at never seeing very clearly how or why it was that Owen changed from one person to another as the years went by." G. K. Smart

+ New Eng Q 14:177 Mr '41 850w

"An adequate biography of Owen has long been needed and the study which Mr. Leopold has given us would seem to be definitive. It is based upon careful and extensive research, thoroughly documented and well organized. The author has presented his material in a straightforward readable style, and has avoided, wisely, the temptation to psycho-analyze his subject." W. R. Waterman

+ Pol Sci Q 56:157 Mr '41 600w
Reviewed by E. R. Groves
Social Forces 20:118 O '41 480w

LERNER, MAX. Ideas for the ice age; studies in a revolutionary era. 432p $3 Viking

304 Political science. Democracy. U.S.—
Politics and government 41-23896

A volume of essays, intended to complement the author's Ideas Are Weapons (Book Review Digest, 1939). "While there is [a] continuity, the present volume will [it is hoped] stand by itself as the record of one American's approach to those revolutionary events and forces of the past few years that have burst the bounds of our social forms, our international organization, our received ideas. . . In its focus this book is a study of the varied aspects of a revolutionary era." (Foreword) Index.

"While Mr. Lerner does not attempt to draw frontiers or to make up precise economic blueprints, he has many stimulating and suggestive ideas about the means of implementing the more closely integrated world polity of the future." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic D '41 550w
Booklist 38:152 Ja 1 '42

"These papers are always thoughtful, often suggestive; most of them do, however, have a way of ending rather in the air. . . For admirers of Lerner, however, this is a fresh storehouse of his manner of thinking and writing, with much that is valuable in it. The best, single essay, it seemed to me, is the one hitherto unpublished paper, 'The Mind and Faith of Justice Holmes.'" Walter Millis

+ — Books p13 D 28 '41 950w

"A good proportion of Max Lerner's 'Ideas for the Ice Age' was originally written as casual or occasional journalism. Ordinarily the pieces that seem so vital in the pages of a political weekly or even of a law journal take on a faded quality when reprinted in a book, but in the case of Max Lerner, who always writes with long perspectives in mind, an exception can easily be made. The truth is that Mr. Lerner does not know how to write badly. . . At bottom, however, Mr. Lerner fails utterly to convince me that he has any compelling social or political truth by the tail." John Chamberlain

+ — Nation 153:584 D 6 '41 1000w

Reviewed by S. F. Bloom
New Repub 106:57 Ja 12 '42 1450w

"Vigorous, well-written neo-Marxist interpretation in the field of general ideas."

+ New Yorker 17:107 N 29 '41 60w

"The whole volume is a brilliantly written exposition of a free intelligence flinging against the threatening ice-age of unreason the bright darts and arrows of independent thought. Justice Holmes once wrote: 'Between two groups that want to make inconsistent kinds of worlds I see no remedy except force.' Mr. Lerner accepts the uncompromising alternative and takes his stand for his kind of world with persuasive conviction. His book makes stimulating reading." Frank Kingdon

+ Sat R of Lit 24:13 D 6 '41 550w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 7 '41 480w

"Only the 'tough-minded' can survive an ice age. Lerner strives with all his might to be tough. He uses hard words, but sometimes he puts wings on them and then they fly straight into one's consciousness. His bow is taut and his arrows have speed." E. C. Lindeman

+ Survey G 31:37 Ja '42 80w

Time 38:107 N 24 '41 850w

LESKE, GOTTFRIED. I was a Nazi flier; ed. [and tr] by Curt Riess. 351p $2.50 Dial press

940.544943 World war, 1939—Aerial operations. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, German (W) 41-13207

The diary of a young German, a former flight sergeant in the Luftwaffe, which has been translated and edited by Curt Riess. Leske took part in the bombing of Belgium, Holland, northern France, and England, and he describes his experiences and the impressions they made upon him. He is now reported to be in a concentration camp in Canada.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic S '41 110w

Booklist 38:8 S '41

"So far most of our information about Nazism and the Nazis has come either from anti-Fascist sources or through Dr. Goebbels propaganda channels. To my knowledge this is the first time we have been given the opportunity to watch a Nazi soldier's mind at work, which makes Leske's book an unusual publication and an important psychological document."

Marianne Hauser

Books p5 Ag 3 '41 1150w

Christian Science Monitor p10 O 4 '41 340w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '41

Reviewed by Otis Ferguson

New Repub 105:197 Ag 11 '41 300w

Reviewed by E. F. Allen

N Y Times p10 Ag 17 '41 550w

"What is fascinating about the record is its enormous dullness. Beyond his job and the few slogans injected into him by Goebbels' propaganda syringe, Leske has no ideas whatsoever. He's almost a complete fool, not a born fool but very apparently a made fool. He's been trained, inhumanly well trained, to pilot a bomber and to hate and kill automatically. Beyond this, nothing." Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 17:52 Jl 26 '41 750w

Pratt p23 D '41

"One can not help noticing a bad taste in one's mouth after having finished this book. It is depressing and saddening. But it should be read. It will be difficult to educate this generation of stupid, arrogant, fearless killers. But there is some hope. Men of this calibre, naive, cruel, and poisoned by propaganda, are not much worse than some children. There are institutions everywhere for ill-natured, malignant children—they had them even in Germany before the times of the apocalypse."

Kurt Henry

Sat R of Lit 24:12 Jl 26 '41 800w

"To most American readers this diary will prove a shocking document and not at all pleasant reading. Leske is typical of a whole German generation which apparently looks for no higher meaning in life than barbarism, hate and violence."

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 3 '41 550w

"This book is no more pleasant to read than any pathological report. But for those who want to understand their enemies, it is required reading. Gottfried Leske is terrifying not only because he is a mindless but effective cog in a precision machine. Nor is he a purely German phenomenon. He is typical of a generation without traditions, knowledge, human experience, which looks for no higher meaning in life than physical violence. . . He is the raw stuff out of which Fascism is made. And he is most terrifying because he is everywhere."

Time 38:76 Jl 28 '41 1250w

LESLEY, HUBERT G. Airplane maintenance. 511p il $2.75 Wiley

629.134 Airplanes

(W) 41-1210

"This book has been prepared to serve the following purposes: 1. As a general textbook on airplane maintenance for use by aviation schools and air lines sponsoring training courses for their employees; 2. As a guide for operators of approved repair stations and mechanical personnel responsible for the maintenance of non-scheduled transport services; 3. As a general reference book on materials and procedures for use by air line mechanical personnel; 4. As a means of better acquainting the private aircraft owner with the principles of proper maintenance; 5. As a guide for those in air line stores departments who are responsible for the proper handling and stocking of aircraft materials; 6. As a general textbook for the information of sales representatives contacting the aircraft industry." (Pref) Index.

LESLEY, H. G.—Continued

Booklist 37:265 F 15 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:20 Ap '41

LESLIE, MRS DORIS (OPPENHEIM). Royal William. 398p $2.50 Macmillan [9s Hutchinson]

William IV, king of Great Britain—Fiction (W) 41-2813

Fictionized biography of William IV, England's "Sailor King." Short bibliography.

"If you can't take your biographies straight and must have them diluted with fiction, you will like this slightly 'fictionized' life of the king nobody knows. . . [Mrs] Leslie's portrait is very appealing, and it is drawn with considerable spirit and humor against a background of amusing Georgian manners." R. M. G.

+ Atlantic Mr '41 130w

Booklist 37:409 My 1 '41

Reviewed by George Conrad

Books p11 F 16 '41 320w

"In 'Royal William' Doris Leslie has achieved the impossible—a lively, readable and convincing fictional biography based upon careful research." R. G. Cook

+ Boston Transcript p2 F 15 '41 480w

Christian Century 58:191 F 5 '41 90w

Reviewed by H. R. Burdett

Library J 66:140 F 1 '41 110w

Reviewed by Harold Brighthouse

Manchester Guardian p7 N 15 '40 180w

"Highly entertaining and unconventional fictional biography. . . For my own part, I think [Mrs] Leslie has dealt unfairly with Dora, and brought the story to an unjustified climax at her expense; for, after all, Jordan was a great actress and considerable of a woman, worth a dozen Royal Williams, even taking him at [Mrs] Leslie's own valuation. But she has made a lively story of it and wastes no time arguing with you. You may have it your own way." F. T. Marsh

+ — N Y Times p21 F 9 '41 800w

"Stracheyesque biography. . . William, according to this account and in spite of the fact that his father was mad and three of his brothers were hopeless rakes, is a rather nice fellow, kindhearted, well intentioned, and not unintelligent."

New Yorker 16:65 F 8 '41 60w

"Creevey, Greville, and the rest of his scribbling contemporaries thought William a dull fellow, boorish, ignorant, stupid, probably crazy like his honored father. A good many later historians have echoed their verdict. But Mrs. Leslie disagrees, and to prove her point she creates a novel which is certainly not dull, and which makes William thoroughly interesting. . . This sounds as if her book were a long defensive argument. It is not. She is too good a novelist for that. It is a straightforward narrative, well-designed and well-executed, into which the serious defense has been invisibly woven." C. D. Abbott

+ Sat R of Lit 23:10 F 1 '41 490w

"[Mrs] Leslie's novel, which is well written and historically accurate, serves a purpose in focusing attention on a relatively little known and neglected figure in English history."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e F 9 '41 300w

"It is clear that [Mrs] Leslie has been at great pains to 'get up' her subject; but on the basis of sound historical research she has raised an elaborate structure of fiction, embellished with all the artful devices of the contemporary story-teller. Very seldom can she resist the lure of a cliché. . . As usual, one notes how history dramatized loses in essential drama what it gains in popular interest. [Mrs] Leslie's style is fluent and briskly readable; but the high lights are so vivid, the shadows so murky, the heroines so beautiful, the villains of the piece so uncommonly wicked that after a while the reader's attention may begin to flag. Then down from the bookshelf come Greville and Creevey."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p589 N 23 '40 350w

Wis Lib Bul 37:140 J1 '41

LESTER, BERNARD. Sales engineering. 200p $2 Wiley

658.89621 Salesmen and salesmanship. Engineering 40-34661

This study attempts to outline the principles and practice of sales engineering for the young engineer, showing him the growing importance of his work, and suggesting opportunities for further work. "The reader, regardless of how aware he may feel of the advances and implications of the machine age, will acquire a fresh view of the growing importance of the machine and the rapidly mounting equipment investment per person in the factory, home and elsewhere." (Management R)

Booklist 37:321 Mr 15 '41

"The book is a thorough, well arranged treatise containing much value for beginners and plenty of useful reminders for older technical salesmen to review." L. C. Cooley

+ Chem & Met Eng 48:133 Ja '41 140w

"The work is excellently arranged for reference or study. In most instances a statement of principle is followed immediately by a detailed case illustration, which process enhances the book's value as a text, particularly where the student has not yet had field experience. In addition to those for whom the book is specifically intended, other salesmen and sales managers in both the industrial and consumer field will find it extremely helpful. It is also highly commended to those interested in market research." L. R. Boulware

+ Management R 30:74 F '41 550w

Pratt p15 spring '41

LESTER, RICHARD ALLEN. Economics of labor. 913p $3.75 Macmillan

331 Labor and laboring classes. Economic conditions 41-5940

"This book deals primarily with the economic aspects of labor problems. Designed as a textbook for college courses in labor, it is analytic rather than encyclopedic. The emphasis throughout the book is upon economic principles rather than upon particular events or ephemeral facts. . . Throughout the book, including the sections dealing with historical material, emphasis is placed upon the nature of the market. In so far as possible, the new market analysis of monopolistic or imperfect competition is here applied to labor and labor problems." (Pref) Index.

"Falling in a bitterly controversial field, Professor Lester's courageous eclecticism will be disappointing to partisans. But from the viewpoint of stimulating the student to an intelligent appreciation of the crux of labor's current problems, the book will not soon be surpassed." H. W. Davey

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1215 D '41 220w

"The very strength of the work raises the principal question relative to the adaptability of the book to an undergraduate course in labor problems. Ricardo, Keynes, Douglas, Robertson, Hicks, and the others are parading past in an excellently organized formation but at such a pace that there is a real question as to how much of it all a college junior could or would comprehend. . . These criticisms are definitely more of an indictment of undergraduates than of Mr. Lester's presentation. My impression is that this work will find an exceedingly serviceable place in graduate work in labor, and will be used by those who wish to give intensive training to a strong group of undergraduates." C. E. Warne

+ Ann Am Acad 217:194 S '41 600w

"Several features of the book seem to this reviewer to deserve favorable comment. The descriptive sections on union policies and practices, on international labor relations, and on industry-wide collective bargaining are well done. The over-all organization of the materials, departing as it does from the all-too-common three-way division of workers' approach, employers' approach, and governmental approach, is also a desirable feature. The early introduction of wage theory is effective, since it forms an essential basis for understanding all phases of labor economics. On the other hand, objection may reasonably be made to the failure to define labor problems except by implication and the tendency to shift about in implied definitions. Thus, in the introductory section, such problems are apparently regarded as social in nature, consisting of unrest and conflict arising out of the employer-employee relationship." Dale Yoder
+ J Pol Econ 49:779 O '41 700w

"For mature students, the book is a valuable addition to the literature in the field." Lois MacDonald
+ Survey G 30:406 JI '41 300w

LESTER, ROBERT MACDONALD. Forty years of Carnegie giving. 186p pl $2 Scribner

061 Carnegie, Andrew. Endowments 41-19558

"A summary of the benefactions of Andrew Carnegie and of the work of the philanthropic trusts which he created." (Subtitle) It consists of data and reports on the trusts and agencies, including financial statements and lists of officials. Index.

Booklist 38:89 N 15 '41

"This book is compiled by the Secretary of Carnegie Corporation of New York, the largest and most diverse of the dozen or more Trusts through which Andrew Carnegie arranged for distribution of the income (and now and then some of the principal) from $311,000,000 of his formal lifetime gifts to the English-speaking world. The compiler may therefore be regarded as official spokesman for these Trusts and the book will be welcomed as an authentic, definitive account of their inception, administration, and spending during the forty years just past." J. I. Wyer
+ Library J 66:1084 D 15 '41 850w

School & Society 54:340 O 18 '41 30w

LETTERS from Jim; ed. with a foreword by Cecil Roberts. 153p $1.75 Macmillan

940.548142 World war, 1939—Personal narratives, English 41-9744

Letters from a young English soldier, written to his friend, Cecil Roberts, in America. The letters give his impressions of war, army life and experiences, and his reactions to the people he meets in this strange new life. Jim was a London telegraph boy before the war.

"The later letters are both moving and delightful. Even the early letters with their apparent blindness are best just as they are, for they help the reader to understand how at least one English boy has slowly but surely realized the measure of the present emergency and, in helping to meet it, has risen to his full stature." Beach Conger
+ Books p12 Je 1 '41 700w

Christian Century 58:531 Ap 16 '41 50w

Reviewed by Ralph Bates
Nation 152:673 Je 7 '41 90w

"It is an interesting word-picture from England. And Cecil Roberts has done some of his finest and most earnest writing in his brief foreword."

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 30 '41 550w

LEVINE, MILTON ISRA, and SELIGMANN, JEAN HORTENSE. The wonder of life; how we are born and how we grow up. 114p il $1.75 Simon & Schuster

612.6 Sex instruction 40-27845

"The beginning of life and the reproductive process in animal and man are explained for everyone of twelve or older by an educator and a pediatrician experienced in talking to children on the subject." Library J

"This concise little book purports to be written primarily for pre-adolescent and adolescent children, but the reviewer must confess that after reading it from cover to cover he felt it merited a much wider distribution. It is written in a direct, clear-cut style, in language anyone can understand, and deals with such a fundamental subject that it might well be placed in the hands of teachers and parents and made a reference book for classes of prospective mothers and fathers." R. A. Bolt
+ Am J Pub Health 31:1094 O '41 150w

Booklist 37:178 Ja 1 '41

"The material is discussed thoroughly in an absorbing style, with skill and sincerity and without evasion or reservations to leave logical questions unanswered. . . It is a book that no library can afford to miss." J. L. Sauer
+ Library J 66:84 Ja 15 '41 150w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 15 '41 220w

LEVY, BERYL HAROLD. Our Constitution: tool or testament? with an introd. by Robert H. Jackson. 322p $3 Knopf

342.73 U.S. Constitution. U.S. Supreme court. Marshall, John. Taney, Roger Brooke. Holmes, Oliver Wendell, 1841-1935. Brandeis, Louis Dembitz (W) 41-1576

Should our Constitution be regarded as a rigid code or as a flexible and dynamic instrument of progress? Dr Levy describes the role of the Supreme court in our government thru the biographies of four leading justices—Marshall, Taney, Holmes and Brandeis, and shows the connection between their philosophy and their judicial opinions. Selected bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by C. B. Swisher

Am Hist R 47:387 Ja '42 420w

"What we have here is constitutional history in a popular form, although at times in a somewhat unfamiliar vocabulary. The psychological portraits are uneven: that of Taney is good, that of Marshall is quite poor, that of Brandeis is a little too pat, and that of Holmes is too complex to be easily comprehensible. On the other hand, the lay reader will find simply and lucidly expounded many of the great constitutional cases with which all Americans should be familiar." Louis Hacker

+ Books p16 Mr 9 '41 1450w

Reviewed by Philip Nichols

Boston Transcript p2 F 15 '41 440w

"It has been the sad fate of many a good book that it was written too late or too soon. Mr. Levy, for all the cogency of his cracks about constitutional law, has managed to be out of date in both directions. . . It is, I suppose, a lot to ask, but I should like to see Mr. Levy sit him down and write another book. I should like to see him discard, if indeed he has not already discarded, his optimistic notion that the first five Roosevelt appointees to the Supreme Court are quintuplets or even brothers under the skin, and then apply his acute and inquiring mind, and the same lives-into-works approach he used on Marshall, Taney, Holmes, and Brandeis, to a cold-cut analysis of the five men who will presumably make up a majority of the Court for some time to come." Fred Rodell

LEVY, B. H.—Continued

Columbia Law R 41:766 Ap '41 1750w

"Mr. Levy's faith in the familiar dogma of his school is given such facile expression as to conceal the realities in which he purports to be so exclusively interested. If his book has any significance it is only as proof that the time for fresh thinking has come. It must be remembered that others besides conservatives are susceptible to the disease which has been aptly called hardening of the categories." M. D. Howe

— + Harvard Law R 54:1087 Ap '41 600w
J Philos 38:335 Je 5 '41 550w

Reviewed by R. B. Rankin
Library J 66:139 F 1 '41 210w

Reviewed by H. S. Commager
N Y Times p16 Mr 30 '41 1200w

"Not easy reading, but a provocative book."
+ New Yorker 16:56 F 1 '41 40w

"Here one may find the New Deal ideas as to the Court set forth in readable and popular form and on the whole with accuracy. Of the many books of recent years attacking the Court it is the easiest I know for the layman to read." J. T. Adams

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:12 Mr 8 '41 600w

"Taken as a whole, this instructive study of four justices who have represented 'tops in ability,' in conjunction with the author's closing chapter on the present-day court, provides illuminating material for a wider understanding of contemporary trends."

+ Springfield Republican p10 F 20 '41 850w

LEWIS, BENJAMIN ROLAND. The Shakespeare documents; facsimiles, transliterations, translations and commentary. 2v il maps $35 Stanford Univ. press 822.33 Shakespeare, William—Biography.

Shakespeare, William—Bibliography 41-8491

"The documents as to Shakespeare's life and works Professor Lewis describes as a Chinese puzzle in which some of the pieces are indecipherable scraps, and several of the most important pieces missing. . . . There are at hand, nevertheless, 161 documents bearing upon these and other matters. Twenty-nine of them Professor Lewis presents in beautifully executed full-size photographic facsimile, and the rest he has transcribed . . . adding all available data." N Y Times

"If a work of such scope as this, advancing the claim to supersede all earlier collections of documentary material, was to be produced at all, the scholars for whom it is primarily intended had the right to expect that it would be accomplished according to the strictest standards of impeccable technique. It cannot be said that 'The Shakespeare Documents' conforms to these standards. The errors and omissions I have noted are here set down as a protest and a warning. There are others which I have not commented upon; and it is reasonably certain that when the volumes are subjected to the meticulous scrutiny of the experts who communicate with each other in the pages of the learned journals this achievement of 'The Shakespeare Laboratory of the University of Utah' and of the 'Stanford University Press' will be punctuated at many points that I have overlooked." S. C. Chew

— Books p11 Jl 6 '41 1300w

"Few biographers or none have brought to their task so wide a knowledge of source material or have interpreted it with so profound a knowledge of the elder English law and folkways. The outstanding virtue of these volumes is historic imagination—the ability to divest one's self of predilections of the present and to view the past in the light of its own standards of conduct." John Corbin

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 24 '41 1550w

LEWIS, CHARLES LEE. David Glasgow Farragut; admiral in the making. v 1 386p il $3.75 U.S. naval inst.

B or 92 Farragut, David Glasgow (41-10196)

"This book deals with the life of Farragut prior to the Civil War; a second volume covering the remainder of his life is in course of preparation. . . . The author is fortunate in his subject for a biography. Farragut had an unusually eventful naval service before he rose to prominence at New Orleans. He served in every type of ship, from a tiny schooner to the largest vessel the Navy possessed; he saw action in the War of 1812, against the Barbary States and Mexico, hunted pirates in the Caribbean, cruised in the Mediterranean and in South American waters, and established the Navy Yard at Mare Island, California." Christian Science Monitor

"As a work of scholarship and as serious history the present volume is of high quality. The style is somewhat pedestrian and there is no liveliness in the writing. There is a meticulous attention to detail of dates, weather, uniforms and other subjects, but, curiously and disappointingly enough, the author does not portray Farragut as a living human being. Despite such defects however, the present volume and its promised successor, which will cover the Civil War period, are of genuine value because, for the first time, one of our greatest naval leaders is given the thorough study that he has long deserved." P. J. Searles

+ — Books p10 S 7 '41 1100w

"This book gives every evidence of painstaking research, and, from official sources, proves that previous biographies of Farragut contain many errors. The documentary notes are so complete that they themselves furnish interesting reading. Aside from an occasional lapse in nautical phraseology, there seems little in this book that is open to criticism, and those who read it undoubtedly will look forward to the appearance of the second volume." F. L. O.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 26 '41 500w

"Professor Lewis was well-equipped for presenting to us an accurate, scholarly and technical biography—the fruit of great industry and conscientiousness. . . . While a portrait of Farragut does emerge, it is not altogether clear or complete. The book is taken up, as no doubt a naval biography should be, with movements of ships and descriptions of scenes and events in foreign lands, but it tells us little of Farragut's personal habits, and practically nothing of his views on any subject, on religion or slavery, or his attitude toward science and literature." Albert Mordell

+ — N Y Times p3 Je 29 '41 2250w

LEWIS, CLEONA, and MCCLELLAND, JOHN C. Nazi Europe and world trade. 200p $2 Brookings

382 Commerce. Europe—Commercial policy 41-11821

"A consideration of the future position in world trade of a German-dominated continent of Europe—excluding Russia and states in the Russian sphere. The author weighs the area's productive resources against its requirements and thereby gauges some of the important elements of strength and weakness in its economy." Management R

"This book performs the very useful service of organizing the factual material pertinent to one of the economic problems raised by the recent political developments in Europe. Its subject matter, the potential effect upon international trade of a Nazi victory, has often been discussed in a rather loose and general way. In this book, the problem is treated on the basis of the concrete factual data that is available. . . . As far as I can judge, the work was done with extreme care and caution." Otto Nathan

+ Am Econ R 31:889 D '41 600w

- Reviewed by W. H. C. Laves
Am Pol Sci R 35:1018 O '41 550w
- Reviewed by M. S. Gordon
Ann Am Acad 218:226 N '41 650w
Booklist 38:29 O 1 '41
- Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:201 O '41 10w
Management R 30:236 Je '41 40w
- Reviewed by George Soule
New Repub 105:195 Ag 11 '41 900w
Springf'd Republican p6 J1 12 '41 1100w

LEWIS, EDWIN. A new heaven and a new earth. 248p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury 230 Christianity. Kingdom of God

In the title "the word 'heaven' is used metaphorically, as representing in a general way that which men believe is most worthy of their devotion, wherein they find authority for what they do, and in keeping with which they would seek to have the life of the world determined. When a man says that he appeals to heaven, he means that he appeals to his ultimate court, irrespective of how he may conceive it. The thesis of these lectures may be stated accordingly. It is that since 'heaven' controls 'earth,' the fundamental question is that of 'heaven.' In the long run, it is heaven that makes earth; it is the ideal that controls the actual; it is what men really believe in that makes them what they are. If there is to be a new earth, there must be a new heaven; more, if there is to be a better earth—because 'new' may be 'worse'—there must be a better heaven." (Foreword) The author is a professor at Drew Theological seminary. Index.

"Professor Lewis has added a creditable and supremely relevant discussion to the literature of a more realistic social gospel that in the desperation of crisis may yet come of age." Benjamin Miller

+ Christian Century 58:1208 O 1 '41 950w
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 10 '42 490w

Reviewed by R. C. Miller
Churchman 155:21 O 1 '41 250w

LEWIS, HERBERT CLYDE. Season's greetings. 408p $2.50 Dial press

41-22359

The season was Christmas, and the scene a boarding house on Eighth Street, in New York city. An oddly assorted group of lonely people lived there, but Christmas eve brought them all together, and each in his or her way had a Merry Christmas.

"Mr. Lewis writes like a streak, with complete sincerity, and vividness, after close and accurate observation. He organizes superbly. . . But if I may say so, Mr. Lewis in 'Season's Greetings' somewhat labors his points." F. H. Bullock

+ — Books p10 N 9 '41 450w

"'Season's Greetings' should be classed as a well told, realistic tale, with realistic connoting as it usually does a hard emphasis on ugliness and discomfort and pain. Toward the end of the story, however, a touch of the romantic—the cheerful and optimistic—is to be noted. To this reviewer the turn for the better, the faintly rosy, romantic mood, seems quite as realistic as the earlier dull hopelessness—if that is not a contradiction in terms. And doubtless the author meant it so, to fit in with his love-tale theme for New York." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p30 O 26 '41 850w
New Yorker 17:91 O 25 '41 30w

LEWIS, JOHN. The case against pacifism. 238p $1.50 Norton [5s; pa 2s 6d Allen, G]
172.4 Peace. War. World politics [A 41-155]

"An ex-member of the No More War Movement and the Fellowship of Reconciliation has disentangled the various strands of opinion which, during the troubled history of the post-war years, made up what is called the pacifist movement, tracing the splits which each successive crisis induced. . . After his historical introduction Mr. Lewis turns to philosophy, for it is as a philosophy of life that pacifism has been presented, and it is as such that Mr. Lewis criticises it. His treatment is exhaustive, ranging over such topics as pacifism as a religion, the relation between pacifism and Christianity, the particular brand of non-violence preached by Gandhi, the causes of war, and the ambiguous position and intentions of Russia. In regard to each of these issues he is at pains to state the pacifist case—to state it fairly and fully by long quotations from the books of its leading exponents—before setting to work to refute it." Spec

"Mr. Lewis' book is not likely to change anyone's mind, nor affect anyone's actions. Non-pacifists will find it thorough, painstaking and competent. . . Pacifists will be flattered at the extent to which the author considers that they have influenced the world in recent years, even though he considers their influence almost wholly bad. This doubtful satisfaction is all that pacifists are likely to experience, however." I. R. Dale

+ Canadian Forum 20:386 Mr '41 500w

Reviewed by John MacMurray
New Statesman & Nation 20:572 D 7 '40 600w

"A critical examination of the arguments for the pacifist position was long overdue, and Mr. Lewis is to be congratulated on having done a first-rate and much-needed job. . . If I may venture a criticism, it is that Mr. Lewis does wrong to insist that pacifism has 'now become a reactionary faith.' Apart altogether from the question of whether on any particular issue the pacifist is right, he is surely not a man who takes a step backward, but a man who points the step forward. Impracticable at the moment, pacifism must one day become the creed of all civilised men; if it does not, civilisation will perish, as Mr. Lewis himself recognises, when he tells us that 'if there is an alternative to war, we must find it without delay, for without some defence the overthrow of all that stands for progress and decency is inevitable.'" C. E. M. Joad

+ — Spec 165:504 N 15 '40 1100w

LEWIS, NOLAN DON CARPENTIER. A short history of psychiatric achievement; with a forecast for the future. 275p $3 Norton

616.8 Psychology, Pathological 41-7807

"Dr. Lewis, professor of psychiatry in the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Columbia University, and director of the New York State Psychiatric Institute and Hospital, was chosen to give the annual series of Thomas W. Salmon Memorial Lectures. He decided that he could best honor Dr. Salmon's memory by making a brief review and evaluation of the field of scientific endeavor in which this eminent physician had been so interested. And so we have this book indicating 'some of the most important trends of thought which constitute the background of our present-day psychiatry, and also [mentioning] a number of those stimuli which have served to initiate research in this field.'" (Scientific Bk Club R) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 38:4 S '41

Reviewed by Lorine Pruette
Books p9 Je 22 '41 200w
Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '41
New Repub 105:230 Ag 18 '41 60w
Pratt p18 autumn '41
Scientific Bk Club R 12:3 My '41 480w
Springf'd Republican p6 Je 9 '41 550w

LEWIS, N. D. C.—Continued

"This review of the past with a glimpse of the possibilities of the future should interest those who are primarily concerned with mental hygiene and its future. It offers sound doctrine in addition to the historical data." I. S. Wile, M.D.

+ Survey 77:372 D '41 330w

LEWIS, WILMARTH SHELDON. Three tours through London in the years, 1748, 1776, 1797. 135p il $2.50 Yale univ. press

914.21 London—Description. London—Social life and customs 41-21694

"The questions I have set out to answer here are these: If we could be transported to London in the years 1748, 1776, 1797, what would we find? How did the people live? What were they like? What would we see and do? What would be the feel of the place? Oddly enough, no one seems to have tried to do this for specific years; there are books on every conceivable aspect of eighteenth-century life, but they cover the entire century." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"Collectors of books about London should not overlook this piquant little volume. . . The feature that endears this book—written for the general reader—to scholars as well is that all statements are authenticated in footnotes."

+ Books p11 D 21 '41 230w

"[The] footnotes certainly take one's mind down the pleasantest avenues of scholarship. [The author] has written here three graceful essays. . . It is no fault of his if the tinkle of Horace Walpole's London provides no help at all in explaining the wild strength of Churchill and Morrison's London." Henry Grattan

N Y Times p8 N 30 '41 650w

LEY, WILLY. Bombs and bombing. 128p il $1.25 Modern age

623.38 Aeronautics, Military. Air raids—Protective measures 41-21995

"Concise information on modern techniques of air attack and defense. Bomb carriers, bombs of various kinds, interceptor planes, anti-aircraft guns, balloon barrages, and shelters are described to show citizens what to expect and what to do during an attack." Booklist

Booklist 38:108 D 1 '41

"Willy Ley is a competent, adept and experienced writer on the subject of bombing. For years he has studied explosives and their effects, so that today he can be rated an expert in the field. He has experimented, written technical as well as popular articles, and was a pioneer in promoting recent flights in Germany and the United States. His past record and present status should make Bombs and Bombing required reading." P. J. Searles

+ Books p9 D 28 '41 700w

"Here is a book of facts which should be serviceable reading whether or not we are looking forward to heavy air bombardment in the near future. For in 'Bombs and Bombing,' the science editor of PM offers succinct statement and explanation to dispel the vague terror which is founded on ignorance. On some points Mr. Ley is definitely encouraging; but, encouraging or not, the information he presents should conduce to calmness and sound preparation of mind." K. W.

+ N Y Times p8 Ja 18 '42 550w

LEY, WILLY. The lungfish and the unicorn. 305p il $2.75 Modern age

591.5 Animal lore. Zoology 41-7770

"Mr. Ley has spent thirteen years collecting material for this book, that embodies in it, in condensed versions, some of [his] articles written for American magazines. He calls it 'an excursion into romantic zoology.' . . Its introductory chapter concerns itself with the main stream of zoological theory and research . . . but the book as a whole is divided into three parts—one dealing with so-called mythological animals, one with animals that have become extinct within the time of man's recorded observations, and one with 'living fossils.'" Scientific Bk Club R

Booklist 37:487 Je 15 '41

Bookmark 2:7 N '41

"Mr. Ley's treatment of the [hoatzin] itself is not quite worthy of this interesting creature and is somewhat incorrect. But these and other minor slips are to be expected in a volume of such encyclopedic quality. The scattering of pen and ink drawings makes us wish for many more. No matter how excellent the descriptions, fabulous and even rare living beings would gain greatly by more visual representations. An index renders the substance easily accessible. This book will remain at the head of its particular category for a long time." William Beebe

+ — Books p10 My 25 '41 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 D '41

Reviewed by James McGovern

Commonweal 34:355 Ag 1 '41 300w

New Repub 104:737 My 26 '41 30w

"From the unicorn to the lungfish and the okapi, this book holds more zoological oddities than can even be listed in a short review. And every one of them has a distinct and fascinating story to tell."

+ N Y Times p8 My 25 '41 500w

Reviewed by Clifton Fadiman

New Yorker 17:89 Ap 19 '41 200w

Pratt p20 autumn '41

"This book on the lunatic fringe of zoölogy is diverting and instructive." H. S.

+ Sat R of Lit 23:21 Ap 26 '41 70w

"Beyond the fact of the entertainment and instruction to be found in 'The Lungfish and the Unicorn,' the physical appearance of the book is most attractive. The drawings by Professor Gustav Wolf of New York, are a particularly welcome addition to its pages." A. H. Compton & others

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:1 My '41 800w

LEYBURN, JAMES GRAHAM. Haitian people. 342p $4 Yale univ. press

972.94 Haiti—History. Haiti—Social conditions 41-27832

Social analysis of the Haitian people, which traces their gradual development from the time of French colonial life, about 1804, to the present. Some of the subjects considered are: ethnic and historical matters; religious roles of the Vodun and the Catholic church, commerce, daily life and the Creole language spoken by the natives. The author is associate professor of the science of society at Yale University. Notes, bibliography and index.

Reviewed by J. B. Parrish

Churchman 156:18 Ja 15 '42 200w

"Shows a sympathetic understanding of Haiti's problems and a true affection for the Haitian people. . . Will interest both laymen and sociologists. Highly recommended, except for small libraries." M. J. Messler

+ Library J 66:949 N 1 '41 90w

"It is one of the better pictures of Haitian life done in English in recent years, and helps to fill out a panoramic scene to which writers like Melville Herskovits, Rayford Logan, Price-Mars, and J. C. Dorsainvil have contributed much." Harold Courlander

+ Sat R of Lit 24:16 D 20 '41 700w

LEYS, WAYNE ALBERT RISSER. Ethics and social policy. 522p $4; to schools $3 Prentice-Hall

170 Ethics. Social ethics 41-12346

"This book was written for a practical purpose. It is offered as a guide to the reader or student in finding a rational ethical basis for plans of personal conduct and public policies. Academic and abstract considerations are reduced to a minimum, and the discussion is directed toward actual problems with which present-day people have to deal. Throughout the book, the life situation method is employed. The plan is to state some current controversies and to stimulate the reader in thinking them through. Appeal is made from time to time to the great thinkers, both ancient and modern, for help in formulating the difficulties involved and arriving at a solution." (Christian Century) Chapter bibliographies. Indexes.

"This is a substantial volume. In its 500 pages most of the significant philosophies having a bearing upon the subject of personal and public morals are touched upon. It is not to be expected that a book of this kind should meet with universal approval. Every question that it handles is controversial. But the book lends itself to at least two uses. The general reader will find it interesting and stimulating, and it is well designed for a textbook for colleges and universities. At the end of each chapter are 'exercises' to promote further thought, and an excellent bibliography. For best results it should be studied. But a wide reading of it should discourage slipshod thinking." J. D. Martin

+ Christian Century 58:1210 O 1 '41 700w
School & Society 54:32 J1 12 '41 10w
Social Studies 33:47 Ja '42 30w

LEYSON, BURR WATKINS. Automotive occupations. 190p pl $2 Dutton

629.234 Automobiles—Design and construction. Ford motor company (W) 41-8646

Information on the details in the manufacturing of the modern automobile, combined with a vocational study of the industry. The Ford organization at the River Rouge plant was selected as typical of the whole industry, and made the basis of the book. There is some material on Ford training schools. Many photographs. No index.

Booklist 37:542 J1 15 '41

Reviewed by Dorothea Dawson

Library J 66:620 J1 '41 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:38 J1 '41

Wis Lib Bul 37:152 O '41

L'HOMMEDIEU, MRS DOROTHY KEASBEY. Macgregor, the little black Scottie; il. by Marguerite Kirmse. 55p $1.50 Lippincott

41-23281

The adventures of a clever little Scottie dog and the three kittens which followed him about, despite their mother's warnings. Told in simple text and charming pictures, for ages five to seven.

Booklist 38:179 Ja 15 '42

"The talk is what we would expect from a sensible, slightly conceited Scottie, with reason for good opinions of himself. As for the pictures, not only the dog hero—one of Miss Kirmse's very best—but his feline stooges will make anybody chuckle who loves fur on foot." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 N 9 '41 260w

"The illustrations by Marguerite Kirmse are delightful and reveal the artist's understanding of dogs." J. E. Stromdahl

+ Library J 67:42 Ja 1 '42 50w

"This is a light-hearted adventure story on a minor scale, told largely in lively dialogue. Though Marguerite Kirmse's kittens leave something to be desired in the way of sensitive portrayal, her pictures of MacGregor are absolutely true to the moods and poses of a Scottie." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p10 D 7 '41 210w

LIBER, BENZION. Your mental health; or, Between mental health and mental disease; for intelligent laymen and physicians. 408p $3 Melior bks, 320 5th av, N.Y.

131.3 Mental hygiene. Psychology, Pathological 40-35716

Collection of articles and case histories on various types of mental disturbance which have appeared in the medical press. Partial contents: Feeble-mindedness; Impotence; Incest; Marital troubles; Sexual education; Confusing conditions; Body and mind; Depressed; Psychoneurosis; Schizophrenia; Fear and suggestion; Mental health—Prevention and treatment. Glossary. Index.

"Written in a style easily understandable by the lay reader."

Springf'd Republican p12 My 16 '41 170w

"The book contains little that is new and is a rather journalistic statement of transition cases that suggest various borderline areas between normality and mental illness." I. S. Wile, M.D.

Survey 77:101 Mr '41 50w

LIDDON, ELOISE S. (MRS G. A. SOPER).

Some lose their way. 352p $2.50 Dutton

41-17613

Historical novel of ante-bellum Alabama, from 1836 to the nomination of Clay for the presidency. Adriana More, a penniless English actress, arriving in Montgomery to keep an acting engagement, is rescued from the Creek Indians by a handsome young Southerner. Adriana's ambition to become a great actress interferes with the course of her love affair with her rescuer; there is a duel, and Adriana marries another and worthier young Southern aristocrat. The years of adjustment following were hard for both of them, but in the end brought contentment.

Booklist 38:131 D 15 '41

"This is Eloise Liddon's first serious novel; she is the author of two mystery novels and she studied for the stage. She has written an interesting love story but she does not belong to those writers who have powerfully evoked the old South and made of it a dream that may be false, but is still enchanting. Miss Liddon's understanding of the tangled relationship between Adriana and her two lovers is too good to hide under the trappings of the historical novel. I'd like to see her try next a novel of our times." Lorine Pruette

+ — Books p10 O 19 '41 700w

Reviewed by E. F. Kelly

Library J 66:904 O 15 '41 40w

"During the decade covered by 'Some Lose Their Way' an important slice of Southern history is set forth and evaluated with no little wit. It is almost as high a compliment as one could pay Miss Liddon to say that this is something which dawns on the reader later—quite a while later. While Adriana More occupies the center of the stage he is likely to have direct attention for little else." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p6 O 19 '41 750w

"Miss Liddon's novel possesses all the trappings of a romance, just the kind of romance which her heroine, Adriana More, might have read in between two of Scott's novels, which are naturally her major diet. . . Miss Liddon writes earnestly, with a good deal of care for her characterizations, if with somewhat less for her background. But Adriana never takes command of the book as she should, never attains either stature or depth. She remains, indeed, too much like the pretty, blank-faced type-portrait of a Southern belle on the dust-cover." N. L. R.

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:8 Ja 10 '42 220w

"We had thought that 'Gone With the Wind' was the southern novel to end all southern novels. Apparently Miss Liddon is of a different mind. This would have been perfectly fine if Miss Liddon's book were of the stature of 'Wuthering Heights' or 'even of 'Gone With the Wind.' It is not, however. It is shallow and untrue to life. . . . To do the book justice, let us admit that it makes easy reading. It is smooth, it is well-paced, it is like a pleasant brook running over well-rounded stones. But for all this it is forgotten as soon as it is laid down." Sarah Schiff

LIDDON, E. S.—Continued

— + Springf'd Republican p7e O 19 '41
420w

LIDE, MRS ALICE (ALISON). Johnny of the 4-H club; with il. by C. E. E. Bernard. 211p $1.75 Little

41-4378

Story of a boy on an Alabama farm, who joined a 4-H club and was so successful at his chosen project that he won a chance to attend the big meeting in Chicago, with which the story ends.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p8 Ap 20 '41 320w

Christian Century 58:397 Mr 19 '41 10w

"'Johnny of The 4-H Club' will please 4-H boys and girls, and others as well, for it is a good story." F. B. Sloan

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 30
'41 120w

LIEFERANT, HENRY, and LIEFERANT, MRS SYLVIA (SALTZBERG). Hospital—quiet please! 278p $2 Dutton

41-11498

The love story of two young people who are in duty bound not to fall in love—a young interne hopeful of a position with an older doctor opposed to doctors marrying, and a pretty undergraduate nurse.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p8 Ag 10 '41 190w

"Readable little story." Charlotte Dean
N Y Times p16 Ag 10 '41 130w

"The movement of the story is swift, almost too swift, but the characters are so lovable that one rejoices at the happy ending."

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 17 '41 80w

LIEFERANT, HENRY, and LIEFERANT, MRS SYLVIA (SALTZBERG). One enduring purpose. 275p $2 Dutton

(W) 41-1830

Story of two brothers who in time fulfil their father's dreams for them by becoming doctors. One sets up a practice in New York, marries a wealthy girl, and puts his faith in scientific method; the other returns to the home town, marries there, and comes to a realization of the need for something beyond science. Family tragedies and near tragedies bring the brothers closer as they grow older.

Booklist 47:360 Ap 1 '41

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
Books p23 Mr 2 '41 240w

Library J 66:34 Ja 1 '41 20w

"It is a bold and effective stroke to bring tragedy to the doctor whose thesis the authors champion. He loses his daughter, but in the end his theories and methods are the victor's methods. Their weakness lies in the impossibility of making training a substitute for a certain inborn gift. However, the discussion in no way detracts from the warm interest of the story. It is as good a doctor novel as the ranks of light fiction have produced in a long time." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p17 F 16 '41 240w

"The story of the development of the two brothers and their theories, as observed in their own families, forms a tale full of humor, paths and near-tragedy."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 8 '41
130w

LIEFERANT, HENRY, and LIEFERANT, MRS SYLVIA (SALTZBERG). Teacher's husband. 327p $2.50 Dial press

41-24965

When Sally and Byrne Hamlin married, Byrne held a good job as buyer for a chain of bookstores, but Sally loved her teaching and went back to it for the first years of their married life. Tho the teaching itself caused some slight friction, it was not until Byrne's firm went bankrupt and he became "unemployed" and Sally had to take a year's leave of absence to have a baby, that real trouble developed. It took several months and many heartaches for both, before the "second marriage" could take place.

"It is a convincing story, with a crisis that misses disaster by a narrow margin." Lisle Bell

+ Books p30 N 23 '41 210w

"This is not a mediocre novel. The entire book glows with reality and sincerity." George Froed

+ N Y Times p28 N 23 '41 600w

LIGHT, RICHARD UPJOHN. Focus on Africa; phot. by Mary Light; foreword by Isaiah Bowman. 228p maps $5; to members $3 Am. geographical soc; Farrar

916 Africa—Description and travel 41-5834

"This account of a two-month flying expedition in Africa is primarily a study in physical and economic geography. Dr. Light experienced in aviation and photographic reconnaissance, was accompanied by his wife, a capable co-pilot, radio-operator and photographer. Traveling northward from Cape Town they observed and photographed many outstanding physical features of the continent." N Y Times

Booklist 37:406 My 1 '41

"The book is all that could be asked for within its limitations. Its text is that of a geographer rather than an artist. I looked in vain for the color of Africa. But this volume is an economic study of Africa. As such it is replete with intensely interesting geographical material. I shall place it on my shelves with such classics as André Gide's 'Travels in the Congo,' Louise A. Boyd's 'Polish Countrysides' and Ellsworth Huntington's 'West of the Pacific.' Once started it is a cover-to-cover book." Roderick Peattie

+ — Books p4 Je 22 '41 650w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison

Nation 152:621 My 24 '41 480w

"Dr. Light would no doubt himself agree that his book is of the character of a reconnaissance rather than of an attempt to make any original contribution to our knowledge of Africa. But it has a somewhat subtle merit of its own, and one which gives it a very real value. At the end of an attractive and pleasantly told narrative . . . the general reader will find himself in possession of a knowledge of African problems which he himself would scarcely have sought in specialist studies, and would not have found in the lighter type of travel book."

+ Nature 147:757 Je 21 '41 950w

"Many of the aerial views taken by Mrs. Light are superb. They convey a sense of the vastness and grandeur of the continent. The supporting text written by Dr. Light, 'for the interpretation of the photographs and to relate the events of the journey,' contains a description of the economic and physical aspects of the land. Evidently Dr. Light prepared himself well beforehand for his task by a careful reading of source material for which in a bibliography he gives credit to more than a hundred authorities." M. L. J. Akeley

+ N Y Times p8 My 4 '41 1300w

"It is ten years since I first flew from London to Cape Town and back. Dr. Light's 'Focus on Africa' has now widened that perspective. With commendable lucidity, it presents students with a view of Africa's multifarious human, racial, economic, political, and governmental problems in their true relation to the whole of Africa. But more than that, as an adventure and travel story," it will fascinate the rocking chair explorers." Linton Wells

+ Sat R of Lit 24:13 Ag 9 '41 230w

Spring'd Republican p8 My 20 '41 360w

"Mr. Light's comments show a wide understanding of African economic, geographic, and cultural problems. As most of us will not get a chance to fly over the length of Africa, this book is to be recommended as an acceptable and adequate substitute." C. H. Leonard

+ Yale R n s 30:836 summer '41 100w

LILIENTHAL, JESSE. Horse crazy; ill. by Howard Brodie. 256p $2.50 Messner

41-19719

Volume of short stories dealing with horse racing and the people who go to horse races. Glossary.

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries

Nation 153:458 N 8 '41 360w

"'Horse Crazy' is an enjoyable book. One of the best things about it is that it deals with experience and problems that are a million miles from the darkening world catastrophe that weighs on all our minds. It is filled with sunlight and gaiety and jolly people and sleek steeds and queer folk. The illustrations are by Howard Brodie, who is a staff artist on a San Francisco newspaper. They are perfect." W. E. Woodward

+ N Y Times p11 O 5 '41 800w

LIMPUS, LOWELL M., ed. See New York (city). Fire department. Fire college. Manual of instruction

LIN, ADET; LIN, ANOR, and LIN, MEI-MEI. Dawn over Chungking. 240p $2 Day

915.1 China—Description and travel. Chinese-Japanese war, 1931-. Children as authors (W) 41-5382

The three young daughters of Lin Yutang describe their pilgrimage to their homeland and their experiences during months spent in learning to know the hazards of living under the constant danger of Japanese bombing raids. They all express the firm belief that China will conquer in the end.

Booklist 37:407 My 1 '41

Bookmark 2:13 N '41

"China in war time, China in essence, comes closer to the American consciousness through this lucid, limpid little book than through the headlines and hurry of journalism. What we see in the papers about the Far East seems far off. What these three children see is on the spot, and they have an uncanny power to make one see, hear and feel it with them." M. L. Becker

+ Books p4 Mr 9 '41 650w

Boston Transcript p1 Ap 19 '41 80w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 17:212 My '41 130w

Reviewed by Edgar Snow

Nation 152:415 Ap 5 '41 700w

"In the elder sister's sensitiveness and candor, as she writes of her country and what she sees and feels there, we find youth that has grown far away from childishness into the years of young eagerness and searching and vision and self-abnegation. . . In these clear young voices from indomitable China there is a resonance of challenge and encouragement for all the life that must be lived in this tortured moment of our world." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 9 '41 1250w

"It has remained for the daughters of Lin Yutang to bring the war in China more vividly before the American reader than any of the many recent visitors to Chungking. In simple, unaffected words and phrases, they have directly transmitted the reality of a Japanese bombing raid." T. A. Bisson

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ap 5 '41 320w

LIN, YU-T'ANG. A leaf in the storm. 368p $2.50 Day

(W) 41-23673

Story of the present conflict in China as seen thru the lives of three people: "Poya, young, handsome, wealthy, a 'strategist' viewing the war coldly and analytically; Lao Peng, his friend, a Buddhist saint and ascetic, warm-hearted and selfless, who is interested only in individual human lives; and beautiful and mysterious Malin (later Tanni), in quest of a home, whose destiny is tied up with the two men." (Publisher's note)

Reviewed by Wilson Follett

Atlantic Ja '42 300w

Booklist 38:131 D 15 '41

"It is perhaps from a subtle blending of two civilizations that Dr. Lin secures his balance of lofty idealism with an earthy humanity, of the meditative way with the sensuous one, of the fine and fragile detail with the rich broad view. It is these qualities, in any event, which make 'A Leaf in the Storm' so well worth reading." Milton Rugoff

+ Books p7 N 23 '41 800w

"In spite of every cliché in the manual of melodrama, even to the use of a 'Greater love no man hath' tombstone, there are interesting incidental sketches of the power of communism in North China, of the sacrosanct vanity of English imperial officials, of the human brotherhood of refugees, of the growth of a magnificent guerilla army—for who has a home any more, of the reaction of unprotected civilians during the bombing of an 'open' city. The Oriental outlook on life, however, remains as foreign to the reader as the all too frequent smattering of Chinese phrases, and the hymn of hate which sounds as a continual refrain is too discordant for fiction or for criticism." J. E. Tobin

+ Commonweal 35:323 Ja 16 '42 350w

Reviewed by H. P. Lazarus

Nation 154:97 Ja 24 '42 1100w

"Lin Yutang returned not long ago from his war-swept country. This novel may be read as the transmutation of his report, in art and beauty and fearless humanity, of the actual life there. Being an exceedingly fine novel . . . 'A Leaf in the Storm' is first a compellingly interesting story: interesting alike in its emotion—that is to say, in its characters and their development and interaction—and in its event. . . The love story's dénouement is surprising, tensely dramatic, wholly Chinese. In showing love in various aspects the novel's personal theme is of human growth. Beyond that, no mere background but undying protagonist, is China at war." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p6 N 23 '41 800w

"Dr. Lin is not as successful in this novel of the Sino-Japanese conflict as he was in his colorful panorama called 'Moment in Peking.' For one thing, his central situation is about as banal as it can well be, and rather melodramatically resolved to boot. For another, the Chinese manner of storytelling, devoid of climaxes and quite inattentive to what we think of as narrative tempo, is better attuned to a three-generation tale like 'Moment in Peking'. . . Nevertheless, Dr. Lin has much to offer, particularly in his description, quite ghastly and apparently incontestably true, of the sadism and degeneracy of the Japanese invader and in his picture of the growth of the new Chinese national spirit. . . This is a real service and, perhaps, to advantage ourselves of it, it's worth yawning through a tedious love affair and many rather windy lectures on Buddhist doctrine." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:108 N 22 '41 350w

"In 'Moment in Peking' Lin showed a sure hand. Here the story falls between his fingers. He is as charming as ever, though, and gives a colorful panorama of China at war, interspersed with many true episodes, not neglecting Japanese atrocities. There is too much crowding, too much exposition, and too little of the indirect method, to bring its dramatic potentialities to fulfillment. Though it falls disappointingly behind the promise of his first novel, it is an exciting story and an important book for Americans to read. As in Lin's other four books, it contributes tremendously to our understanding of China." Nym Wales

LIN, YU-T'ANG—Continued

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:7 N 29 '41 750w

"In spite of a beautifully told love story, it is the war pictures which linger in the mind. But Lin Yutang has not forgotten how to laugh; in the midst of the horror there are many sly touches which produce chuckles, and much of the Chinese life which Yutang is making more and more understandable. It is written with both delicacy and strength, is dramatic, and just plain homely." M. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 30 '41 420w

"Lin Yutang is a novelist of strict limitations. His popular-philosopher serenity betrays him into platform sleekness. A too-crafty craftsman, he complicates his action with a set of tediously artificial misunderstandings. Yet the spirit of the story, and much of its flesh, is honest and, to newcomers in war, may well be clarifying. Moreover, the book serves as a travelogue and résumé of the war in the East, from the fall of Nanking through China's first great victories in the following spring."

+ — Time 39:78 Ja 19 '42 350w

LINCOLN, JOSEPH CROSBY, and LINCOLN, FREEMAN. The New Hope. 498p $2.50 Coward-McCann 41-21282

Historical novel, the action of which takes place during the last months of the War of 1812. It describes a company of Cape Codders who succeed in launching a privateer thru the British blockade.

Booklist 38:96 N 15 '41

"As lively and sharply seasoned a tale of adventure and mystery and character as one need ever ask for under the 'historical novel' head. . . The story is genuinely 'gripping,' and far be it from us to cavil at its romantic intricacies. But in its effortless warmth of telling, its leisurely reconstruction of place and people, its character and atmosphere, it makes its really lasting appeal." John Patton

+ Books p12 O 19 '41 480w

Christian Science Monitor p10 N 22 '41 600w

"This is the kind of book for which one sits back and relaxes. . . [It is] a yarn that is leisurely, genuine and completely readable." T. O. S.

+ Commonweal 35:349 Ja 23 '42 140w

"When you come across a book like 'The New Hope,' by Joseph C. Lincoln and Freeman Lincoln, you are sorry you ever used the word 'yarn' and 'salty' lightly, because here is a true and accurate use for them. You have the feeling that you are sitting on a Cape Cod wharf listening to an old sea captain spin a yarn. At times you're impatient when he goes off on tangents and squirm under the endless flow of his words, and you wish he'd hurry and get along with the story, but, after all, you wouldn't trade the old codger for any smooth-tongued story-teller." Margaret Donaldson

+ N Y Times p32 O 5 '41 650w

New Yorker 17:102 O 11 '41 30w

"The love story is transparent but it is sufficient to back the adventure story, particularly as the Yankees seem to have been too practical and opportunistic about their emotional affairs to have aroused much sympathy anyway. Indeed the whole business rides on a tide of Yankee commercialism and fiduciary interest, with politics and patriotism mentioned dutifully at infrequent intervals. The story should do very well in the older juvenile field and it should be fairly entertaining for adults." Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 24:13 O 11 '41 300w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 12 '41 240w

LINDMAN, MAJ JAN (MRS MAJ LINDMAN-HULTEN). Flicka, Ricka, Dicka and the three kittens [il. by the author]. [27p] $1 Whitman, A.

41-17581

Another story of the little Swedish triplets, who have appeared in other books by this author. The little girls take care of a cat for their uncle and aunt, while they are away from home. The cat finally wanders away and the children are in despair until the mysterious disappearance is explained.

"Large, bright color plates, legible type and a general air of family affection and helpfulness, make this a good book for home or the children." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 O 19 '41 120w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 19 '41 60w

LINDSAY, MAUD MCKNIGHT. Fun on Children's street; il. by Marion Downer. 124p $2 Lothrop

793 Games. Amusements 41-7953

Suggestions for children's pastimes—running newspapers and shows, gardening, celebrating holidays, giving concerts, "let's pretend" projects, and dressing up. The activities are simple enough for children of six to eight, and include types of entertainment for the whole year.

"By no means a necessary title, but may be useful with kindergarten and primary school teachers looking for project ideas." Alice Wetherell

Library J 66:309 Ap 1 '41 90w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 25 '41 40w

LINDSAY, ROBERT HOWARD. Fowl murder. 285p $2 Little

41-18897

Detective story, in which the story and the detective's supposed mental processes follow one another on each page.

"Now, here is a novelty, we'll say that for it, and it's pretty sure to leave you gasping in one way or another. Personally, we'd call it a brave try at an all-out, two-ocean nonsense mystery. It certainly has its moments, though it struck us as rather overfiddled in spots, and it isn't entirely lacking in that unfortunate too-sure-of-itself mood, than which nothing can more easily knock a funny tale out cold." Will Cuppy

Books p9. Ag 17 '41 160w

"Before you open this book, take a look at the jacket. Crazy, ain't it? But wait until you have read the story. It starts with a scavenger hunt, a comparatively mild manifestation of enfeebled mental powers, and it goes on from there—onward and downward." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p14 Ag 17 '41 160w

"Modernistic method of telling story confuses at first. Then you get used to it—if its worth the trouble. Interesting experiment."

Sat R of Lit 24:18 Ag 23 '41 40w

LINEBARGER, PAUL MYRON ANTHONY. The China of Chiang K'ai-shek: a political study. 449p $2.50; pa $1 World peace

951 China—Politics and government. Chiang Kai-shek 41-11374

"The National Government of the Republic of China, located at the auxiliary capital of Chungking, is one of the most important governments in contemporary world affairs. It has provided fairly effective unification for the largest nation on earth, and has fought a great power to a standstill. The present work is an analysis of this government. Not a biography of Chiang K'ai-shek, it is instead a delineation of the institutions, the parties and movements, and the armies which today determine the Chinese destiny." (Intro) Glossary. Index.

"A book which no student of Far Eastern affairs can, and no student of government should do without. It is more than a supplement to the author's earlier work, Government in Republican China (1938); it is a painstaking and dispassionate analysis of the development of political thinking and political practice of a people in the midst of a life and death struggle for survival. In this book, Linebarger shows that rare quality of being able to dig down into available source materials; to collect the facts and present them in orderly fashion; and then to stand back and view the picture without loss of perspective." E. B. Price

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1201 D '41 450w
Booklist 38:49 O 15 '41

"A carefully written, well thought out, precisely documented, enthusiastic and hopeful, yet agreeably critical study of China's political institutions as of 1941." J. F. Davidson

+ Canadian Forum 21:189 S '41 650w
Christian Science Monitor p18 N 10 '41 150w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:386 Ja '42 50w

"This is a work which should prove very useful. Its many-sidedness as a technical handbook and political analysis gives it great value, so that it may be read with profit by both the general reader and the student of Chinese affairs." L. K. Rosinger

+ Pacific Affairs 14:480 D '41 1250w

"This is a book which meets a present need. The author employs long and rather unusual words which seem in many cases to be unnecessary. He is also fond of sweeping statements which while challenging are not always convincing, but are quite useful no doubt in stimulating discussion." Frank Mohler

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 3 '41 950w

LINKLATER, ERIC. The man on my back. 341p $3 (12s 6d) Macmillan

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) [41-13711]

Autobiography of the author of Juan in America. Born on an island in the Orkneys, the writer tells of his boyhood years there, of his education at Aberdeen, and his experiences in the World war, and of his travels and writings down to the beginning of the second World war.

"In a dangerous moment in the history of England and the world [the author] simply decided that it was best to bring his accounts up to date, lest a later opportunity fail to occur. He has done that, and in doing so has provided us with a very readable book. In fact, if we do not trouble too much about the grounds of his philosophy and surrender ourselves willingly to the pleasant art of the raconteur, we can all agree that this is likely to be one of the most entertaining books of the season." Milton Hindus

+ Books p16 S 28 '41 650w

Christian Century 58:1443 N 19 '41 70w

"[A] zestful and amusing autobiography." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 3 '41 550w

Reviewed by B. I. Evans

Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 25 '41 80w

New Repub 105:869 D 22 '41 40w

"There is, of course, a public for the kind of Odyssey which Mr. Linklater unrolls in his book, but the mournful sensibility which underlies his false disguises qualifies him to write a sincere record of his life. The book he has written will not induce the self-forgetfulness he desires, the book he is capable perhaps of writing might reconcile him to himself." Hugh Kingsmill

— New Statesman & Nation 21:392 Ap 12 '41 650w

"It is an autobiography as personal and amusing from page to page as it is always precise and critical. It comprehends its period as easily as it enjoys it; one of those few autobiographies that appeal to the literary man who likes his illusions and pretty turns of phrase as well as to the casual reader who likes to see a personality revealed in an unusual series of adventures. It's a good idea to meet Mr. Linklater." P. M. Jack

+ N Y Times p9 N 9 '41 900w

"A fine, rich book, full of humor and good humor, sharp character study, and brilliant scene-painting. The author's account of his development as a novelist doesn't go very deep, however. The man on his back is evidently the profession of writing."

+ New Yorker 17:87 O 4 '41 60w

"Mr. Linklater is interested in life—though, until the closing stages of his story, he dissembles the more serious sides of his interest with levity and irony—and his days have been full of adventure. The two facts combine to make a story of strong personality, of humour and charm. The humour has its rough side, and the charm derives more from integrity and a robust sympathy than from surface graces; but the book both warms the heart and quickens the pulses."

+ Spec 166:348 Mr 28 '41 340w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 14 '41 440w
Times [London] Lit Sup p140 Mr 22 '41 650w

LION, HORTENSE. Mill stream. 391p map $2.50 Houghton

(W) 41-4812

A story of life in Providence from the 1790s to the War of 1812. Besides the story of Bradley Taylor and his loves, there is the story of the conflict between the shipowners and foreign traders and those who wish to establish home industries.

Booklist 37:387 Ap 15 '41

"'Mill Stream' is a good book, a charming book, only perhaps a little short on humor, and a little too stereotyped in characterization. A fundamentally authentic picture of the past doesn't lend itself easily to subtle characterization, however, nor perhaps to humor." D. C. de Jong

+ Books p11 Mr 23 '41 550w

"For those of us who still read books, Hortense Lion has done a beautiful job in recreating the very sight, sense, and smell of colonial Rhode Island. And we like the artistic close of each scene." Doris Overland

+ Boston Transcript p1 Ap 5 '41 320w

"Mill Stream will appeal more to the readers interested in economic history than to those who demand a well-developed plot and good characterization." E. P. Potter

Library J 66:265 Mr 15 '41 60w

"If Miss Lion's main character is deficient in imaginative appeal, if he lacks color, it may well be by intention. Her primary aim is evidently to weave a tapestry depicting the birth and early years of a major American industry, to show the difficulties besetting its founders, the shifts and stratagems resorted to in order to keep it alive, and the romance of the industry itself. Individual characterizations are of minor concern when the fundamental conflict is not of personalities but of social groups." Drake De Kay

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 23 '41 700w

New Yorker 17:85 Mr 22 '41 40w

LION, HORTENSE—Continued

"It is a well-rounded story of a pioneer effort, giving insight into some aspects of early New England life which are rarely recalled today."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Je 8 '41 220w
Wis Lib Bul 37:93 My '41

LITTEN, FREDERIC NELSON. Pilot of the high Andes. 298p $2 Dodd

41-18123

"A high-flying story full of adventure and complications resulting from mistaken identity, beginning in America and ending in the copper mines, high in the Andes Mountains." Sat R of Lit

"An exciting story of flight, banditry, and intrigue for older boys." E. T. Dobbins
+ Library J 67:43 Ja 1 '42 90w

"One tenth of the incidents used would have sufficed to construct a reasonable story. This is a surfeit which all but the most uncritical reader will find overpowering." Eleanor Kidder
— Library J 67:43 Ja 1 '42 130w

"Exciting."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:21 N 15 '41 30w

LITTLE, CONSTANCE, and LITTLE, GWENYTH. The black paw. 266p $2 Doubleday

41-2434

Detective story.

"This is a good-natured offering on the balmy side, with enough clues strewn negligently around to give you a fair chance at a solution—but the villain is not in the least transparent. Through it all the heroine conducts herself with a minimum of conventional agony, which strikes us as a good idea." Will Cuppy
Books p16 F 16 '41 90w

"Amusing and with a solution that I thought went out of use years ago." Marian Wiggin
+ — Boston Transcript p2 F 15 '41 50w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 22:380 O 25 '41 160w

"The book might best be described as a farce comedy with murderous interludes." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p16 F 16 '41 160w

"Slightly old-fashioned ending, but rapid going and perfect for keeping your mind off bedtime."

+ New Yorker 17:84 F 15 '41 50w

"Exuberance of central figure and antics of various low comedy characters insufficiently atone for wanton busting of rules and flimsy motives. Pretty silly."

— Sat R of Lit 23:18 F 15 '41 40w

Reviewed by John Fairfield

Spec 167:540 D 5 '41 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p521 O 18 '41 180w

LITTLE, CONSTANCE, and LITTLE, GWENYTH. The black shrouds. 278p $2 Doubleday

(W) 41-20726

Detective story.

Booklist 38:114 D 1 '41

"The Littles have thought up some lively and likable characters, most of whom stare and stare. Why do they all stare? We ask to know." Will Cuppy

Books p30 O 5 '41 160w

"There is considerable comedy relief in this story, particularly in Diana's passages at arms with her father, who has come to take her home, and with the young man whom her father does not want her to marry. Both as a mystery and as a comedy this tale offers entertainment of a high order." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p22 O 5 '41 190w

New Yorker 17:104 O 11 '41 60w

"Worth-while."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:19 Ja 24 '42 40w

LLEWELLYN, KARL NICKERSON, and HOEBEL, EDWARD ADAMSON. Cheyenne way; conflict and case law in primitive jurisprudence. (Civilization of the Am. Indian) 360p il $3 Univ. of Okla. press

970.634 Cheyenne Indians. Law, Primitive 41-23735

"The goal is the recording and interpretation of law-ways among primitives. The approach is through the case method. 'The Indian on the prairie,' comments the interpreter, 'had to have something to keep him from doing wrong.' This something turns out to be a considerable body of institutions—an effective moral code—a government with chiefs, council and police—well-marked rules governing war and tribal hunting, homicide and suicide, private property, marriage and divorce. The cases cited date from about 1820 to 1880." N Y Times

Reviewed by Huntington Cairns

Harvard Law R 55:707 F '42 2100w

"Planned and executed upon a novel and striking pattern by a professor of law at Columbia and an anthropologist on the faculty of New York University, this book appeals to the lawyer, the sociologist and the collector of Indian lore." E. G. Eastman

+ N Y Times p6 D 28 '41 400w

"This unusual book has two important merits. It brings out vividly the keen native intelligence and moral force of a primitive, nonliterate group, long stigmatized as 'savages.' . . . For the general reader, the episodes here presented, in the simple words of an intelligent and conscientious half-Cheyenne interpreter create a clear picture of life as it was lived in mid-America before the transforming impact of a foreign culture." E. G. Eastman

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Ja 11 '42 380w

LYOYD, MARION. Penny and Peter of the island; pictures by Agnes Tait. [62p] $2 Messner

41-18352

The adventures of Penny and her friend Peter on the island of Dominica. On the day when she went to market to buy a donkey, Penny saw the shell charm necklace, which led her a merry dance all over the island, before the mystery surrounding it was solved.

Reviewed by Warren Chappell

Horn Bk M 17:455 N '41 40w

"Lithographs by Agnes Tait are in soft browns and give atmosphere to the setting. The picture-book size may limit its appeal to older children who would enjoy the story." D. M. MacDonald

Library J 66:952 N 1 '41 80w

LYOYD-JONES, MRS ESTHER (MCDONALD), and FEDDER, RUTH. Coming of age. (Whit-telsey house publication) 280p $2.50 McGraw

301.1584 Youth. Conduct of life (W) 41-13814

"Intended for the use of young people themselves, this book discusses in their own language and through verbatim reports of others' experiences, problems which young people face in achieving emotional maturity, becoming independent from their families, building relationships with their own and the opposite sex, striving for vocational adjustment, and evolving a scheme of values.' Miss Lloyd-Jones is professor of education and student personnel officer at Teachers College, Columbia University, and Miss Fedder is school guidance counselor at Elkins Park, Pennsylvania." (J Home Econ) Bibliography.

Booklist 38:30 O 1 '41

J Home Econ 33:669 N '41 100w

LOCKE, ALAIN LE ROY, ed. The Negro in art. lib ed 224p il $4 Associates in Negro folk educ.

709 Negro artists. Negroes in literature and art 41-51637

"A pictorial record of the Negro artist and of the Negro theme in art'. The book, with hundreds of illustrations, is divided into three main sections. The first and largest portion is devoted to illustrations of the work of Negroes, largely American Negroes, from the days of slave apprentices to the great modern days (for the Negro painter) of the Federal Art Projects. The second section shows the Negro not as the creative artist but as the artist's subject. Part three portrays the ancestral arts as they appeared in Africa (with their variants as marked as the boundaries of the kingdoms they represented) and as their influence reappears in modern painting and sculpture." Theatre Arts

Booklist 37:354 Ap 1 '41

Reviewed by Roi Ottley

Books p17 S 7 '41 700w

Pratt p5 autumn '41

"Nothing that Mr. Locke has so far done is as significant as a new volume in which he appears only as editor and annotator, his words making up a total of not more than a dozen pages. But his guiding hand, his excellent taste, his keen distinction, his broad human sympathy and appreciation are on every page." Frederick Morton

+ Theatre Arts 25:248 Mr '41 700w

LOCKRIDGE, MRS FRANCES, and LOCKRIDGE, RICHARD. Murder out of turn. 294p $2 Stokes

41-528

Detective story.

Bookmark 2:15 Mr '41

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p10 Ja 5 '41 240w

"Funny as only a North story can be funny. It is also a fine who-done-it." Marian Wiggin

+ Boston Transcript p2 Ja 4 '41 60w

"Quite aside from the delightful privilege that it affords of meeting the Norths again, this book is distinctly worth while on its merits as a mystery alone." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p16 Ja 5 '41 200w

"Charming because of its friendliness and the dearth of dumb detectives."

+ New Yorker 16:56 Ja 4 '41 50w

"Class A."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ja 11 '41 50w

"Mr. and Mrs. North are the same pleasant figures who used to appear in the New Yorker stories, not yet over-familiar with crime. The puzzle is an extremely complicated one, and the fault of the story is that the authors have to cut their way out, rather than solve it." John Fairfield

+ Spec 167:162 Ag 15 '41 60w

Time 37:76 F 3 '41 30w

Times [London] Lit Sup p313 Je 28 '41 180w

Wis Lib Bul 37:77 Ap '41

LOCKRIDGE, MRS FRANCES, and LOCKRIDGE, RICHARD. A pinch of poison. 302p $2 Stokes

41-20727

Detective story.

Booklist 38:114 D 1 '41

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p25 O 19 '41 140w

"The one fault—if it is a fault—that we have to find with this book is that its undoubted merit as a detective story is completely overshadowed by the always unexpected sayings and doings of Mrs. North. When she is not on the stage, even murder becomes stale, flat and unprofitable." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p34 O 19 '41 180w

"As well plotted as the other North mysteries and just as humorous, but this time the authors have gone in for a touch of creepiness as well."

+ New Yorker 17:100 O 18 '41 40w

"All to the good."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:17 D 20 '41 40w

Wis Lib Bul 37:178 N '41

LOCKWOOD, MYNA. Delecta Ann, the circuit rider's daughter; il. by [the author]. 335p $2 Dutton

(W) 41-3675

Story of Iowa in the 1840s, for children of ten to fourteen. When the Reverend James Farrar left his prosperous church in Detroit to be a circuit rider in the Iowa territory he could send only one of his young daughters East to be educated. So staunch little Delecta Ann went with her family, braving the dangers and drudgery of the frontier. There her friendly ways brought her fame and friends, but not until she had a chance meeting with Abraham Lincoln, and took his advice about life.

Booklist 37:392 Ap 15 '41

"If the story is more romantic than actual diaries, it is no more so than actual American spirit." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 My 4 '41 450w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 17:216 My '41 100w

"Characterizations are good, as well as the presentation of pioneer life at the time of Lincoln and the Underground Railroad, a time when our country was growing in strength and unity." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 66:309 Ap 1 '41 140w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p9 Jl 6 '41 320w

New Yorker 17:89 My 24 '41 60w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 13 '41 420w

LOESER, JOHANN ALBRECHT. Animal behaviour; impulse, intelligence, instinct; il. by Erna Pinner. 178p $2 (10s 6d) Macmillan

591.5 Animals, Habits and behavior of [41-9561]

"An attempt to account for the most puzzling aspects of this subject in terms of what we know of the physiology of animal organisms on the one hand and of the elements of human behaviour on the other, without any appeal to mysterious and unintelligible instincts." (Manchester Guardian) The author, a political refugee from Germany, died in 1939 in England. Index.

"It is not possible to accept with ease all of the author's commentary for he is rather too familiarly at home in the subjective life of animals, about which we really know nothing." H. M. Parsley

Books p31 O 5 '41 450w

LOESER, J. A.—Continued

"It is an interesting and challenging piece of work, and well written. Its value to the scientific worker would have been greater if the numerous statements of fact, summarily and dogmatically given, had been supported by references to the literature." A. D. R.

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Je 10 '40 80w

"Most people will find Loeser's interpretations rather far-fetched and unconvincing. In biological matters he is not a wholly reliable guide; there are too many sweeping general statements of doubtful accuracy. He writes as a psychologist, and is not free on occasions from the error of anthropomorphism. The book has, however, its merits, and it deserves to be read for the unconventional and provocative nature of the views expressed. Loeser is undoubtedly right in emphasizing the psychological character of instinctive behaviour, in refusing to treat such behaviour as mechanistic or rigidly determined; he is right also in stressing the simplicity and proneness to error of the psychological processes involved; but he fails to see that the biological adaptiveness or purposiveness of instinctive behaviour lies in the instinctive impulses themselves, as part of the inherited psycho-physical constitution of the animal." E. S. Russell

+ Nature 146:317 S 7 '40 400w

"A book the interest of which rarely flags. To some, doubtless, the author's conclusions will appear to be fallacious, or mere hair-splitting over a term; others will see in them the potential collapse of a conception of life based upon 'instincts'; since, up to a point, what is applied to animals can be equally applied to humans, though Dr. Loeser is careful to point out that here many other factors and considerations enter. Whatever conclusions are reached, the value of the book should lie in provoking further investigation into the subject. The illustrations though adequate, scarcely seem to bear out the interest and implications of the text."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p427 Ag 31 '40 270w

LOEWE, HERBERT MARTIN JAMES. Render unto Caesar; religious and political loyalty in Palestine. 144p il $1.75 Macmillan [6s Cambridge]

226.8 Jesus Christ—Teaching [A41-3231]

"In this monograph replete with rabbinic citations Herbert Loewe, reader in rabbinics in Cambridge University, has presented a novel interpretation or reconstruction of the Gospel pericope (or parable, as he terms it) concerning the payment of tribute to Caesar." J Religion

"Admirable little book." L. W. Batten
+ Churchman 154:15 Je 1 '40 150w

Reviewed by Martin Rist
J Religion 21:200 Ap '41 1000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p204 Ap 27 '40 440w

LOFBERG, MRS LILA, and MALCOLMSON, DAVID. Sierra outpost. 253p $2.50 Duell

917.9436 Sierra Nevada mountains. Animals, Habits and behavior of 41-18221

For nine years Mrs Lofberg's engineer husband operated the Lake Florence station of the Southern California Edison company, situated at an altitude of nearly 8,000 feet up in the High Sierras. This book gives an account of their life, and their observations on the habits and behavior of the coyotes and other wild animals and birds, as the creatures came to know and trust them.

Booklist 38:48 O 15 '41

"This book is well worth having for the coyotes alone. It is also interesting for its personal reactions and incidents, for its sharing of remoteness and strangeness and sometimes surprising adjustment in the Lofberg's mountain life. Mrs. Lofberg and David Malcolmson have written an unusual chronicle based on this life." H. M. Shaw

+ Books p15 O 12 '41 360w

Christian Science Monitor p22 O 4 '41 500w

"To the amateur naturalist and nature lover this book should be of great interest."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:20 O 25 '41 100w

LOGAN, HARRY BRITTON, and PUTNAM, MRS JEAN-MARIE (CONSIGNY). Science in the garden. 255p $2.50 Duell

635.9 Gardening. Growth-promoting substances. Agricultural chemistry (W) 41-51781

Handbook for amateur gardeners, explaining some of the results of recent scientific research. Partial contents: The twelve-year bed; Plant nutrition and fertilizers; Chemical analysis of soil; Mulches and cultivation; Vitamin B₁; Evolution of new plants; Miracle workers: colchicine and acenaphthene; Chemical acceleration of seed germination; The miniature greenhouse; Rooting cuttings; Pruning; Control of pests; What and how to spray; Chemical control of weeds; Index.

Booklist 37:459 Je 1 '41

"This is an interesting book—unusually so, and unusually well written. Curiously, however, although its title and mood suggest a completely modern, streamlined sort of gardening wherein laboratory experiments furnish most of the clues, much of its contents have to do with methods and materials that are almost as old as the hills. . . Your reviewer came upon some lines which to his ear wobble a bit in their logic." R. S. Lemmon

+ Books p9 Je 22 '41 200w

LOGAN, RAYFORD WHITTINGHAM. The diplomatic relations of the United States with Haiti, 1776-1891. 516p $5 Univ. of N.C. press

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—Haiti, Haiti —Foreign relations—U.S. 41-6260

"A comprehensive study of the policy of the United States toward the Negro republic which was set up in America on French foundations. . . Among other topics, the author sketches the history of Haiti in the early nineteenth century, touches rather lightly upon the recognition of the independence of Haiti by the government of Charles X, notices the conflict of interest between the Negro republic and the Dominican republic, describes in some detail the recognition of Haitian independence by President Lincoln, and discusses the designs of foreign powers upon Mole St. Nicholas, with special attention to the attempt of the United States to secure a lease of that Gibraltar of America." (Am Pol Sci R) Bibliography. Index.

"Though special students of this field of international relations may occasionally disagree with the author's comments, all investigators of the history of the insular republics will find the monograph useful. A bibliography of thirty-six pages constitutes the most extensive and up-to-date list of materials concerning an insular American republic that has yet been made available to scholars." W. S. Robertson

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:594 Je '41 300w

"The book contains a great amount of detail, but it is skillfully handled, and the story holds the reader's interest." D. G. Munro

+ Ann Am Acad 216:191 Jl '41 320w

Reviewed by R. W. Van Alstyne
Pol Sci Q 56:632 D '41 400w

LOGASA, HANNAH, comp. Historical fiction, and other reading references for classes in junior and senior high schools. 3d rev and enl ed 193p $2; to schools and libs $1.80 Mc-Kinley pub.

016.823 Historical fiction—Bibliography (W) 41-51670

The present edition "is based on the previous editions [of 1927 and 1934]. . . A thorough re-evaluation of the titles has been undertaken. 420 titles have been omitted to make way for newer, and more valuable titles. Over 1100 new titles have been added. . . Two new sections for the period since the World War have been added—one for Europe, and the other for the United States. Entirely new in this edition are two units of three sections each, one for Canada, and the other for Latin America." (Preface to the Third revised and enlarged edition.) Index.

Booklist 37:494 Je 15 '41

School & Society 53:352 Mr 15 '41

"Teachers and librarians will greet with interest and enthusiasm the third revised and enlarged edition of Historical Fiction compiled by Hannah Logasa, well-known Librarian of the University of Chicago High School. This work, which has proved so valuable in actual use, has progressed considerably since it was first issued in 1927." D. W. Drake

+ Social Studies 32:235 My '41 290w

LOHRKE, EUGENE WILLIAM. Night raid. 229p $2 Holt

41-5879

An American doctor living in England during the present war is the central character. All thru one night of terror Dr Jordan goes on his rounds thru the village, attending patients, keeping up their morale even after he has lost his medical supplies. During that night he learns more about the real characters of the villagers than he would have learned in months of ordinary living. And all thru the night his faithful housekeeper stands by to help him, and even at daybreak comes to him with her inevitable dish of fish and chips.

Booklist 37:491 Je 15 '41

"Mr. Lohrke's book has the tense quality of a scene caught in the lightning's flash between thunder claps. The events of his story are slender, but their import has full weight. He probes for the meaning of what has happened to all the little people in this war. His slice may be narrow, but it is deep and true." Virgilia Sapieha

+ Books p5 Ap 20 '41 650w

"Over and above its story the book has a fascination inherent in the poetic content of its style, which ever and again pulls you up short by its arrestingness. A fine, strong simile in which the beauty of a girl's face is portrayed and what it meant to a man made clear. Or the exquisite evocation of the loveliness of Spring when Jordan, in an ancient car, is crawling up Shotters Hill just before hell broke loose." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 27 '41 750w

"A serious, thoughtful job."

+ New Yorker 17:86 Ap 26 '41 50w

Springf'd Republican p7e My 4 '41 650w

Wis Lib Bul 37:116 Je '41

LOIZEAUX, MARIE DUVERNOY, comp. Library on the air. 364p $2.25 Wilson, H.W.

020.4 Radio advertising—Libraries (W) 41-51513

Collection of radio scripts which have been given over the air by American librarians. In her introduction the editor says: "The emphasis throughout the book is on ideas, which can be adapted to local use, rather than on finished scripts which can be used as they are. This made it possible to include several scripts somewhat local in content, or dated by their connection with current events, but giving a certain flavor or atmosphere which could be used in a broadcast anywhere else with some editing and changes." (Pref)

Booklist 37:238 F 1 '41

"Certainly, by the publication of Library on the Air, Miss Loizeaux has proved a statement once hotly contested: Librarians can produce radio programs. In this book we find them doing it, sometimes very effectively." F. H. Hyers

+ Library J 66:451 My 15 '41 1150w

Pratt p8 autumn '41

Wis Lib Bul 37:136 Jl '41

LOMAX, JOHN AVERY, and LOMAX, ALAN, comps. Our singing country; a second volume of American ballads and folk songs. 416p $5 Macmillan

784.4 Ballads, American. Folk songs, American (W) 41-25604

This second collection by the compilers of American Ballads and Folk Songs (Book Review Digest, 1934), contains some two hundred and fifty additional ballads and songs still being sung by Americans in many parts of the country and in various walks of life. Bibliography. Indexes.

Booklist 38:154 Ja 1 '42

"In this book of over 400 pages, divided into six sections, the Lomaxes have covered the entire American ballad field, and have done so without repeating the songs of their earlier collections. One must say, in all honesty, that some of these inclusions are of doubtful value. . . Moreover, many of the variants of well known ballads, and this volume has a number of these, offer nothing especially valuable and hold an interest only to the ballad enthusiast. Other variants, such as 'The wreck on the Somerset Road,' have virtues of their own which fully justify their inclusion. These are my only adverse reservations." Wilbert Snow

+ — Books p7 D 14 '41 1100w

Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 17 '42 750w

Reviewed by T. F. Opie
Churchman 156:18 Ja 15 '42 180w

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds
N Y Times p4 D 28 '41 900w

"The adventurer in folksong finds fresh pieces in the volume as well as fresh texts of familiar pieces, all these amassed by the Lomaxes. Heretofore most of their recordings were available only to those who could visit the Library of Congress, and sometimes even such persons could not have access to them. Their last volume is a supplementary one, but it sustains the reputation of the Lomaxes as ardent seekers and finders in the realm of American folksong." Louise Pound

+ Sat R of Lit 25:10 Ja 3 '42 500w

"A book like 'Our Singing Country' must lift the heart and reawaken old or dormant feelings of indebtedness to our common past; arouse to new heights our sense of obligation and responsibility in our common future. Surely these songs will live and their music will keep our feet from stumbling in the rocky places."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 23 '41 750w

LOMBARD, MRS HELEN CASSIN (CARUSI). Washington waltz. 277p $2.50 Knopf

917.53 Washington, D.C.—Social life and customs. Diplomatic memoirs 41-21196

Informal sketches of foreign diplomats in Washington and Washington diplomatic society. Index.

LOMBARD, H. C.—Continued

"This is one of the wittiest, most malicious books ever written about that very malicious, not so witty world capital, Washington. Only a woman could have done this neat job of carving up the capital's stuffed shirts to make a reader's holiday—only a woman like Helen Lombard, American-born, member of an old Washington family, married to a French diplomat, and disillusioned with Vichy and all that." Joseph Driscoll

+ Books p22 N 9 '41 1000w

"Helen Lombard is well qualified to tell us the story of those parallel lines on which Washington society ran easily—lines now broken up as the city registers the great upheaval from across the ocean. . . The professional objectivity of a woman who moves easily in society marks this as the book of the new era and moves it past the intimate feminine disclosures and sartorial effects of earlier reminiscences of the capital." N. S. Colby

+ N Y Times p4 N 16 '41 1200w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 26 '41 550w

LONG, BASIL KELLETT, Drummond Chaplin; his life and times in Africa. 388p $5.50 (18s) Oxford

B or 92 Chaplin, Sir Drummond [A 41-3160]

"[This] is the biography of an Englishman who devoted his life to furthering imperialistic enterprises which Cecil Rhodes had opened up in Southern Africa. Among these projects was unification of British colonies and Boer republics in South Africa under the British flag. Drummond Chaplin, who as Joint Manager of Gold Fields, Consolidated, had been active in Transvaal politics after the Boer War, was an outstanding supporter of Jameson, leader of the Unionist Opposition in the first sessions of the Union House of Assembly. In 1914, Chaplin severed his business and political connections in the Union to become Administrator of Southern Rhodesia during its period of transition from the possession of the British South Africa Company to a crown colony. After the electorate of Southern Rhodesia voted in 1923 for responsible government in preference to incorporation in the Union, Chaplin returned to South Africa." Am Pol Sci R

"Although Sir Drummond will be remembered as an administrative rather than as a political leader, the book is of interest to the political scientist chiefly for the author's analysis of South African politics at the formation of the Union. Material included from Chaplin's files would have been of greater value to the student of British imperialism had it dealt less with personal matters and more extensively with Chaplin's rise to prominence in the mining industry (under the sponsorship of Rhodes just prior to his death), and with his subsequent public service. A table of contents would have made the volume more useful." L. L. Ilesley
Am Pol Sci R 35:1016 O '41 420w

"Mr. Long's account is sympathetic, discriminating, and well written." R. V. V.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 9 '41 280w

"Mr. Long has an obvious sympathy for his subject and presents the causes for which Chaplin stood in the most favourable light: his book is, indeed, an able political history of the period, traced along Chaplin's life. Its fault is that it is little more. Chaplin, Mr. Long and others affirm, was a very fine speaker; but there are no adequate quotations. We are told that he was married to a most charming wife, was devoted to his sister, Dame Alice Godman and was particularly happy in his relations with his parents. Mr. Long, adopting the manner of the obituary rather than of the biography, shows a reticence about the emotional side of Chaplin's life which verges on the unimaginative, so that it is impossible to form a picture of the whole man."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p180 Ap 12 '41 550w

LONG, CLARENCE DICKINSON. Building cycles and the theory of investment. 239p $2.50 Princeton univ. press

690.9 Building trades. Business cycles 41-3291

"A thoroughgoing attempt to explain the fundamentals of building cycles and their role in waves of income and employment. Mr. Long has compiled a unique set of long-period indexes of building which make it possible to go to the roots of the problem. The theory of investment is handled in terms of a realistic, critical development of the investment-consumption interaction." (Management R) Index.

Reviewed by E. C. Bratt

Am Econ R 31:157 Mr '41 500w

"This volume represents a searching effort to study the correlation between building cycles and investment. It is especially to be recommended for its treatment of elasticity of building demand, a subject upon which heretofore little has been written. The author has documented his material thoroughly and the student contemplating research in this still largely unexplored field of the relationship between building cycles and general business activity will find this book a valuable contribution." H. J. Jordan

+ Ann Am Acad 214:253 Mr '41 750w
Management R 30:36 Ja '41 60w

LONG, HANIEL. Piñon country. (American folkways ser) 327p $3 Duell
917.9 Southwest (W) 41-51810

The piñon country herein described covers part of New Mexico and Arizona in the upper Sonoran Zone. It is a land of little water bearing as one of its chief crops the pine nuts—piñons. Mr Long writes of the past history of the region, and of its present inhabitants—newcomers from the East, Spanish Americans and Indians. Index.

Booklist 37:489 Je 15 '41

"Mr. Long's contribution to the 'Folkway' series, despite its somewhat rambling quality, stands up very well on the whole. It is a sound addition to our knowledge of a strangely beautiful and bewildering area." Stanley Walker

+ Books p4 Je 15 '41 1050w

"Mr. Long at present lives in Santa Fe. He knows and loves the part of America of which he writes. His new book is a valuable and welcome addition to the current American Folkways series." M. W.

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 Je 26 '41 550w

Reviewed by Harry Sylvester

+ Commonweal 35:98 N 14 '41 480w

Reviewed by Katharine Shorey

Library J 66:519 Je 1 '41 130w

"One can recommend the volume as excellent reading. . . This is a worthy addition to Americana, not a new kind of Americana." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p4 Je 22 '41 1250w

"A charming book. . . A superior performance, deftly written, intuitive, and penetrating."

+ New Yorker 17:78 Je 14 '41 70w

"In spite of an engaging pseudo-naïveté of manner, we are afraid that it comes a little too close to the truth to be literature; that is, it is lurid and deals principally with drugs, outlaws, and sudden death. However, it has some handsome panoramas and some of the philosophical notes are very astute. . . The book is not intended to hang together closely but it does not seem to hang together even loosely." P. S.

+ Sat R of Lit 24:22 Je 21 '41 260w

"Mr. Long draws animated word pictures of places and events. He, too, comments on 'pioneer presses' and interprets the 'spiritual stability of the region' in terms of the lives it has produced. His book has a stimulating freshness and vigor."

+ Scientific Bk Club R 12:3 J1 '41 100w
Wis Lib Bul 37:138 J1 '41

LONG, LAURA. Singing sisters; decorations by Janice Holland. 260p $2 Longmans

B or 92 Cary, Alice. Cary, Phoebe (W) 41-51898

Fictionized biography of the famous American poetry-writing sisters, Alice and Phoebe Cary. It is a story of a closely united Ohio family, struggling to make a living, fighting down their sorrow at the loss of sisters and mother, and keeping house for "Pa." With the removal of Alice, Phoebe and their sister Elmira, to New York, and the first of their famous Sunday night suppers, the book closes. For older girls. Bibliography.

Booklist 38:37 O 1 '41

"Laura Long's 'Without Valour' [Book Review Digest, 1940] made us watch for what she would do next. In that vigorous story of Copperhead activities in Indiana during the Civil War she not only evoked a period but put a young reader in the midst of it. With the same steadiness of purpose and warmth of feeling, this double biography of Alice and Phoebe Cary leaves a young reader—or even an older one—with a sense of having lived through their times in America. . . It is a healthy home record of an America whose ideas of family solidarity have not altogether perished." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 Ag 10 '41 450w

"[The author] has made such lifelike portraits of these sisters and of their period that they seem very real. Girls will enjoy the Cary story of mid-nineteenth century work and success." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:364 S '41 90w

"It is to be regretted that so few poems are introduced into the book, but the author evidently tried to write a story about them rather than a biography. Girls from sixth grade up will read the book as a good story and may never realize that Alice and Phoebe Cary were real people of note in their day." M. R. Lucas

Library J 66:737 S 1 '41 140w

"Lively and appealing." K. U. Wise

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 N 8 '41 40w

Social Studies 32:336 N '41 10w

Springf'd Republican p7e O 19 '41 110w

Wis Lib Bul 37:161 O '41

LONG, MANNING. Here's blood in your eye. 287p $2 Duell

41-17614

Mystery story.

"Nobody could set this mystery novel among the really good ones, but it's a fairly entertaining candidate for the lower whodunit ranks." Kay Irvin

+ — N Y Times p20 S 14 '41 140w

"Capably constructed yarn, with an attractive narrator-heroine, a long-suffering sleuth, exciting situations, and numerous totally unprincipled characters. Lurid and lively."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:20 S 27 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 21 '41 160w

LONG, MARGARET. The shadow of the arrow. 310p il maps $3.50 Caxton printers

917.9487 Death Valley 41-12328

This book on the Death Valley region is the work of a woman physician of Denver, Colorado. Part one tells the story of her automobile trips taken with another woman as sole companion into little known parts of the valley. Part two deals with the experiences of a group of 'forty-niners who suffered terribly crossing the valley. This part is based on diaries and other documents, some of which are reprinted in the Appendices.

"At times Dr. Long had a guide, again she had only a map; but her thoroughness, her clear head and firm purpose made her experience as interesting and valuable as is its record in this book. She takes us to lost mines and graves of missing men. We learn of the Oregon and Old Spanish Trails, the Walker Pass Cutoff, of Mrs. Briers' adventures on her way to Los Angeles, of the guide, Manly, who led his party through the Panamints. Fifty pages of appendix give abundant documents. The whole book is interesting, thought-provoking, and will give keen pleasure to all readers who love the earth and her infinite variety." Stanley Vestal

+ Books p9 Ag 3 '41 200w

"The Shadow of the Arrow is a worthy addition to our knowledge of pioneer history. It would have been more readable had it been organized so that the source material preceded Dr. Long's personal explorations. As it is, a number of references in Part I are confusing until Part II is read." E. G.

+ — Canadian Forum 21:157 Ag '41 280w

"As a Death Valley chronicle this should appeal, in its personally conducted tours by a trained observer, to the general reader; the historical research part, with the discussions as to places, does not apply so widely, but nevertheless makes the book of comprehensive value to the student of the early travel and adventure period. He may find some details that have escaped his attention. And since women served and suffered upon those first trails, it is fitting that we should have the sympathetic comment of a woman historian." E. L. Sabin

+ Sat R of Lit 24:14 J1 19 '41 350w

LONG, MAX. Death goes native. 269p $2 Lippincott 41-13233

Detective story.

Booklist 38:53 O 15 '41

"Komako [is] no Charlie Chan, but he'll do. Complete with sarongs, lanai, poi and lauhala." Will Cuppy

Books p17 Ag 24 '41 70w

"The Hawaiian background is a perfect setting for this baffling crime puzzle." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p17 Ag 24 '41 160w

LONGSTREET, STEPHEN (THOMAS BURTON, pseud). Bloodbird. 357p $2.50 Smith & Durrell

41-3113

"The immediate plan of Mr. Burton's novel is a sketchy survey of the climate of the country in the booming twenties. . . A few stubborn men in a town called Corinth are holding on to the farms their fathers had given them, trying to keep off the power lines, the concrete towers, the dams, and all the tricky corruption that rides along on the bandwagon. Mr. Burton, not content with just a national crisis, manipulates the lives of his characters so that each of them comes upon his private day of judgment just as the November days in 1929 come crashing down, and the whole thing is silhouetted in heavy black against the town in flames." Sat R of Lit

"Unlike Sinclair Lewis, Mr. Burton has drawn no caricature. Intense and involved in the problem of his book, he is compassionate, rather than satiric. The scope of 'Bloodbird' is large, but Mr. Burton has a talent for weaving his novel from many strands and succeeds in showing the full life of a small town. Although his novel makes 'Main Street' seem dated and almost improper, it does not reach the clarity of Mr Lewis's book. Mr. Burton has tried to search out the confusion of today by understanding yesterday, but yesterday is only ten years ago and he is unable to find the point of view needed for a clear portrait. Or perhaps we would not recognize the portrait if we saw it." Milton Lehman

LONGSTREET, STEPHEN—Continued

+ — Books p10 F 16 '41 800w

"In spite of his faults, there are many things in his book which, taken alone, are worthy of attention. It is their indiscriminate intermingling, their lavish overlapping, which destroy the bones and tissues of his work." Rose Feld

+ — N Y Times p6 F 9 '41 650w

"The best thing about 'Bloodbird,' what makes it exciting reading, is Mr. Burton's writing of it. He can do things with words that make them vital and explosive. This shows up best in his people. It shows least in his handling of the plot itself. This is because he cannot really contain his passionate interest in men and women, while he can and does content himself with a tailored narrative. We should like to see him let out all the stops and go all out on the big book he could write." N. L. Rothman

+ — Sat R of Lit 23:11 F 15 '41 290w

LONGSTREET, STEPHEN (THOMAS BURTON, pseud). The golden touch. 317p $2.50 Random house

41-4266

The story of Michael Seabrook, a one-time farm boy from up-state New York, who made a success in Wall Street, fought hard and not too scrupulously for a woman's love, and finally having lost everything, sees again a vision of future gains.

"Though Mike Seabrook is a big crook, he is only a lovable country boy at heart, afraid of his little mother. It all seems too, too familiar. The upshot: a bad taste in the mouth—which may or may not be what was intended." R. M. G.

— Atlantic Ap '41 170w

"It was in no sentimental age that a soldier wrote that he could not love his lady so much loved he not honour more. Mr. Longstreet knows his code, but his attitude toward his hero is confused by his admiration for the single mindedness with which Mike goes after what he wants. The upshot is a conventional story, the sugar pill with the bitter coating." F. T. Marsh

Books p2 F 23 '41 950w

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 5 '41 240w

"The book would have more general appeal if it were less heavily charged with financial terms and stock market jargon, which to the uninitiated is tiresome and unintelligible. Not essential for libraries. Very limited appeal for men only." H. A. Carpenter

Library J 66:140 F 1 '41 140w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 My 16 '41 90w

Reviewed by Otis Ferguson

New Repub 104:318 Mr 3 '41 300w

"The author writes with the same driving vitality that marked his style in 'Decade'; but Mike is no such compelling figure as John Christian Rowlandson, the Old One, and, though vivid scenes and sharply edged characters develop in a well-constructed plot, this book will not add to Mr. Longstreet's stature." D. de K.

N Y Times p24 Mr 2 '41 650w

"Mr. Longstreet is at his best when he describes Joel Suleiman walking through the markets of New York at dawn, watching food from all corners of the earth pouring into a city that always awakes hungry. But, for the most part, this novel comes about as close to the reality with which it purports to deal as does the average Hollywood scenario. Hollywood scenarios are both popular and profitable." B. R. R.

Sat R of Lit 23:20 Mr 15 '41 320w

"It is bright stuff and very much alive. Mr. Longstreet's cinema technique is good."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p225 My 10 '41 900w

LONGSTREET, STEPHEN (THOMAS BURTON, pseud). Last man around the world; il. by [the author]. 368p $3 Random house

910.4 Voyages around the world

(W) 41-16926

Just before the war broke out, the writer, author of the novel Decade (Book Review Digest, 1940) took a cruise around the world on one of the last pleasure ships to sail. His book chronicling his trip tells of his fellow passengers, and of his own experiences. It is illustrated with his own sketches.

"In the first few pages of this book a group of fascinating characters is described: Proust's Pal, the Duchess, Big Boy, Overshoes, Smiles and John Brown. They promise fun; they are amusing; they are human beings with vices, virtues and prejudices. But they are neglected. The author sinks slowly into himself, like the sun dropping into the sea, and a self-portrait unfolds: a remarkably candid portrait, since right up to the last turn of the Queen Bee's propellers Stephen Longstreet believed he was writing about other people. What he actually recorded was what he said to other people, how they affected him, why he disliked them, and what he thought of the world in general and the specific spots he investigated. For a nation which likes to crawl into its heroes' bedrooms, this is a rare treat. It's what every one should know about a successful young novelist." Thomas Sugrue

— Books p11 S 7 '41 650w

Reviewed by R. T. Manlove

Library J 66:614 J1 '41 120w

"Illustrations by the author, like his prose, are succinct and effective."

+ New Repub 105:318 S 8 '41 60w

"'Last Man around the World' conceivably may be the last chronicle of its kind written, because this earth may never fully throw off the effects of the current war virus, so it represents a legacy by Stephen Longstreet which well deserves reading." Linton Wells

+ Sat R of Lit 24:17 Ag 30 '41 650w

Springf'd Republican p8 S 9 '41 420w

"The most enjoyable travelogue of the season."

+ Time 38:90 S 1 '41 800w

LOPEZ, INEZ (MRS OCTAVUS ROY COHEN). Whitney and son. 289p $2 Coward-McCann

41-21542

Story of a Southern industrialist who returns to his family—a wife and two grown-up children—after four years in the North with another woman. He is welcomed home, but finds himself at once involved in a dangerous situation. Contrite at his four years' lapse from responsibility, he plunges into the difficulties, and once more wins the respect of his family and his townsmen.

"A pretty thorough indictment of the adult male who thinks himself privileged to 'play hooky' from marriage. It would be more convincing, however, if the other woman's personality were less shadowy." Lisle Bell

Books p16 O 12 '41 240w

"The characters are alive, but the father and mother are portrayed better than the children. A readable, interesting story, though not a remarkable piece of work." E. S. Brown

+ Library J 66:841 O 1 '41 40w

"All of the problems set up by the author are solved happily, except that the innocent Negro in the case is quite dead, and his loving wife left without either his companionship or his wages. . . The lesson, if lesson it is, is of somewhat doubtful ethical value, and adds no strength to a novel that never strikes deep water anywhere, which suffers from insufficient characterization and motivation and too much plot, and which, in spite of the evidence of an interesting but immature talent, will probably not make much of a dent in the new season." Herschel Brickell

— + N Y Times p32 N 9 '41 700w

LORANT, STEFAN. Lincoln; his life in photographs. 160p $3 Duell

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham. Lincoln, Abraham—Portraits (W)

This book contains brief text and many photographs and drawings including portraits of Lincoln, of members of his family and cabinet, of the men associated with him in any way; of his homes from birthplace on; of important events in his life; and facsimiles of his letters and papers.

Booklist 38:176 Ja 15 '42

"There are more than 400 pictures, and most of them are very good. In fact, several of the photographs of Lincoln are superb in their realistic detail. . . One valuable feature is the publication, in chronological order, of all the photographic portraits of Lincoln. For this—a pioneer job—and for carefully dating the sittings and identifying the photographers, Mr. Lorant deserves high praise. In two instances, however, the compiler was unfortunate. There is no photograph of Thomas Lincoln, the President's father, in spite of the picture so captioned on page 15. . . The compiler moreover, was unfortunate, or uninformed, in many of his captions. The same objection may be applied to the biographical narrative, which also seems to be more immature than the nature of the book required. These criticisms, however, have significance principally for adults and serious students." P. M. Angle

+ — Books p4 Ja 4 '42 470w

"An intelligent job."

New Yorker 17:56 Ja 3 '42 50w

"As a reference catalogue of Lincoln photographs the book has its usefulness, but it possesses no literary or biographical value, for it is completely lacking in any attempt at interpretation or even of any understanding of the man who was one of the most complex of all Americans. Like the picture magazines one picks up in the barber shop it catches the eye and holds its interest momentarily, but the interest comes from what the photographers have captured rather than from anything the editor has done to integrate or supplement their pictorial records." P. V. D. Stern

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:9 Ja 17 '42 600w

"The best sequence of Lincoln photographs ever issued in book form."

+ Time 39:68 Ja 5 '42 250w

LORCA, FEDERICO GARCIA. See Garcia Lorca, F.

LORD, GARLAND, pseud of ISABEL GARLAND and MINDRET LORD. Murder's little helper. 273p $2 Doubleday

41-25666

Detective story.

"Theatrical atmosphere and lingo come into the picture, but the main thing is this domestic pair, Gail and Mike Connor, complete with dog and a line of conversation that stems, unless we err, from 'The Thin Man.' Mike says to his wife, 'No, my pampered beauty,' and things like that. Will all this crime tear them apart and ruin their happiness? No." Will Cuppy

Books p10 D 21 '41 160w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p11 D 21 '41 100w

"Highly atmospheric and rather hysterical story of theatrical and movie people, with some good chatter and 'cheerfully philosophic' murderer. A bit feverish."

+ — Sat R of Lit 25:18 Ja 17 '42 40w

LORD, MINDRET. See Lord, G., pseud.

LORIMER, FRANK; WINSTON, MRS ELLEN ENGELMANN (BLACK), and KISER, LOUISE K. Foundations of American population policy. 178p $2.50 Harper

312.0973 U.S.—Population. U.S.—Economic policy 40-34134

"The rapidly decreasing birthrate [in this country], especially among people of superior endowments, and the migration of energetic young people from farms to cities, give rise to widespread concern in many quarters that unless something is done to encourage propagation among these groups the genetic stock of our civilization will deteriorate. . . This book, prepared by the Committee on Population Studies and Social Planning of the National Economic and Social Planning Association, makes thorough inquiry into the many aspects of population change and sets up a framework for the establishment of a national population policy." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by T. C. McCormick

Am J Soc 47:505 N '41 400w

"This is an excellent book, with much that the reviewer would commend and little he would criticize. It is a pioneer effort to find a solution to the problem of retaining scientific progress and division of labor without drifting so far from the rural family and toward dependence upon the state as to cause a rapid decline in population." O. E. Baker

+ Am Soc R 6:754 O '41 650w

Foreign Affairs 19:680 Ap '41 10w

"The book is a valuable contribution to the necessary integration of the social sciences and deserves wide reading." M. S. Stewart

+ Nation 152:50 Ja 11 '41 600w

Reviewed by J. D. Norton

New Repub 104:379 Mr 17 '41 260w

Reviewed by W. S. Meacham

N Y Times p29 Mr 2 '41 700w

Reviewed by M. J. Hagood

Social Forces 19:573 My '41 160w

"This book gives an extremely clear, sound analysis of one of the main problems facing America today—a stationary or declining population in the very near future. It is written in straightforward language, understandable and interesting to scholar and layman alike, with no attempt to resort to difficult academic concepts or terms." R. D. Smith

+ Survey 77:130 Ap '41 420w

LORING, MRS EMILIE (BAKER). Where beauty dwells. 311p $2 Little 41-4133

A complicated love story scened on the Maine coast. Mac Cameron returns to New England after three years on an engineering job in South America. He finds his young stepmother trying to force his father to oust two girls from their home acres. One of the sisters is an invalid; the other is so unselfish and so beautiful that Mac promptly falls in love with her. The story moves to a swift climax after Mac's father has been killed.

Booklist 37:440 My 15 '41

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p19 Mr 9 '41 150w

LORING, EMILIE—Continued

"Where Beauty Dwells," like all of Emilie Loring's books, excels in plot. Everybody appears at the wrong moment and overhears or overhears the wrong thing. But in the end the tangle unravels neatly and almost casually." Elizabeth Merrill

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 15 '41 230w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p18 Mr 16 '41 240w

Spring'd Republican p7e Mr 16 '41 300w

LORWIN, LEWIS LEVITZKI. Youth work programs; problems and policies; prepared for the Am. youth commission. 195p $1.75 Am. council on educ.

362.7 Youth. U.S. Civilian conservation corps. U.S. Work projects administration. U.S. National youth administration 41-8069

"A useful discussion of public youth work programs, based on the experience of the Civilian conservation corps, the Work projects administration, and especially the National youth administration. The objectives, social policies, and administration of such programs, whom they should serve, what work should be done, and the effects of national defense are included, with suggestions for a future program. Statistical tables: p.157-183." Booklist

"This is a thought-provoking study, and it offers sound guidance for improvement of our own state prisons and reformatories, beginning with improvement of personnel." R. W. McCulloch

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:1007 O '41 600w

Booklist 37:510 Jl 1 '41

J Home Econ 33:484 S '41 60w

School & Society 53:520 Ap 19 '41 20w

LOTH, DAVID GOLDSMITH. Woodrow Wilson; the fifteenth point. 365p $3 Lippincott B or 92 Wilson, Woodrow. Versailles, Treaty of, 1919 (W) 41-6876

"This book is an attempt to present the case [of the Versailles settlement] through the medium of the treaty's chief architect. . . Wilson left in his own papers a complete record that enables us to study every step in the development of his program." (Foreword) Index.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Weber

Am Pol Sci R 35:798 Ag '41 400w

Booklist 37:514 Jl 1 '41

"Mr. Loth has seen an opportunity and seized it with skill and success. The handier, more popular biographies of Woodrow Wilson are now fifteen or twenty years old and in many ways out of date; while among the more recent works embodying the presently available material one finds only special studies or else the multi-volumed ponderosities of Mr. Ray Stannard Baker. Yet each passing week seems only to add, not only to Wilson's stature, but to his immediate and practical significance for our times. There was a growing need for a good, modern Wilson biography for the general reader, and Mr. Loth has filled it." Walter Millis

+ Books p3 Mr 30 '41 700w

"A sound and readable biography of Wilson, sympathetic but not uncritical." R. G. Woolbert

+ Foreign Affairs 19:875 Jl '41 60w

Living Age 360:297 My '41 100w

"A close study of Wilson's messages in the decisive years is most important for understanding the present. The several good biographies of Wilson which appeared in the early twenties lack the perspective in which recent events have placed the work of twenty-five years ago. David Loth's new book is not a definitive biography or a mine of new information, but it is an extremely readable, understanding, and intelligent piece of work, and should be warmly recommended to those who have to meet the challenge of today." Hans Kohn

+ Nation 152:533 My 3 '41 310w

"In spite of its shortcomings, Mr. Loth's 'Woodrow Wilson' is distinctly worth reading. For quite obviously all the problems that plagued Wilson in 1916 and 1919 remain to plague us today. They are problems that cannot be evaded. Pondering the career of Woodrow Wilson is probably the best way to face up to these problems. If Mr. Loth does not think his way through to the heart of Wilson's difficulties, he is at least a reliable guide for people who want to take a few first faltering steps in preparing for the next peace." John Chamberlain

+ N Y Times p9 Je 22 '41 1050w

"It is a straight story of Woodrow Wilson's life, with lucid interpretations of men and events so skillfully interwoven that the narrative is nowhere impeded. At the end the reader is left with the satisfying feeling of having read the story of a man's life in which the author has slighted no controversial point and has in every instance hewed to the line, letting the chips fall where they will." L. B. H.

+ Spring'd Republican p7e My 25 '41 1200w

LOTHAR, ERNST. A woman is witness; a Paris diary; tr. by Barrows Mussey. 304p $2.50 Doubleday

41-13939

This novel of Paris life from 1938 to 1940 is based on the diary of a young Austrian woman who had gone to Paris, a voluntary exile, just before the Anschluss. The story, cast in diary form tho not an exact transcript, tells of her meeting with a young French journalist, their marriage, the coming of war and death.

"When you put down the book you are surprised that people speak English around you, that faces are calmly bent over their meals and voices have an even, unexcited pitch. Yet the diary of Franziska Durand née Langer is neither sensational nor melodramatic. With all its intensity of mood it remains a rather plain and always probable report of Paris life, 1938-'40, not particularly brilliant or dialectically clever, told as a woman might see it—a woman with a sense of fairness and justice and a human heart. It is a diary—or if you prefer—a story which in the end is bitter and heart rending but which you will not pass by because it gives a small but significant segment of today's reality." Felizia Seyd

+ Books p6 Ag 17 '41 500w

Reviewed by Justin O'Brien

Nation 153:228 S 13 '41 300w

"Not very deep, but somewhat entertaining." + New Repub 105:318 S 8 '41 40w

"The best stretch of the book is undoubtedly the description of the German troops as they march through Paris. . . There isn't a sound to be heard except the marching tread of Hitler's soldiers, as they goosetstep into the Place de la Concorde like 'precision machines.' It is from here on, during the last part of the book, that the story becomes really moving and more than merely entertaining." Marianne Hauser

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 17 '41 750w

"Perhaps because it uses the names of actual persons, perhaps because it is personal, particular, and under- rather than overwritten, it sounds like an authentic picture of France at the time. The story is pathetically real, and you won't easily forget the silent Paris that watched the Nazi troops goosestepping into the Place de la Concorde."

+ New Yorker 17:66 Ag 23 '41 70w

"This diary, so the publishers assert, is authentic, and one is inclined to be somewhat sceptical about that. The apprehension proves to be quite unsubstantial, however, because of all the fiction which the European chaos has produced so far, this novel ranks among the best. . . On the surface, this may seem like a very personal story, but it is much more. It is the story of a period within our epoch, a period of anxiety and persistent fear, in which the only hope, sadly enough, was the hope for war. It is, therefore, quite irrelevant whether the diary is really authentic or not." Klaus Lambrecht

+ Sat R of Lit 24:13 Ag 16 '41 600w

LOUNSBERRY, ALICE. Sir William Phips, treasure fisherman and governor of the Massachusetts Bay colony. 323p il map $3 Scribner

B or 92 Phips, Sir William 41-8228

Biography of a colonial New Englander, a shipwright and sea captain, who won a knighthood by discovering and raising a sunken treasure ship off Haiti. Later he was appointed governor of Massachusetts, but some of his policies raised up enemies who managed to have him called to London for trial. Tho still a comparatively young man, he contracted a disease there which caused his death in 1695. Bibliography. Index.

"It is an exciting, even a gaudy career that Miss Lounsberry has celebrated. Her sympathies are throughout with the carpenter who rose so high in the world, and she fails to inquire zealously into the allegations of lawlessness and dishonesty. Lack of abundant source material for some periods of Phips's life has led her to an imaginative reconstruction that is more entertaining than convincing. The book is without documentation, and the bibliography inadequate. But the story reads well and is well worth reading." H. S. Commager

+ — Books p11 Jl 6 '41 750w

"Miss Lounsberry in dealing with her subject has been careful, stern with herself about inventing or reconstructing, a little formal in her style, and refreshingly honest." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 10 '41 700w

"A very readable book for one who wants to be entertained rather than instructed. Yet more data are available. The author does not include several important recent pieces of research on Phips in her bibliography—which, incidentally, is very carelessly compiled. Had she read these, she would probably have been far less favorable in her judgment of her hero during his term as governor of the Bay Colony." Carl Bridenbaugh

+ — New Eng Q 14:583 S '41 420w

New Repub 105:30 Jl 7 '41 80w

"This is the richly told story of a most picturesque career. No lover of our colonial history should fail to read this superbly documented biography." P. A. Means

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 20 '41 700w

"The main lines of the book are authentic, even if the author's judgment is too much warped in favor of her hero, and the story reads easily. It is not a work for the scholar but one which the general reader may well enjoy." J. T. Adams

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:12 Je 7 '41 410w

"Sir William is well worth knowing about, and while Miss Lounsberry's story of his life is written for popular interest, with hurried treatment of undramatic incidents, it is well written, informative and entertaining."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Ap 13 '41 950w

LOVELACE, MAUD (HART) (MRS D. W. LOVELACE). Betsy, Tacy and Tib; il. by Lois Lenski. 129p $1.75 Crowell

(W) 41-18714

Story of three little girl playmates, from their ninth to tenth years. The time is the early twentieth century.

"Their charm for small children is that their goodness is so often misunderstood, that they are in trouble much of the time. . . The story pauses on the threshold of being ten; a trifle worried at the prospect, they reassure themselves that they'll still have fun. I trust we may still hear about it." M. L. Becker

+ Books p9 S 28 '41 310w

Christian Century 58:1178 S 24 '41 20w

"A very real story of children who lived in the early 1900's. Throughout the book are many of Lois Lenski's illustrations, amusing as always." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 66:908 O 15 '41 130w

LOVELL, ALFRED HENRY. Generating stations; economic elements of electrical design. 3d ed 471p il $4.50 McGraw

621.312 Electric plants 41-51671

"The Professor of Electric Power Engineering, University of Michigan, has again revised his book dealing with power plants, to which he has added much new material. Numerous references have been made to developments and problems in the standard engineering publications in order to encourage the student to use these sources." (N Y New Tech Bks) For second edition see Book Review Digest, 1936. Index.

Booklist 37:391 Ap 15 '41

N Y New Tech Bks 26:41 Jl '41

LOW, DAVID. On the war; a cartoon commentary of the years, 1939-41 [with a special introd. by the artist and a chronological text]. 157p $2 Simon & Schuster

940.5497 World war, 1939—Humor, caricatures, etc. Caricatures and cartoons

(W) 41-14145

"Nearly all the cartoons in this book originally appeared in the Evening Standard of London. Many of them were subsequently reproduced in The New York Times. They have been arranged in chronological order, the publication date being given in each case. Because they cover events dating back to September, 1939, a short text giving relevant factual background material has been added." Publishers' foreword

Booklist 38:5 S '41

Bookmark 2:9 N '41

"David Low is not only incomparably the first among political cartoonists of our times; he is an authentic voice of the greatest elements in the liberal British tradition. His drawings are as essential as the speeches of Churchill to an understanding of the age in which we live." Walter Mills

+ Books pl Ag 3 '41 450w

Commonweal 34:429 Ag 22 '41 60w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:378 Ja '42 20w

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 12 '41 90w

Reviewed by Margaret Marshall

Nation 153:144 Ag 16 '41 60w

Reviewed by Robert Van Gelder

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 10 '41 950w

New Yorker 17:59 Ag 9 '41 30w

Pratt p23 D '41

"David Low is the only fully equipped cartoonist in the world. There is Low and there are other cartoonists. I am not sure that he is not the best cartoonist who ever lived. . . Not only are his ideas brilliant but the terse execution which never fumbles carries him through the difficult problems of presenting elaborate machinery (try, oh stumbling cartoonist, to achieve the synthesis of a mass of whirling machines as he does it), of animals in action, and, best of all, of genuine caricature." Rollin Kirby

+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 S 6 '41 450w

Spring'd Republican p7e Jl 27 '41 300w

LOW, GARRETT W. Gold rush by sea [from his journal] ed. by Kenneth Haney. 187p $2 Univ. of Pa. press

979.4 Voyages to the Pacific coast. California—Gold discoveries 41-10344

Account of a voyage by packet and clipper ship from New York to California, via Cape Horn, in 1850 and 1851. The book is composed of the author's diary of the trip and of his experiences after reaching California.

"It is amusing to have this aspect of a trip to California in Gold Rush days brought out so clearly. Little is told of seamanship or navigation, but that is always the way with such records, of which this reviewer has seen several in manuscript form. . . But 'Gold Rush by Sea' makes a jolly good reading, and a lot of human nature in the raw comes out. It is a pity that the final section, recounting Garrett W. Low's wanderings in California, Nevada and Chile for a term of years, is so brief and fragmentary. One would like to know more about this lively young man." Lincoln Colcord

+ Books p26 O 5 '41 1050w

"Low was one of ten first class passengers in the Washington Irving of packet ship fame, all of them excellent copy for a novelist. Perhaps because he had both a sense of humor and a bent toward poetry, his diary has an air of wonder untouched by the fierce dignity of most adventurers. He even enjoys himself, and the reader shares his delight." Irvin Anthony

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 Je 14 '41 280w

"Authentic journal of as mad and merry a voyage as ever charted its course between the covers of a book. The merriment emanates from Low's gentle wit and naive outlook. The madness stems from Capt Samuel Plumer."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 1 '41 420w

LOWE, CORINNE B. Knight of the sea; the story of Stephen Decatur; il. by Warren Chappell. 286p $2.50 Harcourt

B or 92 Decatur, Stephen—Juvenile literature (W) 41-51957

Fictionized biography of Stephen Decatur, "conqueror of the Barbary pirates and hero of the War of 1812," from his eighth year to his death in a duel in 1820. For boys of fifteen to eighteen.

Booklist 38:99 N 15 '41

"This is a thrilling story out of life, losing nothing in narration, gaining a new audience among boys and girls growing up in a world at war, and reminding them that not all our heroes have been men of peace." M. L. Becker

+ Books p8 S 21 '41 400w

"A romantic portrait of a daring fighter, emphasizing the strains in his character that make the title of the book seem a well-chosen one. Plainly, it was a congenial subject for Warren Chappell's hand, for his pictures add a vivid dramatic note that could ill be spared." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:469 N '41 150w

"While the battle scenes are gripping and unforgettable, the needless toll and tragedy of war are not lost sight of. Despite some sentimentality and an irrelevant importance given the wife's social favor (although Susan Decatur never quite comes alive in these pages), the book seems a useful addition to our few historical novels on Tripoli and 1812." Maude Adams

+ Library J 66:847 O 1 '41 160w

Reviewed by Jessie Stanton & E. W. Steele
New Repub 105:838 D 15 '41 40w

N Y Times p12 N 9 '41 120w

"First rate." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 24:8 N 8 '41 20w

"From the day when young Decatur went to sea while still in his teens, his life was one mad derring-do of restless and courageous adventure. All of this is set forth in a sprightly and entertaining manner which may well capture Hollywood's attention."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 19 '41 120w

LOWEN, WALTER ALBERT, and WATSON, MRS LILLIAN (EICHLER). How to get a job and win success in advertising; introd. by Roy Dickinson. 382p il $3 Prentice-Hall 659.1 Advertising (W) 41-8378

Advice and information on advertising as a vocation. Partial contents: What is advertising? What does it offer me in the way of a career? What are the opportunities in advertising—what kinds of jobs are available? What qualities are necessary for success? What training and education do I need? What is the right job for me—what am I best suited for in advertising? How can I get a start in advertising—what do I do about getting a job? What special opportunities are there for women in advertising? What is the future in advertising—the possibilities for growth and development? Additional outlines of job opportunities in various fields. Contains a section describing the experiences of some forty prominent advertising men. Index.

Booklist 37:542 J 15 '41

"Useful and undoubtedly absorbing to students and beginners ready and willing to approach advertising as their Life's Work. Definitely of the Dale Carnegie school of literature, the book has the unique distinction in this field of not being carved wholly from hot air. . . But if you have been selling advertising for eleven years, and you're now engaged in an effort to up the advertising revenue of a highly deserving, comparatively small magazine with a moral purpose—well, don't expect this book alone to solve your problem." John Brubaker

+ Commonweal 34:428 Ag 22 '41 280w
Pratt p3 autumn '41

LOWER, ARTHUR REGINALD MARSDEN. Canada and the Far East, 1940. 152p $1.25 Inst. of Pacific relations. Am. council

327.71 Canada—Relations (general) with East (Far East). East (Far East)—Relations (general) with Canada 41-51527

"The book begins with an historical analysis of Canada's relationship to the Sino-Japanese conflict, followed by a chapter on the attitudes taken by Canadian newspapers. Then the factors which determine [Canada's] Pacific policy are analyzed—missions, trade, oriental settlement, and the geographical bases of defense—and the book concludes with an appendix on the two areas of Canada which look out to the Pacific, British Columbia and Alberta." Canadian Forum

Reviewed by F. R. Fussell

Am Pol Sci R 35:393 Ap '41 180w

Reviewed by Carl Wittke

Ann Am Acad 215:189 My '41 550w

Booklist 37:326 Mr 15 '41

Canadian Forum 21:58 My '41 340w

Christian Science Monitor p18 Ag 11 '41 50w

Reviewed by C. H. Grattan

New Repub 105:92 J 1 '41 20w

"As a whole this study is clear in exposition, pungent in comment, and realistic in analysis. Mr. Lower completed his study before the Second World War. With his consent a chapter was added on defense and foreign policy designed to give a perspective of the present situation. . . This chapter is not up to the standard of the rest of the volume and suffers from haste and excessive compression." F. H. Soward

+ Pacific Affairs 14:233 Je '41 420w

"To American readers especially Professor Lower offers a valuable orientation in the Far Eastern outlook of our northern neighbor." A. W. Griswold

+ Pol Sci Q 56:454 S '41 200w

LOWNDES, MARIE ADELAIDE (BELLOC) (MRS. F. S. LOWNDES). Before the storm. 300p $2 Longmans

41-7866

Mystery story.

"Here's a tale of love and social adventure (with a criminous touch) which should fill Mrs. Belloc Lowndes's extensive clientele and other romantic souls with bliss, as it did this department." Will Cuppy

+ Books p28 My 11 '41 190w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p22 My 25 '41 140wReviewed by Charlotte Dean
N Y Times p19 Ag 3 '41 200w

LOWNDES, MARION SMITH. Ghosts that still walk; real ghosts of America; il. by Warren Chappell. 147p $1.50 Knopf

133.1 Ghosts. Folklore—U.S. 41-16256

Accounts of some sixteen "ghosts" which are believed to haunt American houses. Contents:
The oldest white ghost in America; The house of Ocean Born Mary; The Bell witch; Nathaniel Hawthorne and the ghost of Dr Harfils; The most famous ghost in America; The gray man; Aunt Harriet; The haunted schoolhouse; The singing ghost in cottage garden; The well loved house; The octagon; The devil and Jonathan Moulton; The ghost in court; Dead but not gone—the conference house; By sight and by smell; The ghost from Missouri.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
Books p9 S 28 '41 200wReviewed by E. V. Wyatt
Cath World 154:375 D '41 130w

"Simply told, and like all matter on the subject, having a considerable power to hold the reader." H. L. Binsse

+ Commonweal 35:112 N 21 '41 20w

Reviewed by E. T. Dobbins
Library J 66:954 N 1 '41 50w

"The stories are presented in a scientific and factual manner rather than as fiction designed to stimulate the imagination. If adults read the book they might be disappointed, as the tales fall short of plausibility. Young people want ghost stories to quicken the pulse, and very few of these do that. Not recommended for general purchase." E. A. Groves

Library J 66:954 N 1 '41 120w

"This collection of stories will appeal to those of any age who love the 'folk-say' and legends of America." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p9 Ja 4 '42 280w

LOWNSBERY, ELOISE (MRS C. S. CLAN-CY). A camel for a throne; il. by Elizabeth
Tyler Wolcott. 305p $2.50 Houghton

(W) 41-7315

Sometime about 2000 B.C., Neferta, an Egyptian princess, ran away from her cruel royal nurse, and with a Nubian boy, traveled by camel thru Egypt into Nubia. For a year Neferta lived among the poorer classes, learning their ways and their burdens. Then she was one day returned to her family to become the queen of Egypt. Glossary.

Booklist 37:466 Je 1 '41

"A quickly moving tale with Egyptian drawings and a beautiful double-page street scene in color, it closes with a glossary whose notes are unusually full." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 J1 6 '41 250w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk M 17:292 J1 '41 120w

"Although the presentation is sometimes too informational and the plot strained and too packed with incident, the background is convincing and the story would interest some girls, ages twelve to fifteen." Alice Monroe

+ — Library J 66:465 My 15 '41 150w

"The story is almost too well filled with incidents, but it is well-constructed, moves rapidly and the background of life in Egypt some 4,000 years ago is filled in with full and fascinating detail. Quotations from Egyptian literature are used effectively; moreover Miss Lownsbury succeeds in making her characters alive, credible and appealing." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p9 Je 1 '41 400w

LOWREY, JANETTE SEBRING. Rings on her fingers; il. by Janice Holland. 192p $2 Harper 41-21553

Three little girls living in a small town in Texas in 1901 share the stage with one rambunctious small boy, evidently born to make trouble. The smooth existences of the feminine members of the community are considerably roughened when Sonny-Boy gets into action.
The mystery of the disappearance of all their rings which the girls are about to sell in favor of a Shetland pony, gives point to the tale.

Booklist 38:117 D 1 '41

"The book [is] so amusing it will be a boon to people who don't mind reading aloud to the children but want something funny to read. . .
The pictures are pleasant watercolors and line drawings, humorous and kind, with the fashions of 1901." M. L. Becker

+ Books p10 N 2 '41 280w

"One feels almost sure that the author was one of [the] little girls, and must have all the details right. . . In format the book resembles the Wilder ones, with the added attraction of colored illustrations; in plot it is reminiscent of Thimble Summer. Although it is pleasant enough reading and contains material for drama, it lacks the vividness of those books." Miriam Snow

+ — Library J 66:1001 N 15 '41 130w

Reviewed by G. G. Bates
Sat R of Lit 24:11 N 8 '41 50w

LOWRY, STEWART MCKINLEY; MAYNARD, HAROLD BRIGHT, and STEGEMERTEN,
GUSTAVE JAMES. Time and motion study and formulas for wage incentives. 3d ed 432p il $5 McGraw

658.542 Time study. Motion study. Efficiency, Industrial 40-35751

"In this third edition the study of methods has been greatly expanded, in line with the recent tendency to emphasize methods rather than time study. Some of the formula examples and descriptions of wage-payment subjects are omitted." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1927. Index.

Booklist 37:218 Ja 15 '41

Management R 29:420 N '40 40w

LUCAS, JANNETTE MAY. Man's first million years; il. by James MacDonald. 277p maps $2 Harcourt

573.3 Man, Prehistoric. Archeology
(W) 41-51700

A popular, non-technical account of the evolution of man from the Ape-man of Java who lived a million years ago, down to the beginning of Historic Time. The story of ancient man is interlarded with the story of how scientists have learned about him, of the discoveries of a tooth or a skull or a jaw bone, of the labors of digging fossils, of the careful work of reconstructing faces and figures.
Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:412 My 1 '41

"As useful a work of popularized science as I have lately seen. . . It is not sensational; the style is quiet, the stuff is sound, and the speed comes from being whirled across aeons of time in the society of hominids, 'men in process of development,' until we approach

LUCAS, J. M.—Continued
 Historic Time and are conscious that over the horizon we ourselves are waiting. The drawings are clear and plain; an excellent brief reading-list is appended for students yet unsatisfied." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Ap 27 '41 400w

Reviewed by Maribelle Cormack
 Horn Bk M 17:295 J1 '41 160w

"It is more comprehensive than many other books of this nature, and will be a happy find for the eleven-to-fourteen-year-old who delights in books on anthropology and archaeology." Florence O'Gara

+ Library J 66:269 Mr 15 '41 150w

"Eminently readable, the book is distinguished not only for its content but for the clarity and simplicity of its prose, which can make equally vivid a scene millenniums old or convey something of the excitement which stirs a scientist when he makes a new discovery or establishes a long-discussed possibility as a fact. Without being technical the book is mature enough in its viewpoint and style to interest adults as well as the reader in his teens." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Je 8 '41 360w

"This story of the indefatigable research of scientists into the past of our determined ancestors is worth your attention."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:20 My 10 '41 80w

Springf'd Republican p12 Je 6 '41 270w

LUCE, HENRY ROBINSON. American century; with comments by Dorothy Thompson [and others]. 89p $1 Farrar

940.5373 World war, 1939—U.S. U.S.—
 Foreign relations. Twentieth century
 41-8909

"Here in handy form is a reprint of the call to service which Mr. Henry R. Luce, editor of 'Life,' addressed to the American people in that magazine this spring. Mr. Luce's thesis is by now well known. The American people have failed to live up to their responsibilities to the rest of the world. . . . Today they are in the war, but they hardly know it. They have a responsibility to the world to see that after the war there will be a just peace and a long era of tranquillity in the world. . . . The Twentieth Century is America's, and by that fact it imposes on America the duty of seeing to it that the world will be a better place for all to live in." Books

Booklist 37:544 J1 15 '41

"To an interventionist like the present reviewer Mr. Luce's 'credo' stands out as a useful piece of analysis, and as a helpful sidelight on the mental processes of one of our ablest editors. It is not a 'great state paper'—as some of its enthusiastic admirers claim. It is an analysis of the moment, not a statement of a philosophy or a policy. Its value lies in stirring up others to 'think furiously.' Mr. Luce himself has more to get out of his system. The sooner he does so the better, for he has the knack of catching the public ear, and he can be a vital force in educating Americans to a sense of world responsibility." Nicholas Roosevelt

+ — Books p8 Je 22 '41 290w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
 Foreign Affairs 20:193 O '41 50w

Reviewed by Leon Whipple
 Survey G 30:403 J1 '41 190w
 Time 37:94 Je 9 '41 300w

LUDEY, CHARLES ADDISON. Decision reserved. 349p il $3 Dorrance

B or 92 Lawyers—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 41-15611

"The autobiography of a small-town lawyer. The town around which his affections and career have largely revolved is Marietta, O.

Although it is neither the town of his birth nor his present residence it is the town where he attended college and where he started his legal career, and now it is where his business offices are located." Springf'd Republican

Christian Century 58:985 Ag '41 10w
 Springf'd Republican p10 S 11 '41 650w

LUDWIG, EMIL. The Germans: double history of a nation; tr. from the German by Heinz and Ruth Norden. 509p il $4 Little 943 Germany—History. Germany—Civilization. National characteristics. German (W) 41-23346

A resumé of two thousand years of the history of the German people, in which the author attempts to find an explanation of why the same race could produce a Beethoven, a Bismarck, a Goethe, a Goebbels. Index.

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
 Atlantic F '42 200w

Booklist 38:156 Ja 1 '42

"Herr Ludwig's historical chapters, though on the whole true in essence, are slovenly in detail. But the failure of the book does not lie in its slapdash fabrication and in the author's reliance upon an honorable liberalism to pull him through a prodigiously difficult task. It lies in the fact that it does not fulfill its promise, it does not explain the German character. What he says about the Germans is not untrue, but it is incomplete and settles nothing." Lewis Galantieri

+ — Books p2 N 23 '41 1250w

"One of the best books to come from Ludwig's pen in recent years. . . . Not an academic 'textbook,' but a stimulating guide for the educated layman who wants to find out all that is strange in the German national character. Recommended, particularly for public libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 66:999 N 15 '41 140w

"Extravagant or loose-jointed here and there, but a powerful and arresting job."

+ — New Yorker 17:110 N 22 '41 70w

"Emil Ludwig, who in many quarters enjoys the reputation of being the greatest living biographer, now offers us what might have been his magnum opus. . . . Ludwig's book must inevitably be judged as a historical work, and that is precisely where it falls short. . . . There is a definite need in this country for a book which will throw light on the historical reasons for the 'black record of the German people.' It is too bad Emil Ludwig does not live up to this task. Even the valiant efforts of the translators, who have done an excellent job, cannot gloss over this fact." Robert Pick

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:15 D 13 '41 600w

LUHRS, VICTOR. The longbow murder. 304p $2 Norton

41-5374

A detective story of twelfth-century Normandy, with Richard Coeur de Lion as the detective.

"It's a fine idea for a change, and Victor Luhrs may have something if he can hit upon a smoother blend in his wordage." Will Cuppy

+ — Books p17 Mr 9 '41 110w

"If up-to-date mystery addicts cannot believe that a twelfth-century puzzler can be interesting, let them sample this exceedingly brisk novelty. . . . It is entertaining reading, with its sorrowful knight, its gargantuan feasting, its rough-and-tumble jousts, its extraordinary characters." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p20 Mr 9 '41 270w

"Detecting of kingly sleuth as recorded by 12th century scribe would win him bouncer job on most any homicide squad. Quaint."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ap 26 '41 40w

"This tale offers sumptuous feasts, doughty tilting lists, clanking armor and bright trap-pings. But through it all is the likeness to a present-day mystery thriller, and the characters are casual and human."
 + Spring'd Republican p7e Mr 9 '41
 240w

LUNDBERG, DANIEL. River rat. 281p $2.50
 Reynal

41-6230

Story of an adolescent boy, Ralph Blood, and his search for Life—did Life mean Harriet Stevens, respectability, going to college, or did it mean the girl Dutchy and canoeing on the Charles river at Dedham.

"Ralph is an amusing, if slightly stylized, creation. His floridness, his earnestness, his imagination and his lack of humor are familiar. But Mr. Lundberg has cast him in a slightly more modern idiom than his predecessors—Willie Baxter and Dink Stover. You might wish for a bit less of the slapstick which adds very little to the book's humor. But you will enjoy Ralph." Anne Brooks
 + — Books p10 Ap 6 '41 430w

"The unique quality of the book lies in its authentic portrayal of the extraordinary lingo which the boys and girls of the 40's have picked up from the movies and the popular psychological texts. Freudian phrases and gangster's argot punctuate Ralph and Harriet's discussion of subjects about which their parents were probably quite inarticulate. Mr. Lundberg has written a new version of 'Seventeen' that will delight many a reader, also be rather disturbing to the parents of adolescents." Kenneth McDougall
 + Boston Transcript p8 Ap 12 '41 200w

"Many stories about adolescents are either painfully tender or hilariously hardboiled. This one about Ralph Blood, 17—maybe he's 18 now—avoids those two extremes. Told by himself, the book is very 17-year-old. . . Daniel Lundberg does a cleverly smooth job of writing Ralph's story. It isn't sincere exactly—for the boy is always playing to the gallery of himself—but it's revealing and convincing, and a thoroughly entertaining slice of youth." Beatrice Sherman
 + N Y Times p7 Ap 6 '41 650w

"Intermittently amusing, but there's so much about canoeing (the sport which draws the young gawks together) that the light satire is frequently lost in the technical color."
 — + New Yorker 17:91 Ap 5 '41 30w

"Although not brilliantly written, 'River Rat' has charm and freshness, and there are a few scenes of excellent humor. . . Even the boy-and-girl adventures are not too tiresome, and the dialogue is consistently good. For all their petty fibbing and fickleness these boys and girls are no worse than Willie Baxter and his friends of nearly a generation ago. The youngsters of 1940 are franker in their speech (their solemn sex-talk with slight regard for euphemism will make the Tarkingtonians wince), but no reader will lay the novel aside worrying about things to come when such as Ralph, Danny, and Dutchy take over." R. A. Cordell
 + Sat R of Lit 23:12 Ap 26 '41 410w

"There isn't anything sordid about the book, though some of it is silly and preposterous. If the respective parents had been capable, the heartache and the wrong doing that cause part of the excitement of the book never would have happened."
Spring'd Republican p7e My 4 '41 300w

"For his first novel, 28-year-old Daniel Lundberg uses an idiom of his own. At once callow and articulate, it can make things seem simultaneously ridiculous and touching without showing a trace of the oldtime Tarkington smirk. It is the almost perfect tongue for the self-revelations of a Dedham high-school senior in 1941."
 + Time 37:103 Ap 7 '41 400w
Wis Lib Bul 37:93 My '41

LUNN, ARNOLD HENRY MOORE. Come what may. 348p $3 Little [12s 6d Eyre]

B or 92

41-51605

The writer of this autobiography is a pioneer in Alpine-skiing, a convert to Catholicism and a religious controversialist. These interests form the framework of his book, thruout which run two recurrent themes, his dislike of intellectuals and his hatred of Communism.

Booklist 37:357 Ap 1 '41

Reviewed by G. N. Shuster

Books p15 F 9 '41 850w

"Mr. Lunn has always written with an easy style. Even in his profound controversies on science and religion he always manages to lift the weight by interspersing a personal anecdote to illustrate a point. This style is more evident in 'Come What May,' in fact one might even say it is now in reverse proportions." Peter Barnicle
Boston Transcript p1 F 8 '41 650w
Cath World 152:766 Mr '41 200w

Reviewed by Richard Flower

Commonweal 34:41 My 2 '41 700w

Manchester Guardian p7 O 8 '40 190w

"Though [his opinions] are usually wrong, they are set forth with such a verve and gusto that Mr. Lunn's errors are more fun than most men's truths. In short, a gay, vivid, combative, unflinching good-humoured book, the work of a likeable and, I should imagine, a happy man, who has savoured to the full a life spent on the warpath of perpetual controversy." C. E. M. Joad
 + — New Statesman & Nation 20:334 O 5 '40 1200w

"Long before the book begins to scatter incidents of recent years with meditation and controversy in its pages, it has given its readers some boyhood memories which come within the more conventional frame of autobiography and which are delightful. Sir Henry Lunn is seen as an amazing, unpredictable, lovable contradiction." Katherine Woods
 + — N Y Times p16 F 9 '41 1100w

Reviewed by R. E. Roberts

Sat R of Lit 23:12 Ap 5 '41 410w

"What with extensive reading, mental agility, lucidity of expression, joy of battle and an outstanding gift for presenting a case, all that he writes is stimulating whether or not it carries conviction. Often it does."
 + Times [London] Lit Sup p486 S 21 '40
 750w

750w

LUNN, HUGH KINGSMILL (HUGH KINGSMILL, pseud), ed. Johnson without Boswell; a contemporary portrait of Samuel Johnson. 306p $2.50 Knopf [8s 6d Methuen]

B or 92 Johnson, Samuel

41-839

The aim of this volume is to provide an account of Johnson from contemporary sources outside Boswell, including Johnson's own writings and letters, the lives by Hawkins and Murphy and the reminiscences of Mrs Thrale. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Dixon Wecter

Am Hist R 47:115 O '41 700w

"Mr. Kingsmill's work is an overdue act of justice to the memory of a great man whose talent for making himself loved was quite equal to his talent for making himself respected." A. J. N.

+ Atlantic Mr '41 180w

Bookmark 2:12 My '41

"This Johnsonian anthology does not lend itself very well to consecutive reading, but it is a delightful book of the dipping and delving kind. Open where you will you will find amusing anecdote. The total impression which it leaves is a valuable supplement to Boswell's more finished picture." S. C. Chew
 + Books p13 F 2 '41 440w

Reviewed by DeLancey Ferguson

Boston Transcript p1 Mr 15 '41 330w

LUNN, H. K.—Continued

Reviewed by J. G. E. Hopkins
Commonweal 33:426 F 14 '41 230w

"To look at Johnson without Boswell is no new notion, and Mr. Kingsmill makes the effort an easy and a pleasant one for his readers. . . The picture is rich and semblable, and could have been spiced from other sources, particularly from Horace Walpole." H. B. Charlton

+ Manchester Guardian p7 J1 26 '40 400w

"Little or none of the material is, to be sure, either new or even particularly inaccessible, but Mr. Kingsmill has arranged it well, in chronological order and with the briefest of annotations, to make a delightful book." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 152:187 F 15 '41 800w

Reviewed by Bergen Evans
New Repub 104:507 Ap 14 '41 950w

"Sketchily, glancingly, this little anthology does bring us nearer the centre of the life of a man who was at the same time more social and more lonely than most. The difference between Johnson soliloquising in the letters chosen by Mr. Kingsmill and Johnson soliloquising in the conversations chosen by Boswell is at times striking. . . And women, as might be expected, contribute the most telling strokes to this retouching of a familiar portrait. The passages one marks to re-read are those of Mrs. Thrale, Miss Burney, Miss Reynolds (sister of Sir Joshua), and the lady best known as the Swan of Lichfield." G. W. Stonier

+ New Statesman & Nation 20:20 J1 6 '40 1100w

"This book is to be read as a rich and well-rounded footnote, as has been said; and as a valuable one. In any personal collection of Johnsoniana it must take a happy place."

+ N Y Times p8 Mr 9 '41 600w

"Fascinating piece of literary patchwork."

+ New Yorker 16:67 F 8 '41 50w

"In the opinion of the reviewer, the book, illuminating and charming as it is, does more for Boswell than for Johnson. It is one more tribute to his invincible abilities." Leonard Bacon

Sat R of Lit 23:6 Mr 29 '41 700w

"Mr. Kingsmill has assembled a collection of snippets from sources which are well known to every Johnsonian, and which are unlikely to amuse or instruct the casual reader. . . If it was Mr. Kingsmill's intention to produce a work of real scholarship, he should have gone much further; he should have dug into the vast accumulation of material, both published and unpublished, which might have offered him so rich a reward. If, on the other hand, he intended only to produce a popular study of Johnson, then he should have chosen livelier extracts, articulated by a running commentary. As it is, the purpose of the book is obscure, and its perusal unedifying. The absence of systematic dating and of detailed reference gives it an effect of carelessness, and it is impossible to discern any principle of selection." C. E. Vulliamy

— Spec 165:65 J1 19 '40 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p400 Ag 17 '40 440w

Reviewed by C. H. Bennett

Yale R n s 30:851 summer '41 900w

LUSIN, pseud. See Chou, S.

LUTES, MRS DELLA (THOMPSON). Country schoolma'am. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 328p $2 Little

B or 92 Country life

(W) 41-51866

Reminiscences of the author's sixteenth year, when armed with a three-year certificate, she taught in two rural Michigan schools. It was in the '80s, and pleasures were simpler, and eating and its attendant cooking played an important part in life, and a political campaign was a godsend.

Booklist 38:10 S '41

"This is a book to give Grandma; she will recognize the maps in Menteith's Elementary and the diagrams in Reed and Kellogg. But don't let her keep it out of family reach." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ag 17 '41 480w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 J1 '41

"A happy blending of homely detail and genuine lyricism. It embodies a beautiful and tragic love story. And it brings back in bold outline simpler days when American communities were generally kindly but truly savage toward those who had committed certain sins."

+ Commonweal 34:452 Ag 29 '41 70w

"Generally recommended." Jacqueline Overton

+ Library J 66:668 Ag '41 90w

"'Country Schoolma'am,' like all its writer's books, is rich in authentic details, with a savor of living, an appreciation of life in large things and small. They have besides a flavor and individuality of their own, as inimitable as that of the artists in cookery of whom she tells, whose secrets are not to be copied, even with what seem to be the same ingredients." Anita Moffett

+ N Y Times p8 Ag 24 '41 500w

School & Society 54:340 O 18 '41 20w

"It is a simply told story, the gay patterns of county fairs and community socials overlaying the everyday and sometimes drab rural life. It is an autobiographical achievement on the part of this author of 'The Country Kitchen' which is sure to arouse a deep personal interest in her."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Ag 17 '41 600w

Wis Lib Bul 37:155 O '41

LUTZ, FRANK EUGENE. A lot of insects; entomology in a suburban garden. 304p il $3 Putnam

595.7 Insects

(W) 41-22041

The curator of insects at the American Museum of natural history has made a study of the kinds of insects which were found in his own suburban backyard. He found 1402 different species, by any reckoning a lot of insects." His study records his experiments and the results, and his philosophy toward his insect neighbors, as well as toward life in general. Index.

Booklist 38:108 D 1 '41

"Dr. Lutz's earlier 'Field Book of Insects' is comprehensive and systematic, and will serve better than any other to identify insects, once the reading of the 'Lot' has made such identification seem a major necessity of life. It may well be that these books are not for all readers; quite possibly some slight antecedent biological interest and knowledge may be requisite. They are in part technical, but nevertheless they are more than manuals. They mirror a rare and admirable personality, a man of genuine good will, a humorist, and one of a remarkable generation of American naturalists." H. M. Parsley

+ Books p24 N 23 '41 500w

"It is sure to attract readers to an enriching branch of science and nature lore, which, without such an introduction, might mistakenly appear of unlikely attraction."

+ Commonweal 35:229 D 19 '41 80w

New Yorker 17:99 O 18 '41 30w

LYDENBERG, HARRY MILLER, and KEOGH, ANDREW, eds. William Warner Bishop; a tribute, 1941. 204p il $3 Yale univ. press

020.4 Bishop, William Warner 41-12521

Papers in honor of Dr William Warner Bishop, a pioneer in American librarianship, who retired from active service in June, 1941. Partial contents: William Warner Bishop, by H. M. Lydenberg; Rinaldo Rinaldini (Capo Brigante) and George Washington, by J. C. Bay; Some rare Americana, by I. G. A. Collijn; Monsieur William Warner Bishop et la Fédération Internationale des Associations de Bibliothécaires, by Marcel Godet; The Yale library in 1742, by Andrew Keogh; Some trends in research libraries, by K. D. Metcalf; De Bibliotheca Neerlandica manuscripta de Vreese in Leiden, by T. P. Sevensma; Optima in library service for the South by 1950, by L. R. Wilson.

Booklist 38:1 S '41

"As usual in books of this kind, the volume now reviewed covers a wide variety of subjects. Since most of the essays are arranged alphabetically by author, there is a certain incoherence in the collection; papers that logically belong together are separated by many pages. That is the only shortcoming that this writer was able to detect in a publication that otherwise puts the reader under a great obligation to editors and contributors alike." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 66:834 O 1 '41 1500w

"A lasting honor for a distinguished scholar to receive when he retires from the active pursuit of his profession is the presentation of a book of essays written by his associates in the profession. A testimonial dinner is soon forgotten, but such a book will survive the test of time and be a monument preserving the name and continuing the influence of the one to whom it is addressed. Such a book is William Warner Bishop: a tribute." F. L. D. Goodrich

+ Library Q 12:112 Ja '42 1100w

Pratt p7 D '41

LYNCH, DENIS TILDEN. The wild seventies. 547p il $5 Appleton-Century

973.8 U.S.—Politics and government—1865-. New York (city)—Politics and government. Corruption (in politics) (W) 41-8015

The story of American political and social life in the 1870s with stress laid on New York, city and state. Mr. Lynch, as a newspaper man has been writing on political matters for over thirty years, and is also the author of biographies of Cleveland, Van Buren, and Boss Tweed. Index.

"Mr. Lynch does not promise us a history of the decade of the '70s. But the title suggests such a history, and Mr. Lynch's forays into national politics, reconstruction, and the labor movement imply it. Yet as a picture of the decade of the '70s this account is as fantastic as would be a picture of the 1930's culled exclusively from the tabloids. It is fantastic both quantitatively and qualitatively." H. S. Commager

— + Books p6 My 11 '41 1000w

Christian Science Monitor p20 My 15 '41 550w

"In this distorted history of the 'seventies, the catastrophic downfall of Jay Cooke and Company is disposed of in a sentence or two. And rat-baiting is given an entire chapter. Little appreciation is shown for the forces which shaped the decade. Lynch lists none of his sources."

— Commonweal 34:309 Jl 18 '41 110w

Reviewed by Francis Brown

N Y Times p4 My 11 '41 1150w

"The author, perhaps appropriately, is slightly cynical in his treatment, but he does a keen job. Some new source material, especially on sports, the ins and outs of contemporary politics, and the slums and shanty colonies of Manhattan."

+ New Yorker 17:92 My 10 '41 100w

Social Studies 32:335 N '41 20w

LYNCH, JOHN W. A woman wrapped in silence. 277p $2 Macmillan

811 Mary, Virgin—Poetry 41-22165

The life of the Virgin Mary, told in blank verse.

"A happy and fluent writer of verse, Father Lynch uses his talent for a more touching and human portrait of the Mother of God than is possible in prose. His dramatic narrative is beyond the ordinary in form, while it moves the reader to its real purpose of contemplation." D. M. O'Connell

+ America 66:217 N 29 '41 100w

Reviewed by Katherine Brégy

Cath World 154:367 D '41 260w

"The jacket informs us that 'the poet scrupulously holds to the facts,' but this would scarcely be possible. If there was to be a poem at all, certainly if there was to be a poem of these dimensions, there must be a considerable play of imagination, for the known facts are few. The poet-priest uses his imagination with restraint and fine feeling, chiefly to depict what may have been Mary's thoughts and feelings as the life of her son unfolded."

+ Christian Century 58:1381 N 5 '41 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Eglinton

Churchman 155:18 D 1 '41 170w

"Much of the monotony of 'A Woman Wrapped in Silence' is due to a lack of facility in the use of blank verse. Father Lynch has not mastered this form which, however easy it may appear, is the most difficult to handle for any great length. There are few instances where he is not betrayed into one or another fault. Too often his rhythms, for instance, fall into those of lofty prose; even more often he becomes intoxicated with words and piles up phrases with a sacrifice of clarity." J. G. Brunini

— + Commonweal 35:252 D 26 '41 650w

"The story moves with dignity. The sharp insight into the history of Mary during her trials is gained with the modern instruments of psychology. . . . Father Lynch had to pad his narrative with atmosphere in order to lighten the tense theme, but he overdid it in many places. Too often he falls into rhetoric and mere analytics, which doesn't make for poetry." Maurice Swan

+ — N Y Times p5 D 28 '41 400w

"This new presentation of what are perhaps the best-known events of recorded time—and whose significance to many people cannot be overemphasized—is noble treatment of a noble theme. Mr. Lynch deserves sincerest appreciation, not only for his courage in undertaking such a difficult task, but also for his completion of it without offense to taste or lessening of the force and poignancy of Mary's story."

+ Springfield Republican p7e D 21 '41 500w

LYNCH, KATHLEEN MARTHA. Travellers must be content. 166p $1.50 Putnam

910.4 Voyages and travels. Mediterranean sea 41-5078

A collection of travel essays by an associate professor of Mount Holyoke college, whose sabbatical leave in 1940 was spent in the Azores and the Canary Islands, Sicily, North Africa, Portugal, Greece, Egypt, and Syria. Her description of her experiences discloses less difficulty than she had expected, altho she spent approximately one third of her time with police officers, customs officials, and consular representatives.

Booklist 37:407 My 1 '41

"The book is frankly sketchy, and would certainly never serve as a traveler's guide. But it is on the whole an enjoyable record of personal enjoyments." John Patton

+ — Books p14 My 4 '41 300w

LYNCH, K. M.—Continued

"With tact, ingenuity and some luck one can still be a traveller in foreign parts these days, along routes that are only the frontiers of war, though tomorrow they may be battlefields. Miss Lynch was content with that much when she set out in February 1940 for seven months in the Azores, French North Africa, Egypt, the Near East, Greece, Sicily and Portugal. To those harassed areas Miss Lynch brought what might be called a 'peacetime' state of mind, and she thus achieves a refreshing picture of people and places under threat."

Living Age 360:198 Ap '41 200w

"The book is a pleasant collection of travel notes. And as a 1941 travel book it may well be assumed to be unique."

+ N Y Times p20 F 23 '41 400w

"Traveling conditions being what they were, her adventures were not those of the ordinary tourist; hence their spice and variety. She was perforce thrown into closer touch with humble people. Though she visited 'sights' and places hallowed by antiquity, and reports her disappointments amusingly, she emphasizes her contacts with people living on the spot." D. F.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e F 9 '41 1100w

"The book is too slight to be valuable, and the author's kindly portraits lack the bite which interest demands of pleasantness. But her prim responses to a young Arab's matter-of-fact advances are not without humour, and a professor of English who speaks for himself emerges as an inimitable gem."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p155 Mr 29 '41 160w

Wis Lib Bul 37:75 Ap '41

LYNDON, BARRE. Sundown. 254p $2 Stokes 41-8543

An adventure story of Africa during the present war. The scene is a British post on the border between Kenya and Abyssinia. The action reaches its climax when natives storm the post and the Italians across the river in Italian Somaliland come to the help of the British.

"Mr. Lyndon, who wrote 'The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse,' has lived in that part of the world and has turned his knowledge of garrison life into well knit drama. His men are in the Kipling tradition and he has created a heroine that will recall Maugham in the exotic mood. Her name is Zia and she is something to write home about." Lisle Bell

+ Books p12 Je 8 '41 280w

"In building up to his climax Mr. Lyndon, who is the author of 'The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse' and other stage successes, shows the competence in handling suspense, surprise and rapid-fire dialogue one might expect from so clever a playwright. The story moves with mounting tension to its final scene, a very satisfactory dénouement. Taking it all in all 'Sundown' is as red-blooded and exciting an adventure story as this reviewer has read in several months." Drake De Kay

+ N Y Times p14 Je 8 '41 600w

New Yorker 17:78 Je 14 '41 100w

LYON, MARGUERITE (MRS ROBERT LYON). Take to the hills; a chronicle of the Ozarks; with ill. by Ronald Bean. 305p $2.50 Bobbs 917.78 Ozark mountains. Missouri—Social life and customs. Farm life (W) 41-7624

The author, a Chicago writer of advertising copy, and her husband bought an Ozark farm several years ago, partly as a refuge, partly as the answer to the usual city-folk desire for farm life. This volume of reminiscences contains the story of a fire, an account of the first bottle-fed lamb, tales of neighborhood visits and a creek-side washing bee, and many more.

Booklist 37:545 Jl 15 '41

"The Ozarks are not the White Mountains or the Green, by a long shot, but 'Marge's' delighted account of them makes a refreshing change."

+ Books p10 My 25 '41 240w

"It is really the scene and people and customs of the Ozarks which, in Mr. and Mrs. Lyon's neighborly receptivity, give the book its vigor and charm. We read about the excitement and uncertainties of the Saturday sale, the social delights of games and dances, the home remedies and the 'vittles' of the mountain people and also, in individual pen-pictures, their lives and characters. And we get a vital sense, too, of the country itself, from its flaming Autumn beauty to the exigencies of its soil. This 'Ozark chronicle,' with its unpretentious rural drawings generously scattered through the text, is a book of real allurements and interest."

+ N Y Times p8 My 11 '41 500w

"Marguerite Lyon, a Chicago advertising writer, and her husband bought a farm in the Ozarks in the hope of finding security in it for their future. Now she is known rurally as 'Marge of Sunset Mountain Farm' and he is the 'Jedge.' Her book is a freshly written account of their adventures and of the lives of the Arkansas folk who become their neighbors."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:21 Je 7 '41 60w

LYONS, EUGENE. The red decade; the Stalinist penetration of America. 423p $3 Bobbs 335 Communism—U.S. (W) 41-51867

A study of the activities of communists and fellow-travelers in the United States during the decade from 1930 to 1940. By the author of Assignment in Utopia (Book Review Digest, 1937). Index.

"Mr. Lyons obviously neither gives nor expects quarter. No punches are pulled, and everyone who ever signed a Red manifesto is likely to find his name in print in this book, which is exhaustive as well as vehement. Sometimes humor might have served the author's purpose better than the invective which he usually prefers. But the Red decade called for a historian; and Mr. Lyons has done his job extremely well." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Atlantic S '41 350w

Booklist 38:2 S '41

"Unfortunately, this book is too crammed with detail to make easy reading. But as a story of anti-American activities by foreign agents, and of asinine intellectual antics by Americans, it has its place in the history of the United States of the last two decades. I commend it to all radicals, many New Dealers and a few Republicans." Nicholas Roosevelt

+ Books p4 S 14 '41 1100w

"Eugene Lyons knows his subject thoroughly, and he can handle it in a lively, satiric style that is very readable. If the book has faults they are in the occasional bitterness and abusive exaggeration that creep in, and in the lack of documentation. Nevertheless the work is not a series of wild charges; names are named in abundance and quotations quoted. And Mr. Lyons is much too sensible and well-informed to have written another 'Red Network.' His case is clearly established, but the sources of proof might well have been included." J. C. Cort

+ Commonweal 34:549 S 26 '41 800w

"While Mr. Lyons, as he himself admits, is not exactly the ideal historian for this curious undercurrent in American life, he is certainly a competent one. Ever since he lost his own faith in Russia and recorded his disillusionment in 'Assignment in Utopia,' he has criticized with relentless tenacity the more stubborn credulities of his fellow-journalists and other molders of opinion and recorded their subsequent tardy apostasy with mounting scorn. While his mood betrays him into occasional injustices, particularly in his assessment of motives, it cannot be denied that his mastery of the subject gives him a special right to be the historian of the 'red decade.' . . . A final form of the author's unfairness is his failure to do justice to the fact that many of us who were active in organizations standing for 'collective security' had no illusions about Russia or about the motives of the comrades who cooperated with us." Reinhold Niebuhr

— + Nation 153:256 S 20 '41 1400w

Reviewed by Bruce Bliven

New Repub 105:432 O 6 '41 2600w

"The facts are fabulous, and Lyons relates them with a gusto that rises at times almost to hilarity. He has a gift of slashing satire, and no fear of calling foolish acts and famous people by their exact names. But besides that, and somewhat surprisingly combined with it, he possesses sympathetic understanding." Max Eastman

+ N Y Times p5 S 7 '41 1500w

"Oversimplified in spots, but hardheaded and vigorously ironic."

+ — New Yorker 17:78 S 6 '41 50w

"Eugene Lyons has given us a record, at once brilliant, thorough, and valuable, of one of the strangest lapses into utopianism that ever afflicted a large part of the American intelligentsia." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 S 20 '41 1000w

"Much of Lyons' book is open to challenge, yet he seems to have written in such a manner that whatever happens he can say: 'What did I tell you?' It is quite possible that he will be much quoted and misquoted by those who see grave danger in any deviation from the beaten path of tradition, that his words will be ammunition for reactionists and something of a warning for naive citizens generally."

L. M. Brooks

Social Forces 20:290 D '41 360w

Spring'd Republican p7e Ag 31 '41 1300w

Time 38:83 S 15 '41 400w

Wis Lib Bul 37:173 N '41

LYTLE, ANDREW NELSON. At the Moon's Inn. 400p $2.75 Bobbs

Soto, Hernando de—Fiction 41-23264

Historical novel based on the life and travels of the Spanish explorer, De Soto.

"The author has obviously saturated himself in the period, and he knows how to write a vivid, sense-steeped prose. One can only regret that he did not make a few basic concessions to the reader in the way of chronological sequence or a jointed narrative or one in which cause and effect were given their due." Milton Rugoff

+ — Books p10 N 30 '41 700w

"The tale is very interesting, full of color and excitement, with many dramatic and picturesque scenes. At times the writing is a little confused, but such notable events as the battle of Mauvilla, the escape of the Indians into the lake, the conflict between de Soto and the priest, Don Francisco, or Tovar's visit to the accursed town of Talimeco, are vivid and arresting." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p7 N 23 '41 750w

"Mr. Lytle has an extraordinary feeling for the sound and shape of a period. He has recreated the conquistadors, their courage, ambition, religious exaltation, and cold-blooded materialism, and at the same time has told a credible and exciting tale of human endeavor and defeat."

+ New Yorker 17:110 N 22 '41 50w

M

MABRY, WILLIAM ALEXANDER. The Negro in North Carolina politics since reconstruction. 87p pa $1 Duke univ. [6s Cambridge] 324.15 Negroes—Politics and suffrage. North Carolina—Politics and government 40-13197

"The narrative centers around increased Negro voting during the Populist-Republican fusion campaigns of the 1890's when Negroes, courted by all parties, perhaps held the balance of power. In 1893, a campaign for sound government and white supremacy defeated the Fusionists; and unfortunate race riots followed in Wilmington. Soon the victorious Democrats, contrary to their campaign pledges, disfranchised most Negroes. Here the main narrative ends. It is a story enriched by the use of several private papers of North Carolina leaders." (Am Pol Sci R) Bibliography.

"Dr. Mabry's volume is a clear and usable account of the details for North Carolina of a story whose broad outlines are familiar to students of the post-Reconstruction South. . . . But Dr. Mabry, in passing up an opportunity to fill in the details of the economic and social basis of North Carolina politics in his chosen period, has thereby given us only a 'political history' in the restricted and old-fashioned sense. As far as it goes, though, it neatly closes up a gap in our shelf of monographs on Southern state politics after the Civil War."

+ — Am Hist R 46:687 Ap '41 210w

"A factual, pedestrian account. . . . Its chief value lies in its sympathetic and fair treatment of a segment from a controversial national problem. As a political study, it lacks adequate linkage with national affairs. . . . Within his limits, Professor Mabry did a creditable piece of work." Garland Downum

+ — Am Pol Sci R 35:170 F '41 220w

Spring'd Republican p7e Ag 4 '40 300w

MCALLISTER, ETHEL M. Amos Eaton, scientist and educator, 1776-1842. 587p il $5 Univ. of Pa. press

B or 92 Eaton, Amos 41-11576

Life story of an early American scientist and educator, who was born in 1776 and died in 1842. He was a graduate of Williams college, in the class of 1799. His early intentions of becoming a wealthy man led him into difficulties, and he was imprisoned for forgery. His later life was exemplary; he made many contributions to scientific knowledge in the fields of botany, chemistry, mineralogy, geology, and zoology and was largely responsible for the founding of Rensselaer Polytechnic institute. Bibliography. Index.

New Eng Q 14:602 S '41 180w

School & Society 53:648 My 17 '41 20w

"This is an unusually important volume for all who are interested in the history of American science and education, whether or not they care much about Amos Eaton and his personal career. It is difficult to recall any other single book which tells so much, or so well, about the place of the physical sciences in early 19th century America, or which makes a more permanently valuable contribution to our knowledge of the scientific side of the country's history then." D. D

+ Spring'd Republican p10 Je 18 '41 700w

MACARDLE, DONALD. Thursday's child. 364p $2.50 Stokes

41-18898

Phoebe Wilson, pretty twenty-year-old daughter of a middle-class English family, hated her work in a beauty shop and dreamed of the movies. When she got her chance to try out she took her younger sister along as chaperon and it was the thirteen-year old, "odd" child who was pounced upon by the movie people. Fennis' success as a child actress affected the lives of all her family and after a short time she wisely chose to discontinue her career.

MACARDLE, DONALD—Continued

Booklist 38:52 O 15 '41

"Thursday's Child" is a fresh and thoroughly likable story, outstanding as a first novel. You'll enjoy the Wilsons, especially Frank and Fennis." Mary Ross

+ Books p8 S 14 '41 480w

"Thursday's Child" is a book that I can warmly recommend." J. D. Beresford

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 10 '41 110w

"Mr. Macardle has drawn lifelike portraits of the Wilson family, especially of his central character, the photogenic Fennis, with her odd, appealing personality. The psychological conflicts between the humorless, high-principled father and his three children, each fighting for a career of which he disapproves, are well handled, and there are pity and understanding in the revelation of Phoebe's jealousy and envy of her young sister." Drake de Kay

+ N Y Times p25 S 21 '41 550w

"The story is lightly and sensibly told."

+ New Yorker 17:74 S 13 '41 40w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 14 '41 360w

"The simple plot might have been dull, but it is not. Although Mr. Macardle's effects are piano, they are constant and they are quick, and his characters appear authentic instead of fairy-tale—even if Fennis is a little mature in her ideas for her years. There is romance in the background, with appropriately distant suggestions of it for Fennis. This modern Cinderella is likeable."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p505 O 11 '41 300w

Wis Lib Bul 37:178 N '41

MACARTHUR, ARTHUR. After the afternoon. 290p $2.50 Appleton-Century

The lively adventures of Lykos, a personable faun, living in Crete in the days when the gods of Olympus roamed the earth at will. After a brief dalliance with Aphrodite, Lykos became a human being, and lived for a time with his Cretan wife. His next appearance was at the bizarre court of an early Egyptian king. Thru the centuries, Lykos has other incarnations, his latest in America.

"Arthur MacArthur displays an inventive capacity, a skill in writing credibly of the absurd and the impossible, that is reminiscent of Thorne Smith. But actually he is less interested in humor than in invention, while his taste for the macabre and the brutal leads him to scenes that read like effective illustrations of Krafft-Ebing. Within his own mythos his characters are strong, rounded and real, once he leaves Greece for Egypt and, fortunately for his story, this happens very early. . . . Mr. MacArthur set himself a difficult task in this novel and he has carried it through amazingly well. The novel is uneven and the direction that his talent will take is not yet established, but the fact of talent is evident." Lorine Pruette

+ Books p8 D 21 '41 600w

"Mr. MacArthur's first novel is provocative enough to call for a trilogy, and as our friend Lykos, since that fatal hour on Olympus, can become who and what he will with each death I suggest that an evening or two could be profitably spent in America at the turn of the last century, and for this present day I give him his choice of London or Berlin. It's a certain bet that someone will call this unusual book a 'Modern Fairy Tale,' so I will forbear." Francoise du Moulin

+ N Y Times p22 N 9 '41 340w

MACARTNEY, CLARENCE EDWARD NOBLE. The greatest men of the Bible. 222p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

220.92 Bible. Whole—Biography. Sermons 41-17712

Fifteen sermons by the pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Pittsburgh. They are all based upon men of the Bible, ranging in time from Moses to St John.

"These are thoroughly readable pieces, full of practical and timely truths."

+ Christian Century 58:1084 S 3 '41 30w

"Not all of the sermons are of equal length or merit. The hortatory element is strong in some and conspicuously lacking in others. Some of the subjects are treated from one angle, others from another, but the possibilities of none are exhausted." A. L. B.-C.

Churchman 155:34 O 15 '41 60w

MACARTNEY, CLARENCE EDWARD NOBLE. Men who missed it. 122p il $1.50 Dorrance

923.273 Statesmen, American. U.S.—Biography 40-33608

"Brief biographical studies of men who came near the presidency but never quite made it, from Burr to Bryan." (Christian Century) Contents: Aaron Burr; Henry Clay, John C. Calhoun; Daniel Webster; William H. Seward; Salmon P. Chase; Stephen A. Douglas; General George B. McClellan; Horace Greeley; Samuel J. Tilden; James G. Blaine; Robert M. La Follette; William Jennings Bryan; Charles Evans Hughes.

Christian Century 57:1315 O 23 '40 20w

"In his grouping of these 14 men Dr Macartney has compiled an informative and interesting, though not necessarily authoritative, work of popular biography."

Springf'd Republican p6 F 24 '41 190w

MCAVOY, THOMAS TIMOTHY. The Catholic church in Indiana, 1789-1834. 226p $2.25 Columbia Univ. press

282.73 Roman Catholic church in the U.S. 41-6425

"The author's researches, which have utilized many unpublished records not previously studied by historians of this period, cover the transition from the prevalence of the French fur trader to that of the Anglo-Saxon settler and farmer in the old Northwest Territory. While the main emphasis is upon the Catholic missionary work that centered in Vincennes and Fort Wayne, the narrative necessarily overruns the title's geographical boundary on all sides." (Christian Century) Bibliography. Index.

"The study is well done, sound in research, well organized, and reasonably detached despite some apologetic inclinations. The story of Gibault is not clarified, nor is there any development of the question, hinted at, as to whether the characteristics of the Catholic Church in the Middle West are due to Gallic background or frontier democracy." R. J. Purcell

+ Am Hist R 46:998 J1 '41 210w

"The author approximates complete objectivity, and his work is that of the conscientious and competent historian, not that of the apologist or propagandist."

+ Christian Century 57:1617 D 25 '40 80w

"Father McAvoy's patient, sympathetic survey of the founding and continuance of the Catholic Church in Indiana brings to light the elusive contribution of the French pioneers and settlers. But the interest of the book is not confined to this historical study of a limited American region. It will hold the attention of anyone who is anxiously trying to understand the reaction of the French to the present situation. What happened in Indiana, is, I believe, characteristic of the French throughout history." C. H. Bishop

+ Commonweal 34:19 Ap 25 '41 420w

Reviewed by W. E. Davies

Social Studies 32:136 Mr '41 390w

MCBRIDE, MARY MARGARET. America for me. 102p $1 Macmillan

917.3 U.S.—Social life and customs 41-25921

An American from Missouri answers several questions in a way which shows what is right, instead of wrong, with America, according to her own ideas. The questions are: What do you think of America? What do you think of our skyline? What do you think of American women? Did you have a good crossing? What do you expect to do in America? How do you like our American food? Whom do you know in this country?

"'America for Me' is crammed with inspiration, homily and homely incident."

Books p14 D 21 '41 100w

"Vivid and concrete pictures of experiences which fortify the conviction that an American can properly and proudly say, 'America for me!'"

+ Christian Century 58:1611 D 24 '41 70w

"It's not a tiresome booster book, but the expression of a friendly, live-and-let-live person."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 4 '42 60w

MACCAMPBELL, DONALD. Reading for enjoyment. 177p $2.50 Harper

028 Books and reading. Bibliography—Best books 41-7826

Discussion of the joys of reading, the purpose of which "is to open people's eyes to the vast potentialities of good reading. . . Because it is unthinkable to me that novels and plays and works of belles-lettres should be approached with a view to acquiring culture, position or drawing-room acclaim, I have directed my message to those who may care to read for the sake of reading, and for the epicurean enjoyment which such an approach can afford." (Pref) Contents: What reading can do for you; How to read; On the use of a library; What to read; On keeping a file; How to retain what you read; Five hundred classics; One hundred reference books; Twenty-five periodicals.

+ Books p8 Je 1 '41 110w

"Reading for enjoyment is a source of enjoyment and enlightenment. . . In point of style the book is excellent; the author never seeks to make a point through the use of devices that are flashy or cheap. The general tone is one of informal dignity. Conscious of the worthiness of his subject and convictions, Mr. MacCampbell has written with forceful but restrained emphasis. The form of the book is extremely pleasing; in this respect the publishers deserve high praise." R. A. L. Mortvedt

+ Library Q 12:132 Ja '42 1100w

"It is both rudimentary and laborious, but it contains some good sense. The author advises readers to think for themselves, stresses the necessary 'collaboration between author and reader,' and suggests the reading of a number of good books. If his pupils disagree with some of his descriptive adjectives, it is, thus, just so much the better, since this means that they have been roused to thought. He is careful not to suggest that his own book—or any others—be read as a short-cut to culture."

+ — N Y Times p18 Je 22 '41 300w

Wis Lib Bul 37:133 Jl '41

MCCANN, LEE. Nostradamus, the man who saw through time. 421p il $2.75 Creative age press, inc, 11 E. 44th st, N.Y.

B or 92 Notredame, Michel de (W) 41-13614

A biography of the sixteenth century French doctor and scholar who was believed in his own day to be able to prophesy the future. Many of his prophecies which are still extant, may be interpreted as foretelling accurately events not only of the sixteenth century but of later times up to the present. The final third of this book contains translations of Nostradamus' verses and the author's interpretations of their meanings.

"It is a simple story, but the setting is complex, and Miss McCann does not add to the difficulties of the reader by digging into the mountain of probabilities regarding her subject's private life and thoughts. She uses a mixture of biography and fiction which is sometimes bothersome, but it gets its work done well. . . The most serious weakness of the book is its failure to discuss the subject of prophecy, and the systems which Nostradamus might have employed to aid his natural psychic faculties." Thomas Sugrue

+ — Books p7 Ag 31 '41 1100w

"Now if ever would seem to be the time to publish an informing, alive and interesting biography of that curious person; but the average reader will encounter considerable difficulty in making his way through the pages of the volume before us—most of what he will be looking for is here, but it is hidden in a multiplicity of words."

+ Cath World 154:253 N '41 150w

MCCLINTOCK, MARSHALL. Millions of books; the story of your library. 95p il $1.75 Vanguard

020 Libraries—Juvenile literature (W) 41-9193

Brief study of the public library in the United States. It begins with the history of books and libraries, and includes types of service in rural areas, the village library, the city library, and the Library of Congress. The specific localities chosen for the types of libraries range from a Texas farm, to a motor boat library in British Columbia, a village library in Vermont, and the New York public library. For older boys and girls.

Booklist 38:17 S '41

"The style is informal and interesting, numerous photographic illustrations add to the value of the book. The chief objection is the lack of an index, which makes it difficult to find some valuable material, such as the brief but excellent account of the work of John Newbery and the Newbery and Caldecott awards, or the statement of the part played by Andrew Carnegie in the development of the public library. Will be used in school and public libraries as a supplementary aid in teaching the use of the library." Marian Herr

+ — Library J 66:522 Je 1 '41 180w

"A well-written, interesting and dignified text, with many photographs . . . [which] makes excellent suggestions to library users for getting the most out of these libraries. . . Librarians and teachers will gladly welcome this volume, the first of its kind, while for those who are interested in library work as a possible career it provides the best and most useful type of vocational reading." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p8 Je 29 '41 300w

MCCLINTOCK, MARSHALL. Story of New England; lithographs by C. H. De Witt. 40p $1 Harper

917.4 New England—Juvenile literature 41-25914

Economic history of New England, told in text and colored lithographs. Suitable for ages eight to twelve.

MCCLINTOCK, MARSHALL—Continued

"Any one from seven on may get, with words and all these bright, strong pictures, an honest useful idea of what New England stands for in these United States." M. L. Becker

Books p6 Ja 4 '42 130w

New Yorker 17:146 D 6 '41 30w

MCCLINTOCK, MARSHALL. The story of the Mississippi; pictures by C. H. DeWitt. 40p map $1 Harper

977 Mississippi river—Juvenile literature (W) 41-4904

History and geography of the Mississippi river, told in a combination of descriptive text and large colored plates. Children up to ten.

Booklist 37:392 Ap 15 '41

"I call this a successful effort to get geography and history, combined, into the consciousness of a small child, say from five years old, all through the picture book stage. It depends on brilliantly colored plates showing what the river has meant in our history; these are of quite magnificent size and spirit." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 Mr 9 '41 160w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 17:212 My '41 80w

"The idea of this picture book is splendid. . . The text is good. The illustrations by C. H. De Witt are somewhat disappointing: they have a great deal of spirit, but at times they seem sensational. It is regrettable that this book does not have more nearly the quality of the documentary film 'The River.' However, it is of interest, and we could well use other books of a similar subject and style." Josephine Smith

+ Library J 66:268 Mr 15 '41 130w

"Striking picture book. It is no small feat to have condensed exactly four centuries of history in twenty-one pages of text, but in these brief chapters the great force that the Mississippi has been and is in America is made plain for children of the middle years." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Je 8 '41 280w

"This is the best picture book of the season, and it is a book of facts."

+ New Yorker 17:87 My 24 '41 80w

MCCLOSKEY, ROBERT. Make way for ducklings [il. by the author]. [67p] $2 Viking

(W) 41-51868

Picture story book about a family of ducklings raised on the banks of the Charles river in Boston. When they were old enough to travel their mother led them proudly thru the streets of Boston, where the policemen held up traffic for them to pass, and established the family on an island in the Public Gardens, from which they emerged each day to follow the swan boats.

Booklist 38:17 S '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p6 Ag 31 '41 210w

"Making way for Mrs. Mallard and her family on their journey from the Charles River island to the Public Garden caused almost as much excitement in Boston as the famous tea party. The artist-author has done a jolly book."

+ Churchman 155:4 D 15 '41 40w

Reviewed by H. L. Binsse

Commonweal 35:111 N 21 '41 20w

"Robert McCloskey's unusual and stunning pictures will long be a delight for their fun as well as their spirit of place." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:357 S '41 70w

"Mr. McCloskey takes the city of Boston for his background and in a series of large lithograph drawings reveals his instinct for the beauty of wild life and that of the city and a sure knowledge of ducks and their ways. . .

There are some very beautiful drawings in this book which are prophetic of future work in the picture book field. I can think of no more welcome gift to send overseas or to children who are guests of our country as interpreting its spirit of real hospitality." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk M 17:381 S '41 190w

"McCloskey's drawings have a great deal of variety and interest, achieved through a change of scale and pace. He has wisely chosen a warm color to overcome the usually unhealthy pallor of offset. The cleverness of his manipulation of the crayon has some tendency to cheapen the whole very capable effect. The successful way in which McCloskey has changed the pace of his pages brings up one of the most important factors involved in a picture book, and that is variety. The audience should not get the feeling that it has seen this one before. It is particularly important that there be constant changes in the silhouette." Warren Chappell

+ Horn Bk M 17:450 N '41 100w

"Attractive illustrations. Similar in make-up to Lentil. For ages four to eight. Recommended." Gertrude Andrus

+ Library J 66:846 O 1 '41 130w

Reviewed by Jessie Stanton & E. W. Steele
New Repub 105:836 D 15 '41 30w

"Mr. McCloskey has told the story in very few words, with a poker-faced gravity which underscores the delightful comedy of his pictures—fine large pictures, strongly drawn, which, for all their economy of line, have a wealth of detail so that one turns the pages again and again to be sure not to miss a single bit of the fun." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 O 19 '41 260w

"The perfect picture book for a Boston child but universal enough to appeal to anyone of picture-book age."

+ New Yorker 17:138 D 6 '41 60w

Wis Lib Bul 37:203 D '41

MCCLOY, HELEN. The deadly truth. 278p $2
Morrow

41-8172

Detective story.

"Here's another Grade A, positively don't miss item by the author of 'Dance of Death.' . . At least part of Miss McCloy's recipe seems to consist in combining sensational ingredients with all-around erudition in about equal parts and stirring with fundamental brainwork. If that's too fancy, the book is a whiz." Will Cuppy

+ Books p9 Je 15 '41 190w

"Although one point in the story promises rather more than it can perform, the novel as a whole is handled with a wit and suavity which are nothing short of fascinating. Helen McCloy has now written three excellent and highly civilized murder mysteries; this is the best." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p17 Je 15 '41 320w

New Yorker 17:79 Je 14 '41 50w

"Sterling."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:21 Je 21 '41 40w

MCCLURE, WALLACE MITCHELL. International executive agreements; democratic procedure under the Constitution of the United States. 449p $4.75 Columbia univ. press

341.273 U.S.—Foreign relations, Presidents
—U.S.—Powers and duties 41-10428

"Mr McClore's work embodies, along with the author's opinions, a scholarly and exhaustive historical investigation into one of the outstanding problems of today—that of the power of the chief executive in foreign affairs. . . The chief argument advanced in this book is that our present method of making treaties—requiring, in accordance with the constitution, a two-thirds assenting vote in the Senate—is out-of-date and inadequate. . . Since this situation exists, the author suggests that the best and most convenient way to remedy the defect is to obtain a more widespread recognition of the executive agreement, confirmed by Congress, as a rapid and democratic alternative to slower-moving congressional action." (Springf'd Republican) Bibliography. Index.

"The book is timely and well written; and the footnotes reveal extensive research." W. H. Simpson

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:992 O '41 550w

"The author has done his job carefully, competently and completely. In the reviewer's opinion he has settled this important question of constitutional law and international practice as authoritatively as any legal question can be settled. Few more useful tasks could be imagined at this time when efficient and democratic American leadership is badly needed in a sorely tried world. The Constitution has placed the tools for exercising that leadership in the hands of the President and the majority of the houses of Congress." Quincy Wright

+ Christian Century 58:1112 S 10 '41 1200w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:199 O '41 30w

Social Studies 32:336 N '41 30w

"The book is documented copiously from the sources, down to the most elusive points. It is not light reading, yet it is beyond doubt one of the really profound studies in the field of constitutional government." D. D.

+ Springf'd Republican p7e JI 20 '41 600w

MCCORD, DAVID THOMPSON WATSON.

And what's more. 82p, $1.50 Coward-McCann

811

41-6006

Light verse, much of it reprinted from the New Yorker, the Conning Tower, the Yale Review, and the Boston Evening Transcript. It is a collection of droll rhymes on various subjects, from convalescence to "balmy old palmy Miami."

"Of course Mr. McCord's rhymes perform the impossible with their wonted skill. The themes are many. It is all excellent light verse, and gives one the pleasant feeling of finding a familiar landscape gone slightly mad. The book is not put aside with a guffaw, but returned to with anticipatory smiles." Robert Hillier

+ Atlantic My '41 180w

Reviewed by Baron Ireland

Books p2 Ap 20 '41 150w

"Lively, deftly made verses. . . They confirm Mr. McCord's good-humored ingenuity, which is something we already knew from reading 'Bay Window Ballads.'" John Holmes

+ Boston Transcript p9 Mr 31 '41 500w

New Yorker 17:72 Mr 29 '41 20w

Time 37:105 Ap 21 '41 250w

MCCULLERS, MRS CARSON (SMITH). Reflections in a golden eye. 183p $2 Houghton (W) 41-2706

The scene is a Southern army camp in peacetime. The characters are a group of society misfits, whose strange psychological turmoils lead them a wretched existence. The culmination is a murder.

"When Miss McCullers shows you the Major going to bed, tells of the runaway through the forest, touches ever so skillfully the capricious and unexpected Filipino, when she gives you the very press and heat of the buffet supper, you know that you have seen an artist at work—but an artist who has still a good deal to learn about reality. For if this is a fair sample of army life, and if the country is soon to pour itself into the army, then God save the Union!" Edward Weeks

— + Atlantic Ap '41 440w

"Reflections In a Golden Eye' is a literary adventure into an emotional underworld and, as such, interesting. But one still hopes that Carson McCullers will use her very real powers to write a book that does not depend completely upon the grotesque and the abnormal for its effect." Rose Feld

Books p8 F 16 '41 800w

"The story is too preoccupied with the morbid and bizarre to be the important work everyone was expecting from [Mrs] McCullers. It will be talked about, in sibilant whispers. Mental abnormalities interest the young author as 'The Heart is a Lonely Hunter' revealed. But she did not delve as deep into psychological morasses in her first book as she does in this study of a murder in an army post. . . [Mrs] McCullers is writing of a genuinely horrible situation whose full implications are not immediately apparent. She handles the complexities of the plot and characterizations with a baffling subtlety. She is so subtle, in fact, that her story is precious." Margaret Clark

Boston Transcript p1 F 15 '41 420w

Nation 152:247 Mr 1 '41 60w

Reviewed by Otis Ferguson

New Repub 104:317 Mr 3 '41 480w

"Mature people of very diverse literary tastes and sympathies have found 'The Heart Is a Lonely Hunter' unforgettable. The present much shorter and slither novel exhibits to some degree the same quality. But it is vastly inferior. Quite unlike the other, it suggests the youthful prodigy; and one suspects it was written first and unwisely pressed into service by the publishers to follow up the success of the first novel. Either that or it has been over-hastily written. . . No one could say, however, that [Mrs] McCullers has not succeeded in making her genuine talent felt, a talent which is less of subtlety than of infant-terrible insight expressed with quite grown-up precision, as yet unmelodious and unhalloved." F. T. Marsh

— + N Y Times p6 Mr 2 '41 650w

"Mrs. McCullers was herself in her first novel. In her second effort she seems to be borrowing from her reading of others. This mimicry gives an effect of falseness which is further strengthened by her too obvious desire to create people and situations that are strange and startling. She has undeniable talent. It would grow more harmoniously if she could, right at this point in her development, give herself a humorous once-over. If she did she might find something to laugh at in the grotesque and forced hallucinations of which 'Reflections in a Golden Eye' is composed." Clifton Fadiman

— + New Yorker 17:78 F 15 '41 500w

"The new book by Carson McCullers is a sad disappointment, not only after her remarkable first novel, 'The Heart is a Lonely Hunter,' but after its own opening pages. It is instantly plain that the book is by some one who can write, with a haunting power and a suggestiveness that can be felt at once; but it all too soon becomes clear that the story is a vipers'-knot of neurasthenic relationships among characters whom the author seems hardly to comprehend, and of whose perversions she can create nothing." Basil Davenport

— Sat R of Lit 23:12 F 22 '41 500w

"The situations in which the characters are placed are too weird for belief, and the actions of some of the characters, notably Capt Penderton and Alison, are those of insanity. The novel is written in the simplest form of narration, with terse sentences containing a wealth of detail in characterization. This language of realism is in sharp contrast to the fantastic situations which it creates."

Springf'd Republican p7e My 4 '41 320w

"In almost any hands, such material [as this book is made of] would yield a rank fruitcake of mere arty melodrama. But Carson

MCCULLERS, MRS CARSON—Continued

McCullers tells her tale with simplicity, insight, and a rare gift of phrase. She makes its tortures seem at least as valid as the dull suburban tragedies from Farrell's or Dreiser's Mid-west, commonly called lifelike. Reflections in a Golden Eye is the Southern school at its most Gothic, but also at its best. It is as though William Faulkner saw to the bottom of matters which merely excite him, shed his stylistic faults, and wrote it all out with Tolstoyan lucidity."

Time 37:96 F 17 '41 650w

"Whatever the explanation may be, Reflections in a Golden Eye is something for the author's admirers to forget as quickly as possible. This isn't easy for strong traces of the talent are still here, and make the novel's inversions and mutilations and nastinesses stick in one's mind like burrs." Robert Littell

—Yale R n s 30:xii spring '41 160w

MCCULLY, BRUCE TIEBOUT. English education and the origins of Indian nationalism. 418p $4.50 Columbia univ. press

370.954 Education—India. India—Nationality 41-3068

An attempt to answer the questions: "Was the doctrinal content of Indian nationalism imported into India from Europe . . . or does it represent an indigenous product of the Indian soil and culture? . . . What were the origins of Indian nationalism and what part did English education play in causing nationalism first to take root?" Bibliography. Index.

"With commendable catholicity of interest, Dr. Bruce T. McCully, an American, writes on the origins of nationalism in India. He studied the subject in New York and subsequently completed his researches in London. But the one place he did not visit was India, and the one thing he did not do was to discuss his theme with Indian scholars. By its very nature nationalism is not a subject that can be satisfactorily studied exclusively from records. It is a pity to rely solely on herbarium specimens when the living landscape is available. A study-visit to India would have enabled Dr. McCully to obtain a more thorough and more comprehensive understanding of his subject and perhaps would have modified his evaluations." P. Kodanda Rao

Am Hist R 47:123 O '41 900w

"The book, in spite of its apparent superficiality and occasional understatements and exaggerations, is literature and readable." Sudhindra Bose

+—Am Pol Sci R 35:387 Ap '41 230w

Reviewed by M. N. Chatterjee

Am Soc R 6:757 O '41 190w

"This scholarly and well-informed book will be found useful by every student of India and of education in backward countries." Hans Kohn

+ Ann Am Acad 215:199 My '41 400w

"Recommended reading to all students of Far Eastern affairs."

+ Christian Century 58:226 F 12 '41 120w

Springf'd Republican p7e N 24 '40 80w

MCCUSKEY, DOROTHY. Bronson Alcott, teacher. 217p il $2.50; text ed $1.90 Macmillan
B or 92 Alcott, Amos Bronson 40-35143
For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

"This is a competent, detailed story of an important phase of Bronson Alcott's life." S. T. Williams

+ Am Hist R 46:721 Ap '41 130w

"Miss McCuskey's exposition of Alcott's method is clear and concise. Her own personal estimation of him lacks judiciousness and balance." V. F. H.

+—Cath World 153:370 Je '41 600w

"Miss McCuskey has made a special study of Alcott's educational theories and practices. She has produced a thorough but uninspired and unilluminating treatise, in which the bare bones of a doctoral thesis stick starkly through an inept attempt at popularization. Alcott the teacher is more clearly and vividly depicted in two chapters of Shepard's book than in the eight of this study, whose appeal is confined to specialists in the history of education." Mason Wade

Commonweal 33:625 Ap 11 '41 170w

"Miss McCuskey's useful though undistinguished study of Alcott as an educator falls somewhere between The Father of Little Women and Peddler's Progress; her seriousness of purpose saves her from the inanity of the one, her limitation of aim from the diffuseness of the other; but she has taken Alcott so much on his own terms that she adds little to what we already know of him and brings us very little nearer to discovering his elusive 'significance' in American intellectual history." Robert Peel

+—New Eng Q 14:165 Mr '41 900w

"Miss McCuskey's book is not a biography in the true sense of the word; it is rather a clearly defined account and appraisal of Alcott's career as a teacher. Everything is subordinated to this, as, indeed, everything in Alcott's life was subordinated to it. The book is a careful and soundly worked out investigation of Bronson Alcott's theories of developing the growing mind. Based as it is on the voluminous Journals of Alcott (it will be recalled that Professor Odell Shepard edited these some time ago), it has authority and background." Herbert Gorman

+ N Y Times p23 F 16 '41 1400w

MCDIARMID, HUGH, pseud. See Grieve, C. M.

MCDONALD, MRS LUCILE (SAUNDERS). Sheker's lucky piece; pictures by Weda Yap. 79p $1.75 Oxford

Children in Turkey

Story of child life in present day Turkey, and of the clever little Sheker who brought prosperity to her widowed mother when she became interested in the foreigners who were searching for evidences of Turkey's past history.

Booklist 38:162 Ja 1 '42

"The colored pictures are richly lovely. The author lived in Turkey, the artist has used its wealth of color and exuberance of costume in groups as glowing as the Arabian Nights." M. L. Becker

+ Books p16 N 2 '41 240w

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p9 N 3 '41 40w

"The spirited and natural little girl who is greatly perplexed by the Americans who wanted to buy the ancient doorstep of her mother's house, is well and appealingly drawn and the delightful pictures give reality to the story." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 18:37 Ja '42 80w

"This is a charming little book. The author lived in Turkey for many years and gives us an authentic picture of life in this little-known part of the Orient. . . The lovely colorful pictures by Weda Yap are most decorative and do much toward making this a beautiful book." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 66:846 O 1 '41 140w

"Miss McDonald writes in easy, unforced fashion, with a touch of humor and a genuine sympathy with the people she describes. The pictures in soft, clear colors show an acquaintance with the country." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 D 14 '41 200w

MACDONALD, WILLIAM COLT. The battle at Three-Cross. 280p $2 Doubleday

41-4627

Western story.

Booklist 37:410 My 1 '41

"There's plenty of action in this likable Western from the moment Lance Tolliver comes across a corpse clutching in its fist part of a narcotic cactus plant known as a mezcal button." Will Cuppy

+ Books p14 Ap 27 '41 80w

"The tale has about everything the Western fan can ask for—plenty of action, excitement, gun smoke, mystery, of course, suspense romance and even humor; and is one of the best yet written by the prolific and expert William Colt MacDonald." G. W. Harris

+ N Y Times p23 Ag 24 '41 200w

MACDONALD, WILLIAM COLT. The Phantom pass. 274p $2 Doubleday

40-33590

Western story.

Booklist 37:271 F 15 '41

"As most Western fans know, Mr. MacDonald is surefire." Will Cuppy

+ Books p28 D 1 '40 70w

"The story is expertly told in Mr. MacDonald's trenchant style, and its mixture of action, mystery and suspense is well salted with his characteristic brand of clever humor."

+ N Y Times p32 N 17 '40 260w

MCDONOUGH, MARIAN MCINTYRE. The rails push west [il. by Manning DeV. Leel]. 304p map $2 Penn

40-29880

The struggle between the Santa Fé and the Denver and Rio Grande railroads for the right of way thru the mountains to New Mexico in the 1870s forms the background of this story for older girls. The daughter of a railroad construction engineer is the heroine.

"The story is rather sketchily written in parts, but portrays a period not too well covered in stories for girls. The colorful frontispiece and black and white illustrations are by Manning De V. Lee, and end papers carry a map of the location of the story. Large type but poor paper. Not a necessary title but good material for early teen age where 'stepping stones' with plenty of excitement are needed." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 66:85 Ja 15 '41 120w

Wis Lib Bul 37:59 Mr '41

MACFARLAND, CHARLES STEDMAN. Current religious thought: a digest. 185p $1.50 Revell

016.2 Theology. Religious thought. Books—Reviews 41-8454

"Following the pattern of his earlier books in this series . . . Dr. MacFarland summarizes about fifty important religious books that are recent enough to be called 'current.' The positions taken by the various writers are seldom subjected to critical examination. The purpose is to give a digest, not a critique or evaluation, of recent religious literature." (Christian Century) Index.

"Such a digest, when made as fairly and as intelligently as this author makes it, has value as a brief conspectus of current books, as a guide to their selection, and as a permanent record of the period's output of religious books."

+ Christian Century 58:659 My 14 '41 140w

"This is a most valuable book for one desiring to gain an idea of the trend of modern religious writing." H. J. Simpson

+ Churchman 155:19 Je 15 '41 200w

"Dr. Macfarland's work must be taken as no more and no less than it professes. It is an anthology of pithy book notes by one of the best informed and most widely experienced minds in the church. One could wish for fuller treatment of the more notable contributions, for more critical appraisal, most of all for a more adequate final chapter of summary and conclusions. But the author has fulfilled well his delimited purpose. He has given us a sound and useful bird's eye view of the wealth of material available. He has chosen wisely. And he has brought to his task an unusually incisive and altogether delightful insight." H. P. Van Dusen

+ Crozer Q 19:86 Ja '42 330w

McFEE, WILLIAM. Spenlove in Arcady. 468p $2.50 Random house

(W) 41-51993

Spenlove, the philosophical, middle-aged English ship's engineer who has appeared in others of Mr McFee's books, has now retired from the sea. In his remodeled Connecticut farmhouse he settles down to what promises to be a peaceful old age, with his books, his boat building, and a stray cat for company. But the cat attracts a dog and the dog's young mistress, who has a fascinating mother. Against all his principles and better judgment Spenlove falls in love, and as the book ends he is starting out for England, complete with his Perdita and her daughter.

"Written in Mr. McFee's customary manner, but with rather less indirectness than usual, this is a good novel. And the way is left wide open for a sequel." R. E. Danielson

+ Atlantic D '41 80w

Booklist 38:113 D 1 '41

"The novel has it seems to me, its defects—defects which have grown with age on the Chief, but it is modern, wise and pertinent. The Chief always thinks as he talks, even when, as here, in the third person, and he always talks common sense if, sometimes, at uncommon length. Furthermore, if you demand of a book that it be up-to-the-minute, you may find the Chief a couple of jumps ahead of it in a spot or two." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p5 N 16 '41 1000w

Reviewed by J. A. Sohn

Library J 66:341 O 1 '41 60w

"Mr. McFee walks the New England soil with a sure and steady tread, though this is the first time he has ever placed his characters out of the reach of ocean spray."

+ Nation 153:678 D 27 '41 70w

"Spenlove's reflections are sound and also endless. And the lyric quality of Spenlove's wooing often walks in felt boots: 'She responded with a glance of grave ecstasy.' None the less he keeps you going through 468 pages to the finish if you can have patience, largely I believe because the Chief is essentially the kind of man to have the back of his hand for you if you can't. Better be sure than sorry, he says, and smokes his pipe at your impatience or demand for literary flash." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub 105:899 D 29 '41 180w

"Mr. William McFee is a distinguished novelist who may be always expected to gratify any reader who loves a good story, well told. In this new novel he does not disappoint us. On the contrary, never has his competent craftsmanship been employed to better effect." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p6 N 9 '41 700w

"If you subtract the love affair you have, as is always the case with Mr. McFee, plenty of adult and often brilliant writing. The satire on Hollywood, successful smooth-paper hacks, and other speciousnesses of the literary scene is excoriating. Moreover, Spenlove, when he's just watching things, commenting on America's new rich and old rich, reflecting on the odd way in which our society is stratified, is as precious as ever and a little mellowier than before." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:107 N 15 '41 300w

MCGARRY, WILLIAM JAMES. Christ's discourse on love; unto the end. 328p $3 America press

226.5 Bible. New Testament—Saint John 41-8321

"A verse-by-verse commentary on five chapters of the Fourth Gospel, from the 13th to the 17th." Christian Century

"A treasure trove for those who wish brief, stimulating passages for spiritual reading, it will be of special help to those who seek to learn the art of meditative prayer." L. J. McGinley

+ America 65:189 My 24 '41 300w
Cath World 154:250 N '41 230w
Christian Century 58:659 My 14 '41 30w

MCGAVRAN, GRACE WINIFRED. We gather together; drawings by Margaret Ayer. 121p il $1; pa 60c Missionary educ. movement

264 Public worship 41-5995

"Stories appropriate for use in Sunday School are always needed and welcomed. Here are twelve missionary stories, most of which are based on true incidents, stressing the universality of the Christian religion and the kinship of Christian people throughout the world. There is a chapter on the part hymns and music play in worship, and another on how the artists of each country paint pictures of Jesus for their own people. We find that in spite of the differences between countries all nationalities gather together for a common worship of God, using the same Bible and the same songs. The countries used to show these differences, and yet their sameness, are India, Africa, China, Mexico, Brazil, Canada, and the Philippine Islands." Library J

Christian Century 58:397 Mr 19 '41 10w

"Especially useful for leaders of the junior group, or ages nine to twelve." D. L. Wood
 + Library J 66:309 Ap 1 '41 150w

MACGIBBON, MRS ELIZABETH GREGG. Fitting yourself for business; what the employer wants beyond skills. 456p $2 McGraw

174 Applications for positions. Occupations. Success (W) 41-51606

Advice to the beginner in the business world on those aspects of personality, attitudes, grooming, dress, etc., which in the author's experience have much to do with getting and keeping a job and advancing in it. For the most part the advice is particularly applicable to young women though the young man's problems are not wholly neglected. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:381 Ap 15 '41

"Helpful to the young job hunter, it contains much that will interest the already-employed individual who aspires to a better position."

+ Management R 30:115 Mr '41 70w

MCGILLYCUDDY, MRS JULIA E. (BLANCHARD). McGillicuddy, agent; a biography of Dr Valentine T. McGillicuddy. 291p il $3 Stanford univ. press

B or 92 McGillicuddy, Valentine Trant O'Connell 41-5671

Biography of a government topographer, army and post surgeon, and Indian agent in the early Northwest. At twenty-six he was on survey duty with the army in their campaign against the Sioux, and from then on he spent much of his time there and with the northern Cheyenne. Dr McGillicuddy died in 1939 at the age of ninety.

Booklist 37:437 My 15 '41

"A simple, informative and obviously honest story of a man who played an unusual part in the taming of the American frontier. . . This is a rattling good book." S. H. Holbrook
 + Books p2 Je 8 '41 1000w

"This book may be recommended without qualification for general reading. Its account of such events as the tragic fate of the northern Cheyennes, the campaigns of Crook and Custer and the death of Crazy Horse are accurate and clear. No effort is made to play them up for dramatic effect; we have the matchless impact of simple truth. . . I can think of no other comparable book in this field, unless it be Stanley Vestal's Sitting Bull, with its greater emphasis on the original Indian viewpoint." E. G. Eastman

+ Christian Century 58:755 Je 4 '41 480w

"Sketchy, casual biography of a famous Indian agent by a too admiring wife. . . Interesting chiefly as further, but fragmentary, evidence of the betrayals through treachery and treaty-breaking which brought the new order to the Great Plains Indians."

New Repub 104:769 Je 2 '41 70w

Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ap 26 '41 90w

"The accuracy of the book could be more readily substantiated if exact dates were given for all newspaper citations. . . Neither bibliography nor index is included in the work. . . In spite of its omissions the book is thoroughly worthwhile, being written with an enthusiasm that carries the reader effortlessly from start to finish." A. W. Hoopes

+ Social Studies 32:376 D '41 600w

"Not only a thoroughly readable and entertaining story, but—what is perhaps more unusual—an unvarnished and unexaggerated report of events not without significance in American history." E. G. Eastman

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Ap 20 '41 950w

Reviewed by Alden Stevens

Survey 79:310 O '41 500w

MCGINLEY, PHYLLIS (MRS C. L. HAYDEN). Husbands are difficult; or, The book of Oliver Ames; il. by Garrett Price. 86p $1.50 Duell

811

41-27036

A book of light verse all singing of the virtues and failings of that typical husband, Oliver Ames.

Booklist 38:187 F 1 '42

"Once again Phyllis McGinley adds a star to the light-verse galaxy. Possibly the most devastating thing one could say of 'Husbands Are Difficult' is that it would make an ideal gift for the Head of the House." Ruth Lechlitrer

+ Books p10 D 21 '41 300w

"Husbands are difficult but practically indispensable, is the burden of Phyllis McGinley's latest collection of verse. It's a light burden, airy and gay. . . The Garrett Price illustrations are very sketchy, fragmentary and effective. The one of Ames on the bathroom scale is a honey." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p5 D 28 '41 320w

"The illustrations by Garrett Price are almost as witty as the verses themselves, several of which have appeared in The New Yorker."

+ New Yorker 17:136 D 6 '41 30w

MGLINCHEE, CLAIRE. The first decade of the Boston museum. 188p pl $2.50 Humphries 792 Theater—Boston. Boston museum

40-34908

The Boston Museum was a "theatre that was not a theatre." It flourished in a period when the Puritanical Bostonians disapproved of the stage, but not of educational spectacles. So the Museum with its "Hall of Wax Statuary, One Hundred Feet in Length, filled to its ca-capacity with Wax Figures the Size of Life . . . to the number of Two Hundred," was the answer. Meanwhile there would be a stage show of ballad readings, or an orchestration, tableaux, or a diorama. The first dramatic performance was given in 1843, and after that theatrical performances flourished until 1903. This is a history of the first ten years of that period. Bibliography, Index.

"It will enthrall any elderly New Englander, and should be in the possession of students of our theatrical history, as well as within the reach of any one planning to write a historical novel of Boston in the forties."

+ Books p22 Mr 9 '41 280w

Cath World 153:637 Ag '41 270w

"As a help to understanding the character of the Boston Museum of a century ago, the nature of the plays given, and the quality of the interesting people who played in them, Miss McGlinchee's book should be of a large service."

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 29 '41 400w

"Miss McGlinchee has often been diffident in her estimates of value, perhaps because of a fear of enthusiasm; she has been discriminating in her choice of contemporary critical comments, which are valuable to the later student as an index to taste and immediate response; but she has not completely succeeded in suppressing the inclination to review biographical details about stage figures who are less important in the total picture of the theatre than the close student often feels they are. A very positive virtue of her study, on the other hand, is its plan of relegating data about authorship and casts of production to their place in an appendix which, so freed, becomes a calendar of productions for the seasons under study. Another virtue lies in her effective choice of typical outstanding productions for synopsis and analysis—a great gain over most earlier studies, which either told all or assumed knowledge of the plot materials of the plays they covered."

Lucile Gafford

+ — New Eng Q 14:579 S '41 850w

Theatre Arts 25:852 N '41 310w

MC GOVERN, WILLIAM MONTGOMERY.
From Luther to Hitler; the history of fascist-Nazi political philosophy [ed. by Edward McChesney Sait]. 683p $4 Houghton

321.6 Political Science. Totalitarianism

41-13201

A study of the origins of fascism and nazism in the writings of philosophers and others from the sixteenth century to the present. Among the men studied are: Martin Luther, Jean Bodin, Thomas Hobbes, Immanuel Kant, Thomas Carlyle, Johann Gottlieb Fichte, G. F. W. Hegel, Nietzsche, Spencer, Bagehot, Gobineau, H. S. Chamberlain. Index.

"Professor McGovern's otherwise excellent book falls into the same error as faithful Fascists who have been led to believe that their movement has a distinguished theoretical past. . . If, however, one forgets the subtitle of the book and regards it merely as a history of important phases of modern social and political philosophy, it can be commended as an admirable historical study, scholarly and thoughtful." H. E. Barnes

+ — Am J Soc 47:631 Ja '42 850w

Reviewed by J. D. Lewis

Am Pol Sci R 35:968 O '41 800w

Reviewed by F. M. Marx

Ann Am Acad 218:205 N '41 600w

"In spite of its unhappy title, this is unquestionably a significant and timely volume. . . While the general public will not have too great difficulty in reading the more than 672 pages, teachers and students in philosophy and government will probably soon be handling this text and the excellent chapter-by-chapter references and bibliographical material in college courses." C. W. Kegley

+ Christian Century 58:1509 D 3 '41 1950w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 20:382 Ja '42 40w

"The work of Professor McGovern is not an analysis but a story, and it fails accordingly. If fascism started in the sixteenth century, with the secularization of the state, then so did almost every other political development. The past and the future must always interfuse wherever the human spirit is at work; the problem is to delimit those interfusions which are central and reasonably well defined. The disaster called Nazism is not a good starting-point for a history of philosophy." Golo Mann

— Nation 153:314 O 4 '41 180w

"Professor McGovern's book is attractively written and full of what deserves to be called 'valuable information.' But his underlying assumption about men and their ideas seems to me inadequate." Jacques Barzun

— + Sat R of Lit 24:6 S 27 '41 1000w

Social Studies 32:334 N '41 30w

MACGREGOR, MRS FRANCES M. (COOKE).

Twentieth century Indians; phot. by [the author] with a foreword by Clark Wissler. 127p $3 Putnam

970.1 Indians of North America 41-12293

In brief text and many photographs the author has attempted to picture the life of the contemporary American Indian, principally as it is seen in the Southwest. Contents: Brief history of the Indians of the United States; Population—1900-1940; Land—major Indian problem today; Indian housing; Subsistence; Surviving native culture; Religion; Disease and health; Education. Bibliography.

Booklist 38:49 O 15 '41

"'Twentieth Century Indians' is a good book because of its unbiased factual material and its clear-cut style." A. N. Clark

+ Books p8 Ag 3 '41 250w

"The text and pictures of this exceedingly interesting book show no roseate scene; but it is a scene no longer pitiful and hopeless. Here is vigor and movement and variety."

+ N Y Times p5 S 7 '41 850w

"This is a sound, informative, elementary book which answers most of the standard questions about Indians. . . On the whole this is a work which anyone who is often called upon to answer questions about the Indians of today can gratefully hand to his questioners." Oliver LaFarge

+ Sat R of Lit 24:17 Ag 23 '41 200w

Scientific Bk Club R 12:3 Jl '41 110w

"The most misleading statements in 'Twentieth Century Indians' are those descriptive of early educational and mission work, beginning about 60 years ago. I speak here from first-hand experience. . . Broadly speaking, it is not true that parents formerly disapproved of schooling for their children, or that 'young educated Indians were more unhappy and mal-adjusted than ever.' While this happened in some cases, it was not and is not a typical reaction. Rather, their educated sons and daughters have always been looked up to by the tribe, and counted upon to give unlimited free service. A broader outlook, and a change of emphasis, would much increase the usefulness of this well-meant compilation." E. G. Eastman

— + Springf'd Republican p8 S 15 '41 750w

MC HENRY, DEAN EUGENE. His majesty's opposition: structure and problems of the British labour party, 1931-1938 [Eng title: Labour party in transition, 1931-1938]. 320p $2 Univ. of Calif. [7s 6d Routledge]

329.942 Labor party (Great Britain). Great Britain—Politics and government

"The author is a graduate of the University of California and spent 1935-36 in Great Britain investigating the Labour Party. He makes an analysis of the Labour Party structure . . . and he traces changes in the party machinery with particular attention to the rivalry between trades unions and local Labour Parties." (Publisher's note) Index.

MCHENRY, D. E.—Continued

"The chapter on parliamentary leadership is interesting but scanty, and in some cases the author's views might possibly be modified by recent events. Indeed, the whole book could well be expanded into a more important work. One wishes that the general statements were more often illustrated by reference to actual events, and that more use had been made of the dramatic possibilities inherent in the story of a great political party. Perhaps this criticism is unfair in that it amounts to a wish that the author had written a history of the party—something he did not attempt. If the book is disappointing, this may be due to the fact that structure alone is insignificant without an accompanying full consideration of party aims, policies, and methods, as well as the party's relationship to general political life and to other parties." Morley Ayeairst

+ — Am Pol Sci R 35:567 Je '41 700w

"The disparagement of specific Labour Party politics in this review is in no way intended as a backhanded slap at Professor McHenry. Let there be no mistaking the fact that his work ranks equally, to say the least, with the writings of G. D. H. Cole and G. Allen Hutt on the same subject. . . . McHenry covers a lot of territory, and in the light of contemporary events the book is perhaps dated—for whether Transport House has enjoyed the fact or not, many things have happened since 1938, the final year in the scope of this book. The references at the end of each chapter are first-rate and the index is good. Professor McHenry may indeed be proud of His Majesty's Opposition, which is respected as a reference book of first rank on Labour politics in Britain, and should be in America." Eric Estorick

+ Ann Am Acad 215:200 My '41 500w

Reviewed by Francis Williamson

Pol Sci Q 56:635 D '41 400w

MCHUGH, FRED DEVEREUX. How to be an engineer. 187p il $2 McBride

620 Engineering as a profession

(W) 41-10272

"The engineering field, and the qualifications it requires, are not well understood. The author, formerly executive editor of Scientific American and an engineer himself, takes up the six chief classifications: civil, electrical, mechanical, mining, chemical, and metallurgical engineering, and some of their more important branches. He discusses many sides of the subject—the training and opportunities, the importance of one's attitudes as well as scholastic training, and the future of the profession." Library J

Booklist 37:542 JI 15 '41

Reviewed by F. B. Sloan

Christian Science Monitor p10 JI 10 '41 150w

Reviewed by Josephine Smith

Library J 66:523 Je 1 '41 140w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p10 Je 15 '41 80w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 8 '41 300w

MACINNES, HELEN (MRS GILBERT HIGH-ET). Above suspicion. 333p $2.50 Little

(W) 41-11684

An Oxford don and his very attractive young wife are chosen for a dangerous mission in Germany, in the summer of 1939. They are selected just because they are taking their usual summer vacation on the continent, and can act like ordinary tourists, while following out their work. Their mission is to discover the whereabouts of an anti-Nazi agent. The summer is exciting, nearly ending in tragedy several times, but they come thru successfully.

Reviewed by R. E. Danielson

Atlantic S '41 100w

Booklist 38:12 S '41

Bookmark 2:17 N '41

"To say that 'Above Suspicion,' by Helen MacInnes, is an excellent first novel is not enough. It is a great deal more than that. It tells an exciting story with the technical smoothness of an accomplished writer; it creates a mood of suspense which carries through to the end of the volume, and it possesses what is rare in a book of this sort, a subtle note of humor which contributes to the distinction of the job. In many ways, because of integrity of background, of atmosphere, and the treatment of the characters involved, the book will recall 'Escape,' Ethel Vance's brilliant novel of terrorist Germany." Rose Feld

+ Books p2 JI 13 '41 850w

"The writing is light and lively, but expertly done."

+ Christian Century 58:959 JI 30 '41 40w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '41

Reviewed by Margaret Stern

Commonweal 34:378 Ag 8 '41 350w

"In this, her first book, Helen MacInnes adds another title to the growing list of stories concerned with the present world war. Part of the charm of the book for girls is in following the adventures of an engaging young English couple, supposedly vacationing on the Continent. . . . There are thrills, suspense and some horrors, but not enough to make the book unsuitable for modern young readers." Mabel Williams

+ Horn Bk M 17:486 N '41 150w

"Miss MacInnes writes very deftly, with humor and suspense. It is good detective fiction, though I thought the heroine's meeting with her former maid was a little too fortuitous even for a thriller, and I didn't quite believe in the rescue from Gestapo headquarters, even though Miss MacInnes had persuaded me by that time to a pretty fantastic degree of credibility; she also gets in some good licks for democracy." Margaret Marshall

+ — Nation 153:343 O 11 '41 260w

"If one were to boil its plot down to the bare essentials it would be exposed as the most elementary kind of flight-and-pursuit narrative. But it is a safe bet that no reader will stop before the final paragraph to indulge in any such cold-blooded analysis. From its beginning in an Oxford garden to its end on the road through Brenner Pass, Helen MacInnes keeps us thoroughly absorbed and slightly breathless. Her agreeable, humorous, rather academic and unworried young Oxonians are just the sort, we feel sure, to wind up in an awful jam with the Gestapo." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p5 JI 13 '41 750w

"It's all expertly but not coldly done, and Miss MacInnes writes a clean, humorous prose. It should make a top-notch film." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:69 JI 12 '41 240w

Time 38:78 JI 28 '41 200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p641 D 20 '41 100w

MCINNIS, EDGAR W. The war; first year; with a foreword by Raymond Gram Swing. 312p maps $1.50 (7s 6d) Oxford

940.53 European war, 1939- (W) (40-35128)

For descriptive note see Annual for 1940.

Reviewed by R. H. Heindel

Am Hist R 46:697 Ap '41 180w

"The volume poignantly portrays for citizens of democratic states the consequences of inaction and defeat which it is still within their power to avert. For the American reader, Raymond Gram Swing furnishes an excellent foreword, sharply attacking the cultivated incredulity of our citizenry, the deliberate dulling of meaning and refusal to understand the pattern of events by persons overwrought by a 'propaganda' complex." M. W. Graham

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:365 Ap '41 240w

"One cannot ask for a profound analysis of the war at this time. The historical materials are not available and no man has adequate perspective. McInnis does not attempt significant analysis of political realities as related to political events, of the profound economic realities of competing economic systems, of military realities of tactics and equipment, or of the basically important values of civilian and military morale. Therefore, a reader in the future who had access only to this book could hardly understand the catastrophes reported in the closing pages. But as a chronological account of events it is a neatly organized work which should be very useful to those in the social sciences who have the unhappy task of serving as expositors of the bewilderingly rapid military changes." William Albright

+ Am Soc R 6:590 Ag '41 320w

"On the basis of a great mass of excellent evidence the author has developed a reliable and well-ordered story which grips the imagination as the drama of twelve months of war unrolls like a Greek tragedy from one portentous episode to another. Being a Canadian, the author views the scene from the British standpoint. Nevertheless, he is judicious and fair." W. E. Lingelbach

+ Ann Am Acad 214:221 Mr '41 550w

"The book has some documentation and an excellent chronological table." J. B. Parrish

+ Churchman 155:19 Mr 15 '41 150w

Foreign Affairs 19:465 Ja '41 20w

"It is a great pleasure to be able to commend to the favorable attention of teachers, students, and general readers, Mr. McInnis' eminently fair and readable account of the first twelve months of the European War of 1939. The author, who is a member of the Department of History at the University of Toronto, has produced a remarkably fine volume, in difficult circumstances." W. C. Langsam

+ Social Educ 5:312 Ap '41 270w

"Mr McInnis informs us that the basic sources were The Times and the New York Times, though other newspapers were used for agency reports and special articles, and both weekly and monthly reviews have naturally been consulted. This method has the unavoidable disadvantage that the Press in warfare has not much time or space to reconsider its judgments. Consequently books compiled from it are apt to lack the atmosphere which is created by reflection and chewing the cud, and in the present case the original publication of the work in pamphlets may have somewhat contributed to that effect. Nevertheless, this is both an invaluable work of reference, furnished with some documentary evidence, a good chronology and an adequate index, and a very readable and well-balanced piece of writing."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p211 My 3 '41 650w

MCINNIS, EDGAR W. War; second year. 318p maps $2 Oxford

940.53 World war, 1939- (W) (40-35128)

This volume covers the war from September 1940 to September 1941. Chronology. Index.

Booklist 38:175 Ja 15 '42

"This second installment of 'The Oxford Periodical History of the War' is as complete, as compact and as well written as the first, which appeared here a year ago. . . It constitutes a running record of the vast conflict, but one which Professor McInnis succeeds in maintaining, it seems to me, on a surprisingly high level of judgment, balance and narrative skill." Walter Millis

+ Books p5 D 28 '41 330w

"Because of the interest focused on the rushing scenery of the world drama this fortunate blend of journalism and scholarship is a useful reference book now, and because it is so meticulous it may prove helpful to the historian after the war. The author, in spite of his British viewpoint, is not only a reliable guide in the jungle of dazzling facts; he does not refrain from criticism, and he warns us particularly against unwarranted optimism. The book is written in a lively style and should be read by everybody who wishes to obtain an overall view of the bewildering events of our time."

+ Nation 154:45 Ja 10 '42 190w

MCINTOSH, HARLAN COZAD. This finer shadow; introd. by John Cowper Powys. 408p $2.75 Dial press

41-4716

"This is Harlan Cozad McIntosh's first and only novel, written over a period of years, rejected and rewritten; again rejected and rewritten again. Last year the author committed suicide. He was 32. . . It is well known that young writers frequently choose for their first books subjects so intricate, so much on the psychological borderline of life that many an experienced author would never dare approach them. McIntosh's novel is centered around homosexuality, which is about the most difficult and also most precarious theme for a writer." N Y Times

" 'This Finer Shadow' explores the vast canyons of abnormality with heart and mind as well. Among the books of this special range, it is one of the clearest, because it is neither cold, nor clogged with self-pity. . . The weaknesses of [the book] do not destroy the dramatic impact of the story. There are stretches of wordiness, which were not caught in the rewriting; in a few places the dialogue is wooden and pedantic, slipping into the shop talk of psychiatry. But Harlan McIntosh was faced with that bravest of all assignments: to make real, without self-pity, the private world of his nightmares, symbols and shadows." Milton Lehman

Books p18 Mr 2 '41 550w

"It is a curious book in many ways, often muddled and obscure, containing some self-conscious, deliberately precious writing, yet illuminated occasionally by a beautiful passage or an exceptional flash of insight, and possessing a certain emotional power. Here is an explanation of the abnormal, the pathological in human life." Muriel Burns

+ New Repub 104:610 Ap 28 '41 550w

" 'This Finer Shadow' is a psychological novel. Unevenly written, it appears tense or jerky in many spots, free and beautifully wide in others. Though far from perfect, it is stronger, more compelling than many a better constructed, smoothly running first novel, giving proof of a young, unusual talent." Marianne Hauser

N Y Times p24 F 23 '41 700w

MACK, EDWARD CLARENCE. Public schools and British opinion since 1860; the relationship between contemporary ideas and the evolution of an English institution. 511p $3.75 Columbia univ. press

373.42 Public schools (endowed)—England. Education—England 41-25384

"The present volume is the second half of a study of the relationship between the English public school and the ideas and forces which influenced or molded its growth. The first half appeared in 1938 (American edition, 1939) under the title Public Schools and British Opinion, 1780 to 1860 [Book Review Digest, 1939]. (Introd.) Bibliography. Index.

School & Society 54:572 D 13 '41 130w

MACK, E. C.—Continued

"Mr Mack seems impartial rather than doctrinaire, which is refreshing in the study of a highly controversial subject. This reviewer found only one error, a rather remarkable misquotation of Kipling on page 224." E. L. Carr

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 14 '41
1000w

MACK, MRS RUTH (PRINCE). The flow of business funds and consumer purchasing power [prepared under the auspices of the Columbia univ. Council for research in the social sciences]. 400p $3.75 Columbia univ. press 339 Consumption (economics). Prices.

Capital 41-5236

"The purpose of this book is to explore the problem of economic integration in a price economy. The question is attacked by studying the relationship, during a given interval of time, between current income distributions to consumers and consumer goods offered for sale. In the search for the causes of abundance and deficiency of buying power, business saving and investment constitute a significant area of investigation." (Publisher's note) Index.

"Worth-while books on corporation finance are rare; studies in this field which provide new factual material and which apply it to the broad problems of economics are rarer still. This is such a book. It shows a familiarity with the financial records of corporations which comes only from long first-hand study. It reveals an inquisitive mind which is original enough to be provocative but not so original as to lose contact with previous work in the field and with the facts. It exhibits nice craftsmanship throughout, not the least in the style and the mode of presentation." R. W. Goldsmith

+ Am Econ R 31:643 S '41 1300w

"The theoretical analyses in Chapters 1 and 10 could have been improved by more concise verbiage and a more extended perusal of the theoretical literature on valuation and business cycles. The significance of retained income for current equilibrium was pointed out long ago in the book by Hastings. . . . These defects, however, reduce only by little the value of the book, which lies primarily in the empirical analysis." Hans Neisser

Arrn Am Acad 215:215 My '41 420w
Reviewed by H. S. Ellis

J Pol Econ 49:764 O '41 1150w

Management R 30:315 Ag '41 230w

MACKAIL, DENIS GEORGE. Barrie; the story of J.M.B. [Eng title: The story of J.M.B.]. 736p $3.75 Scribner [11s 6d Davies]

B or 92 Barrie, Sir James Matthew, bart.
(W) 41-15728

This very long, full life of the Scotch novelist and playwright reviews the events of Barrie's life, comments critically on his works, and attempts a psychological analysis of the man's nature. The biography was undertaken at the request of Barrie's two literary executors, Lady Cynthia Asquith and Mr Peter Davies. Index.

"No living man who has not kept a very full diary all his life, with copies of all his letters and papers, can possibly know as much about his own existence as we know about Barrie's after reading Mr. Mackail. The miracle of the performance is that its seemingly inordinate thoroughness does not weary you. The reason why it does not is that, in and behind the outward events, it keeps you in constant awareness of the incredible, fantastic, mystifying variety of creatures that Barrie always was in his inward and secret life." Wilson Follett

+ Atlantic O '41 370w

Booklist 38:34 O 1 '41

"Much of Denis Mackail's 'official' biography of J. M. Barrie is very dull reading indeed, especially in its latter half, when it chronicles at great length all the little man's week ends at the homes of the aristocracy, all his croquet and cricket games, and especially all his colds and coughs, as well as those of his friends. A more bronchial biography was never penned. . . . Doubtless there are those who will complain that this biography skimps the mother fixation, and perhaps certain biological facts, needed for complete understanding. But such reticence is understandable at present. The enduring quality in Barrie's work, its magic mingling of reality and fantasy, lit with humor and warmed with sentiment, as in 'Peter Pan' and the dream ball in 'A Kiss for Cinderella,' was the work of Sentimental Tommy, who wouldn't grow up. It is the chief merit of Mr. Mackail's biography that he never quite forgets this fact even at an aristocratic week end." W. P. Eaton

+ Books p20 N 16 '41 1100w

"A biography that deserves the highest praise." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 7 '41
750w

Reviewed by E. C. Thompson

Churchman 155:18 N 15 '41 200w

"The flavor of both Barrie's writing and his living are caught in this volume, which might well be considered a model for a biographer. The essential facts and statistics are cloaked in felicitous phrases and a real comprehension of the subject." George Freedy

+ Library J 66:730 S 1 '41 90w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

Nation 153:345 O 11 '41 800w

"Whatever is revealing here about Barrie is glimpsed through a smother of irrelevant detail. And Mackail is too good a friend to be a good critic."

New Repub 105:630 N 10 '41 60w

"It is greatly to Mr. Mackail's credit that he does not slip over the dross in Barrie's character. But still it is impossible to evade the fact that the long, minutely detailed story of his sadnesses, heart-breaks and sorrows and of his brilliant social success in England is tedious reading. It leaves a reader wondering just what it was that makes Barrie worth so much meticulous chronicling in an enervating, familiar style." Brooks Atkinson

+ N Y Times p3 S 7 '41 1200w

"The life of Sir James M. Barrie . . . done with taste, deftness, and indulgent understanding in a 736-page biography that is clearly definitive as well as exhaustive."

+ New Yorker 17:110 S 20 '41 50w

Reviewed by R. E. Roberts

Sat R of Lit 24:5 S 6 '41 850w

"The life story of Sir James Barrie has been written by Mr. Mackail with an exacting evenness that is interesting. The thoroughness of the biographer is evident: almost every detail seems to have been supplied—in fact, after the early years of the childhood, the story moves literally from month to month. The biography, which, necessarily, is long, is impossible to read with a passive mind: Mr. Mackail, with the concealed art of the novelist, invites one to draw conclusions he does not authorize." Elizabeth Bowen

Spec 166:374 Ap 4 '41 1000w

"There seems little doubt that Mackail has written the definitive Barrie biography, as he was commissioned by the literary executors to do. How well he has done becomes clear when one glances through the other available material. None of the previous writers has had equal advantages, of course, but also none of them has shown equal ability and comprehension, and one or two strike notes which after one has steeped himself in Mackail seem strangely false to the Barrie one has come to know."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e S 7 '41 1050w

"A conversational manner, the historical present in swarms, abbreviations, sentences (or what used to have to be sentences when full stops were full stops) without nouns or verbs or either—can these and other tricks of an essentially affected style of writing convey through 719 close-printed pages the purposed air of artlessness? Duty to the tradition of English prose will compel every reviewer of more than tender years to declare that this is an inartistic, a vicious style of writing, with 'Ars est monstrare artem' for its motto. And, his duty done, he may admit, ungrudging, that Mr. Mackail brings it off."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p161 Ap 5 '41
2300w

MCKAY, ALLIS. They came to a river. 651p
$2.75 Macmillan

(W) 41-51749

A story of the development of the apple-growing country of Washington (state) during the first two decades of the twentieth century. The story follows the life of Chris Hallowell from early girlhood thru the years of her first marriage and widowhood to her second marriage.

Booklist 37:439 My 15 '41

Bookmark 2:17 N '41

"Miss McKay's fictional motion picture of an era is well planned, honestly executed, sensibly cut and titled, an admirable production even if a shade romantic for some tastes." J. H. Jackson

+ — Books p3 Ap 27 '41 850w

Cath World 153:506 Jl '41 240w

"This is by no means a great novel, but it is a good one, well constructed and soberly written."

+ Christian Century 58:658 My 14 '41
240w

"Some readers may feel that discursiveness makes the narrative unwieldy, thereby lessening its effectiveness; but there remains so much that is undeniably good, in the spacious background and in the characterization of Christine, that the book as a whole justifies the warmest praise." M. W. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 24
'41 460w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '41

"Recommended for all libraries, also for senior high school lists." E. S. Brown

+ Library J 66:305 Ap 1 '41 70w

"Readers who expect in their novels a high degree of emotional tension may find Allis McKay's book lacking in this respect. Mere swiftness of narrative has been sacrificed at every turn to scope and balance. But not since Laura Krey's ' . . . And Tell of Time' has any one given us a more impressive and richly colored study of a countryside and its people." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 27 '41 900w

New Yorker 17:86 Ap 26 '41 40w

Pratt p13 D '41

"Miss McKay has written, beautifully, a novel of real history." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 24:8 My 17 '41 500w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ap 27 '41
750w

Wis Lib Bul 37:140 Jl '41

MACKAY, JOHN ALEXANDER. A preface to Christian theology. 187p $2 Macmillan

201 Christianity—Philosophy 41-2051

The substance of the chapters in this volume was first given in the form of lectures delivered at Union Seminary, Richmond, Virginia, in February, 1940. "What is here offered is in no sense an introduction to theology. Far less is it a primer or manual of theological ideas. It is simply what it says it is, a preface, a foreword to theological discussion, a glimpse at the border land between theology and religion. These chapters crystallize a series of reflections upon religious and theological questions which the writer believes to be important. In setting them down on paper he had in mind the same that he essayed to do in the oral delivery of the lectures, to address the ordinary intelligent reader, both clerical and lay, rather than the technical theologian." (Foreword) Index.

Booklist 37:351 Ap 1 '41

Reviewed by Herman Hausheer

Christian Century 58:188 F 5 '41 600w

Reviewed by J. P. McGarvey

Churchman 155:18 F 15 '41 440w

"The book is heartily recommended to preacher and layman alike as a brief volume for stimulation, insight, and enlightenment." G. W. Davis

+ Crozer Q 18:173 Ap '41 550w

"The sophisticated skeptic seeking a closely reasoned apologetics, or the advanced scholar seeking lifting horizons, will find little profit in this book. Its real value is to the average minister and thoughtful layman, because it makes available simply and beautifully, the best both in the attitude and in the insight of a new age. For the wide circle of readers this book is heartily to be commended for its balance, constructiveness, and maturity. To the average seeker for fuller truth and seasoned judgment, it will, indeed, come as a godsend because of its persuasive power, its penetrating insights, and its unusually rich illustrative material." N. F. S. Ferré

+ J Religion 21:217 Ap '41 700w

"Dr. Mackay's book is noteworthy for clearness of statement, cogency of thought and intense conviction." J. S. C.

+ Springf'd Republican p10 F 19 '41 700w

MACKAY, MRS MARGARET (MACKPRANG).
Valiant dust. 561p $2.75 Day

41-21403

A story of a Scotch family in China during the years from 1880 to the Boxer Rebellion. The chief character is Elspeth Campbell who though she had fallen in love with another man on the long trip out, fulfilled her engagement and married Angus MacIarn on her arrival in Tientsin. The story deals with Elspeth's marital trials, the coming of children, the gradually growing understanding of the Chinese ways of life.

Booklist 38:159 Ja 1 '42

"'Valiant Dust' is an exciting novel, hard to lay aside once you have started with Elspeth in her shipwreck off the China coast and her first glimpse of the dun plain of Tientsin. Holding your attention, it also rewards it, giving you a feeling that you have shared in a striking chapter of history and have known the people who made it. Mrs. Mackay's years in China have given her a deep affection and respect for the people of that country. . . . To the care and scrupulousness of her regard for this time and place she brings, moreover, the essential gift of the story-teller." Mary Ross

+ Books p4 N 23 '41 1050w

Reviewed by H. P. Bolman

Library J 66:950 N 1 '41 80w

New Repub 105:710 N 24 '41 60w

"A novel of outstanding merit and genuine value. . . . The book's major value [is] as a soundly conceived and brilliantly accomplished historical novel of twenty years of foreign settlement in China." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p20 N 16 '41 550w

"Mrs. Mackay knows China at first hand and writes of it with friendly appreciation and skillful local color."

+ New Yorker 17:95 N 8 '41 40w

"This historical novel of Victorian Tientsin is a mature and superb piece of work, as well as a monumental labor of research and writing." Nym Wales

+ Sat R of Lit 24:18 N 22 '41 800w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 14 '41 440w

MACKAY, RONALD WILLIAM GORDON. Peace aims and the new order; outlining the case for European federation, together with a draft constitution of a United States of Europe; with foreword by Norman Angell. 306p $2.50 Dodd [2s 6d Joseph, M]

321.041 United States of Europe (proposed) [41-15265]

A revised edition of Federal Europe, published in England in 1940. In his note the author says: "Federal Europe appeared in the early part of 1940 as a contribution to the general discussion on the organisation of post-war Europe. . . I have not re-written Federal Europe; nevertheless this second edition differs from the first. The introduction which has been re-written reviews what seem to me to be the most fundamental questions for us all just now—namely, the necessity for re-stating the democratic idea. Part I remains as it was with a few minor changes. Parts II and III were originally written to advocate and describe a Federation of some of the European States. The scope of these chapters has been enlarged to provide for a Federation of all the States of Western Europe, i.e. Europe without Russia. Likewise the constitution has been revised in the same way and the proposals outlined now provide for a Federation of Western Europe at the end of this war." Bibliography. Index.

"There is no such thing as peace in the abstract and no possibility of drafting the picture of a new order in Europe without knowing the military situation at the end of the war. Mackay's scheme, bringing Australia, New Zealand and South Africa (but not the USA) into the parliament of a federation of European states and restoring the political frontiers before the war, would only be possible after a total victory of the British, and without American help. Besides this you may feel doubtful whether the frontiers of Versailles were just and wise enough to deserve restoring. Nevertheless the book is stimulating for discussions of future political problems." M. F.

+ — Commonweal 34:332 J1 25 '41 110w

Nation 153:261 S 20 '41 110w

Times [London] Lit Sup p146 Mr 29 '41 110w

MCKEARIN, GEORGE SKINNER, and MC-KEARIN, HELEN. American glass. 622p il $4 Crown

748 Glassware. Glass manufacture and trade (W) 41-25108

"The development of glassmaking in America is traced as an introduction to a voluminous, unusually complete work of detailed descriptions, 2000 photographs, and 1000 drawings of the many types and pieces of American glass. Carefully compiled charts of blown three mold glass, pictorial and historical flasks, and American glass factories are included. Bibliography: p.615-617." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 38:154 Ja 1 '42

"This publication, long awaited by those who knew the author's activities, will probably render unnecessary any further compendium on the subject. Future generations may clarify some of the many confusions still existing, but it is doubtful if at present anything of known moment has been left unsaid or uncovered by this really awe-inspiring volume. That such an inclusive work could have been put on the market at such a price is an index of what can be done by faith and quantity production. . . Certainly no one at all interested in this very popular and difficult material can afford to be without this much needed discussion of it, particularly as it is so modestly priced." M. R. R.

+ Sat R of Lit 25:19 Ja 10 '42 250w

MCKEE, LOUISE VIRGINIA (MRS RICHARD ALDRICH SUMMERS), and SUMMERS, RICHARD ALDRICH. Dusty desert tales; il. with phot. and with drawings by J. Powell Scott. 191p $2.50 Caxton printers

970.3 Indians of North America—Legends. Indians of North America—Southwest 41-15388

Collection of folklore adapted from the legends of the Pima, Apache, Hopi, and Yuma Indians. The tales are arranged by tribes, and each group of stories is prefaced by an account of present-day life on the reservations.

"The tales themselves are charming and charmingly told, but the book has special value because each group of stories is prefaced by an account of the tribes among which they originated. The numerous photographs and drawings help to make this a picturesque study of the southwestern Indians."

+ Christian Century 58:1055 Ag 27 '41 50w

"Most of the legends are not found elsewhere in juvenile collections and are suitable for both reading, and storytelling to children of nine to twelve." Kathryn Kohberger

+ Library J 66:846 O 1 '41 80w

MCKEE, RUTH ELEANOR. Christopher Strange. 706p $3 Doubleday

(W) 41-10773

Christopher Strange, a young graduate of the Harvard Law School, represents the cultured East of Emerson and Thoreau's day, in this story of California of the 1850's. Leaving Concord, Massachusetts, and all it stood for, he made the perilous overland journey to the rough new California country. His sturdy character took him thru all the corruption, the reign of the vigilantes, the hardships and struggles of the times, and he survived to link the two cultures—East and West.

Booklist 37:546 J1 15 '41

"In this solidly constructed and very full story of California's rough adolescence, Ruth Eleanor McKee has done a consistently superior and often superb job." A. B. Tourtellot

+ Books p6 Je 22 '41 700w

"Though dramatically presented in excellent style, this historical tale would not have suffered from judicious pruning of much detail. Recommended for limited purchase." H. A. Carpenter

Library J 66:520 Je 1 '41 70w

"A novel covering so wide a scope, with details of romances and domestic life in several families, and so long a span of California history (nearly forty years), and having besides so many characters both fictional and historic, must appear at times diffuse. Yet unity of theme is preserved not only in developing the pattern of the central character's life; one perceives the emergence from chaotic beginnings of an ordered commonwealth which recognizes and values the spiritual factor." Drake De Kay

+ N Y Times p6 Je 22 '41 1050w

"Miss McKee has drawn a warmly human family, and she makes credible and touching the love of the first Far Western settlers for the California desert."

+ New Yorker 17:78 Je 21 '41 40w

"There is plenty of activity but almost no real life. Miss McKee would have done well to recall the interest of Thoreau, an acquaintance of the elder Strange, who got at the essence of life because he said his desire was 'to observe what transpires, not in the street, but in the mind and heart of me!'" J. D. Hart

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:7 J1 19 '41 450w

MCKENNY, MARGARET. A book of garden flowers [il. by] Edith F. Johnston. [80p] $2 Macmillan

635.9 Flowers (W) 41-51638

Thirty-six colored lithographs, with accompanying text, describing as many types of garden flowers. They range thru the year from the spring flowers—crocus, daffodils, and primroses—to the fall with its chrysanthemums. Intended for young readers.

Booklist 37:363 Ap 1 '41

"There is gentleness, even tenderness in these flower-portrait groups, and the information has an intimate touch, explaining names and giving a little about origins and travels." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Mr 16 '41 190w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk M 17:104 Mr '41 80w

"Author and illustrator share honors for the making of this beautiful book. Margaret McKenny has written and arranged her material especially to appeal to children, but the adult public will be equally delighted with the results." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 66:309 Ap 1 '41 100w

"This is as appealing as a Victorian album with its lithographs in fresh and joyous colors in which only the most zealous eye will detect an occasional muting or deviation of tone. They show the grace of leaf and stem as well as petals, and on the pages of text little drawings of seeds complete the cycle of bud and blossom." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 Mr 16 '41 230w

"'A Book of Garden Flowers' should appeal particularly to the beginning garden enthusiasts and to the city shut-in who can't get outdoors to cultivate and enjoy a garden of his own. The typography of the book is conveniently large for children and the text descriptions of flowers brief and easy to understand."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 F 17 '41 240w

Wis Lib Bul 37:152 O '41

MCKENNY, MARGARET. How the hurricane helped; with ill. by Winifred Bromhall. 47p $1.25 Knopf

40-31803

Picture-story book for grades two to three, about two little beach houses which rode to safety on a big wave during a hurricane. The story was told to the author by a six-year-old boy who had seen the hurricane of 1938.

"The squat little houses look kind and good, the waves more decorative than dreadful, clouds and rain not alarming. But you can see that somebody has been through that storm to think up this plot. The pictures are for the most part in four colors, bright and gay." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 S 15 '40 200w

Wis Lib Bul 37:20 Ja '41

MACKENZIE, COMPTON. West to north. 404p $2.75 Dodd [9s 6d Chatto]

41-51607

The fourth volume of the author's long novel, The Four Winds of Love, carries its hero, John Ogilvie, thru the year 1922 and to Rome when Mussolini was rising to power. For earlier volumes see Book Review Digest, 1937, 1940.

Booklist 37:324 Mr 15 '41

Reviewed by Mary Ross

Books p8 F 16 '41 800w

Reviewed by D. L. Mann

Boston Transcript p2 Mr 1 '41 400w

Cath World 152:765 Mr '41 220w

Reviewed by D. M. MacKegg

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 2 '40 180w

Reviewed by Cuthbert Wright

— Commonweal 33:627 Ap 11 '41 420w

"The farther Mr. Compton Mackenzie goes with 'The Four Winds of Love', the more it becomes evident that in seeking to combine a critical history of his own times with the personal history of John Ogilvie he has set himself a task so difficult as to be almost impossible if John's reality as a human being is to be maintained. So much of the story is, or appears to be, autobiographical that it would have been better to tell it in the first person, and hang the consequences. This would have at least secured the consistency of self-revelation." Charles Marriott

— Manchester Guardian p2 S 6 '40 350w

"Mr. Mackenzie is a most accomplished writer. His style is polished and lucid, and he possesses the capacity, shared by surprisingly few British novelists, of describing both action and introspection with equally lively facility. The final repute of these books, however, will probably depend upon their value as social studies rather than their merits as fiction. Whether their picture of the turbulent, reckless, experimental Europe that succeeded the last war has more than a temporary value, it is yet too early to judge." John Mair

New Statesman & Nation 20:268 S 14 '40 400w

Reviewed by Margaret Wallace

N Y Times p6 F 16 '41 900w

New Yorker 17:82 F 15 '41 40w

Pratt p10 spring '41

Reviewed by George Dangerfield

Sat R of Lit 23:11 Mr 1 '41 500w

"The latest instalment of Mr. Compton Mackenzie's story of John Ogilvie seems to have about as much life as a bundle of newspaper cuttings of 1919-1922. . . John Ogilvie shares all Mr. Compton Mackenzie's interests—in gardens, gramophones, Scottish Nationalism, Catholicism, prisons, the censorship, the sale of honours, Greece—but he remains a collection of opinions rather than a fully imagined person. The writing of West to North is as uninspired as the design." J. A. Smith

— Spec 165:252 S 6 '40 340w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 1 '41 330w

"This is not quite the sort of novel one looks for from Mr. Mackenzie, since the romantic story-teller in him is here almost completely eclipsed by the critic and commentator. . . It is all much too informative, too educative, and one soon wearies of it. There is all too little by way of imaginative interest, and what there is Mr. Mackenzie handles in a hasty and surprisingly perfunctory way."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p439 S 7 '40 440w

MACKENZIE, HELEN FRANCES. See Picasso, P. Understanding Picasso

MCKENZIE, JOHN GRANT. Psychology, psychotherapy and evangelicalism. 238p $2.75 Macmillan [10s 6d Allen, G]

253 Evangelicalism. Psychology, Religious. Experience (religion) [A41-156]

"This professor of social science in Aberdeen University presents a critical examination of the evangelical experience and doctrine in the light of psychological and psychotherapeutic principles. The book is written in the conviction that 'the application of psychology to religion in general can make little or no further advance except through the study of particular types of religious experience.' The various psychotherapeutic techniques, the author believes, provide a means for such a study. These techniques he applies to evangelicalism, the type of experience within which his own religious life has been nurtured." (Christian Century) Index.

"This is a wise and informed volume. Professor McKenzie speaks out of twenty years' practice in lay psychotherapy, conducted always in cooperation with medical practitioners, and back of that stands a rich experience in the ministry and in the training of ministers." C. T. Holman

+ Christian Century 58:461 Ap 2 '41 1100w

MCKENZIE, J. G.—Continued

Reviewed by R. C. Miller
Churchman 155:17 Ap 1 '41 90w

"Prof. McKenzie has a most illuminating section upon forgiveness; and indeed his book as a whole is so full of valuable material that it will repay study not only by psychologists but also by theologians and ministers of religion."

J. C. H.
+ Nature 147:10 Ja 4 '41 360w

"There is a great deal that is valuable in Professor McKenzie's psychology of Evangelicalism; doubts, however, begin to arise when he moves on to theological inferences from the psychology. He admits that psychology is not a sufficient basis for theology; nevertheless, in practice he sometimes argues as if it were."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p552 N 2 '40
650w

MCKINNEY, FRED. Psychology of personal adjustment; students' introduction to mental hygiene. 636p il $3.50 Wiley

131.3 Mental hygiene. Students 41-15471

"Designed to meet the need for a basic psychological text which frankly attacks the problems of the student that are most vital to his personal adjustment and offers him factual material on these problems. Not a text in general psychology, it may be used in a course for the entering student before he takes general psychology and when he most needs orientation in terms of his personal requirements, or it may be used to supplement an objective course in general or applied psychology." (School & Society) Indexes.

Booklist 38:45 O 15 '41

School & Society 54:64 Jl 26 '41 90w

"Contains a rich store of suggestions from psychological, biological and educational literature which the college student may profitably utilize in building and rounding his personality with the facilities available on the campus. In fact, this text in mental hygiene has been planned to place in the hands of the student hints which may never occur to him, and information that is usually acquired only after hours of an endless personal search which detracts from the serious business of building the desired personality traits." Clifford Moore

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 3 '41 700w

MCKINNEY, LAURENCE. Garden clubs and spades; pictures by Helen E. Hokinson. 64p $1 Dutton

817 41-6859

Skits in prose and verse, featuring the amateur gardener at his or her funniest and most stupid. Illustrated with drawings, many of them from the New Yorker.

Bookmark 2:9 N '41

"Any one who has ever been bewildered, bored or plain infuriated by the tricks and manners of gardeners should have a jolly time for himself with 'Garden Clubs and Spades.' Laurence McKinney, in frivolous verse and scathing prose, and Helen Hokinson, in blasting cartoons, do a neat job of taking the gardener apart and showing up all his foibles and fancies." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p4 Jl 27 '41 210w

"Many readers will probably find the most entertaining feature of the book to be the original and inimitable sketches by Helen Hokinson. Most of these drawings have appeared in the New Yorker and they portray the reactions and vicarious doings of those sweet, innocent matrons among their favorite annuals and perennials. Mr McKinney's ambidextrous and breezy verses and prose form a fitting accompaniment to the art of Miss Hokinson and those who love gardens. Those who have given up in despair and no longer give a darn about them, should find ample diversion in this little book."

+ Springf'd Republican p6 Ap 14 '41 250w
Wis Lib Bul 37:90 My '41

MCKINNEY, LAURENCE. Lines of least resistance; pictures by Larry Reynolds. 64p $1 Dutton

817 41-19080

Humorous verses relating the joys—and trials—of those who seek amusement and diversion in these modern days.

"This is an odd collaboration. The verses and cartoons were originally executed and published in magazines without having any connection. McKinney was going McKinney's way, and Reynolds was going Reynolds's way. They or the publisher discovered that these ways were the same."

+ Books p44 D 7 '41 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '41

"Following the title suggestion, the reader will browse happily through these pages, picking out the Reynolds cartoons first, nibbling at short verses and then coming back for the longer ones and the prose sketches. . . On the whole the miscellaneous assortment contains a pleasant jumble of verses on a wide-enough range to suit anybody's taste, set in cock-eyed and original rhymes, with plenty of pattering alliteration and tuneful rhythm." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p5 D 23 '41 180w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ja 11 '42
120w

MCKOWN, HARRY CHARLES, and ROBERTS, ALVIN B. Audio-visual aids to instruction. 385p il maps $3 McGraw 371.335 Visual instruction. Moving pictures in education. Radio in education

(W) 40-27795

The purpose of this book is to find answers to such questions as: "Just what are audio-visual aids? Specifically, how, to what extent, and under what conditions do they 'aid'?" Which types are best suited to the various grade levels, subjects, and kinds of instructional materials within these subjects? How can they be utilized to replace antiquated and obsolete methods and materials? How can they be incorporated as integrative and supplementary, rather than as separate and substitutionary, agents? In what ways can they be utilized most effectively? How can teacher and community support be developed? How much do they cost? Where can they be obtained?" (Pref) Index.

Booklist 37:132 D 1 '40

"A significant volume which will become a basic reference, if not a classic, in the field." D. M. Burns

+ El School J 41:630 Ap '41 700w

MCLACHLAN, JEAN OLIVIA. Trade and peace with old Spain, 1667-1750; with a foreword by Harold Temperley. 249p $3.50 Macmillan [15s Cambridge]

382.0942 Great Britain—Commerce—Spain. Spain—Commerce—Great Britain. Great Britain—Foreign relations—Spain, Spain—Foreign relations—Great Britain [A 41-486]

"Account of the influence of commercial considerations on Anglo-Spanish diplomatic relations in the late seventeenth and early eighteenth centuries. During this period England's policy was modified by the determination of the government to pursue a path that would allow the continuation of her traders' efforts to expand their trade in the West Indian areas at the expense of Spanish holdings and pretensions there and, at the same time, permit them to retain the profitable market—built up through years of effort—for manufactured goods in the Spanish peninsula." (Am Hist R) Index.

"This is a scholarly and well-written account. . . The work rests on a commendably thorough study of the records in both English and Spanish archives and of a wide range of published materials in the field. Decided views are clearly expressed with arguments convincingly assembled and, on the whole, adequately substantiated by references to source materials. More notice of the contemporary rival French trade in the Spanish peninsula as well as of earlier and later developments in Anglo-Spanish relations would have related this able monograph more closely to its general field." V. B. Holmes

+ Am Hist R 46:630 Ap '41 550w
Times [London] Lit Sup p403 Ag 17 '40 170w

MCLAVERTY, MICHAEL. Lost fields. 266p $2 Longmans

41-17325

Realistic story of present day life in the poorer section of Belfast, Ireland. Johnny Griffin had once worked in the cotton mill, had married, and there were seven children. Since the closing of the mill the Griffins had come down to the most abject poverty, with Johnny trying for jobs with a handcart, and the children never having enough to eat. After Hugh, the eldest son, had fought off the bailiffs, Johnny's mother gave up her little home and her independence and came to live with the family in Belfast, so that they could all share her old-age pension.

"The family scenes, the vignettes of city and country incidents, and the personalities of each member of the family and their friends have a limpid clarity, and to read Mr. McLaverty's prose is a delight in itself." Elizabeth Drew

+ Atlantic D '42 150w

"For those readers who find loveliness in simple reality and pleasure in clear, unornamented prose, 'Lost Fields' is a book to heed and to cherish. The reader is absorbed by Michael McLaverty's tale, but in the course of reading, he is caught by the necessity of going back to see just what has been said about the feel of a room, the way a man works, or what a lark does when it knows itself to be alone. The language which sketches these scenes is of the simplest, the detail is spare, but we see beauty and feel its breath." Clare Godfrey

+ Books p10 S 21 '41 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 D '41

"Nothing momentous occurs in this quiet book; nothing more violent than a scuffle with the local police; no war, nor reference to war; even the love of Hugh for his girl lacks the passion usually associated with the men of this island. Yet by its very understatement, its simplicity, lack of all literary pretentiousness, its rare characterization and its flawless prose, 'Lost Fields' is a novel by one more Irish author from whom much may be expected." James Stern

+ New Repub 105:485 O 13 '41 550w

"Mr. McLaverty has considerable talent for description. He writes admirable prose. What he lacks is the power imaginatively to enter the minds of his characters and give human warmth to their words and actions. He also lacks architecture: his novel remains a collection of loosely connected scenes without the dynamic power of a heaped-up, accumulated action. But, as both this and his first novel, 'Call My Brother Back,' attest, he is a writer with a conscience, one to be taken seriously and watched for what he may bring forth in the future." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p24 S 14 '41 490w

Springf'd Republican p7e S 21 '41 240w

MCLEAN, FORMAN TAYLOR. Gladiolus. (Whitlsey house garden ser) 197p il $2 McGraw

635.93424 Gladiolus 41-6498

A book of advice for the amateur and exhibitor of gladiolus. Chapters are devoted to landscape uses, species, soils and fertilizers, planting, cultivation and storage, growing for exhibition, etc. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:459 Je 1 '41

"Dr. McLean is the logical man to write authoritatively on this popular flower and its use as garden material, for in him are combined three important assets for such a task: fine scientific background, long experience as a practical gardener, and a special intensive interest in and study of the Gladiolus tribe. His book fully lives up to what you would expect these qualifications to produce. It is well rounded, direct, completely up-to-date and practical." R. S. Lemmon

+ Books p9 Je 22 '41 80w

MACLEISH, ARCHIBALD. The American cause. 43p $1 Duell

321.8 Democracy. World war, 1939—U.S. (W) 41-51585

"A little book composed of two papers in which Mr. MacLeish tries in the first to state what that meaning [of democracy] is for him and in the second to determine what is the part of artists and writers in that defense of democracy which enlists us all." N Y Times

Booklist 37:319 Mr 15 '41

Reviewed by Irwin Edman

Books p4 Ap 13 '41 650w

Reviewed by R. H. Phelps

Boston Transcript p1 Mr 22 '41 240w

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr

Nation 152:506 Ap 26 '41 350w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 104:639 My 5 '41 650w

N Y Times p2 Mr 9 '41 500w

New Yorker 17:59 Mr 1 '41 50w

Time 37:94 Mr 17 '41 270w

Wis Lib Bul 37:70 Ap '41

MACLEISH, ARCHIBALD. A time to speak; selected prose. 210p $2.75 Houghton

814 (W) 41-51701

Contents: In challenge, not defense; The affirmation; Preface to an American manifesto; Of the librarian's profession; Mr Sandburg and the doctrinaires; The poetry of Karl Marx; Nevertheless one debt; Public speech and private speech in poetry; Question of audience; A stage for poetry; Poetry and the public world; The communists, the writers, and the Spanish war; The irresponsibles; Libraries in the contemporary crisis; Freedom to end freedom; The Magna Carta; The librarian and the democratic process; An anonymous generation: notes from a notebook of the twenties; Death of an era; Portrait of a living man; Green river; Landscape of a people; Of many men on little land; Postcards and haciendas; The art of the good neighbor; Argentina of the Plate; Argentina of the pampas.

Booklist 37:405 My 1 '41

"This is a selection from the prose of one of the liveliest and most interesting minds of our time. Like almost everything that Mr. MacLeish has done, it is full of electricity. Touch it anywhere, and you are likely to get a spark. . . . The main intent of 'A Time to Speak' seems to me as salutary as it is unassailable—the faith in democracy, the faith in writing, the faith that things can be done." S. V. Benét

+ Books p2 My 11 '41 1000w

"Such a discussion as that upon Writers and the Spanish War is already obsolete, while some of the references to Roosevelt's policies might stand revision. But Dr. MacLeish says many things which needed saying, and his insistence that man must passionately desire and envision any reform before he can accomplish it will stand repetition."

+ Cath World 154:510 Ja '42 180w

Churchman 155:35 My 15 '41 120w

MACLEISH, ARCHIBALD—Continued

"The author of these trenchant essays and brief poems in prose is in essence the type of young public administrator envisaged by Felix Frankfurter in his numerous writings on civil service and government. It is only fitting, therefore, that the gifted homunculus, so to speak, should pay honorable homage to the master." Pierre Loving

+ Living Age 360:392 Je '41 500w

"Perhaps MacLeish's most significant contribution to the thought of our time lies in his stout defense of the democratic cause. To this task he brings not only his gifts as a poet but the not inconsiderable equipment of a social philosopher. He understands the spiritual weapons of fascism and the spiritual weaknesses of our culture which these weapons penetrate." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ Nation 152:506 Ap 26 '41 350w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 104:639 My 5 '41 650w

"It is unfair of Mr. MacLeish to talk of a generation of irresponsibles, without examining their work. Without exact information his essay becomes mere eloquence. Without critical reference his speeches are apt to be pure rhetoric. There are references to already established writers, Eliot, Yeats and Pound. The remarks do not go much farther than references. Nowhere do they seem to be critical analyses on which one might build an esthetic for the present." P. M. Jack

N Y Times p4 My 4 '41 1100w

New Yorker 17:87 Ap 12 '41 50w

Pratt p16 D '41

"The book is good reading throughout, both for the timeliness of its topics and for the manner of their presentation."

+ Spring'd Republican p6 Mr 29 '41 900w

Time 37:94 Mr 17 '41 270w

Wis Lib Bul 37:113 Je '41

MACLENNAN, HUGH. Barometer rising. 326p $2.50 Duell

41-20728

In December, 1917, one of the greatest catastrophes in history occurred in the harbor of Halifax, Nova Scotia, when a collision between two ships resulted in the explosion of one of them, which was carrying TNT. How this catastrophe affected the lives of Penelope Wain and her cousin Neil Macrae is told in this first novel by a young Nova Scotian writer.

Booklist 38:131 D 15 '41

"Here is a first novel of unusual quality in the writing, essentially a novel of inner drama, although played out before a backdrop of successive scenes of action. It does not appear quite to sum up to any dramatic statement or philosophical whole, but it is intelligent and arresting reading, an engrossing story about a family group and a few outsiders and what goes on inside their minds. But the crisis, a tremendous affair, comes in the form of an accident from without, tearing the pattern of these lives apart, resolving certain of the problems, it is true, but leaving the intention unfulfilled." F. T. Marsh

+ Books p8 O 12 '41 550w

"Mr. MacLennan deserves for this adult piece of writing the most repaying of congratulations, a wide reading." G. C. Andrew

+ Canadian Forum 21:282 D '41 400w

"Good description of Halifax in wartime, sympathetic characterization, and the element of suspense compensate for the rather involved plot of this author's first novel." Dorothy Reading

+ Library J 66:841 O 1 '41 60w

"Unless you had been told you could not have known this to be a first novel. Mr. MacLennan is a young man but, except perhaps in one instance, the book is distinguished by maturity of thought not invariably found in writers of his years. Both in conception and workmanship it is first class." J. S. Southron

+ N Y Times p32 O 5 '41 900w

"The novel is just average; the explosion is first-rate and not to be missed."

New Yorker 17:87 O 4 '41 90w

"The description of the explosion and the scenes that followed is written in a taut and exciting style that makes it live before the reader's eyes. It is a well written novel of sharply drawn characters."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:20 O 25 '41 150w

MACLEOD, NORMAN. The bitter roots. 286p $2.50 Smith & Durrell

41-9244

"Thirty-eight episodes from a Montana boyhood during the World War comprise 'The Bitter Roots,' second novel of a young poet. Although most of the narratives center about the figure of Pauly Craig between his twelfth and sixteenth years, several of them reach far enough into the lives of his cronies to make the collection something of a cross section of Bitterroot country boyhood twenty-five years ago." Books

"Sensitive to adolescent psychology, each episode skillfully pointed, unsentimental, 'The Bitter Roots' is a slight but rewarding series of vignettes out of a modern American boyhood." Milton Ruffoff

+ Books p8 My 25 '41 500w

"This is an appealing book with its unheroic boy hero, its ironic subtleties, its serious intent." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Times p6 My 25 '41 900w

"The language is frank, the action fast, and the plot rather formless."

New Yorker 17:70 My 31 '41 40w

"Perhaps it is the kind of book that is written to purge some hatred or grudge against life from the author's mind. One puts it down with weariness and distaste, not doubting its graphic truth, but finding in it, after all, no particular significance." X. Y.

— Sat R of Lit 24:16 Je 14 '41 220w

MACLEOD, NORMAN, ed. Calendar; an anthology of 1940-1941 poetry. 1td ed 2v ea 50c Press of James A. Decker

811.08 American poetry—Collections

"Calendar' is the published result of the poetry evenings held at the Ninety-second Street YMHA, New York City, under the permanent chairmanship of Norman Macleod. [It contains] poetry by some of the nation's best known poets and by some invited Scottish and Irish poets." New Repub

Reviewed by Eugene Jolas

Living Age 358:494 Jl '40 80w (Review of 1940 volume)

"The anthology runs through a fair center, with good, bad and middling skills, stressing here and there a poetic-personality given more to technical surfacing than to the current complexities of the social-minded diversifier." Harry Roskolenko

+ New Repub 106:61 Ja 12 '42 490w (Review of 1941 volume)

"Does the compiler of this anthology really believe that much of what he has assembled is poetry, or that much of it is worth recording at all? Do the bulk of the contributors think that what they have written is poetry? Some names are included that we have seen attached to good verses in the past; there are even some good verses in the collection—not enough, however, to palliate the rest." M. M. Colum — N Y Times p5 Ja 11 '42 470w (Review of 1941 volume)

MACLEISH, ARCHIBALD FLEMING (ARCHIBALD FLEMING, pseud), and REYNOLDS, CUSHMAN. Strategy of the Americas. 247p maps $2.50 Duell

355 U.S.—Defenses. America—Defenses

41-6457

The authors review American defenses, both in regard to availability of raw materials and military strength, discuss the possibility of invasion and conclude that it should be our policy to build up hemisphere defense lines, be cautious as to extension of our lines (e.g. by sending expeditionary forces abroad) and prevent revolution at home by strengthening the democratic way of life.

"Any one wanting a general idea of America's armed forces and of the problems which these forces would face in the event of a German victory in Europe will find this book interesting. . . . For the extreme isolationists and interventionists alike it should be prescribed reading—even though some of the latter will suspect it of being subtle anti-interventionist propaganda—a suspicion in part conditioned by the fact that one of the authors, at least, has been active on behalf of the isolationists." Nicholas Roosevelt

Books p5 Ap 6 '41 1000w

Reviewed by Paul Hutchinson
Christian Century 58:623 My 7 '41 350w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 19:876 Jl '41 50w

Reviewed by S. T. Williamson
N Y Times p12 My 18 '41 320w

MACMAHON, ARTHUR WHITTIER; MILLETT, JOHN DAVID, and OGDEN, GLADYS. The administration of federal work relief. 407p $3.75 Public administration

351.8 U.S. Work projects administration 41-8002

"This scholarly, well-written volume is a distinguished addition to the series of Studies in Administration currently sponsored by the Committee on Public Administration of the Social Science Research Council. The most complete account of the federal work relief program which has thus far appeared, it sheds much light upon the numerous and complex problems involved in this greatest civil undertaking of government." Am Pol Sci R

Reviewed by P. T. Stafford
+ Am Pol Sci R 35:789 Ag '41 950w

"A significant contribution." Harvey Pinney
+ Ann Am Acad 217:197 S '41 600w

MCMAHON, MATTHEW MARK. Conquest and modern international law. 233p $2 Catholic univ. of Am.

341 Conquest, Right of. Annexation of territory. Recognition (international law) 41-1044

"This is a study that seeks to determine the legal nature of conquest and especially to discover what limitations international law imposes upon the acquisition of territory by conquest. The writer investigates first the historical position of conquest in the writings of legal theorists and in the actual practice of states. . . . McMahon devotes several chapters to the Hague Conventions, the League of Nations Covenant, and other multilateral treaties which impose limitations on conquest. A special chapter is devoted to Pan-American efforts to deal with the problem. He finds as a result of his whole survey that there is a steady development both in theory and practice to make acts of conquest illegal." Ann Am Acad

"In the main this work is scholarly as well as timely; and it contains many quotations, adequate citations, a good index, and an excellent bibliography." B. M. Ziegler
+ — Am Pol Sci R 35:182 F '41 330w

"This is a good study, well documented, and clearly written." W. J. Ronan
+ Ann Am Acad 214:222 Mr '41 400w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 19:871 Jl '41 10w

MCMEEKIN, CLARK, pseud. of MRS DOROTHY (PARK) CLARK and MRS ISABELLA (MCLENNAN) MCMEEKIN. Reckon with the river. 392p $2.50 Appleton-Century

(W) 41-51702

Historical novel of the pioneers on the Ohio river in the early years of the nineteenth century. Joseph Brant, Aaron Burr, the Blennerhassets appear in the story, but the chief figure, a fictional character, is eighty-year-old Ma'am Cambrin, who guides her family on their trek from New York state to Kentucky.

Booklist 37:409 My 1 '41

Reviewed by R. G. Cook
Boston Transcript p8 Ap 12 '41 600w

Cath World 153:507 Jl '41 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '41

"There is plenty of action and excitement in this tale; a little, Clark McMeekin errs on the side of packing too much incident into the book, bringing too many minor characters and plots into play. But one is grateful for her main character, Ma'am Cambrin." Rose Feld

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 13 '41 900w

New Yorker 17:86 Ap 12 '41 50w

"Dominating the entire book is the full-bodied character of Ma'am Cambrin. . . . She is a fine character but the authors let her run away with the book. Everything pales by comparison with her. Even the plot, sustained by her vitality through most of the novel, runs thin at the end when she no longer leads." J. D. H.

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:16 Jl 5 '41 360w

Wis Lib Bul 37:116 Je '41

MACMINN, GEORGE RUPERT. The theater of the golden era in California. 529p pl $5 Caxton printers

792.09794 Theater—California 41-10018

History of the theater in California during the gold rush days, and of the actors and actresses who played there. Edwin Booth, Lola Montez, Laura Keane, and Ole Bull, as well as scarcely known players are studied as contributors to the amusement of the California pioneers. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books p18 S 28 '41 350w

"Mr. MacMinn's book is rich in detail, and as a whole provides a complete picture of the life and times of the period he records. The book is generously illustrated with contemporary prints."

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 16 '41 230w

"Names of the country's former stage great stud the text which, unhappily, is also crowded with chronological references to lesser persons and events. Nevertheless, here is a painstaking and detailed account of how the theater kept its glint in a robustious era."

Spring'd Republican p7e Jl 20 '41 300w

Theatre Arts 25:852 N '41 310w

MACMURRAY, CLAIRE. —And beat him when he sneezes; with line drawings by Susanne Suba. 224p $2 Stokes

818 41-8560

Short sketches and stories about family life, based on the author's experiences with three very lively sons. Reprinted from the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Booklist 37:512 Jl 1 '41

Bookmark 2:17 N '41

"These scenes from family life all are brief; they make no effort at continuity, but home atmosphere is so well sustained and the people so much like people every one knows, that one goes on reading. The best feature of these reports is the extraordinary fidelity with which they reproduce small-boy talk such as goes on among themselves," M. L. Becker

MACMURRAY, CLAIRE—Continued

+ Books p8 My 25 '41 280w

"It is their speech which is the funniest, with its long words and its slang, its imitations and originalities and complete sincerity. And it is in the reflection of their point of view that the author is most entertaining and most skillful. The domestic essays with which the sketches are interspersed are clever enough but out of place. With Dave and Stu Dick ubiquitous and irrepressible, there is no room for anything didactic."

+ N Y Times p5 Je 1 '41 500w

"The MacMurray boys, and their ma, are too good to miss. If the title puzzles you, turn back to 'Alice in Wonderland,'" + Spring'd Republican p7e My 25 '41 230w

Wis Lib Bul 37:153 O '41

MACNEICE, LOUIS. Poems, 1925-1940. 326p $2.50 Random house
821 (W) 41-2162

This volume of collected verse by a young English poet contains one hundred and fifty poems of which about seventy have never been published in book form before.

Booklist 37:385 Ap 15 '41

"MacNeice's book documents the responses to our confused and fascinating world of a lively, intelligent, subtle mind, with a strong ethical bias. What it wants in grandeur is compensated for by virtues of which we stand sorely in need: a keen awareness and an unashamed honesty," Babette Deutsch
+ Books p19 Ap 13 '41 600w

"Mr. MacNeice writes as he runs; he is always in a hurry; we catch the delightful fragments of speech which he addresses to us, as it were, over his shoulder—but we cannot help thinking that he would be better if he could take more seriously either the function of the poet as genus irritabile vatum or the virtue of the artifact. Even the best of the lyrics—and they are very good—such as 'Meeting Point,' 'A Toast,' with their very skillful use of vernacular refrain to dignify a sentimental theme, suffer from that sort of carelessness about the fine points of form which indicates an essentially barbaric attitude toward art," Conrad Aiken

+ New Repub 104:830 Je 16 '41 950w

"MacNeice has broken out of the rhetorical cage, shattering at once the pervasive noble voice of the academics and the pervasive gloomy voice of post-First World War verse. His poetry is always fresh and varied. He has taken from popular forms what he needs without becoming rigidly attached to them. For the two lines, classic and popular, must intersect, not cancel each other out," Louise Bogan

+ New Yorker 17:56 Mr 1 '41 300w

"Louis MacNeice is too facile, and certainly he publishes too much. It is all very well for him to say that he writes because he enjoys it, 'as one enjoys swimming or swearing,' in his latest poems, at least, he seldom communicates that enjoyment—only a sense of skill, a trick neatly and rather too smartly turned, an insistence upon being heard on every subject at every possible moment. He still remains an exasperating and fascinating craftsman; but an oath of silence for a year, say, would hurt him not at all, and I suspect that it would revitalize his poetry," Dudley Fitts
— + Sat R of Lit 23:14 Ap 12 '41 270w

Time 37:98 Je 9 '41 360w

Reviewed by J. L. Sweeney

Yale R n s 30:820 summer '41 250w

MACNEICE, LOUIS. The poetry of W. B. Yeats. 242p $2.50 (8s 6d) Oxford

821 Yeats, William Butler [41-5731]

"Mr MacNeice, who is himself a poet, approaches his subject from the side of poetry and his conception of the function of poetry is made clear in his preface. . . . The study which follows is the critic's explanation—not his defense, he avers stoutly—of the deep response he feels in reading and rereading the poetry of Yeats. His devotion and admiration have led him to a discussion of the poet's 'facts' during various periods of his life, his dominating ideas, his prevailing likes and dislikes. He considers Yeats as a mystic, as a stylist and a romanticist, but always as a rich and complex poet." (Spring'd Republican) Index.

"He gives a very clear account of Yeats's friends, literary influences, and political opinions: he is by no means blind to Yeats's weaknesses—his poses and prejudices, his ignorance of science, his amateur philosophy. But the main interest of the book for lovers of poetry is his presentation of Yeats as the most comprehensive poet of the age," Elizabeth Drew
+ Atlantic My '41 220w

Booklist 37:435 My 15 '41

Reviewed by Babette Deutsch
Books p10 Je 1 '41 1050w

"The poet's progress is the theme of Mr. MacNeice's book, which is not a biography but contains sufficient biographical facts to bind together the study of Yeats' poetry. It is a self-conscious poetry and this is a self-conscious book. Yeats left abundant records of his theory of poetry (a theory which developed concurrently with the poetry itself), and correspondingly Mr. MacNeice includes in his commentary an abundance of personal 'reactions' to that poetry," S. C. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 3 '41 700w

Reviewed by James Burnham
Commonweal 34:88 My 16 '41 480w

"Mr. MacNeice's final word on Yeats is the only unsatisfactory thing in the book. The spiritual lesson that my generation (a generation with a vastly different outlook) can learn from Yeats is to write according to our lights. But otherwise the book is crammed with the most acute observation, and is one of the most brilliant critical works which have appeared for some time," Edwin Muir

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:440 Ap 26 '41 850w

"The author, himself an Anglo-Irishman, is well equipped to analyze Yeats' background, character, and development. The comments on Yeats' poetry sometimes show the bias usual in a poet of a younger generation, but the book is on the whole remarkably discerning and well rounded."

+ New Yorker 17:88 Ap 26 '41 60w

"It is not a profound study, nor does it pretend to be; it avoids most of the complexities of its enormous subject, and contents itself mostly with exposition. Of all possible people, Louis MacNeice would seem best fitted to write about Yeats. He is an Irishman, and, like Yeats, a Protestant Irishman; and he is a poet. Yet, possibly for this very reason, this book is disappointing. It is good talk, but it is casual, as though the author were so familiar with his subject that he assumed an equal familiarity on the part of the reader. Too much is dismissed with a neat paragraph or an entre-nous allusion," Dudley Fitts

+ Sat R of Lit 23:6 My 3 '41 490w

"Mr. MacNeice has written the most penetrating study since Dr. Richards' notes in Science and Poetry. Mr. MacNeice is an excellent technical critic, he understands the Irish background, he is familiar with the poetry of the past thirty or forty years, and in his own poetry he has been concerned with many of the problems tackled by the older poet. His book is well worth reading, yet in one important aspect of criticism Mr. MacNeice is badly handicapped. In spite of the obvious approach of war in recent years, he confesses that he found himself bewildered and disoriented by its actual outbreak. . . . In consequence, Mr. MacNeice can annotate, elucidate and expound, but cannot judge. To overcome this disability he adopts a comparative method: he sets Yeats against Rilke, Lawrence and T. S. Eliot; he quotes Stephen Spender and W. H. Auden, and even allows himself to diverge into a discussion of minor 'proletarian poets.' Michael Roberts

+ — Spec 166:234 F 28 '41 800w

"The casual reader as well as the serious student of poetry will find rich reward in the recently published analysis of 'The Poetry of W. B. Yeats.' Yeats is so nearly of our own period that the aura of tradition has had no time to gather in a cloud about him. He has been loved, widely read, and, it is suspected, little understood for many years. This careful and fond analysis and criticism are both timely and provocative. They should achieve the goal of all good criticism—that is, promote a new and more intelligent reading of Yeats's poetry, even by his admirers of long standing."

+ Spring'd Republican p10 Ap 8 '41 460w
Times [London] Lit Sup p150 Mr 29 '41 2500w

MCNIFF, WILLIAM JOHN. Heaven on earth; a planned Mormon society. (Annals of America) 262p $3 Mississippi Valley press, Oxford, Ohio

289.3 Mormons and Mormonism 40-10036

"Rather than being merely a history this book deals individually with the different aspects of the Mormon cultural, social, and intellectual life, with the greatest emphasis on the cultural aspect of the sect. The author shows how the Mormon leaders sought to develop a distinctively Mormon culture, in order that they might remain apart from other sects, or at least be able to combat the gentile invasion of their Zion." Crozer Q

"This book really contributes little of new value to Mormon literature either on the factual or interpretative side. Certainly the subtitle is misleading since there is only sketchy reference to planning in the Mormon society. . . . At best, the book might serve to give the reader some conception of aspects of Mormon community life not treated in the more general histories. There is a fair bibliography, especially with reference to local histories and biographical materials which the author used freely. But, on the whole, the volume is built on secondary sources." Kimball Young

+ — Ann Am Acad 213:209 Ja '41 250w

"The method used in the writing makes impossible the reading of the book as a consecutive narrative of events. However this is overbalanced by the ease with which the various aspects of the problem are grasped. The contributions of different influences in the total cultural pattern are clearly seen throughout the book." E. R. Abbott

+ Crozer Q 17:234 Jl '40 190w

Reviewed by G. B. Arbaugh
J Religion 21:107 Ja '41 270w

"This volume represents long and arduous delving in Mormon materials, as is quite evident both in the text and in the numerous footnotes and long bibliography. The style is adequate but in general not exciting, with the possible exception of the introductory chapter. If the potential reader has a real interest in the Mormons this book is the only one in its field and has considerable contributions to make. For the casual reader who is interested in the more spectacular phases of Mormon life the proper suggestion is 'no.'" R. E. Riegel

+ — Social Studies 32:136 Mr '41 240w

MCNUTT, WILLIAM ROY. Worship in the churches. 275p il $2 Am. Bapt.

264 Public worship 41-20127

"Dr. McNutt, who is professor of practical theology in Crozer Theological Seminary, treats of worship as it is, or should be, practiced in non-liturgical churches. He discusses the nature of worship, its relation to faith and life, and the resources of prayer, sermon, liturgy (even in non-liturgical services), ordinances (not 'sacraments'), sermon, music and architecture." (Christian Century) Selected bibliography. Index.

"A thoroughly helpful and practical book for the minister of the average Protestant church."

+ Christian Century 58:1381 N 5 '41 70w

"The selected bibliography is the least satisfactory part of the book, partly because of omissions, and partly because the practice of labelling books as 'o.p.' (Out of print) may be misleading. More than half of the titles in Section B of the bibliography are so marked. 'Out of print' is not a permanent category; new printings are always possible. But this is only a slight defect in a really excellent book." L. A. Weigle

+ — Crozer Q 19:62 Ja '42 650w

MACVEIGH, SUE, pseud. The corpse and the three ex-husbands. 229p $2 Houghton

41-21734

Detective story.

Booklist 38:132 D 15 '41

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p24 N 9 '41 150w

"Even Andy MacVeigh himself could not have done a better job of detecting. What is more to the point, Sue MacVeigh writes as well as she detects. This is her fourth detective story and the first in which Andy has no part." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p18 N 9 '41 180w

"This is a diligently written story with a nice eerie atmosphere, plenty of action and a new and ingenious instrument for committing murder (there's a clew to that, however, and you can figure it out for yourself if you read carefully). Sue MacVeigh is a good detective, and her latest adventures should please practically everyone."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e N 16 '41 180w

MCWHORTER, LUCULLUS VIRGIL. Yellow Wolf: his own story. See Heinmot Hihhih

MACY, RALPH WILLIAM, and SHEPARD, HAROLD HENRY. Butterflies. 247p il maps $3.50 Univ. of Minn.

595.789 Butterflies (W) 41-52748

"A handbook of the butterflies of the United States, complete for the region north of the Potomac and Ohio rivers and east of the Dakotas." (Subtitle) It includes 189 butterflies, representing 162 species, and contains simplified keys for identification. *Not only the adult butterfly but eggs and larvae are described, with complete range of species, even outside the territory included. An introductory chapter tells about butterflies in folklore and legend, butterfly migration, and how to collect and mount butterflies. Index.

Booklist 38:4 S '41

Bookmark 2:7 N '41

"All in all, it is a model of what such a book, should be, and remarkably handy in size." D. C. Peattie

+ Books p13 Ag 17 '41 200w

Wis Lib Bul 37:152 O '41

MADARIAGA, SALVADOR DE. Hernán Cortés, conqueror of Mexico. 554p maps $4 Macmillan [21s Hodder]

B or 92 Cortés, Hernando. Mexico—History (W) 41-21811

A combination biography of Cortés, and a history of the conquest of Mexico. It begins with a picture of the native civilization and religious rites of the Aztecs in the time of Motecucuma, as a preparation for the history of the arrival of the conquistadors. The subsequent sections of the book deal with the first and second conquests of Mexico and the later life of Cortés. Bibliography. Indexes.

Booklist 38:112 D 1 '41

"It takes courage to essay again the story of Hernán Cortés, for thrice before, at least, it has been greatly told. Cortés related it himself in sober and moving letters to his king. His soldier, Bernal Díaz, told it even better from the wealth of his memories at eighty-four because 'I have no other wealth to leave my sons'. And Prescott told it in the great tradition of nineteenth-century history in a work much read and loved today, though in two years it will be a century old. It is a pleasure to report that Salvador de Madariaga has produced a new version worthy of an honorable place alongside theirs." B. D. Wolfe

+ Books p7 N 16 '41 1100w

Reviewed by B. L. Conway

Cath World 154:363 D '41 480w

"The beauty of this great biography is enhanced by its authenticity. Scholarly, yet never ponderous, it is a significant contribution to the history of the Spanish conquest. Truly a book worth reading and worth keeping." L. V. Vila

+ Commonweal 35:297 Ja 9 '42 1100w

"Salvador de Madariaga's excellent biography of Christopher Columbus [Book Review Digest, 1940] was well received in America, and this most recent work deserves an equally good reception. . . . The biography, although not written in a style to appeal to the larger reading public, is, however, well worth reading. Recommended for adults." H. P. Bolman

+ Library J 66:730 S 1 '41 130w

"Once more Don Salvador de Madariaga has given us a book which will inevitably find its place in the library of every student of American history and in every collection of Americana. In this respect the present volume is a worthy companion-piece to Don Salvador's magnificent life of Cristóbal Colón. Here, too, as in the earlier biography, we find the same sure grasp on the very intricate source materials and the same skillful, compact and authoritative interpretation of their meaning. . . . Altogether, this is a great biography of a very remarkable man who towers high, in many respects, above the generality of Spanish conquistadores. No one who desires to know about the history of our continent should fail to possess himself of this book." P. A. Means

+ N Y Times p9 N 2 '41 1600w

"Señor Madariaga makes the most of the superb drama that is the life of Cortés. . . . We are doubly fortunate in having an authoritative biography of Cortés written in English by a Spaniard. Madariaga's command of English is so finished that he dares to indulge in verbal tours de force." W. L. Schurz

+ Sat R of Lit 24:34 D 6 '41 700w

"Here one of the most colorful of modern writers describes one of the most colorful scenes in all history, and the result is completely fascinating. Not for years has there been a scholar and historian who can write like this."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e N 16 '41 700w

MAGEE, DAVID BICKERSTETH. Jam tomorrow. 308p $2.50 Houghton

41-19646

Gay comedy of English upper class manners. Lord Ravensbill, a crotchety old ex-governor of Putumayo, lived in miserly isolation at Monstreley castle, until his widowed daughter arrived with her two marriageable daughters. Lord Ravensbill's dealings over a rare Putumayo stamp had almost reached a remunerative conclusion, but the Vanelys' arrival brought new complications. Red-haired Veronica Vanely, who was every bit as clever as her grandfather, got them all into a jam, and out again.

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

Books p29 O 5 '41 280w

"It all whips up to a high froth of entertainment, with a very valuable two-penny Putumayan stamp at the heart of it. . . . The whole thing is fantastic but highly readable, enlivened by gay and silly conversations and by wild fits of Ravensbill rage." B. S.

+ N Y Times p34 O 5 '41 400w

MAGID, HENRY MEYER. English political pluralism; the problem of freedom and organization. 100p $1.25 Columbia univ. press

320.15 Political science. State, The. Figgis, John Neville. Cole, George Douglas Howard. Laski, Harold Joseph 41-15264

"The aim of this essay is to investigate the theories of the English pluralistic movement in order to discover its contribution to an analysis of freedom. Since this is not primarily a historical study, it is not necessary to consider all the figures in English pluralism or to make exhaustive studies of those considered. Figgis, Cole, and Laski have been chosen because, in the first place, they are the most prominent figures in the movement and, in the second place, they represent different approaches. Figgis was interested in the problem of the church in society; Cole's interests were mainly economic; and Laski's were political and legal." (Introd) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Henry Janzen

Am Pol Sci R 35:1212 D '41 460w

J Philos 38:718 D 18 '41 330w

Social Studies 33:48 Ja '42 20w

MAGILL, WALTER HENDERSON. Administering vocational education. 118p il $1.60 Educ. pubs.

371.425 Vocational education 41-9602

"Magill's treatment of the administration of vocational education is presented in seven parts: the philosophy, the program, the staff, the instruction, the pupil, the results, and a summary." School R

School & Society 53:520 Ap 19 '41 20w

Reviewed by Samuel Barth

School R 49:468 Je '41 500w

MAGINOT, MME MARGUERITE JOSEPH.. See Joseph, M.

MAINWARING, DANIEL (GEOFFREY HOMES, pseud). Forty whacks. 246p $2 Morrow

41-21404

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p28 N 16 '41 120w

"This is a good story." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p22 N 16 '41 280w

"An excellent puzzle, with a good and logical conclusion."

+ New Yorker 17:112 N 22 '41 60w

"High-velocity yarn, with gay dialogue and prime deducing."

+ Time 38:92 D 1 '41 30w

MAIR, JOHN. Never come back. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 277p $2.50 Little [7s 6d Gollancz]

41-19193

Mystery-adventure tale of international intrigue and a secret society.

"The most extraordinary thing about this piece of fiction is that it succeeds in being not merely exciting but also unusually entertaining. It is written with wit and with feeling. Its characters are fully drawn, and there is a kind of reckless humor, peculiar to this author, which salts the whole book." Iris Barry

+ Books p12 N 30 '41 700w

"Because the tale is informed by an idea, because it is brilliantly written, because the characters remain living human beings throughout their strange experiences, it stands out among those stories of secret societies to which in form it belongs." E. R. Punshon

+ Manchester Guardian p3 My 27 '41 270w

"Some of the mechanisms of the ordinary thriller are here, but the general tone is sophisticated; all the crimes go unpunished; there is no beautiful maiden to be rescued, no one is actuated by patriotic motives. This is an amusing book. I hope it will prove to be the starting point of a new kind of thriller in which political events subsequent to 1920 are considered mentionable." George Orwell

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:16 Ja 4 '41 340w

N Y Times p32 N 9 '41 480w

"English Dashiell Hammett style, exciting as anything, but with a last paragraph that almost kills this superb adventure story."

+ New Yorker 17:104 O 11 '41 80w

"Cold-blooded chronicle of murder, 5th col. stuff, and generally unvarnished wickedness. Bulging with hateful people brilliantly portrayed."

Sat R of Lit 24:36 O 18 '41 45w

"The present war serves as a dim backcloth for Never Come Back, this speedy extravaganza on a James Handley Chase theme, and it should please the Miss Blandish fans, for it is tiresomely bright, and has sudden splashes of squeamishness in the tough mixture of kidnappings, torturings, killings, escapes and excursions." John Hampson

Spec 166:456 Ap 25 '41 170w

"A thoroughly unprincipled, exciting, ably written tale."

Time 38:96 N 3 '41 40w

"Mr. Mair may have set out to 'debunk' the conventional thriller, for he presents his exciting situations with an impudent wit and a cool cynicism that at moments make the reader feel that the author's tongue is in his cheek. If so, in spite of himself, he has produced a book that is genuinely thrilling as well as consistently entertaining."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p333 J1 12 '41 140w

MAJOR, RALPH HERMON. Fatal partners: war and disease. 342p il $3.50 Doubleday

909 War, Medicine, Military, Epidemics, Infection and infectious diseases (W) 41-16469

A survey of the interrelationships between war and disease from ancient times to the present, and of the roles played by doctors and nurses in combatting the ills that have visited soldiers and civilians alike in the wake of great wars. The author is professor of internal medicine at the University of Kansas. Index.

"This otherwise brilliant, extremely interesting and important volume is marred for me by a tiny fault, not due to Dr. Major. This is the publisher's use, as the symbol for medicine, of the winged staff of Hermes, messenger of the gods and patron of commerce, thieves, and prostitutes. The symbol of medicine is the staff of Aesculapius, a cane with a single coiled serpent. That the United States Army makes the same mistake is no reason why people who could know better should do likewise. One purpose of Dr. Major's superb historical survey is to show that armies still can learn much from medicine." C. D. Leake, M.D.

+ Am J Pub Health 32:100 Ja '42 550w

Booklist 38:77 N 1 '41

Reviewed by Hugh Cabot, M.D.

Books p39 N 2 '41 650w

Reviewed by L. R. Etzkorn

Library J 66:668 Ag '41 80w

New Repub 105:629 N 10 '41 80w

"The book would be better if its author had kept more closely and fully to his special field and made fewer endeavors as general historian. But it is, nevertheless, to be recommended as a contribution to popular knowledge and thought."

+ N Y Times p25 S 28 '41 500w

"Dr. Major is supremely fitted by his professional training in medicine, augmented by an intimate acquaintance with European languages and by extensive and repeated travelling and residence in European countries, to review the history of the association of the apocalyptic partners. . . . The author's clear and flowing style and always accurate statements make this a fascinating piece of reading." Logan Clendenning

+ Sat R of Lit 24:20 O 4 '41 550w

Reviewed by Clifford Moore

Spring'd Republican p7e Ag 31 '41 1400w

Wis Lib Bul 37:152 O '41

MALCOLM-SMITH, GEORGE. Slightly perfect. 324p $2 Random house

41-12692

Young Milton Haskins had a definite Plan in life which included being vice-president of an insurance company at 40. But at 28 he unexpectedly and unprecedently is caught out in a mistake and immediately resigns his position. In his flight from his early life he joins a carnival troupe, earns his way there, and finally is restored to his old position—and to the girl who loved him but had feared he was a "human adding machine" only.

Booklist 38:12 S '41

"Slightly Perfect" is written in sprightly style and is steadily if not overwhelmingly funny. Mr. Malcolm-Smith is inclined to be a bit overlavish with the absurd or extravagant simile." F. H. Bullock

+ Books p6 J1 13 '41 500w

"The story is both riotous and statistical—no mean achievement. Its happy dénouement leads one to believe that a carnival can humanize the most case-hardened actuary. This reader would like to think so, but is a bit skeptical because on the third to the last page—and just before his proposal—Milton makes as neat an insurance sales-talk as ever was uttered by your favorite insurance man." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p12 J1 13 '41 390w

New Yorker 17:70 J1 12 '41 60w

MALCOLMSON, MRS ANNE (BURNETT). Yankee Doodle's cousins; il. by Robert McCloskey. 268p $2.50 Houghton

398.2 Folklore—U.S. Legends—U.S.

(W) 41-24262

Humorous retelling of the stories of some of the real and legendary characters who have become the national heroes of American folklore. Designed for fifth grade readers. Among the twenty-seven stories are tales of Captain Kidd, Ichabod Paddock, Johnny Applesed, Mike Fink, Dan'l Boone, Davy Crockett, Pirate Jean Lafitte, Pecos Bill, Paul Bunyan, Glosary.

"Taking it all and all this is one of our children's handsomest appendices to history." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 D 21 '41 150w

MALCOLMSON, ANNE—Continued

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 D '41

"In order that American children may know their American heroes these vigorous tales, written by a teacher, have been brought out in a large volume, arresting in format and illustrations. . . Now, families possessing this comprehensive and entertaining book, have only to turn to it when their curiosity is aroused on finding an allusion to Captain Kidd and Stormalong. . . Robert McCloskey has approached the requirements of this truly American book with delightful freshness and freedom in the pictures." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:473 N '41 140w

"The author has edited skillfully, keeping the humor and spirit of the originals. Excellent to read aloud or to tell to Scout troops. Recommended." M. R. Lucas

+ Library J 66:1049 D 1 '41 90w

"This is the first comprehensive collection of these tales for younger children, who appreciate a good whopper as well as their elders. . . They have been retold with the first requirement of such tales, a hearty enjoyment of their absurdities and extravagances, which Robert McCloskey seems to have shared in making his strong, clear-lined illustrations. And surely the right to laughter, to individualism, and even an innocent braggadocio, embodied in these tales, is part of the heritage which America is today determined to keep." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p9 Ja 4 '42 380w

New Yorker 17:146 D 6 '41 20w

MALCOLMSON, DAVID. Ten heroes. 307p $2.50
Duell

808.3 Fiction. Literature, Comparative 41-7223

"Mr. Malcolmson inquires into the problem of why certain stories move us profoundly, or are again and again successful in different versions, and whether any universal relation can be among these stories. It is his belief that these stories which have a universal appeal are those which reflect symbolically the experiences of Everyman, so that every one can see himself as their hero. He has found five such experiences, and has turned them out to produce ten, for as he says every hero may be a villain when looked at from another angle." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

Booklist 37:488 Je 15 '41

"Mr. Malcolmson is right as far as he goes, but he might perhaps have given us a clearer explanation of his character-types or ideas had he approached his material not only in a rather confused psychological manner, but through some study of social patterns as determining human reactions to life. His book will interest students of fiction and fiction-writing." E. L. Walton

+ — Books p21 Ap 20 '41 600w

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 17 '41 450w

"A highly original and stimulating book. . . A part of the pleasure one takes in the book comes from its stimulus to disagreement, as well as from agreement. It is a wise book, but its wisdom lies not [in] closing questions but in opening them. And it lies also in the many casual comments by the way, which again stir the reader to a really co-operative agreement or disagreement." Basil Davenport

+ Sat R of Lit 23:8 Mr 22 '41 500w

MALLESON, LUCY BEATRICE (ANTHONY GILBERT, ANNE MEREDITH, pseud.). She vanished in the dawn [Eng title: Vanishing corpse]. (Mystery house publication) 272p $2
Arcadia [7s 6d Collins]
Mystery story.

"Throughout the book the actual narrative will keep the reader tense with interest. But for the bones of the plot [the author] seems to have been content with any aged improbability she chanced to think of." E. R. Punshon

+ — Manchester Guardian p7 Mr 4 '41 300w

"The tale of middle-aged Laura Verity's strange adventures begins as a rather whimsical horror story, veers suddenly into humor, and then continues as a straightforward and readable whodunit for the major part of its course." K. I.

+ N Y Times p33 S 28 '41 150w

Reviewed by Nicholas Blake

Spec 166:156 F 7 '41 60w

"Whatever the quality is that distinguishes the new kind of detective-story from the old, 'The Vanishing Corpse' undoubtedly possesses it. You can be lost in it. Though the mystery is puzzling enough for any expert, there is no putting the book down to discover whether you are clever enough to anticipate the answer."

Times [London] Lit Sup p45 Ja 25 '41 210w

MALLETT, DANIEL TROWBRIDGE. Supplement to Mallett's Index of artists, international-biographical. 319p $8.50 Bowker

927 Artists—Dictionaries (W)

"Including painters, sculptors, illustrators, engravers and etchers of the past and the present not in the 1935 edition." Follows the plan of the original work [Book Review Digest, 1935] and includes 18,000 names and a necrology." Booklist

Booklist 37:357 Ap 1 '41

"The second group of biographical sources in the Supplement is a very useful new feature. It is an alphabetical list of American and foreign art galleries, museums, libraries, colleges, publishers, etc. that can give information about artists not found in the sources given in Part I or can give helpful additional data about those found in the reference works. It can be used as a handy address book and has a useful classified index. . . Certain inconsistencies should be borne in mind when using this volume. The books listed are not completely indexed, therefore, they contain some artists not given in Mallett's work. It is even more regrettable that an artist may be included in one of the references yet its symbol does not appear after his name. Some artists given in the basic volume are reindexed in the Supplement, some that might be are not. . . In spite of its failings, this book is recommended for use in libraries and museums, and by art students, dealers and collectors. Its shortcomings must be kept in mind. Its contribution as a guide to biographical material on artists is unique." A. B. Farley

+ — Library J 66:68 Ja 15 '41 1100w

MALLETT, GERTRUDE ETHEL. Into the wind; il. by Norman Reeves. 295p $2 Double-day

(W) 41-18124

Sabra Dunning wanted to be a nurse so that she could help in the development of the clinic which her father, a well-known doctor, had planned before his death. Her three months' probation, filled with study and hard work, is described in detail for girls of high school age.

Booklist 38:99 N 15 '41

"Depicts the discipline and devotion of the nurse's training without the sentimentality that frequently mars books on that subject." E. J. Gray

+ Horn Bk M 17:479 N '41 30w

"Nurses who have read the book do not believe that most probationists are held down as they are in this book, and though their life is difficult, everything is more interesting and much more amusing than pictured here. There is a fiancé, however, to help lighten the atmosphere and the Superintendent unbends a trifle, but the book is quite detailed and lacking in humor. It will, no doubt, be read with pleasure by a good many of our girls, and is deserving of a place on our shelves." Sonja Wennerblad

Library J 66:847 O 1 '41 130w

Wis Lib Bul 37:162 O '41

MALONE, KEMP, tr. Ten Old English poems; put into modern English alliterative verse. 49p $1.25 Johns Hopkins press

829.1 Anglo-Saxon poetry—Collections 41-11856

"Kemp Malone, by modern English alliterative verse, gives us 'The Old English Poems.' Six of them he takes from the earliest known anthology of English poetry, the 'Exeter Book.' All the poems were written between the seventh and tenth centuries. Preserving the diction and style of the originals as much as possible, the translator has tried to be as faithful as he can to the literal meaning." Christian Science Monitor

Reviewed by Pearl Strachan

Christian Science Monitor p11 S 6 '41 170w

"Professor Malone's versions are worth reading for their own sake. The weight of the language is here, its heft, its nice balance, the original rhythms and characteristic effects, the quadruple beat of the regular line, and its curious longer extension, counterpoint and sprung rhythm considerably antedating the discoveries of Father Hopkins. These poems of devotion and reflection, of love and battle, are grave and strong with virtues worth our study and assuring our delight. . . In what they say, as well as how they say it, these poems are good to have; and not so obsolete either." Rolfe Humphries

+ Nation 153:97 Ag 2 '41 550w

MALONEY, JOHN. Let there be mercy; the odyssey of a Red cross man; foreword by Theodore Roosevelt. 337p il $3 Doubleday

940.54771 World war, 1939—Hospitals, charities, etc. World war, 1939—Personal narratives, American. Red cross. U.S. American national Red cross 41-21431

The author, who had been a war correspondent in the Far East and in Abyssinia, was sent to Europe early in 1940 to act as official observer for the American Red cross. His book is a record of his travels from the Arctic ocean to the Mediterranean through fifteen countries. What he has attempted, he says "has been to give American readers some idea of the unspeakable hardships and suffering that the little people of Europe—the peasants, the shopkeepers and their clerks, the doctors and lawyers, the fathers and mothers, the children too young to understand the turmoil breaking around them—were forced to endure through the first eighteen months of Hitler's war." (Author's note) Index.

Booklist 38:175 Ja 15 '42

"Mr. Maloney is pre-eminently a war correspondent. . . His book is journalism in best sense; it is straightforward, vivid and convincing. It tells, simply and directly, how ordinary people and some extraordinary ones looked and acted and felt through the weeks and months when their world crashed about them. Though you may think you have read it in the newspapers and seen it in the newsreels, this connected account of Europe in 1940—east, west, north and south—is both enlightening and impressive." Mary Ross

+ Books p13 Ja 4 '42 600w

"The author's sincerity rather than literary talent makes the book valuable as a picture of one phase of the tragedy of war." H. R. Burdett

+ Library J 66:792 S 15 '41 120w

Reviewed by H. A. Stevens

N Y Times p16 N 9 '41 850w

"Mr. Maloney makes light of the dangers he faced and the discomforts he endured. His account will make every American proud of the part our Red Cross is playing in alleviating human misery." J. E. G. Fravell

+ Sat R of Lit 24:24 D 6 '41 600w

Spring'd Republican p7e D 28 '41 550w

MALORY, SIR THOMAS. Stories of King Arthur; [adapted] by U. Waldo Cutler; il. by Elinore Blaisdell. 308p $2 Crowell

398.22 Arthur, king of Britain (W) 41-16602

A modernization of Malory's Morte d'Arthur, for ages eleven to thirteen. First published in 1904, revised in 1924, the present edition contains new illustrations which are charming and authentic as to detail.

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p8 N 16 '41 20w

Christian Century 58:1031 Ag 20 '41 30w

"If there were not already two excellent editions of the King Arthur stories based on Malory's Morte d'Arthur, by Sidney Lanier and Mary Macleod, this contribution might be more enthusiastically received; such being the case, Mr. Cutler's book assumes less significance. A comparison with The Boy's King Arthur by Lanier reveals similar language and story structure. If this new volume has any claim to distinction, it is in the carefully authenticated illustrations by Elinore Blaisdell. . . A thoroughly satisfactory edition for eleven- to thirteen-year-olds, to supplement, not supplant, those by Lanier and Macleod." Claire Nolte

Library J 66:798 S 15 '41 200w

MALROY, GENEVA DE. See De Malroy, G.

MAMMEN, EDWARD WILLIAM. Tom, Dick and Jerry; il. by Jessie Robinson. [32]p $1 Harper

41-20168

Usually their Aunt Jennie asked Tom, Dick, or Jerry, to visit her one at a time in her country home. One summer she asked all three at once and found her hands uncomfortably full. Amusing pictures.

"A slight story with a touch of hilarity in the text and amusing line drawings that will strike a responsive note in children from five to eight." Elizabeth Fishell

+ Library J 66:908 O 15 '41 80w

"Fairly humorous." R. C. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 24:14 N 8 '41 20w

MANCE, SIR HARRY OSBORNE. Road and rail transport problem; with an introd. by Sir Arthur Salter. 166p $3 (7s 6d) Pitman

385.122 Transportation. Railroads. Highway transportation [41-2272]

A survey of the internal transport situation in Great Britain. The author "outlines a solution which . . . may be summarised as an attempt to reconcile the 'value' and the 'cost' bases of charging by pooling the 'fixed costs' of both road and rail. . . Traders would thus retain their liberty to consign by alternative routes, but the rates would reflect changes in the prime cost of transport and the tendency would be for traffic to pass by the most efficient, i.e. the cheapest, route. Competition would be robbed of its more erratic and devastating effects, but it would be unnecessary to reconstitute a monopoly of inland transport in which the railways would inevitably become the dominant partner." (Economist)

Reviewed by H. R. Trumbower

Am Econ R 31:160 Mr '41 500w

MANCE, HARRY OSBORNE—Continued

"Sir Osborne Mance is to be congratulated upon having produced a brief survey of the internal transport situation which is both readable and comprehensive. Moreover, in the short space of 161 pages, he outlines a solution which, if it involves certain practical difficulties, is certainly free from bias and loose thinking."

+ Economist 138:935 My 25 '40 250w

MANCHESTER, FREDERICK ALEXANDER, and SHEPARD, ODELL, eds. Irving Babbitt, man and teacher. 337p $3 Putnam

B or 92 Babbitt, Irving 41-18971

"This is a collection of unusually interesting essays of appreciation by a group of men and women who came under the influence of Irving Babbitt either as pupils or friends. Some of the essays have already appeared in print. All of them portray Babbitt as the outstanding leader and educator of his time. Irving Babbitt was for many years Professor at Harvard University and wrote numerous books on literature and literary criticisms. Amongst the authors of these biographical sketches are Stuart Sherman, T. S. Eliot, and Odell Shepard." Library J

Reviewed by Alfred Kazin
Books p4 Ja 18 '42 1650w

"One reads this symposium of brilliant memoirs with the conviction that they deal with a great character, with a man of tough mental fiber, of firm conviction in a moral sense of right. The reader cannot fail to wish that he, too, might have sat under the instruction of so great a scholar who was at the same time a representative of the best in honorable manhood." A. F. Gilmore
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 N 8 '41 1000w

"We fear this is not one of those books that 'America has been waiting for.' But it is one, we are sure, that many persons gravely concerned about the future of an experiment in representative government, begun more than a century and a half ago, will be deeply thankful for. It is not a book indispensable to the understanding of Babbitt's ideas and positions, nor to the appreciation of his life-and-death relevance to the crises confronting us at this fateful moment in history. Nevertheless, we can hardly conceive it possible for anyone who has cared enough for his country's well-being to have read 'Democracy and Leadership' not to deem it so." J. A. Clark

+ Commonweal 35:26 O 24 '41 1100w

"The book will have a restricted appeal. It is a very valuable addition to books on education." Emma Olcott

+ Library J 66:139 F 1 '41 100w

Spring'd Republican p12 O 16 '41 240w

MANN, THOMAS. The transposed heads; a legend of India; tr. from the German by H. T. Lowe-Porter. 196p $2 Knopf

(W) 41-7867

A short novel by the author of The Magic Mountain and The Beloved Returns. The scene is ancient India at a time when men and gods talked together. The fable concerns Sita of the Beautiful Hips and the two men, close friends, who were her husbands.

Booklist 37:491 Je 15 '41

"Rare inaccuracies do not in any way detract from the spell-binding charm of this fable, which I regard as a minor masterpiece. Mr. Mann has actually caught the spirit of the Brahmin India of the bygone days." Krishnalal Shridharani

+ Books p3 Je 8 '41 950w

Reviewed by Earle Birney

Canadian Forum 21:153 Ag '41 350w

"As so often with Thomas Mann, a streak of callousness appears. His story is more convincing as a study in logic and mathematics than as a study in human nature. However, his literary virtuosity is so great that the reader is not likely to cavil. Once again the Aristotelian dictum about the impossible-probable is justified: the preposterous is made plausible." Theodore Maynard

+ Commonweal 34:211 Je 20 '41 600w

"In retelling this old Sanskrit legend the author weaves a fantasy rich in humor and ripe philosophy. He interprets our own frailties in the wisdom of the East. The translation is excellent and retains much of the poetic delicacy of the original." Emma Olcott

+ Library J 66:463 My 15 '41 70w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 22 '41 250w

"It is true that the story is told with Dr. Mann's absolutely unequaled skill and virtuosity. He is like a magician rolling up his sleeves and smiling at the audience while he announces that he is going to perform miracles—and then performing them before our eyes... The more difficult the problem he has to face, the more brilliantly he solves it... He enjoys his own skill, has fun with his characters, speaks in rhyme when the mood is on him, and evokes an atmosphere of mellow sensuality that is new to his writing. One feels, however, that he is somewhat too self-conscious, as if the magician were more interested in his technique than in the results of it; on this occasion, his hand is quicker than his heart. And although the audience gapes and applauds, it is not deeply moved. Perhaps it is puzzled by the meaning of all these feats. Perhaps it is wondering how Joseph will fare on his release from prison." Malcolm Cowley
+ New Repub 104:861 Je 23 '41 850w

Reviewed by Anthony West

New Statesman & Nation 22:427 N 15 '41 440w

"The Transposed Heads' is another of the author's contributions to the vision of a new humanity, which will surmount the disastrous effects that have grown out of the enfeebling divorce of religion and morals from the art of conduct, a free humanity which will emerge from its present trials to build a new society wherein all of its emotional and rational powers can be integrated and rejuvenated. This is literature, not of passing interest, but of deep, enduring value, a miraculous union of criticism and creation, which awakens understanding, dissolves prejudice and tends to clarify and elevate human aspirations." E. E. Meyer

+ N Y Times p1 Je 8 '41 3100w

"The Transposed Heads' seems to me a not entirely harmonious mixture of satire and dialectics. The dialectics, mainly in the first fifty pages, I found overelaborate; others may find them subtle. The satire, also rather exhaustive, has its point, and at times (especially in the account of the mental processes of an ascetic named Kamadamana) is brilliantly witty. But the effect in general is confusing, for one is not sure whether Dr. Mann is trying to tell a comic-grotesque anecdote or to utter profound parables about the nature of love." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:74 Je 7 '41 800w

Pratt p13 D '41

"The tale could be read wholly for its exquisite surface beauties, for its atmosphere bathed in natural sensuousness and delicate amorosness, for its complete mastery of our disbelief, so that shepherd boy and mystic shrine and magic healer seem alike real and unquestionable. Mann speaks with an inspired tongue that seems to have found the accents and intonations and mental convolutions out of which the legend once proceeded. But if we read for this alone we should be reading only half of Mann." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 Je 7 '41 750w

"The tale is short but disquisitional, and embellished by sly humour—but the necessary Indian sensuousness is too heavily lacquered on, too decorative; and the whole conception is somewhat artily naive." Kate O'Brien
+ Spec 167:189 Ag 22 '41 300w

"The legend was a bloody, innocent little story with an innocent little point. By the time Thomas Mann got through with it, it was about as innocent as a Gorgon's smile... This story is told with a great writer's irony at its most bland, cruel and elegant. It is an irony which controls and blends extreme psychological slapstick with suggestions of the most sinister and sorrowful mysteries of life."

+ Time 37:94 Je 9 '41 550w

"With all sincere respect for Herr Mann, an intellectual romantic of impressive power, the philosophical disquisitions of his latest work give the impression of making a cloudy and ponderous ado about nothing, while the arch humour with which they are introduced can only be described as elephantine."

Times [London] Lit Sup p393 Ag 16 '41 550w

Reviewed by Robert Littell

Yale R n s 30:xiv summer '41 20w

MANNERS, DAVID JOSEPH. Convenient season. 281p $2.50 Dutton

41-11686

Young Peter West flunked out of college and rebelled against office work, so his father finally relented and gave him permission to try out farming on the land of his forefathers now controlled by his maternal aunt. There is a secret tragedy which has kept Peter and his aunt apart but after several months together there comes understanding and mutual help.

"The author handles the love interest in somewhat arbitrary fashion, but his account of Harriet's capitulation is convincing and dramatically presented. But it is the farm life itself—the plowing and planting and harvesting, the daily chores and kitchen activities—that gives 'Convenient Season' its flavor and substance."

George Conrad

+ Books p6 Ag 10 '41 360w

Reviewed by E. S. Brown

Library J 66:669 Ag '41 70w

Reviewed by Charlotte Dean

N Y Times p10 Ag 17 '41 150w

"It must be admitted that Peter West's emotional life, his love affair with Lilly, is always more convincing than his joyous embracing of the soil, a theme to which Mr. Manners gives almost equal prominence. Nova Scotia remains a ghostly backdrop, Peter a New York romantic with a hoe. This robs the story of some of its depth, without, however, really affecting its essential fabric of light, eager romanticism, or its warm summer mood."

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:7 Ag 16 '41 200w

"Altogether Mr Manners has done a light novel that is not too light, a book that reads well in a hammock but will hold the attention too when dog-days are past."

+ Springfield Republican p7e Ag 10 '41 240w

MANNHEIM, HERMANN. Social aspects of crime in England between the wars. 382p $5 Norton [18s Allen, G]

364 Crime and criminals—Great Britain. Great Britain—Social conditions. Criminal statistics [A 41-629]

"Dr. Mannheim begins with two chapters (and an appendix) of history, analysis, and interpretation devoted to the English official 'Criminal Statistics'. . . The chapters following deal successively with the relation of crime to unemployment and strikes, to drink, to methods of business, and to gambling; then come two on juvenile delinquency (including the Borstal-Aylesbury one already mentioned), and one each on female delinquency and recidivism." (Manchester Guardian) The author is a German criminologist who has worked for many years in London as a refugee under the auspices of the Leon bequest committee of the University of London. Index

Reviewed by R. C. K. Ensor

Manchester Guardian p8 D 24 '40 500w

"Dr. Mannheim's grasp of English penology is thorough, and with the permission and help of the Home Office departments concerned he has been enabled to collate and analyse a number of official records and other first-hand material. . . . Written or conceived, presumably, in German, this book has been rendered into what is on the whole idiomatic and forcible English. It has, however, been imperfectly 'vetted,' and one rather too often stumbles over German turns of speech. Easily avoidable, they should in another edition be eliminated. As it is, they contribute to make more deterrent what inevitably is in many parts rather formidable reading." R. C. K. Ensor

+ — Spec 166:15 Ja 3 '41 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p22 Ja 11 '41 900w

MANNING, WILLIAM RAY, ed. Diplomatic correspondence of the United States: Canadian relations, 1784-1860; 4v; v 1, 1784-1820, documents 1-661. 947p map $5 Carnegie endowment; Columbia univ. press

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—Canada. Canada—Foreign relations—U.S. Canada—History—Sources (40-34262)

"This collection of diplomatic correspondence of the United States concerning Canadian relations is one of many studies of the relations between the United States and Canada, carried on under the auspices of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. The publication, of which this is the first volume, will contain four volumes. . . . The year 1820, chosen to terminate this volume has no particular significance in relation to the subject-matter other than being the end of a decade. . . . The remaining forty years of the period covered by the publication will be divided approximately equally into three more volumes." (Pref) Index.

"Dr. Manning's task of selection has been onerous, but he has brought to it the same high devotion to scholarship that has characterized the fifteen volumes in the two preceding series of this monumental work." W. B. Hesseltine

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:393 Ap '41 210w

"The editing has been faultlessly done, according to the high standards set by Dr. Manning's earlier publications. His voluminous footnotes are often more important than the documents themselves, and usually longer. His thumbnail sketches of the leading characters responsible for this voluminous correspondence are excellently done. The volume will be welcomed by all students of Canadian-American relations." Carl Wittke

+ Ann Am Acad 214:228 Mr '41 500w

Reviewed by A. B. Corey

Canadian Hist R 22:325 S '41 450w

MANNING-SANDERS, RUTH (MRS GEORGE MANNING-SANDERS). Mystery at Penmarth; il. by Susanne Suba. 246p $2 McBride [7s 6d Collins]

(W) 41-16068

Four children and their cousin piece together some old pirate tales and solve the mystery of an ancient house in Cornwall.

Booklist 38:68 O 15 '41

"The narrator is an energetic little girl who puts her heart into all she does; the story loses no time. Mysteries seldom have good pictures; this does." M. L. Becker

+ Books p6 Ag 31 '41 350w

"Ruth Manning-Saunders writes Mystery at Penmarth with a light touch and a sureness in sketching character." E. J. Gray

+ Horn Bk M 17:480 N '41 80w

MANNING-SANDERS, RUTH—Continued

"An improbable tale, but superior to the average mystery in style and characterization. Will be useful to supply the never-ending demand for mystery stories." Marian Herr

+ Library J 66:846 O 1 '41 60w

"The mystery is revealed too soon, so that there is a faint air of anticlimax about the latter half of the story, and one never gets to know Sally and Bang and Jimmy as well as in the earlier book, but the creepy atmosphere is well sustained, as is the sense of desperate earnestness with which the children go about their play, and any tale for entertainment as well written as this one deserves reading." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p10 O 19 '41 260w

MANTLE, BURNS, ed. Best plays of 1940-41; and the Year book of the drama in America. (v 22) 482p il $3 Dodd

898.82 Dramas—Collections. American drama—Collections. Theater—Yearbooks (20-21432)

Contains in abbreviated form the following plays: Native son, by Paul Green and Richard Wright; Watch on the Rhine, by Lillian Hellman; The corn is green, by Emlyn Williams; Lady in the dark, by Moss Hart; Arsenic and old lace, by Joseph Kesselring; My sister Eileen, by Joseph Fields and Jerome Chodorov; Flight to the west, by Elmer Rice; Claudia, by Rose Franken; Mr and Mrs North, by Owen Davis; George Washington slept here, by George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart. Introductory chapters cover the seasons in New York, Chicago, San Francisco and Southern California. Indexes.

Booklist 38:92 N 15 '41

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

Books p13 D 28 '41 150w

"Although the season of 1940-41 was the slimmest in recent years—only 69 openings in all—Burns Mantle's valiant record of the Ten Best is still a fat and fascinating volume."

+ Theatre Arts 26:139 F '42 200w

MARCHAND, LESLIE A. The Athenaeum; a mirror of Victorian culture. 411p $3.50 Univ. of N.C. press

052 Athenaeum (periodical). Criticism. English literature—History and criticism 41-7970

History of the English literary magazine, The Athenaeum, established in 1828, with the aim of becoming "the resort of the most distinguished philosophers, historians, orators and poets of our day." As a matter of fact it did not achieve success until 1830, when Charles Wentworth Dilke took over as editor. The book is divided into sections called: A mirror of culture; The fight against puffery; The Athenaeum circle under Dilke; Criticism of contemporaries. Bibliography. Index.

"For the general reader Mr. Marchand's thorough and very scholarly study will presumably be of most interest in that section dealing with 'Athenaeum' reviews of works by authors whose reputations have survived." G. S. Hellman

+ Books p27 My 11 '41 550w

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 17 '41 750w

"Mr. Marchand's book is not merely scholarly; it is readable as well." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p12 My 4 '41 600w

"Mr. Marchand has everything except the last gift, that of making his period and his book come alive. No one interested in Victorian periodicals can afford to miss this book; no one who has any real knowledge of the men and movements represented by The Athenaeum can do other than lament that Mr. Marchand, in spite of his diligent study of the files . . . has been unable to dream himself back into the London of Dilke, of Hepworth Dixon, of Theodore Watts, of Norman MacColl, of Vernon Rendall." R. E. Roberts

+ — Sat R of Lit 24:6 My 24 '41 360w

MARCUSE, HERBERT. Reason and revolution; Hegel and the rise of social theory. 431p $3.75 Oxford

301 Hegel, Georg Wilhelm Friedrich. Sociology—History. Dialectic. Positivism 41-8731

"The book attempts to re-interpret Hegel's philosophy in its bearing on European thought from the time of the French Revolution to present-day Fascism and National Socialism. The first section presents an extensive analysis of Hegel's system, placing special emphasis upon his earlier writings, which have only recently been published and which have not been translated into English. . . The second section of the book demonstrates this relation through an analysis of the fundamental principles of Marx's dialectical theory of society. The author draws the conclusion that Hegelianism implied a dangerous opposition to the prevailing social and intellectual forms. The third section of the book tries to verify this conclusion by examining the development of post-Hegelian social and political theory, particularly in the writings of the positivist opponents of Hegelianism. . . The concluding chapter deals with the place of Neo-Hegelianism in the rise of modern authoritarianism and of Hegelianism in the Fascist and National Socialist ideology. The basic motives of Hegel's philosophy are shown to contradict the aims of the present-day authoritarian states." Publisher's note

"This book is an interesting and worthwhile contribution to the intellectual history of the nineteenth century and our own time." Hans Kohn

+ Ann Am Acad 217:178 S '41 380w

Reviewed by J. N. Vaughan

Commonweal 35:274 Ja 2 '42 750w

"There is a great need for a straightforward exposition of Hegel in intelligible English which would enable the intelligent layman to grasp the essential principles of Hegel's philosophy. It is a pity that Mr. Marcuse has subordinated philosophic exposition and criticism to tendentious apologetic." Sidney Hook

Living Age 360:594 Ag '41 1400w

Reviewed by Herbert Rosinski

Nation 153:231 S 13 '41 850w

Reviewed by Sidney Hook

New Repub 105:90 Jl 21 '41 1500w

MARIE-JEANNE. See Pelus, M. J.

MARION, ELIZABETH. Ellen Spring. 328p $2.50 Crowell

41-51947

At the age of thirty-four Ellen Spring finally is able to escape from life with a despicable husband, and with her young son she finds refuge in a run-down farmhouse in the wheat lands of the Northwest. The friendship of three men, the work of redeeming the house and grounds, the solitude of farm country as well as its social contacts, in the end help Ellen to face another meeting with Maurice and win full rights to happiness and freedom.

"The story is deftly told with unusual economy of means, and in places with real power and beauty, by a writer who has the singular gift of making Henry James effects flower naturally out of Knut Hamsun materials. Whether to her other talents she joins the talent for growing, which includes outgrowing—that is the question that will matter the most to her future." Wilson Follett

+ Atlantic F '42 270w

Booklist 38:80 N 1 '41

"While Ellen Spring is not entirely a sympathetic character, she is a unique and interesting one. Miss Marion's writing, possessed of a deep lyrical quality tuned in a minor key, is excellently suited to her portrayal." Rose Feld

+ Books p4 O 19 '41 700w

"While the novel has beauty to offer, there is a striking absence of prettiness or sentimentality. For this reason it may attract from readers in general a response rather less warm than was accorded to 'The Day Will Come' [Book Review Digest, 1939]. It pretty well settles, however—and in the affirmative—the question of whether or not Elizabeth Marion has a career as a novelist ahead of her." Margaret Wallace

+ N Y Times p29 O 19 '41 750w

"A well-rounded novel of people deeply and fallibly human. Ellen Spring and her neighbors are people we all know, and the emotional turmoil that she so gracefully effaces might well find a counterpart in thousands of Ellen Springs throughout the world. Lovable characters contrast sharply with crabbed personalities in the story, which is one the reader will remember for its homely phrasing and courageous vision."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e O 26 '41 240w

Wis Lib Bul 37:202 D '41

MARITAIN, JACQUES. France my country through the disaster. (Golden measure ser) 117p $1.25 Longmans

940.5344 World war, 1939—France

41-51836

"An able French philosopher's analysis of the causes of France's downfall, with a survey of conditions to November, 1940, and some forward-looking thoughts. He stresses the 'bankruptcy' of leadership, political and military, admitting that the French people are not blameless since they are responsible for their leaders, but contending that they are not decadent, that the disaster resulted from political, rather than moral weakness. He points out that the fundamental virtues of his people have brought them through previous bitter trials and bespeaks our faith that these virtues survive and will bring about the recovery of their political genius." Library J

Booklist 37:512 J1 1 '41

"If you would take Maritain's brilliant little book at its true worth you must bear in mind that he can speak of the qualities of France with as much authority as General Weygand has when there is military action. No one represents better than does Maritain the inner character of the effort at moral and intellectual regeneration which absorbed younger Frenchmen after 1918. . . . Maritain's analysis of Vichy is the best I have read. He rightly sees that however valuable the effort of General de Gaulle may be, the real struggle is in France itself." G. N. Shuster

+ Books p17 S 14 '41 700w

Reviewed by B. L. Conway

Cath World 154:122 O '41 450w

"This small book tempts to superlatives concerning the greatness of its spirit, the clarity of its thinking, the beauty of its style."

+ Christian Century 58:722 My 28 '41 200w

"Such a book as this is bound to give the measure of the man who wrote it and 'France My Country' is a noble book." W. M. Frohock

+ Commonweal 34:161 Je 6 '41 850w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert

Foreign Affairs 19:375 J1 '41 30w

Reviewed by A. L. Jewett

Library J 66:399 My 1 '41 140w

"To the reader who knows the intricate prosody of Maritain's work, the little volume is a cluster of filaments leading back and forth among his religious and social doctrines. But any careful reader will get a good deal from the eminently sane assembly of notations, even though not one of them alone may strike him as particularly new. The fall of France is analyzed. . . . The psychology of the dazing defeat is explained; and of the people under the Nazi asphyxiation. The mind here at work has quite as much information as the journalists and modish novelists, but moves within dimensions which the shallow gentlemen ignore." Waldo Frank

+ — Nation 152:643 My 31 '41 1250w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 104:828 Je 16 '41 1300w

"His book is not concerned with bringing us fresh information; its task is of analysis. But as the analysis is tragic, so it is for that the more pertinent and challenging." K. W.

+ N Y Times p3 My 25 '41 500w

"That the book, however, is excellent, is worth repeating. More books like this, read carefully, would help clarify and enlighten public opinion here and elsewhere. That the book has a serious fault, cannot be denied—there is not enough of it. The author, for example, touches upon, hints at, the influence of materialism in the collapse of France and of democracy elsewhere. This reviewer wishes that the treatment of this most important subject had been considerably extended. In spite of a translation that is not distinguished and is even occasionally poor, the sharp elegance of the original survives." George Woodbridge

+ — Survey G 30:532 O '41 450w

Wis Lib Bul 37:154 O '41

MARK, HERMANN FRANZ. Physical chemistry of high polymeric systems; tr. from the ms. by K. Sinclair, rev. by J. E. Woods. (High polymers; a series of monographs, v2) 345p 99il $6.50 Interscience

541.7 Polymerization

41-1329

"This is volume II of 'a series of monographs on the chemistry, physics, and technology of high polymeric substances.' . . . The major part of this book is a concise, critical review of the experimental methods and theory pertaining to the structure and behavior of molecules and to the interrelated forces between atoms and molecules. This discussion is amply illustrated by references, tables of data and figures, and no opportunity is lost in pointing out the particular significance of any part to the study of polymeric substances. Particular emphasis is placed upon x-ray and cathode ray interferometry. The remainder of the book deals more intensively with the peculiar properties of high polymers." Chem & Chem Eng N

"The reviewer is glad to recommend this book to all interested in structural chemistry. It is an important addition to the literature of the subject. We Americans in this field should be (and are) proud to have its distinguished author now one of us." M. L. Huggins

+ Am Chem Soc J 63:1170 Ap '41 260w

"The book is certainly not an under-graduate text nor is it a mere compilation of data and references. It will serve as an excellent reference book for any physical chemist who wishes to investigate polymer chemistry. It should be required reading for anyone who seriously considers active participation in the development of this new branch of chemistry." Winton Patnode

+ Chem & Chem Eng N 19:107 Ja 25 '41 420w

"A real contribution not only to the literature of high polymers but also to advanced physical chemistry."

+ Chem & Met Eng 48:133 Ja '41 200w

"Much has had to be compressed into this volume, and it is a tribute to the author that the subject is presented so clearly and pleasantly. For those not specially interested in high polymers this volume gives an unusual approach to certain parts of physical chemistry not found in the normal textbooks. It is to be hoped that, in spite of difficult times, the editors will find it possible to complete the task of which the present volumes represent a very welcome beginning." H. W. Melville

MARK, HERMANN FRANZ—Continued
 + Nature 148:420 O 11 '41 420w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:6 Ja '41

MARK, IRVING. Agrarian conflicts in colonial New York, 1711-1775. 237p $3 Columbia univ. press

333.09747 Land tenure—New York (state).
 New York (state)—History 40-33047

"This study concerns the differences of land-lord and small farmer in those portions of the Hudson Valley which were the centres of agrarian discontent before the Revolution. It points out that land speculators and boundary disputes aided tenant-farmer agitation against landlord dominance and resulted in agrarian disturbances culminating in 'The Great Rebellion of 1766.'" (Crozer Q) Bibliography. Index.

"The situation was confused; and no author could make it clear and simple, no matter how diligently he searched the records. The scholarly contribution of the author lies in the critical examination of the complicated land and social system rather than in fresh conclusions." N. S. B. G.

Am Econ R 31:139 Mr '41 70w

"Mr. Mark has made a valuable contribution. He has consulted a large body of court and land records, reports of officials, papers of the landed families, and correspondence of such men as Colden, Johnson, and Gage. One significant conclusion is the author's revelation that there was much Loyalist sentiment among the New York tenants during the Revolution, which is explained by their belief that the crown protected them against rapacious landlords." G. E. Booth

+ Am Hist R 46:925 Jl '41 550w

Reviewed by A. R. Moore
 Crozer Q 18:185 Ap '41 60w

"It is to be regretted that Dr. Mark did not write a fuller book; he has congealed a vast amount of interesting, pertinent material in his footnotes which might have been usefully expanded in the text. The bibliography and the index are rich mines for anyone working in the period." Codman Hislop

+ — New Eng Q 14:399 Je '41 650w

MARKHAM, REUBEN HENRY. The wave of the past. 55p $1 Univ. of N.C. press

321.6 Despotism, Liberty. Democracy 41-8063

Claiming that totalitarianism is a wave of the past, the author delves into history and cites parallels to the present state of the world, in which a gigantic tidal wave of despair and terror threatens to engulf all the earth. The author is an American who has been a Congregational missionary in Bulgaria, editor of a Bulgarian language newspaper, and Christian Science Monitor correspondent in the Balkans and central Europe.

Booklist 37:485 Je 15 '41

Christian Century 58:629 My 7 '41 160w

"The Wave of the Past," may seem outwardly slight. But its inner significance is tremendous. Within its few pages, the author pleads the case for enlightenment and human progress; he pleads it movingly and passionately. . . . And for so cogently setting all this down, in so small a compass and so rich a content, Mr. Markham has earned our gratitude." M. W.

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 Ap 17 '41 800w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
 Foreign Affairs 19:871 Jl '41 10w

"The arguments offered by the author certainly suffice to convince those who use their own brains and who are not utterly devoid of the moral principles common to civilized men. Mr. Markham's brilliant style admirably combines the good qualities of a missionary and a town crier. . . . Persons who are inclined to nap may be aroused to danger by Mr. Markham's little masterpiece." Rustern Vambery

 + Nation 152:589 My 17 '41 650w

"Mr. Markham's book is a particularly happy example of pamphleteering as a fine art. Devoted to democracy, whose virtues it sings, it is all that a pamphlet should be. It is eloquent, impassioned, incisive, it radiates a warm personality, eager to express and convey a truth deeply felt and lucidly thought out. Best of all, it attacks with a superb competence such falsehoods as are, in certain quarters, gaining currency as a new gospel." John Cournos
 + N Y Times p4 Je 8 '41 360w

"The case against totalitarianism cannot be stated in one small book; it has many facets and it needs stating in such a way that the feeling for freedom, for those human rights we have too long taken for granted as established for all time, should once more be made to come alive. It is a tragic thought that the totalitarians have managed to animate their people by an ideology more vital, more dynamic, than the ideology which has animated the democracies these last few generations. This book is a useful contribution to the revival of this necessary ideology. The reader will find its message simpler and more effective if he begins at page 25, reads to the end, then turns to the first pages. In the construction of the book it would have been better to put the last half first." Norman Angell

+ Survey G 30:407 Jl '41 550w

MARKS, PERCY. Between two autumns. 350p $2.50 Reynal

(W) 41-17615

When Tinker Larme stopped for shelter on a stormy night at the Steele home in Westchester, he promised to be the solution of the Steeles' problems. Under his influence Mrs Steele, suffering from shock after an accident, gradually grew better; in emergencies Tink was a good gardener, carpenter, and cook; and he could drive Mr Steele to the station or play tennis with him. But during the year Tink remained with the Steeles he was the unconscious, unintentional cause of several catastrophes—and the flaw in his personality is gradually revealed.

Reviewed by R. M. Gay
 Atlantic D '41 160w

Booklist 38:52 O 15 '41

"Between Two Autumns" is written with Mr. Marks's usual competence." F. H. Bullock
 Books p10 S 28 '41 440w

"Any one who is interested in subtle character analysis and sound psychology applied to a baffling abnormality should be engrossed with Tink's story. Every incident fits neatly into the fundamental pattern of a deeply interesting character study that is built up to a sound climax." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p6 S 28 '41 800w

"Mr. Marks tells his story very cleverly and provides a neat shudder at the end."

New Yorker 17:78 S 27 '41 60w

"The author has presented an interesting psychological problem and solved it logically and clearly."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e O 12 '41 210w

MARLETT, MELBA. Death has a thousand doors. 271p $2 Doubleday

41-13940

Detective story.

"Here we have a surprise item, namely, a first mystery that can stand comparison with any work in its field that one can think of off-hand. Much of its merit inheres in Miss Sarah De Long, a schoolmarm narrator with a knowing pen and a personality all her own." Will Cuppy

+ Books p17 Ag 24 '41 140w

"A love story and a detective story marching side by side, and the narrative, all theories to the contrary notwithstanding, does not suffer in the least by that juxtaposition. It is a safe guess that the author of this book has had considerable experience in the educational field. Her convincing picture of the high school and its personnel bears witness to that. What is more important so far as the reader is concerned is that she has a genuine story-telling talent. This, her first mystery tale, makes that manifest." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 31 '41 190w

"Writing and deduction competent, scholastic background knowledgeably handled, and adolescent actors vigorously drawn. Perhaps a bit too pathological for timorous readers. Pretty grim."

Sat R of Lit 24:20 S 13 '41 40w

MARMUR, JACLAND. Sea and the shore. 328p $2.75 Holt

41-23674

Novel of the sea and of those who go down to the sea in ships, and of the families and friends who stay on shore. Mainly it is the story of Charlie Bradburn, a Brooklyn boy, who grows to manhood and success in various capacities on ships, ending as captain, and of his wife Galeta. Charlie is an honest, likable man; Galeta, who is of Polish descent, spends many years searching for her so-called integrity. In the end she realizes that her happiness lies with Charlie.

Booklist 38:190 F 1 '42

"As one closes the book he is aware of a profound emotion; something fine and genuine has been done here, something significant has been said. Time and thought and labor have gone into this work, and behind them life has been lived and understood and much has become known. It is a novel that strikes the chord of universal experience, and some of the notes hurt as they sink home; yet it is new and revealing, with a freshness that marks a writer coming into his own." Lincoln Colcord

+ Books p4 D 14 '41 1200w

"A very readable book, if also a very uneven one." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p7 N 30 '41 800w

"Put Mr. Marmur with his hero on the bridge of a freighter rolling through heavy weather and he does a fine job that all old salts will love. At human relations he is less successful."

+ New Yorker 17:110 N 22 '41 60w

"When Mr. Marmur sends you voyaging with his upstanding young Charlie Bradburn or even with the successful Shipmaster Bradburn, he is assured and clean-cut. His prose becomes firmer, his pictorial skill, evident throughout, assumes sharper focus, and all uncertainty leaves him. He cleverly manages, besides to recapture the old adventurousness of the sea without falsely romanticizing it. Unquestionably he belongs on it. On land Mr. Marmur seems restless, fuzzy, and sentimental." Bess Jones

+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 D 13 '41 650w

Springf'd Republican p7e D 21 '41 420w

MARQUAND, JOHN PHILLIPS. H. M. Pulham, esquire. 432p $2.50 Little

(W) 41-51574

In preparation for his twenty-fifth Harvard reunion, Harry Pulham writes his autobiography. What he actually writes covers two or three pages, is noncommittal, boring, and conforms to the conventions of his class and times. What he might have written is here set forth in a new four hundred page novel satirizing the Boston Brahmin class.

"On the surface the story is very amusing at times. . . . But the general effect is far from being so. The spectacle of people 'letting 'I dare not' wait upon 'I would''—when they really should—is never funny, nor is the spectacle of people boring themselves and one another for years on end in the name of propriety and loyalty. Even the laughs one has are wry laughs. The inanity, stupidity, and cowardice of these people are too much like our own. On one side they illustrate the sadness of the reflection that if we had been stronger we would have done differently. And yet, on the other side, they equally well illustrate the truth that we can never know whether if we had done differently we should have done better. The fundamental chords played on these two strings produce some sour discords in our own private thoughts." R. M. Gay

+ Atlantic Mr '41 800w

Booklist 37:292 Mr 1 '41

Bookmark 2:14 My '41

"The right school, Harvard College, the right club were guaranty of a correct job, a correct marriage and an accepted life. Mr. Marquand has produced a superlative picture of this life and of the forces behind it. He has created living men and women, not photographs. Their problems and emotions and adjustments will be interesting and familiar to any one, regardless of habitat." Dorothy Hillier

+ Books p1 F 23 '41 1500w

Cath World 153:243 My '41 450w

"It is a book for all to read and enjoy." B. R. Copithorn

+ Churchman 155:18 Ap 1 '41 130w

"Mr. Marquand is justified in his claim that he is not merely writing local history and exploiting his acquaintance, for his picture holds largely true of the 'best people' of the older American cities. It is not a pretty picture, but it is a just one. There are thousands of Harry Pulhams, good citizens though they never grew up, who find their modest business success empty and recall their school and college years as the best of their lives." Mason Wade

+ Commonweal 34:39 My 2 '41 650w

Reviewed by Margaret Winning
Library J 66:178 F 15 '41 60w

Reviewed by Margaret Marshall
Nation 152:272 Mr 8 '41 50w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley
New Repub 104:314 Mr 3 '41 1300w

"H. M. Pulham, Esquire' is compounded of the same wry humor, the same incisive thrusts, the same easily flowing narrative which distinguished the two preceding novels. It is difficult to see how Mr. Marquand can elaborate further on the theme developed in 'The Late George Apley' and the present book, but no matter. The job has been done in expert fashion, and Mr. Marquand is not the sort of writer to stand in his tracks. He will, we can be sure, find other things to say, and he will know how to say them." J. D. Adams

+ N Y Times p1 F 23 '41 1000w

"I wouldn't, by the way, rank this as equal to 'The Late George Apley' or 'Wickford Point.' It's not as sharp, as penetrating as either of them. I suppose it's mellow, but ripeness isn't all. A little more acidity, a little less of this easy pity, might turn Mr. Marquand into a sort of American Aldous Huxley. But I am sure he wouldn't care to be an American Aldous Huxley. He is what might be called a gentleman writer, even though he's a highly successful professional." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:80 F 22 '41 1100w

Pratt p10 spring '41

Reviewed by H. M. Jones

Sat R of Lit 23:5 F 22 '41 1600w

"H. M. Pulham, Esquire' is a book in which to see one's self, or one's acquaintances, as in a mirror, and above all to become well acquainted with an ordinary man. It is crammed with touches of humor and wisdom that the reader, having once chuckled over them, will wish to savor again." M. D.

MARQUAND, J. P.—Continued

+ Springfield Republican p7e Mr 2 '41 850w

Time 37:87 Mr 3 '41 500w

Wis Lib Bul 37:56 Mr '41

"A vastly readable and believable caricature of the endlessly repeated motions and feelings, the problems and properties and paraphernalia, material and emotional, of members of the group of bipeds known as 'nice people.' At the end, one wonders how so much that was so familiar could have been so interesting. But thanks to Mr. Marquand's humor and appetite for detail, it was absorbing." Robert Littell

+ Yale R n s 30:x spring '41 320w

MARRIOTT, SIR JOHN ARTHUR RANSOME.

English history in English fiction. 308p $2.75
Dutton [8s 6d Blackie & son]

823.09 English fiction. Historical fiction
[A41-157]

This book is "an attempt . . . to show how historical fiction can help in the elucidation of each successive period of English History." The author, a noted British historical scholar explains that during his years of activity he sought recreation in novel reading but never historical novels, until with semi-retirement he turned to this field, with this study as the result. Index.

Reviewed by Chester Kirby

Am Hist R 47:176 O '41 230w

"Sir John Marriott has produced a long book about English historical novels. Yet, though he probably does not realize this himself, his opinion of historical fiction is a pretty low one. He does not recognize the right of a historical novel to exist in and for itself; its sole function as he sees it is to rouse the reader's interest in serious history. . . . This singular assumption removes Sir John's careful and comprehensive work from the region of serious literary criticism, but it leaves unimpaired its usefulness as a handbook." D. M. Mackegg.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 N 30 '40 200w

"The book's list of novels and novelists is long, and its historical résumé succinct and interesting."

+ N Y Times p8 S 7 '41 550w

Pratt p16 autumn '41

Times [London] Lit Sup p376 Ag 3 '40 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 37:32 F '41

MARSH, MRS JANET. Don't tread on me; il.
by Helen Torrey. 269p $2 Houghton

41-21288

Adventures of a fourteen-year-old boy studying the history of democracy thru the ages. Contents: The long-haired warriors, mid-Europe, B.C. c. 1500; The gilded spear, Athens, B.C. 445; Sickle in the sun, Rome, B.C. 287; Empty shells, Rome, A.D. 190; Sword and spirit, Germany, Early eleventh century; Frightened Franz, The Netherlands, A.D. c. 1200; Minding their own business, England, A.D. c. 1400; For conscience' sake, England, A.D. 1629; The course of human events, Philadelphia, July Fourth, 1776; Keeping step, Germany, A.D. 1938.

"Recommended for children twelve to fourteen." Emily Hutson

+ Library J 66:1049 D 1 '41 80w

"At a time when there is a tendency on the part of those who are writing books for children to try to explain the theory of democracy, it is refreshing to find an author who is fully aware that action and descriptions of action mean far more to boys and girls than ideas in the abstract. Because Janet Marsh realizes this, her crisply told dramatic, thoroughly convincing tales leave the young reader with an understanding of what democracy means and the feeling that he has seen it at work." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p10 N 16 '41 320w

"Fantastic but convincing." Raymond Holden

+ Sat R of Lit 24:9 N 8 '41 30w

MARSH, MRS JANET. A 'prentice in old London; il. by Helen Torrey. 243p $2 Houghton

(W) 41-10780

Life in London in the days of Archbishop Laud forms the background of this story for young readers. Mathew, the son of a non-conformist preacher, comes up to London to seek help for his father, who is in prison. His daily life as an apprentice to a draper, and later at the home of his rich uncle, is described, as a prelude to his later departure for New England, with his father.

Booklist 38:17 S '41

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

Books p5 J1 13 '41 270w

"A great deal of painstaking research went into the writing of this story of London. . . . The author avoids the pitfalls of partisanship. Her characters are well drawn and the social and industrial conditions are made vivid. Although the story is of a homeless lad's adventure, the background depicts unmistakably certain historic steps toward the growth of a democratic way of life." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk M 17:105 Mr '41 90w

Reviewed by E. W. Turpin

Library J 66:678 Ag '41 130w

"The book has an interesting, well-constructed plot, and with a lively historical imagination the author brings the streets and people and ways of old London vividly before the reader. Her characters use a simple, straightforward speech which does not jar with the setting and at the same time presents no difficulties to boys and girls. There is both atmosphere and action in the story." A. T. Eaton

+ N Y Times p8 J1 13 '41 320w

MARSH, LEONARD CHARLES. Canadians in and out of work; a survey of economic classes and their relation to the labour market. 503p $4.50 (12s 6d) Oxford

331.81971 Labor and laboring classes—Canada. Unemployment—Canada 40-34335

"This volume, issued as Number Nine in the McGill University Social Research Series, is a study in 'social arithmetic,' and a survey of the occupational composition of the Canadian population as a setting for an understanding of their social problems. The survey ends with 1939, before the dislocations caused by a second European war had been greatly felt in the Dominion. The study of the four and a quarter million who constitute the working portion of Canada's total eleven million people has been conceived on a broad scale to include not only an occupational survey, but the relation of employment or unemployment to such questions as distribution of income, education, occupational mobility, and various social differentials that exist in Canada today. Scores of excellent tables, charts, and graphs clarify and supplement the discussion." Ann Am Acad

"The book is such a storehouse of information that it is difficult to do justice to its merits and general usefulness in so short a review." Carl Witke

+ Ann Am Acad 213:214 Ja '41 550w

"The evidence presented by the author respecting the relationship between the occupational and class structures is suggestive and instructive. But it may be questioned whether an analysis of occupational groupings affords an adequate basis for the construction of a concept of class differentiation. The failure to integrate the group of farmers and farm workers within such a generalized concept indicates a weakness in the author's analysis. . . . It would be unfair, however, to emphasize the failings of what is not an essential feature of the study. A thorough analysis of the class structure of Canada is yet to be made. Mr. Marsh has provided stimulating leads in that direction, while he has given us a comprehensive survey of the occupational structure." S. D. Clark

+ — Canadian Forum 20:250 N '40 900w

Foreign Affairs 19:686 Ap '41 10w

School & Society 52:96 Ag 10 '40 10w

"This latest addition to the McGill University Research Series may be a landmark in the promotion of enlightened social planning everywhere. No one can read it without acquiring a deeper insight into the structure of the working population and the nature of the socio-economic barriers between its different segments. Indeed, many pseudo-social philosophers, who assume that economic stratification is merely the result of personal progress and achievement, with the less able inevitably occupying the lower strata, may find in it a much needed reorientation of social outlook." J. A. Crumb

+ Survey 77:164 My '41 440w

MARSH, NGAIO. Death and the dancing footman. 364p $2 Little

(W) 41-16489

Detective story.

Booklist 38:53 O 15 '41

Bookmark 2:18 N '41

"Since Ngaio Marsh is the best mystery writer going, and since 'Death and the Dancing Footman' is her best book, it ought to be quite an important event in fandom—assuming that we know what we are talking about, or even partly. Certainly, this department can't remember another baffler that ever struck it with the one hundred per cent impact of this one." Will Cuppy

+ Books p18 S 14 '41 480w

Reviewed by Mort. Post

New Repub 105:598 N 3 '41 40w

"Since this is Ngaio Marsh's latest mystery novel nobody needs to be told with what skill its diverse personalities are set to confront each other, or how cleverly events and people interact through constant puzzle to the end. . . . Although the puzzle is intricate, the appeal of 'Death and the Dancing Footman' is almost as much that of a novel as of a murder mystery. . . . But the interest of character is brilliant and unflagging, and both incident and conversation are alive with wit." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p20 S 14 '41 310w

"Too wordy, but nice enough if you have the time for it."

+ — New Yorker 17:76 S 13 '41 40w

"Brilliant first part, in which events preceding tragedy scintillate steadily, followed by Alleyne's tardy entrance and stunning climax. Unexcelled."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:20 S 13 '41 40w

Time 38:100 O 6 '41 40w

MARSH, NGAIO. Death in ecstasy. 319p $2 Sheridan [7s 6d; 2s 6d Bles]

Detective story.

Booklist 37:293 Mr 1 '41

Bookmark 2:16 My '41

"Miss Marsh must have been terrific from the moment she mastered the alphabet and the art of handwriting in her native New Zealand; for her early works are Grade A, same as her very latest. . . . Here is diabolical villainy, a most ingenious plot, love, and even a recipe for making sodium cyanide in the home." Will Cuppy

+ Books p15 Ja 26 '41 160w

Reviewed by Marian Wiggin

Boston Transcript p2 Ja 25 '41 40w

"Where do English writers get the old scraps that they pin together to make what they seem to think are American characters? There's one in 'Death in Ecstasy' that just about ruins Ngaio Marsh's carefully constructed guessing game for her American readers, because they will probably get so sore at what appears to be just another offensive distortion of their countrymen that they won't be able to take him dispassionately as a piece in the puzzle. It's a good puzzle, as murders go." Mort. Post

+ — New Repub 104:349 Mr 10 '41 180w

"There is internal evidence that this is an earlier Ngaio Marsh book. It lacks something of the expert plotting and the matured style that characterize most of this author's other stories. But even so, it is much better than the average run of mystery tales. . . . Experienced detective story readers will not have a great deal of difficulty in spotting the murderer." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p12 F 2 '41 160w

"Miss Marsh's writing is superb, as always (if you don't get too wrought up over her idea of how an American talks), and the mystery itself is all right."

+ New Yorker 16:72 Ja 25 '41 50w

"Early and extremely talky example of New Zealand writer's work. Murder method cleverly devised. Agreeable."

+ Sat R of Lit 23:20 Ja 18 '41 30w

Springf'd Republican p7e Mr 30 '41 180w

Time 37:76 F 3 '41 20w

MARSH, NGAIO, and JELLETT, HENRY. The nursing-home murder. 280p $2 Sheridan [7s 6d; 2s 6d Bles]

(W) [36-15163]

Detective story.

Booklist 38:13 S '41

Bookmark 2:18 N '41

"Although this would seem to be one of Ngaio Marsh's earlier works, it's a 'must' item for her rabid fans and thoroughly good sport for all who crave a medical mystery with quarts of horrible details." Will Cuppy

+ Books p9 J1 20 '41 160w

"Of course every one knows that a 'nursing home' is a hospital; but possibility of some initial confusion may be staved off by the reminder that a 'chemist' is a pharmacist, and not necessarily a scientific investigator. The action of the story, it should also be pointed out, takes place some time before the war. It is an ingenious, logical and sparkling tale, and even though it is not Ngaio Marsh's best thriller it is conspicuously better-than-average." Kay Irvin

+ N Y Times p17 J1 20 '41 270w

"Not as good as Miss Marsh's earlier tales, but pleasant reading in spite of a farfetched solution."

+ — New Yorker 17:56 J1 19 '41 60w

Sat R of Lit 24:14 Ag 9 '41 40w

"Inspector Alleyne is in his best form, and the story is the usual smoothly written, logical Marsh product, although there is just a little too much dependence on coincidence in setting the scene for the crime. However, this is well above average and the reader gets not only a mystery but a short course in modern surgery and anaesthesia."

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e J1 20 '41 120w

MARSHALL, DEAN. A house for Elizabeth; il. by Theresa Kalab. 219p $2 Dutton

41-10465

Nine-year-old Elizabeth, and her brother James, aged three, had spent most of their lives in furnished apartments, because their father was a chemical engineer and moved from place to place. Elizabeth's secret dream was of a house all their own. This story for readers of eight to ten describes how Elizabeth's dream came true, and how happy the whole family, not to mention Mr Teakettle, the cat, were over their very own home.

MARSHALL, DEAN—Continued

"I read this book, in advance of publication, weeks ago; this report is from memory. Not every story for little girls could stand that test. But this one breathes so lovely a spirit of love-of-home, of family solidarity, of willingness to work for family happiness, that I could not forget it. I hope many little girls may be given a chance to remember it." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 J1 27 '41 360w

"Readers of eight to ten will share the reality of Elizabeth's intense excitement when the family move to West Virginia where the dream house vanishes as a real home finally takes shape. The book has a most readable look, with clear, open type and some of the most attractive drawings Theresa Kalab has done to date." M. F. Potter

+ Library J 66:620 J1 '41 130w

"It is a fascinating story for girls who, like this young heroine, aren't too old to dream the things they haven't got—and some things, like fairies, who maybe just aren't. Theresa Kalab provides the scenery for dreaming with many lovely pictures."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e Je 22 '41 120w

MARSHALL, EDISON. Benjamin Blake. 443p $2.50 Farrar

(W) 41-2208

Adventure story of the eighteenth century. Ben Blake, the illegitimate son of an English squire, was brought up in Bristol by his maternal grandfather. At seventeen he went to his father's estate as stable boy, came in contact with his brutal uncle, and escaped to take ship for Virginia. Shipwrecked on a South Sea island he spent seven years in a primitive paradise before he returned to England and his rightful place in society.

Reviewed by George Conrad

Books p9 Mr 16 '41 360w

Reviewed by W. C. Derry

Boston Transcript p1 Mr 22 '41 600w

"Ben being himself the narrator tells the story of his youthful adventures as remembered in serene old age. . . . Whatever debts Mr. Marshall may owe to Fielding, Melville, Captain Maryatt and R. L. S. have been amply requited in his achievement of a romantic adventure story which fulfils the fundamental requirement of sustaining the reader's interest to the end." Drake de Kay

+ N Y Times p21 Mr 16 '41 550w

"The ending is technically happy but, like the treatment throughout, perceptibly tougher and more intelligent than such stories generally bother to be. Indeed Benjamin Blake turns out to be not merely an engaging adventure piece but an articulate tract against feudalism, both sexual and social."

+ Time 37:98 Mr 17 '41 330w

Wis Lib Bul 37:117 Je '41

MARSHALL, SAMUEL LYMAN ATWOOD. Armies on wheels; with a foreword by J. F. C. Fuller and il. with maps and diagrams by Francis Arnold and Joseph Bernstein. 251p $2.50 Morrow

940.542 World war, 1939—Campaigns and battles. Mechanization, Military 41-52022

The military critic of the Detroit News discusses the campaigns of the second year of the present war in Greece, Crete, Syria and Russia, and the nature of mechanized power, its strength and its weakness. Index.

Booklist 38:129 D 15 '41

"The special value of Mr. Marshall's book is that it is not an examination of theory but of practice, and that no one from a general to an air-raid warden but could benefit from the ideas he expresses, and those he suggests." Fletcher Pratt

+ Sat R of Lit 24:7 D 20 '41 450w

"Mr Marshall has won the respect of many army strategists by his evident and thorough knowledge of wars and weapons from Hannibal's time to ours. His wide reading and experience is fortunately available to the layman, for he also has the analytical knack of leading one through confusing technical detail to a grasp, in simple terms, of the technics of modern warfare. That is not to say that his book is 'summer reading'; but concentrated attention to it can well reward the uninitiated."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 21 '41 900w

MARSHALL, SIDNEY. Some like it hot. 278p $2 Morrow

Detective story

41-16061

"Mysteries about radio have a way of sounding excessive at every point, but what's the harm in that if the reader is after wonders? This one is fast, sufficiently exciting and hard-boiled enough to tickle any of the rougher fans. . . . Mr. Marshall swings a line of clear and simple prose that could easily do without those censorable parts of speech and the word 'gotten.'" Will Cuppy

+ Books p10 D 21 '41 200w

"Radio actors and actresses, script writers, announcers, directors and executives make up the cast of this tale of murder and assorted villainies. . . . How Scott Bennett arrives at the correct solution remains a mystery to the end of the last chapter and even beyond it." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p33 S 28 '41 160w

Sat R of Lit 24:21 O 4 '41 40w

MARSTON, WILLIAM MOULTON. March on! facing life with courage. 311p $2.50 Doubleday

150.13 Psychology, Applied. Success. Conduct of life 41-2573

Advice on how to get the most out of life. The author, a practicing psychologist, shows how many people fail because they want to fail, how they can succeed by treating life as an adventure.

"Dr. Marston illustrates his excellent advice with many stories of real people who have learned how to get the job, the lover, the joy in life which they had been missing."

+ Books p18 My 25 '41 80w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '41

MARTIN, CHESTER B., ed. Canada in peace and war: eight studies in national trends since 1914 [issued under the auspices of the Canadian Inst. of int. affairs]. 244p $1.75 Oxford

971 Canada—Politics and government. Canada—Economic policy. Canada—Population. Canada—Foreign relations 41-8239

Contents: Trends in Canadian nationhood, by Chester Martin; Federal relations in Canada since 1914, by D. G. Creighton; Economic trends, by H. A. Innis; Population problems and policies, by V. W. Bladen; Canada and the last war, by F. H. Underhill; Canadian external relations, by G. P. de T. Glazebrook; Canadian and imperial war cabinets, by R. M. Dawson; Democracy in the overseas dominions, by Alexander Brady.

Reviewed by F. R. Fussell

Am Pol Sci R 35:810 Ag '41 250w

"A scholarly, thoughtful approach to Canadian problems reminiscent of the lecture hall rather than the city room. Here is good solid meat for the historian and the economist, a reference work which should be required reading in Washington." Emmet Crozier

+ Books p3 Ap 27 '41 40w

Reviewed by R. G. Woolbert
Foreign Affairs 20:203 O '41 30w

Reviewed by E. P. Dean
N Y Times p33 O 5 '41 500w

"An excellent series of essays, rather than lectures, on Canada between two wars, which should be of considerable interest to non-Canadians. They will not acquaint the completely uninformed reader with the state of affairs in Canada today as well as certain other books, but the reader who already possesses some knowledge will find a great deal to interest and assist him." J. B. Brebner

+ Survey G 30:443 Ag '41 280w

Times [London] Lit Sup p11 Ja 3 '42 180w

MARTIN, LAURA KATHERINE. Magazines for high schools; an evaluation of a hundred titles. 161p $1.75 Wilson, H.W.

016.05 Periodicals—Bibliography. School libraries (high school) (W) 41-51811

"The magazines high school students want to read and the ones teachers and librarians prefer for a library are told in this useful study of periodicals. Although 100 are recommended for use, about 140 other titles are considered. Magazines are grouped by interest; tables compare the results of surveys made throughout the country and give specific information on each magazine. Individual appraisals of each periodical are included." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 37:485 Je 15 '41

"The critical comment on individual titles in each of the subject divisions is quite as important as the chart listing with its technical information about each journal. The notes are never opinionated but attempt in an unbiased manner as possible to outline the distinctive features of individual magazines and to show their special adaptability to school use. . . . Though intended specifically for the high school, it would be a pity if the title of this book should handicap in any way its sale to college, university, and public libraries." G. R. Lyle

+ Library Q 11:518 O '41 1300w
Pratt p7 D '41

Wis Lib Bul 37:151 O '41

MARTIN, RAY C. Lacquer and synthetic enamel finishes. 526p il $5.50 Van Nostrand 667.7 Lacquer and lacquering. Enamel and enameling 41-1060

"Throughout this publication the subject of discussion is that of cellulose nitrate or acetate basic lacquers and synthetic enamels. A necessary reference has been made to involve certain types of varnishes or enamels which have indicated their compatibility with, or use under or over, a lacquer as an applied schedule. In Part III, Chapter X, Faults and Corrections, reference has necessarily involved paint, varnish and enamels." (Pref) Glossary. Index.

"As a rather elementary and nontechnical introduction to the field of nitrocellulose lacquer manufacture and application, this book appears to be adequate but hardly outstanding." G. H. Young

Chem & Chem Eng N 19:107 Ja 25 '41 550w

"Upon studying the book, this reviewer's principle thought was, 'Any purchaser will certainly get his money's worth.' . . . There is a 100-page glossary of technical terms which should be of value even to the expert. There are, however, some minor inaccuracies.

An index to the book would have been helpful." W. L. Abramowitz

+ Chem & Met Eng 48:169 F '41 410w

N Y New Tech Bks 26:24 Ap '41

MARTIN DU GARD, ROGER. Summer 1914; tr. by Stuart Gilbert. (World of the Thibaults, 2d half) 1008p $3.50; with Thibaults $6 Viking [25s Lane]

(W) 41-51575

Continuation of The Thibaults (Book Review Digest, 1939). It follows the story of Jacques and Antoine, the Thibault sons—Jacques who lived and died a Socialist, and Antoine, a doctor who died from a lung disease contracted in the first World war.

"In my judgment it is by far the greatest work of fiction done in our time. Indeed, by putting on a little extra pressure here and there, one might make a pretty plausible case for placing it second only to War and Peace; not a close second, by any means, but closer than any book has yet come or is likely to come. Aside from the extraordinary excellence of its architectonics and its style, two qualities go to make it so. . . . The first and most striking is the unvarying humanness of its characters. . . . The second quality appears in the extraordinarily wide scope of the author's understanding. He is equally at home in the consciousness and subconsciousness of all sorts and conditions of boyhood and girlhood, youth, manhood, womanhood." A. J. N.

+ Atlantic Mr '41 350w

Booklist 37:293 Mr 1 '41

Bookmark 2:15 My '41

Reviewed by Andre Maurois
Books p1 Mr 2 '41 1350w

Reviewed by D. L. Mann
Boston Transcript p1 Mr 1 '41 300w

Reviewed by Harold Hobson
Christian Science Monitor p13 Mr 22 '41 160w

Reviewed by E. V. R. Wyatt
Commonweal 33:579 Mr 28 '41 160w

"The whole thing is too long drawn, and the story would be all the better if much of the detail had been eliminated and the whole compressed into a more reasonable compass. . . . At all events M. du Gard's staying powers are amazing, and even if he has not produced a masterpiece he has achieved a work that deserves a more leisurely assessment than we who are in the throes of an even more overwhelming catastrophe than that with which he deals, can afford to give it." Wilfrid Gibson

+ Manchester Guardian p7 Ja 17 '41 650w

"It is one thing to call a book a masterpiece of irony or its author's masterpiece and quite another to call it a masterpiece. The qualifying phrase reduces the value of that fearful and magic word by at least one-half. A scrupulous reviewer is inclined to sterilize the word thus every time he uses it, but twice or thrice in a lifetime he meets a book about which he feels no hesitation. This is such a case: 'The World of the Thibaults' is a masterpiece." Justin O'Brien

+ Nation 152:244 Mr 1 '41 750w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley
New Repub 104:346 Mr 10 '41 700w

"There may be stories which cannot be told in less than a quarter of a million words, but the more common reasons for inordinate length are less sublime; either the author lacks any talent for selection and concentration, or he is a natural bore. M. Martin du Gard is a bore." Desmond Hawkins

— New Statesman & Nation 21:305 Mr 22 '41 1150w

"To say that this great novel completely vitalizes a reader's response is to say that it is a masterly achievement in the writing of fiction; but of course it is not to define—

MARTIN DU GARD, ROGER—Continued
scarcely even to touch—the book's greatness. For to write a great novel it is not enough, of course, to create living characters, not enough, even, to evoke a solid world. A novel that is truly great must embrace and illumine the life of man, reaching universality and extending to timelessness. This "The World of the Thibaults" does." Katherine Woods

+ N Y Times p3 F 23 '41 750w

"The translation, by Stuart Gilbert, seems dignified, easy, and pure. Du Gard is not a great stylist; he writes rather conservatively, even traditionally. His value lies not in the originality of his prose but in the honesty and integrity of his social viewpoint. He is less clever than Romans (and to my mind less interesting and far less various). Still, his work has a certain solidity that some prefer to brilliance. You may not read him with absorption; you will read him with respect." Clifton Fadiman

+ New Yorker 17:54 Mr 1 '41 1450w
Pratt p11 autumn '41

Reviewed by Robert Goffin
Sat R of Lit 23:5 Mr 8 '41 1100w

"It is disappointing to be unable to record great pleasure in Summer 1914. . . . The latter part comes new to me in this publication, and strikes me as pedestrian, repetitive and sometimes hollow-sounding, as if the author had grown tired of his theme, or over-saddened by it." Kate O'Brien

— Spec 166:96 Ja 24 '41 340w

Reviewed by L. C. Rich
Spring'd Republican p7e Mr 9 '41 500w
Time 37:98 F 24 '41 750w

"The completed work is, in many ways, a remarkable literary production, ambitiously designed, lucid and firmly naturalistic in style, humane in sentiment and very, very French. You cannot do other than admire the ordered intelligence, the sustained craft and discipline of this prodigious feat of narrative construction. . . . Yet it is a profoundly distressing and indeed pitiful book to read, for in it are revealed the roots of the spiritual collapse and the humiliation of the French people to-day. The more one reads of French fiction written during the period between the two wars the more obvious it becomes why France was vanquished at a blow. This novel, despite all its sincerity and good will, preaches a pacifism so emotional or emotionalized as to seem very like hysteria."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p29 Ja 18 '41 800w

MARTING, RUTH LENORE (HILEA BAILEY, pseud). The smiling corpse. 274p $2 Doubleday

41-18051
Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
Books p17 S 21 '41 90w

"An original and interesting, even if not a remarkable story." K. I.

+ N Y Times p33 S 28 '41 260w

"A lot of people named Smith provide complications in this well-plotted story. Recommended."

+ New Yorker 17:112 S 20 '41 60w

"Apt characterizations, grisly details, and deft detecting job hold interest to end."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:20 S 27 '41 40w

MARX, FRITZ MORSTEIN. See Morstein Marx, F.

MASEFIELD, JOHN. Conquer. 147p $2 Macmillan [6s Heinemann]

41-21171

In this short novel the author tells the story of a rebellion which occurred in Byzantium in the first week of the year 532.

Booklist 38:113 D 1 '41

"This is a gem of a little book, calling itself fiction but being in truth history. A good tale well told gains new meaning and enchantment and it would be hard to surpass for drama, for sheer physical excitement or human interest the history of ancient Byzantium." Iris Barry

+ Books p4 N 9 '41 320w

"Masefield, using a novelist's privilege, dresses up the facts a bit, but in the main does not distort them. It is a good story, well told, and so alive that it reads like a happening in present-day Europe."

+ Cath World 154:504 Ja '42 270w

"The book is fictionized history, rather than a novel, and a stirring and instructive tale it is."

+ Christian Century 58:1411 N 12 '41 80w

"There is a convincing portrait of Justinian, but his famous empress, Theodora, receives a better character than that accorded to her by most historians. Also, we may be allowed to question whether windowglass was as common in the sixth century as one or two passages here seem to imply. But it is an interesting and exciting piece of history." J. D. Beresford

Manchester Guardian p3 O 10 '41 250w

"The story is not a long one, and it will perhaps interest most those who already know something about Justinian and Theodora, Belisarius, Procopius and John of Cappadocia. But within its comparatively few pages there are more power, more of the real stuff of human thought and human emotion than are to be found in the great majority of far larger, far more pretentious volumes. Mr. Masefield has made one episode at least of a long-dead civilization live again." L. M. Field

+ N Y Times p7 N 9 '41 750w

New Yorker 17:89 N 1 '41 50w

"[This novel] was perhaps begun as a pendant to 'Basilissa,' the same author's novel of the Empress Theodora of a year or two ago; though for good or ill (and to us it is altogether for good) the style and approach of 'Conquer' are entirely different. . . . Yet the story remains a minor one; it is an event which might have changed the course of history, but didn't, told as it may have happened, or may not. And there is a lack of human interest which is ill replaced by a few flashes of contemporary satire." Basil Davenport

+ Sat R of Lit 24:8 N 1 '41 550w

"It is a short, neat book, very careful and quite easy to read. . . . It is an efficient piece of work, written with discretion and ease; but it lacks vigour, and seems less a work of art than a cautious exercise in modern reconstruction of a historical episode." Kate O'Brien

+ Spec 167:390 O 17 '41 90w

Spring'd Republican p7e Ja 11 '42 170w

"This is a precise and finely wrought little epilogue to the version of the ascent of Theodora to the side of Justinian as joint ruler of the Eastern Empire that Mr. Masefield gave us in 'Basilissa.' . . . It is a short book, as drily reflective as the other but happily free from the trite and unbeautiful colloquialisms that made one's fur bristle, as austere plain in style and sentiment as only Mr. Masefield dare attempt of any prospect of success."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p493 O 4 '41 750w

MASEFIELD, JOHN. In the mill. 158p $2 Macmillan [7s 6d Heinemann]

B or 92

(W) 41-11600

"One September morning, a little over forty-five years ago, an obscure Englishman arrived in Yonkers from New York. His name was John Masefield. He had been a sailor and a farmer, accustomed to long hours, poor pay and hard labor. Now he was seeking employment in a carpet mill. A friend had told him of an opening, had spoken favorably of him to one of the floor bosses. He got the job. It held promise of a better life—more pay and, what he desired most, more time to himself, including Sundays and holidays. This small book of gentle recollections tells what happened during the two years he worked there." N Y Times

"In every line and between the lines of this limpid personal record the discerning will find the quality, will take the measure, of him who was presently to be the poet of The Everlasting Mercy." Wilson Follett

+ Atlantic O '41 210w

Booklist 38:10 S '41

Bookmark 2:14 N '41

"In the Mill' is a strikingly simple book, one of the least pretentious imaginable, and apparently so effortless that, even had it been anonymous, it would evidently have been the work of a practiced and individual artist in words. . . The passages in which Masefield sets down his opinion of industry and statecraft will undoubtedly strike some readers as oddly old-fashioned, paternalistic and dreamy. There is a great deal of sense in them, for all that." Iris Barry

+ Books p1 Ag 10 '41 1100w

Christian Century 58:935 J1 23 '41 110w

Christian Science Monitor p11 S 6 '41 550w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell

Churchman 155:21 O 1 '41 200w

Reviewed by W. M. Callahan

Commonweal 34:451 Ag 29 '41 270w

"Not an exciting book but one that should give courage and inspiration, especially to young people." H. R. Burdett

+ Library J 66:668 Ag '41 90w

"Rabid Left-wingers will not take Mr. Masefield's moralisings seriously, but very many readers will like the pattern of the carpet, the occasional sprinklings of sea spray, and the pellucid stream of letters which is Masefield's prose." T. T.

Manchester Guardian p3 Je 24 '41 390w

"Beautiful, wise, and noble book."

+ Nation 153:166 Ag 23 '41 50w

"Sometimes the story-teller's story of himself is more interesting and valuable—the resolve, the steps along the way, the false conceptions and poor first efforts—than the finished products of the craft he works in. 'In the Mill' is only a fragment of autobiography, covering the two years Masefield worked in America after he had left the Conway, but it is a quietly honest book and it gets a lot said." Otis Ferguson

+ New Repub 105:163 Ag 4 '41 480w

Reviewed by Richard Church

New Statesman & Nation 22:144 Ag 9 '41 1150w

"In the Mill' is an exciting adventure story of self-education—its hero, a mind in its first vigorous struggles on the road from literary ignorance to the crowning glory of the poet laureateship of England." Lombard Jones

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 10 '41 500w

"A simple and poignant autobiographical sketch."

+ New Yorker 17:67 Ag 23 '41 30w

"In the Mill' is a lovely book. It is full of gratitude, of joy held in recollection, of a simple trust in beauty and truth, of a shrewd evaluation of the smart and wicked people who are afraid of life and would have us debase ourselves to power and death. The book shows, too, a singularly lovable young man, eager for work, anxious to learn, one who always kept a friendly curiosity for other ways of life than his own, never disdained the interests and the pleasures of the common people, that great brotherhood to whom all poets must belong." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 24:11 Ag 23 '41 800w

"It is a simple story told with simplicity and power." D. W. Brogan

+ Spec 166:681 Je 27 '41 1200w

"His story is written in a simple narrative style, with illuminating comments on people and conditions in the America of that day."

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Ag 17 '41 300w

"By stiff literary standards, England's Poet Laureate is an easy man to under-estimate. But the very qualities that make his work minor (and made him Laureate)—simplicity, traditionalism and sentimentality—are also his great charm. Hardly less than Rudyard Kipling, he is a workingman's poet. The same qualities make In the Mill, the story of the days when he was an intelligent young workingman, one of the most engaging of his books."

+ Time 38:71 Ag 11 '41 600w

"Mr. Masefield's experience is wholly genuine, and he can render it, even after this lapse of years, with vitality. But the moment he departs from the known particular to soar in the wider realm of generalization, his heart, full of wonder and life's joy, taking his living as it came to him and asking nothing or little better, betrays him to a strange innocence, to oddly emotional and curiously un-intellectual judgments."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p314 Je 28 '41 550w

Wis Lib Bul 37:155 O '41

MASEFIELD, JOHN. The nine days wonder (the operation dynamo). 60p il $1.25 Macmillan [3s 6d Heinemann]

940.542 Dunkirk, France, Battle of, 1940 (W) 41-51782

The Poet Laureate of England has written a summary of the nine days between May 26th and June 3rd, 1940, during which time the B.E.F. was rescued from the sands of Dunkirk. Four poems round off the account.

Booklist 37:462 Je 1 '41

Reviewed by S. V. Benét

Books p3 Je 1 '41 750w

Reviewed by Carlton McNaught

Canadian Forum 21:124 J1 '41 210w

Christian Century 58:723 My 28 '41 60w

"With a clear, accurate sense of detail Mr. Masefield tells the story with a straightforward vigor that would have won the admiration of Stevenson himself. Because of the absence of rhetoric, the splendor of the achievement stands out the more vividly, so that the reader unquestioningly accepts Mr. Masefield's judgment that Dunkirk is the greatest single thing ever done by the British people." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 31 '41 90w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '41

Reviewed by Ralph Bates

Nation 152:674 Je 7 '41 30w

"The two or three rather indifferent verses which Mr. Masefield includes in this little volume seem to suggest that poetry is not at the moment a medium which can be used to celebrate great events. But the Poet Laureate is certainly fulfilling one function of his office when he relates with such telling simplicity in the story of this Evacuation and when, in doing it, he keeps the language clean and spare and stripped for action. The Nine Days Wonder should be a set book for all journalists and writers on the war. It will, in any case, be read continuously by future generations." T. C. Worsley

+ New Statesman & Nation 21:443 Ap 26 '41 650w

"A story told with the utmost straightforwardness and graphic selection of clear first-hand detail—told, so, without any heroics of phrasing or arrangement, in a noble simplicity which lets its heroic deeds tell themselves. . . The great value of this little book is that it brings us not merely a tribute to almost unbelievable courage and tenacity and competence, but a clear chronicle of fact, figure, situation, incident."

+ N Y Times p3 My 18 '41 650w

MASEFIELD, JOHN—Continued

New Yorker 17:59 Ag 9 '41 40w

Reviewed by T. W. Lamont

+ Sat R of Lit 24:5 JI 5 '41 850w

"Mr. Masefield's account—plain, exact, excellently condensed and clear—is a match for its theme. If once or twice, as in the final sentence about Commander Clouston, he carries understatement to an extreme, such reticence is proper to the Silent Service." L. A. G. Strong

+ Spec 166:350 Mr 28 '41 480w

Springf'd Republican p7e Je 1 '41 360w

"This little book is full of facts and figures and simple phrases that are far more eloquent than the flamboyant generalities of the day. It is illumined by five soaring odes inspired in Mr. Masefield by his subject, and sometimes contains the words of men who were there, whether as rescuers or rescued."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p135 Mr 22 '41 950w

MASLOW, ABRAHAM HAROLD, and MITTELMANN, BELA. Principles of abnormal psychology; the dynamics of psychic illness [under the editorship of Gardner Murphy]. 638p $3.50 Harper

132 Psychology, Pathological 41-2598

"Primarily a college textbook, this volume [is] designed to unify the general principles underlying the psychology of mentally disturbed persons. While mainly reflecting the influence of Gestalt psychology, there is evidence of a sincere effort to harmonize experimental and academic psychology with clinical-medical findings. The various dynamics under discussion are properly founded upon case material which is well selected and sufficiently diverse to reveal the psychodynamic processes, the etiology of psychopathology, the aims, nature and techniques of psychotherapy, as well as to provide specific interpretation of the many symptom syndromes." (Survey) Bibliography, Glossary, Index.

Booklist 37:351 Ap 1 '41

Reviewed by I. S. Wile, M.D.

+ Survey 77:230 JI '41 150w

MASON, ALPHEUS THOMAS. Bureaucracy convicts itself; the Ballinger-Pinchot controversy of 1910. 224p il $2.50 Viking

353.3 U.S. Interior, Department of, U.S. Forest service. Ballinger, Richard Achilles. Pinchot, Gifford, Brandeis, Louis Dembitz 41-1997

The history of the Ballinger-Pinchot dispute of 1910, reexamined in the light of Secretary Ickes' "essay of confession and penance" in defense of Ballinger, which appeared last spring in The Saturday Evening Post. In his retelling of the story the author emphasizes its significance for the present day. Bibliographical note. Index.

"The book is written with care and distinction. The text is enlivened with contemporary illustrations culled from a variety of sources. There is a 'bibliographical note', covering all original and secondary sources, and a comprehensive index." Louis Filler

+ Am Hist R 47:383 Ja '42 500w

"Because it reads from the records, this book rings true and resets the values of judgment which have lately been somewhat dislocated by less thorough investigators. The volume is illustrated with contemporary cartoons. It might have profited from more quotations from contemporary newspapers, especially those in sections of the nation where conservation was a lively issue." H. P. Goss

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:582 Je '41 350w

"All in all, this little book is an important and interesting case study in politics, public administration, democracy, and the frailties and strengths of human character." William Anderson

+ Ann Am Acad 219:188 Ja '42 410w

Harvard Law R 54:1100 Ap '41 230w

"Professor Mason has won the battle. His publishers ought to make the Ickes' article an insert of Mason's scholarly refutation. For the two polemics make an exciting debate in which the Secretary enjoys the novelty of defeat. One may question Professor Mason's statement that this story has great significance today in warning against 'bureaucratic aggrandizement'; there are many more disturbing problems that cry for research and solution. But this is a book of merit and interest which achieves its destructive purpose." Leonard Boudin

+ New Repub 104:865 Je 23 '41 750w

"It remains a mystery of the publishing business why this 40,000-word monograph was not published as a fifty-page pamphlet, to sell at 50 cents, instead of as a 225-page book, with 14 pages of 'front matter', appendices, sources, bibliographic notes, and all. It is a piece of pamphleteering, and might hope as an inexpensive pamphlet to reach an audience which will never see the handsome, case-bound book." C. S. Ascher

Survey G 32:352 Je '41 320w

Reviewed by H. L. Ickes

Yale Law J 50:1303 My '41 2300w

MASON, BERNARD STERLING. Jud goes camping; il. by Frederic H. Kock. 85p $2 Barnes, A.S.

Camping 41-14444

In story form this book reveals the secrets of good camping, from the choice of a campsite and the building of a lean-to to the intricacies of camp housekeeping and camp cooking.

"Since 'Jud' and his chum are eleven, the strongest appeal will be to boys of about that age. And since the author is editor of the Camping Magazine, he knows plenty to tell boys about woodcraft and life in the open."

+ Christian Century 58:936 JI 23 '41 40w

"After the first rainstorm the two boys learned the best place to pitch a tent. With Dad's experienced help they learned how to build fires for different purposes . . . how to make their own utensils from tin cans . . . and how to cache their food away from hungry beasts. All their ingenious gadgets are illustrated by Frederic H. Kock with such clarity that other handy young campers need only the minimum of imagination to follow the simple instructions for making them. . . Unlike many books which are primarily instructive there are so much pertinent conversation and action that the narrative never drags." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p10 JI 27 '41 130w

Springf'd Republican p7e Ag 3 '41 110w

MASON, MIRIAM EVANGELINE, Susannah, the pioneer cow; il. by Maud and Miska Peter-sham. 152p $1.25 Macmillan

(W) 41-25829

Susannah was a Jersey cow, belonging to a Virginia family in pioneer days. When the family went West, Susannah went too, after a period of revolt. Once started Susannah became a docile, helpful asset in the westward journey, and after the Waynes had settled in their new home. For grades one to three.

Booklist 38:179 Ja 15 '42

"We have stories of covered wagons, the people in them and the animals that drew them, but this, so far as my experience goes, is the first to do justice to those that went along behind. . . The pictures are warmly sympathetic, not only to cows but to coons, baby calves, squirrels and kind little girls in hoop-skirts. If you think Susannah uses more facial expressions than a cow can produce with her face, you did not, like the present reviewer, grow up among the thoroughbred Jerseys of Pomfret, Vt. A cow can, even today, express as much with her face as the occasion demands. I cannot believe that pioneer cows could not do as much. The book is fine for first readers." M. L. Becker

+ Books p7 O 26 '41 260w

"Susannah is brave and cheerful and intelligent and very, very lovable. Her story is one of the very nicest this year for the third grade."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e D 21 '41 230w

MASON, VAN WYCK (GEOFFREY COFFIN, WARD WEAVER, pseud.). Hang my wreath [il. by John Alan Maxwell]. 366p map $2.75 Funk, W. 41-5579

This story of the Civil war "is told against the background of the campaign that culminated in the bloody battle of Antietam. It is filled with the clash of sabres and the shock of battle as the Union cavalry and Jeb Stuart's gray horsemen thrust at each other over the fields of Virginia and Maryland." (Springf'd Republican) Captain Hubert Cary, a member of the first Rhode Island cavalry is the hero; Lenore Duveen, a beautiful English girl, the heroine.

"Here is another Civil War novel to add to an already crowded field—this one a novel of action. 'Hang My Wreath' is as full of activity as an old-time movie script. . . Ward Weaver is supposed to be a pseudonym for a writer well known in another field. Whoever he may be, he concentrates on plot and likes a mixture of adventure, sentimentality, and plenty of action." R. C. B.

Sat R of Lit 24:20 Je 21 '41 270w

"In a preface to 'Hang My Wreath' Ward Weaver explains that his purpose is to 'tell a lively, swiftly moving tale with no pretensions to anything but entertainment.' He has more than fulfilled his purpose in this exciting story of the Civil war. . . In the hands of a less competent writer, 'Hang My Wreath' might have been melodramatic, even slightly ridiculous. Under Mr. Weaver's skillful handling, it remains consistently exciting and believable."

+ Springf'd Republican p7e My 4 '41 300w

MASON, VAN WYCK (GEOFFREY COFFIN, WARD WEAVER, pseud.). The Rio Casino intrigue. 302p $2 Reynal

41-22959

A novel of international intrigue, this time laid in Brazil and starring again Major Hugh North attached to G-2 Division of Military Intelligence.

Booklist 38:132 D 15 '41

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

Books p40 N 2 '41 160w

"It is all very exciting, full of greed, passion and murder, and the solution is sad but satisfactory. There are nice end-paper maps of Rio and environs." Charlotte Dean

+ N Y Times p34 N 2 '41 180w

"It could do with fewer rather self-conscious cedilla and tilde-spattered Portuguese words, but the story rises high above such trivial defects, for the lasting impression it leaves is less that of high entertainment value than of stern warning." B. I.

+ — Springf'd Republican p7e N 30 '41 240w

MASSEY, EDWARD MORRELL. Five were called. 398p $2.50 Penn

41-6657

Jim Sharp, released from prison and stranded in Philadelphia, gambles with five nickels in a telephone booth in an attempt to reach a long-lost sweetheart whose number he knows but not the exchange. The bulk of this novel tells the life stories of the five who were called—a Russian immigrant, an aristocratic spinster, a gangster and his girl, a defeated husband, and finally the widow of Dr Harold Palmer who had been Ann Andrews.

"Mr. Massey's inclinations are toward the melodramatic; Philadelphians who are living uneventfully are no concern of his. But since his purpose is to set down an absorbing story at full gallop, he is entitled to be as selective as he wishes. Or possibly Philadelphians who don't crave excitement don't have telephones." George Conrad

Books p12 Ap 20 '41 480w

"Five stories—all highly dramatic, all very different, all achieving their crescendo as the telephone rings. Obviously, 'Five Were Called' is an arrant tour de force. It has the strong taint of artifice inseparable from its kind and it is likewise markedly flamboyant. Just the same, it is pretty good reading." E. H. Walton

+ — N Y Times p14 Je 22 '41 600w

MASSINGHAM, HAROLD JOHN. Chiltern country. (English countryside ser) 126p il $3 Scribner [8s 6d Batsford]

914.25 Chiltern hills

41-13746

Survey of the English countryside around the Chilterns. It examines every aspect of the region, its geology, flora, ornithology, architecture, and local industries.

"The author's intimate knowledge of this region's background, crafts, characters, customs, utensils and survivals, together with the beautiful simplicity of his style, make this one of the 'Face of Britain' books with special claim to inclusion in public libraries as well as those of armchair travelers. It fits into the scheme of his previous books on the Cotswold and Downland country, but is altogether complete. As usual with this series, the photographs are of surprising clarity and beauty; the drawings—one in color—of Thomas Hennell show close collaboration with the text."

+ Books p27 Mr 2 '41 160w

Boston Transcript p2 Ap 19 '41 130w

"Admirable and discreet in text, and pictorially magnificent." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Mr 22 '41 10w

Nature 147:372 Mr 29 '41 180w

"I have nothing but praise for Mr. Massingham's book on the Chilterns. For one thing, he knows the country. He seems, indeed, to have walked all over it, visiting even those places into which, one is convinced when one comes upon them, no one but oneself has ever strayed. . . Though the reproductions and photographs are first-rate, I cannot say the same of Mr. Hennell's drawings." C. E. M. Joad

+ — New Statesman & Nation 21:114 F 1 '41 340w

"Mr. Massingham, if his practice were as good as his theory, would represent an admirable change in guide-book fashions. 'Much more attention, quite rightly I think, is now given to the geology, topography, agriculture, ecology, crafts, vegetation, village architecture, landscape, flora and ornithology. . . Landscape: perhaps the cloven hoof is there, for Mr. Massingham, who can write plainly and agreeably about village crafts, becomes unbearably literary in his descriptions, and no book of his has suffered more from descriptions than this one.' Graham Greene

+ — Spec 166:154 F 7 '41 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p32 Ja 18 '41 800w

MASTERS, EDGAR LEE. Illinois poems. 66p $2 Press of James A. Decker

811

41-19678

"Poems glorifying the countryside and the small town which [the poet] once knew so well." Cleveland Open Shelf

MASTERS, EDGAR LEE—Continued

"One wishes that Mr. Masters had chosen, as form for these recollections, the vigorous, strongly accented free verse lines that gave character to his Spoon River and other memorable poems. . . . But these are small matters in a book that gives us so lovely a work as the poem on the flowers of Illinois, which will be read with delight by any one with a Mid-Western childhood." Ruth Lechlitrer

+ — Books p9 Ag 10 '41 280w
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '41

Reviewed by P. M. Jack
N Y Times p5 Ja 4 '42 260w

Reviewed by Coleman Rosenberger
Poetry 59:166 D '41 160w

MASTERS of political thought; 3v; v. 1, Plato to Machiavelli, by Michael B. Foster [ed. by Edward McChesney Sait]. 302p $2.25 Houghton

320.8 Political science (41-6896)

The first of a series of three volumes, designed for college classes in political thought. This volume—Plato to Machiavelli, is to be followed by Machiavelli to Bentham, and Bentham to the present. It is the purpose of the series to get away from the conventional textbook method of teaching, and resort more to the original. Hence the book is a combination of "numerous and lengthy quotations, quotations that have been chosen judiciously and then elucidated and woven together by unobtrusive comment." (Intro.) Contents: Plato; Aristotle; Cicero; Augustine; The interval before Aquinas; Aquinas; Machiavelli. Index.

"The belated demand now rising in American universities, against the background of the present world conflict, that we seek to recover the bed rock of our culture, and that there be recognized some common body of significant knowledge with which every educated person would have some acquaintance, should prepare a welcome for this kind of contribution. The reviewer will not quarrel here with the interpretation given the natural law conception as being essentially a post-Aristotelian growth. The comments upon Plato, Aristotle, Cicero, Augustine, Aquinas, and Machiavelli give their teachings fresh life for the present." Walter Sandelius

+ Am Pol Sci R 35:318 Ag '41 340w

"If the remaining volumes of this series come up to the standard fixed by Foster, it will constitute a distinct step forward in the history of teaching political theory. . . . Foster's historical summaries and his comments are fluent, urbane, and remarkably penetrating. Indeed, this book should awaken the interest of our young men, perhaps even of our leading statesmen, in the great political treatises of the past. The reviewer cannot praise this book too highly." R. V. Peel

+ Ann Am Acad 217:180 S '41 550w

J Philos 38:716 D 18 '41 360w

MATHIEWS, FRANKLIN K., ed. The Boy scouts book of adventurous youth. 260p il $2.50 Appleton-Century

910.4 Adventure and adventurers 41-4727

Collection of true adventure stories and essays, edited for the Boy Scouts of America by the Chief scout librarian. Contents: The Boone scouts go camping, by Dan Beard; A mountain boyhood, by Joe Mills; My first bear, by "Grizzly" Smith; A boyhood dream comes true, by L. D. Washington; A white boy with the red men, by E. W. Kemble; Scouting for buffalo, by Chief Standing Bear; Seventy pounds of fight, by Coulton Waugh; Alexander Perry—a real sea scout, by G. S. Bryan; 16,000 miles on a whaler, by J. W. McSpadden; The octopus, by R. C. Wood; Young spears, by Santie Sabalala; A boy film hunter in Africa, by R. P. Benjamin; Three boy scouts in the lion country, by David Martin, Dick Douglas, and Douglas Oliver; They were prepared! by Irving Crump; "I got the breaks," by R. E. James; Twelve pairs of boots, by F. L. Scruggs; Mountain climbing, by W. T. Ridder; Scouting in the Antarctic, by Frank Kingdon; The adventure of living, by Theodore Roosevelt; Letters of introduction, by Frank Presbrey; A guy as game as that! by Frank Graham; What one book did for a boy, by W. W. Head; There are no "closed roads," by C. F. Kettering; Scouting carries on! by Dr J. E. West.

"Lively, wholesome and well-written volume." M. L. Becker

+ Books p5 Je 8 '41 280w

"One or two essays on adventure and life and scouting and sportsmanship find their way into the book, too, making the bread for the meaty sandwich of the stories. Boys enjoy this sort of thing fairly well (though most of them prefer to have it in longer form than rather brief short stories) and Scouts need it. But there is a touch of didacticism that seems slightly out of place in present-day literature for young people." S. J. Johnson

+ — Library J 66:268 Mr 15 '41 130w

MATCHAT, MRS CECILE (HULSE). Murder in Okefenokee. 273p $2 Farrar

41-23064

Detective story.

Booklist 38:160 Ja 1 '42

"Though Mrs. Matschat may overwork the terminology of terror at times, the goings-on in the swamp are sprightly and unusual." Will Cuppy

+ — Books p28 N 16 '41 130w

"The weird setting forms a perfect background for a story of mystery, crime and horror. Mrs. Matschat knows the swamp country well, as she has previously demonstrated in 'Suwanee River,' and now she adds to her other laurels a mystery novel of outstanding merit." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p20 N 23 '41 190w

"Recommended."

+ Sat R of Lit 24:24 N 15 '41 40w

MATSON, CHARLOTTE, and WURZBURG, DOROTHY ADELE, comps. Books for tired eyes; a list of books in large print. 3d ed 80p pa 65c A.L.A.

016 Bibliography—Best books

"This is not offered as a list of best books, but as 'a variety of interesting, readable books, now in print, set up in good clear type, and chosen with a due regard for the varying tastes of readers.' All the books are printed in type at least as large as 12 point (in which the list is printed) and those in larger type are marked. The children's books included are all 14 point or larger." Booklist

Booklist 37:120 N 15 '40

"This list does not pretend to be exhaustive. However, it gives an interesting and useful selection of books in large type for adults and children."

+ Library Q 11:249 Ap '41 100w

MATTHIAS, ARTHUR J. How to design and install plumbing; materials and methods of standard practice; with self-help questions. 2d ed 442p il $3 Am. tech. soc.

696.1 Plumbing 41-15975

"The author, a licensed journeyman plumber and circuit instructor of plumbing in the Wisconsin vocational schools, presents a second edition of a book published in 1940 [Book Review Digest, 1940]. This edition has been increased by 64 pages, and is an answer to the demands for additional material showing how plumbing principles are employed in designing and installing typical plumbing systems in modern buildings." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 38:56 O 15 '41

N Y New Tech Books 26:46 JI '41

MATTHIESSEN, FRANCIS OTTO. American renaissance; art and expression in the age of Emerson and Whitman. 678p il $5 Oxford 810.9 American literature—History and criticism. Literature—Philosophy. Emerson, Ralph Waldo. Thoreau, Henry David. Hawthorne, Nathaniel. Melville, Herman. Whitman, Walt (W) 41-9633

"A carefully reasoned study in interrelations. The author traces with great particularity the connections between Emerson, Thoreau, and Hawthorne, between Melville and Hawthorne, between Whitman and the New England group. He traces lines backward, too—the line that connects the Transcendentalists with the seventeenth-century poets, the line from Shakespeare to Melville. He is no less fruitful in his account of the descendants of his five subjects, a good example being his analysis of the line Hawthorne-Henry James-T. S. Eliot." (New Yorker) Chronology. Index.

Booklist 38:6 S '41

"It is a formidable book, and has to be studied and mastered with a patience and seriousness equal in some measure to Dr. Matthiessen's own; but it is indispensable to those who are tired of having their knowledge of American literature and culture ladled out in convenient theories. For it is more than a work of esthetic criticism; it is an extraordinarily sound and unusual introduction to our understanding of American character and development." Alfred Kazin

+ Books p3 J1 13 '41 1100w

Reviewed by B. M. Kelly

Cath World 153:762 S '41 650w

"This is a good, solid, meaty book. Reading it is a pleasure, like that of eating a loaf of real French bread with a genuine crust and a fine chewy consistency instead of the tasteless, pallid stuff that the bakers give us in this country. . . . If it has a predominant fault, it is that analysis has outrun synthesis, so that the five authors considered tend to lose their human unity in the wealth of the author's analysis of their art." E. P. Richardson

+ — Commonweal 34:330 J1 25 '41 850w

"One may differ with the author on various points, and regret that he leads one along so many crowded bypaths that it is hard to see the wood for the trees. But chiefly one remains grateful to him for having elucidated with such discriminating scholarship the enduring values which make these writings live." Babette Deutsch

+ — Nation 152:672 Je 7 '41 900w

Reviewed by Granville Hicks

New Eng Q 14:556 S '41 4900w

"Literary history was not Mr. Matthiessen's objective. Nor, for that matter, social history—the relation of the writings of his great group to those forces, economic, educational, religious, racial—or even climatic—which has made our country what it is. He has focused his attention on the 'form and content' of these writings, and he has done this with eminent success." G. S. Hellman

+ N Y Times p4 Je 15 '41 1200w

"An enormous book which will, I think, like Parrington's 'Main Currents in American Thought,' be read at first only by literary men and scholars, and then gradually, year by year, slowly seep down into the consciousness of the more casual reader. It is no more a masterpiece than is Parrington's contribution, but it is so full of stimulating judgments, thoughtful insights, and deep scholarship that it cannot fail to affect the way we think about our culture. . . . Mr. Matthiessen writes well but very solemnly and seems virtually devoid of humor. His book is without charm and, I should say, of great importance in its field." Clifton Fadiman

+ — New Yorker 17:74 Je 7 '41 600w

Pratt p16 D '41

"Mr. Matthiessen knows and has meditated long and profoundly on the literary history of America and its antecedents in western European culture; he has developed his own technique of literary criticism under the best of contemporary masters, Brooks, Eliot, Lowes, and many others; and because he is ultimately concerned with values rather than with mere facts, the robe of the prophet falls upon his shoulders whether he will or not. The result is perhaps the most profound work of literary criticism on historical principles by any modern American with the possible exception of Lowes's 'Road to Xanadu.'" R. E. Spiller

+ Sat R of Lit 24:6 Je 14 '41 750w

"If the middle of the last century saw an American renaissance in creative literature the middle of the present one bids fair to witness a comparable renaissance in American literary criticism, to which Mr Matthiessen's volume must be reckoned a most important contribution. The publication of this achievement of American scholarship by one of the oldest university presses of England is one more portent of the ever-widening collaboration between the two great English-speaking nations." R. J. Conklin

+ Spring'd Republican p7e Je 8 '41 1700w

Time 37:84 Je 2 '41 1100w

"This is a dynamic book on literature in mid-nineteenth-century America, and on its related intellectual life, provocative and perceptive in its close analysis of Emerson, Thoreau, Hawthorne, Melville, and Whitman, and boldly experimental in method." S. T. Williams

+ Yale R n s 31:200 autumn '41 1150w

MATTINGLY, GARRETT. Catherine of Aragon. 477p il $3.50 Little

B or 92 Catharine of Aragon, consort of Henry VIII (W) 41-6540

